The years of Cyrus' reign are computed to commence from the time when, by the death of Cyaxares and Cambyses, he became sole monarch of Media and Persia. It was in the first of these seven years precisely expired the seventieth year of the Babylonish captivity, when Cyrus published the famous edict whereby the Jews were permitted to return to Jerusalem. The edict of Cyrus was given for the building of the house of Jerusalem. Cyrus made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom—"Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he hath charged me to build a house at Jerusalem." Also he gave liberty for all the Jews to go up to Jerusalem, and build the house of the Lord God of Israel. At the same time Cyrus restored to the Jews all the vessels of the temple of the Lord. There is nothing said in this edict of building any thing except the house of God. The work of rebuilding the temple was greatly delayed and stopped after the death of Cyrus, but was resumed again, and finished in the sixth year of the reign of Darius king of Persia. Furthermore, we are informed by the historian that "Nehemiah (cup-bearer to king Artaxerxes), having been informed by his brethren of the sad state of things at Jerusalem, how they were exposed to the insults of their enemies, that the walls of Jerusalem lay in ruins, its gates were burned down, etc., wept and mourned certain days, and fasted. One day, as Nehemiah waited upon the king, the latter, observing an unusual air of melancholy in Nehemiah's countenance, asked him the cause of it. Nehemiah took this occasion to acquaint him with the calamitous state of his country. The predecessors of this king had permitted the Jews to rebuild the temple, but not the walls of Jerusalem. But Artaxerxes immediately decreed that the walls and gates of Jerusalem should be rebuilt, and Nehemiah, as governor of Judea, was appointed to put this decree into execution, and gave him all the assistance possible in forwarding the work. This pious Jew executed every part of his commission with incredible zeal and activity."

It was from this decree, or "commandment," that the walls and gates of Jerusalem were rebuilt, even in troublous times, which was enacted by Artaxerxes in the twentieth year of his reign.

THE DRAGON OF THE PEWS.

DEAR EDITORS:—I ask that you will publish the following article, which I clip from the Boston Journal, taken from Scribner's Monthly. There is so much truth in it, that will apply to us as a people, as well as to other bodies of professed christians, that I solicit a place for it in the Crisis. God help us to look this evil in the face, and abandon it, in so far as we have gone in the wake of the other churches. I ask for the article a careful reading by both ministers and laymen among us. I. I. LESLIE.

A little direction to the popular imagination is only necessary to point out to it a dragon that, every Sunday, enters every church. It is handed like Briareus, headed like Hydra, and footed like the centiped. It is beautiful to look at, with its silken scales of many colors flashing in the sun, but its stomach, like that of all respectable dragons, is the seat of an insatiable greed. Its huge bulk fills the church, and the moment it is at rest it opens its mouth. It gorges prayers, hymns, exhortations and sermons, as the pale man in the desk tosses them out, and opens its mouth for more and better. But for this pale man, who is under a contract to feed it, and is at his wits' and strength's end to accomplish his work, it could not live. When in the morning, he has done all he can for it, it crawls out again, to come back in the afternoon, with its maw just as empty, its feverish eyes just as expectant, its mouth just as wide open, as it was in the morning. It swallows more prayers, more hymns, another sermon, other exhortations. It crawls out again, to go somewhere in the evening, to glut, or try to glut, its horrible greed. Like those young women of veterinary parentage it cries, "give! give!" But the sermon is the special object of its awful appetite. Prayer is but a prelude to the solid dish of the feast. Singing is only the Yorkshire pudding that goes with the beef, and the plum pudding that comes after it. Sermons, sermons, sermons!—it swallows them whole. They are taken at a gulp, without mastication or digestion, and open spring the mouths again, in marvelous multiplication.

To drop the dragon, for he is a clumsy fellow, and a somewhat bulky figure to drag on through a whole article, let us have a plain word about the greed for sermons, so prevalent in these latter days. We doubt whether there ever was a time in the history of the Christian church when its ministers were placed in so awkward, difficult, and unjust a position as they are to-day. Great, expensive edifices of worship are built, for which the builders run heavily in debt. That debt can only be handled, the interest on it paid, and the principal reduced, by filling it with a large and interested congregation. That congregation cannot be collected and held without brilliant preaching. Brilliant preaching is scarce, because, and only because, brilliant men are scarce, and scarcer still the brilliant men who have the gift of eloquence. So soon, therefore, as a man shows that he cannot attract the crowd, "down goes his house." He may be a scholar, a saint, a man whose example is the sweetest sermon that a human life ever uttered, a lovely friend, a faithful pastor, a wise spiritual adviser, and even a sermonizer of rare attainments and skill, but if he cannot draw a crowd by the attractive gifts of popular eloquence, he must be sacrificed to the exigences of finance. The church must be filled, the interest on the debt must be paid, and nothing can do this but a man who will "draw." The whole thing is managed like a theatre. If an actor cannot draw full houses the rent cannot be paid. So the actor is dismissed and a new one is called to take his place.

There is an old-fashioned idea that a church is built for the purposes of public worship. It is not a bad idea; and that exhibition of Christianity which presents a thousand lazy people sitting bolt upright in their best clothes, gorging sugar-plums, is not a particularly brilliant one. It was once supposed that a Christian had something to do, even as a layman, and that a pastor was a leader and director in Christian work. There certainly was a time when the burden of a church was not laid crushingly upon the shoulders of its minister, and when Christian men and women stood by the man who was true to his office and true to them. We seem to have outlived it, and a thousand American churches, particularly among the great centres of population, are groaning over discomfiture in the sad results. Instead of paying their own debts like men, they lay them on the backs of their floundering ministers, and if they cannot lift them, they go hunting for spinal columns that will, or tongues that hold a charm for their dissipation. It is a wrong and a shame which ought to be abolished, just as soon as sensible men have read this article.

Who was primarily in the blame for this condition of things, we do not know; but we suspect the ministers themselves ought to bear a portion of it. Beginning in New England years ago, the sermon in America has always been made too much of. The great preachers, by going into their pulpits Sunday after Sunday with their supreme intellectual efforts, have created the demand for such efforts. Metaphysics, didactics, apologetics, arrayed in robes of rhetoric, have held high converse with them. The great theological wrestlers have made the pulpit their arena of conflict. Homilies have grown into sermons, and sermons into orations. Preachers have set aside the teacher's simple task for that of the orator. Even to-day, they cannot see, or they will not admit, that they have been in the wrong. With a knowledge of the human mind which cannot but make them aware that no more than a single good sermon can be digested by a congregation in a day, and that every added word goes to the glut of intellect and feeling, and the confusion of impressions, they still go on preaching twice and thrice, and seem more averse than any others to a change of policy. It is all intellectual gormandizing, and no activity, and no rest and reflection. It is all cram and no conflict, and they seem just as averse to stop cramming as they did before they apprehended and bemoaned the poverty of its results.

But we are consuming too much of their time. The great dragon, with its multitudinous heads and arms, and feet, is to meet them next Sunday with its mouths all open. It has done nothing all the week but sleep, and it is getting hungry. Woe to him who has not his two big sermons ready! Insatiate monster, will not one suffice? "No," says the dragon. "No," says his keeper and feeder. Brains, paper, ink, lungs—he wants all you can give, and you must give him all you can. The house must be filled, the debt must be paid, and you must be a popular preacher, or get out of the way. Meantime, the dragon sleeps, and meantime the city is badly ruled; drunkenness debauches the people under the shield of law, harlotry jostles our youth upon the side-walks, obscene literature stares our daughters out of countenance from the news stands, and little children, with no play-ground but the gutter, and no home but a garret, are growing up in ignorance and vice. If this lazy, over-fed, loosely articulated dragon could only be split up into active men and women, who would shut their mouths and open their eyes and hands, we could have something different. But the sermon is the great thing; the people think so and the preachers agree with them. We should like to know what the Master thinks about it.

GOING TO CHURCH.

Many habitual church-goers yet need to learn how to go, in what way, and what for. We speak not of the superstitious and the idolatrous, who go in a sort of devout but blind spirit of credulity to worship they know not what—images, or relics, or the Virgin, or the saints. Our concern is with those who are really intelligent, who understand the design of public worship, and affect or feel some interest in its correct observance, and who are capable of some amount of improvement. Of those there is a class that do not go to worship, or to be taught, but simply to be pleased. They consult taste first of all. If they want fun, amusing anecdotes, grotesque rhetoric, pungent jokes, it is enough; they run greedily after them, and get well filled with windy words that signify nothing. Or if they have a curiosity that seeks out novelties, then they run to and fro, now here, and now there, turning churches into spiritual restaurants, where they can vary the bill of fare according to the caprice of appetite. Of course they neither grow nor thrive on such miscellaneous feeding, but become leaner and leaner all the while. Yet they are, let us say, constant church-goers, ever hungering for the pleasure of hearing something they do not want in any suitable way for their spiritual profiting.

There is another class who go to church burdened with all the dust and dirt and rust of the week. They carry pre-occupied minds. Their affections are left in the store, or in the kitchen, or in the market-place. Wandering thoughts are with them exceedingly active. And so, though present in body, their spirits are absent, going through very dry places, and finding neither refreshment nor rest. For such, prayers and sermons have no special value, save in so far as they promote drowsiness.

There is still another class who go to church to see or to be seen. Accordingly they are irregular, without punctuality, and without any apparent sense of responsibility. Their religion does not keep them from disturbing the devotion of others. They bustle in their seats, whisper if they can, and contrive to draw attention either to themselves or to their ornaments. To say that all these are ill-bred, or not educated enough to perceive their own errors, is inadmissible. They sin from want of thought. They really know a more excellent way, but do not use their knowledge with any self-applied reflection.

We go to church, or ought to go, mainly for three objects: 1. To worship God. We owe homage to the Father of our spirits, and we need to receive good from him. All hearty worship consists in adoration, praise, confession, thanksgiving, and petition. In these several parts of worship, the soul enters into direct personal communion with the Highest; and without such communion there is no acceptable or beneficial worship. 2. To be taught. Good preaching is good teaching. Those are the best sermons which succeed in opening up and commending the meaning of the Holy Scriptures. A discourse from which nothing may be learned, is but as sounding brass, noisy, without abiding power. 3. To receive the impression and be enlarged by the character of the truth presented, as the Holy Spirit accompanies the faithful adminstration of the Word; and often do attentive hearers come under the control of influences of which they can give no satisfactory account as to their origin. But they are lifted by them into a better life. Thus the house of God becomes the gate of heaven.

Could more general attention be given to the great objects to be gained in regular church-going, and to regular services, sermons would grow in power, and vital christianity would more and more assert itself.—The Christian.

SICK.

My husband, J. Couch, is sick, which will account for there being no editorial from him this week. His sickness is caused, evidently, by overwork and exposure; but he hopes to be able to resume his work at the office soon, though the bronchial difficulty from which he has been suffering severely will prevent his preaching much for some time to come.

MASS. STATE CONFERENCE.

The Chelsea Church has unanimously and heartily invited the State Conference to hold its annual session at its Chapel, and would say it will do all it can to accommodate all the brethren and sisters who may come to attend the meetings. We shall probably find the most difficulty in providing comfortable lodgings for all, and will suggest that we can lodge fifty or more of our brethren in the Chapel, if they will bring blankets or a little covering to answer in a warm house.

We do hope our sister churches will be generally represented in this important State convocation. Come, ye scattered and waiting ones, who love Jesus and his appearing; come from the mountains and vallies of the Old Bay State, and let us once more enjoy christian greetings, joining in sacred songs and heavenly devotions. Come to hear the last swelling notes of the gospel's judgment message. Bro. Stockman is expected to unite with us in the work and communion of this important Christian feast.

For the Chelsea Church,

J. Couch, Pastor.

THE WAR ASPECT.

The war clouds of Europe are still rolling up, and threaten terrible results. Had there been a general order, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men," we think it could not be better fulfilled than it is at the present time. He who says, All Europe is arming for battle, states a well-known fact; yet no one might be able to give the reason why. A war spirit has seized those who control armies and navies, causing them to put all their vast forces on a war footing as fast as possible. A cable despatch from Calcutta says orders have been received by the Indian Government, from England, to hold all the troops in India "in immediate readiness for active service." The despatch adds that it is believed these orders are made in view of a war of large dimensions in Europe."

The thought of what is apparently coming is truly shocking. Jesus sums it up in the expression, "Distress of nations." This is one of the last things before his second coming. The statement shows that the "distress" will be very extensive and general. No doubt it will surpass anything that has been. These travailing pains will bring forth the sleeping saints from their graves, and a new world, free from sin and misery. The day of glory is about to dawn, and the time when the rightful heir to David's throne will establish the kingdom that "shall stand for ever"; "a kingdom which shall never be destroyed"; a kingdom in which every subject shall be an immortal, incorruptible saint.

Our heart longs for the happy day when sorrow and sin shall come to a perpetual end, and the meek shall be resting in the home of the redeemed.

GARIBALI AT ROME.

Garibaldi's visit at Rome at this time is one of much importance. His reception by the Italians was very enthusiastic. It is well known that he is the Pope's deadly enemy, and has no sympathy with the Papal system of religion. A correspondent of the Boston Globe, writing from Rome, under date of Jan. 24th 1875, says:

"To-day, one hundred thousand people have gathered about the railway station, scarcely leaving space for the train to enter without crushing some one. They have shouted and waved their hats and handkerchiefs, they have filled the streets with an almost impenetrable mass, and hung or perched on every possible projection of wall or post. They have torn the horses from the new-comer's carriage, almost destroying it in their haste and excitement, and they have dragged the vehicle through a multitude of like enthusiasts, until the crowd proved so dense that passage could not be forced, and the visitor was compelled to take refuge in a hotel a mile or so from his residence. . . .

All classes are in the immense crowd, and all classes alike welcome Garibaldi. Forced to take halt at the Hotel Costanzi, he is borne up stairs and out upon the balcony whence, five years ago, the Pope blessed a crowd who had gathered to see him on the occasion of his visit to the Queen of Hanover. Garibaldi speaks a few pleasant, peaceful words and retires. So exciting a day modern Rome has rarely seen; the 20th day of September with its broken walls scarcely more than parallels it. But its order and its tranquil close argue well for the days when Garibaldi shall appear as the deputy, to take his seat and perhaps to speak among the representatives of the nation."

The great and awful crisis in the history of Rome must be at hand. The prophetic light is shining clearly on the seven-hilled city. The eyes of all civilized nations are turned to behold her critical position.

WHICH DAY?

An interesting occurrence took place on board the steamship MacGregor, in the Pacific ocean, near the one hundred and eightieth degree of longitude from Greenwich, Jan. 1st 1875. A correspondent of the Sacramento Daily Record says:

Greenwich, Jan. 1st, 1875.

Eds. Record: A strange thing occurred on our ship last night. I retired to my room about 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening, Dec. 30th, 1874, and was awakened at 12 o'clock by the rapid ringing of the ship's bell. My first thought was that the ship was on fire, and the sweat started from every pore. I lay quietly for a few seconds, expecting to hear the loud commands of the ship's officers and the alarmed shrieks of the passengers, but the first sound I recognized was a pleasant voice uttering the words, "A happy New Year to you." And then the pleasant response, "The same to you, and many of them." The ringing of the ship's bell was explained. Instead of being a peal of alarm, a signal of danger, it was a joyful welcome to the New Year. But what does this mean? When I retired to my room last evening it was Wednesday, Dec. 30th; what has become of Thursday, Dec. 31st? Gone—blotted out of existence, with us, as though there never had been any such day. We had no such day. We jumped from Wednesday, Dec. 30th, to Friday, Jan. 1st. This is one of the consequences of crossing the 180th° of longitude, sailing westward. If you don't want to lose a day, beware how you attempt to do a thing of this kind. But if you should happen to cross this degree of longitude sailing eastward, an equally strange, but very different thing will happen you—you will gain a day, instead of losing one. If we had been sailing in an opposite direction, instead of losing it, we should have had two Thursdays, Dec. 31st.

I have no doubt, Mr. Editor, that you fully understand the meaning of this thing; but for the benefit of your young readers who may not, I will briefly explain it Longitude is calculated east and west from Greenwich, and the 180th degree is just halt way around the world from that point. Should two vessels start from London to go around the world, one sailing eastward and the other westward, one would be sailing towards the rising sun, and the other from it.

Taking the time at London as the standard, the one going eastward would gain, while the one going westward would lose daily; so that in the event both vessels should make the circuit of the globe in the same length of time, and arrive back in London on the same day—say Jan. 1st at London—the time on the ship that had sailed eastward would be Jan. 2d, and on the one that had sailed westward would be Dec. 31st; and in order to be in harmony with the time at London, those on one vessel would have to gain a day, while those on the other would have to lose one. Now, to equalize the matter, it has been agreed among all nations who reckon longitude from Greenwich, to take on or drop the day, as the case may be, on crossing the 180th degree, just half way around the globe.

Suppose that instead of Wednesday, it had been Friday, Dec. 30th, then the next day would have been Sunday, Jan. 1st, and Saturday would have been lost. What would the seventh-day Sabbath keeper do in such a case? Would it be a sin for him to unite in the worship of God with those who observe the first day? Would he thus receive the "mark of the beast" and be eternally lost? On the other hand, his brother coming from the East to the same place would gain a day. If the 30th of Dec. was his Friday, as in the other case, the 31st, would be his Saturday Sabbath, and Jan. 1st would be his Sunday, unless he agrees to call it another Saturday Sabbath, and rest with his western brethren. What shall be done in such a case? Shall those going from West to East keep one day and those going from East to West another day, or shall they mutually agree on one day, and worship together? In case they do not change there, but sail on till they both return to London, when they will be two days apart, what shall they do then? Would the Lord have them set up two separate meetings, and thus keep two Sabbath days in a week, neither of which would be the ones they were keeping when they commenced their voyage? They have returned keeping Sunday for Sabbath, instead of Saturday. Have they thus received the mark of the beast, and fitted themselves for everlasting destruction, notwithstanding they love God as well and even better on their return than at their departure? Nay verily. What should be done in such a case? We think the common sense, christian way would be to unite on one common day—the one observed in London. Then working six days, and resting the seventh, would fulfill the Sabbath law, as given to the Gentiles.

If it be said, Do not those who keep the Lord's day, as a rest day, experience the same difficulty as those who observe the seventh day? We answer, No. Those who keep the first day do not claim that there are twenty-four hours of special sacred time, that were to be kept throughout all generations for a Sabbath day, and that if we rest on any other days it becomes a damning sin. Even back under the law, in certain cases some were allowed to keep the passover on the 14th day of the second, instead of the first month. And yet the law of the passover said: "The man that . . . forbeareth to keep the passover . . . in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin;" even the same soul shall be cut off from among his people." See Num. 9: 9–13.

The following report is from another steamer sailing from East to West:—

"The Pacific Mail steamer Colorado from Hongkong Dec. 12th, and Yokohama Dec. 22d, 1874, arrived at this port, San Francisco, yesterday afternoon. The Colorado crossed the 180th degree of longitude on Jan. 1st, and consequently had two New Year's days."

THE PAULIST FATHERS.

Several Catholic priests have recently come to the Pacific coast, for a special purpose. They call their work the "Paulist mission." Crowds have attended their meetings, and much enthusiasm is manifested. The following report of one of their meetings will give the reader a faint idea of their character and spirit.

"THE PAULIST FATHERS.

The cathedral presented its usual crowded aspect last evening, numbers having to be accommodated within the altar rails. The instruction was given by the Rev. Father Bodfish, who announced that there would be no service in the evening, but that the ordinary morning instruction would be delivered at 5 A. M. . . .

The reverend father took for the subject of his instruction the following words from the Creed: 'I believe in one Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church.' If God could have remained always present with us on earth in person there would have been no necessity for a teaching church. He would have sufficed for all. The church is then an association or society deriving its power from God the second person of the Divine Trinity. If we are sure of being in this church, we are sure of salvation. The Catholic church can trace back its origin to Christ himself; its saints and martyrs have given testimony to it with their blood, and Christ himself has died for it. It meets and suffers persecution to-day with the same spirit it did in the times of the Roman Emperors. But people say, we know many good and honest men who belong to no church. But they are as men outside the ark, and will be lost, for within the ark only is salvation to be found. We must not say, some other way than that of the church will do. No; if in the church, we are in the way of salvation, and if no church is necessary, to what purpose has Christ died to found one?

The preacher made an earnest appeal to Catholics to cling to their faith through every difficulty, as a precious treasure."

It will be seen from the foregoing that the Catholics consider one lost when he unites with the Protestants. The real spirit of Papacy is not changed from what it was five hundred years ago. Had that church the control of the temporal power now, as in the twelfth century, the saints who would not submit to her would fare no better. Her toleration of Protestantism is only a matter of necessity, not of choice. She is determined, if possible, to regain temporal power. The struggle on both sides will be desperate, when once fairly begun, and may be commenced any day. The train seems to be laid, and waiting for the match. Let saints beware of becoming entangled in the spirit of the conflict. Trust wholly in Jesus.

M. G.

Civil Rights.—The following is the first section of the "Civil Rights Bill," as passed by Congress:—

"That all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall be entitled to full and equal enjoyment of accommodations, advantages, facilities and privileges of inns, public conveyances on land and water, theatres, and other places of public amusement, subject only to conditions and limitations established by law and applicable alike to citizens of every race and color, regardless of any previous condition of servitude."

This bill, we think, will commend itself to all truly christian people.

M. G.

Pray for the Preacher.—If those who find fault with the preachers would spend the same time in praying for them, they would witness a vast difference in the effects both on themselves and the preachers. Try it, and report the results for the benefit of others.

THE POPE'S ALLOCUTION.

New York, March 16. The Herald prints the Pope's allocution for the precanonization of the new Cardinals. It is as follows:—

To the members of the Sacred College:

Recognizing in part our care in these sad times to increase your noble order of distinguished men to assist in the protection of the universal church, and having determined to discharge this duty, we wished to perform it according to the solemn ancient rites, as the dignity of the church demands. But the times are opposed to our intention; the oppression we suffer is such that we have not even the freedom of bewailing the afflictions of the church. No wonder that those differing from the church by hereditary errors hate the church and strive to attain this end. Unfortunately in Italy, where the supreme cathedra of truth was placed by divine dispensation, the children of the faith have become enemies of the church and plot for its dstruction, grieving our heart. Hence have come the deplorable injuries to the liberties, the possessions and the ministers of the church, which we witness, powerless to resist. Hence have come the greatest evils to the souls of men and to human society, the corruption of youth, which will propagate the existing evils to future generations. The educational institutions have been withdrawn from the watchfulness of the church, and in youth, which should be the seedtime of virtue, vices are rooted in schools subject to the civil power. There is education without faith, without religion, according to a baneful, worldly wisdom. The education of the priesthood even is hampered by arbitrary rules, so that it is difficult to regulate the course of their studies. The army conscription laws take effect in the ranks of the clergy. Inferior clerics are encouraged contumaciously to resist the bishops, and are protected against the decrees of the episcopal authority of preaching the Word.

The publication of our discourses is punished by the civil power; penal laws are enacted against publishing the acts of the Apostolic See; the voice of the Supreme Master, the teacher of truth, is silenced, and the rights of the faithful people are violated. Let those who subject the church to slavery bear in mind that they invoke upon themselves the divine wrath, a harder master and heavier tyranny.

Lately in a foreign country writings were divulged distorting the Vatican decrees. The object was to effect the violation of the liberty of your Senate in the selection of our successor by threats of civil interference. These acts point exclusively at our ecclesiastical competence, but the merciful God ruling the church providentially ordained the firm, admirable bishops of the German Empire, who refuted in their noble declarations the erroneous doctrines.

We give the fullest praise before the Catholic world to the said Bishops. We approve their declarations and their protest as being worthy of the virtue, dignity and religion of the Bishops. We confirm them in their Apostolic authority, praying the divine clemency to dissipate the designs of our enemies and to end their evil days. Remember that no wisdom or prudence can prevail against the Lord. Let us offer sacrifices in humility and frequent prayer.

Our God is just and merciful; severe against those who persist in their evil ways, merciful to those who are converted to him. Therefore let us turn our hearts in contrition to him, praying for consolation and deliverance. He is powerful to defend us from our enemies, preparing us for a hereafter of eternal joy. Gregory the Great says in these tribulations a greater struggle, greater co-operation, greater valor in battle, are required of the leaders.

We are resolved, venerable brethren, to add to the Senate of the holy Roman church, for the glory of God and the utility of the church, six more distinguished men, whose names are known to you, who have shown themselves worthy of the high honor by the discharge of the Episcopal functions with zeal, fortitude, prudence and learning, or by bearing cruel persecutions with courage and constancy.

We intend to create five other Cardinals. If, in the dispensation of God, this Holy See should become vacant before their names are divulged, they will be declared in a codicil attached to our will. We decree by Apostolic authority that they may have the right of an active or passive participation in the act of choosing our successor.

The five Cardinals received in petto are as follows: Monsignors Pacca, Viteleschi, Randi, Ninno Simione, and Antica Mattei.—Journal.

TO THE CHURCHES IN MASS.

At the last meeting of the Mass. State Conference, it was voted that a committee be appointed to send a circular, containing the following questions, to the churches in Mass., for them to take action upon and report. But few of the churches have reported.

As one of the committee, I take this mode of urging all our churches, that have not reported, to bring the questions before the church for action, and report the same to the Annual Conference at Chelsea, Mass., by letter, or through delegate:

1. How many members have you, and what is your present state and interest in the cause?
2. Are you in fellowship, and ready to co-operate with the Conference to carry forward their plans to reach the destitute?
3. Will you help the Conference by quarterly contributions?
4. Shall we record you as a member of this Conference?
5. Will you send delegates to the Conference?
6. Will you, by the grace of God, strive together with us, looking for Jesus soon to come, to attain to a higher state of holy living, and more energetic efforts to save souls?

Do not fail to report.

J. Hemenway.

FROM BRO. J. B. COOK.

Dear Brn.:—Allow me to note that Roman imagery in prophecy belongs to Roman territory, and not to the other modern nationalities outside, however analogous. Russia is a modern power; and as such is about twice as old as the United States of America.

The blood and bondage of Israel and "of the saints" (of this age) lies to the charge of Rome; and nothing like Russia can intervene between Rome and her foretold doom. Then there are, among many others, THREE introductory events that must open the judgment on the beast and its dependencies, as seen in Revelation. See chap. 11: 15–18; 15: 1–5; 16: 1–17. "The time of wrath," including "the battle of the great day" will fill their place, according to the prophecy. Then, "AT the last trump—the seventh—the dead in Christ will rise, and with him take the kingdom." Ps. 72: 98; 1 Cor. 15: 51; Rev. 11: 15; 17: 14; Dan. 7: 18; Isa. 26: 19–21.

The grand scene will open "after the manner of Egypt." Micah 7: 15–21; Dan. 12: 1–3. "The plagues" are described in language derived mainly from those in the judgment on Egypt. In fact, the language of "Revelation" is drawn from the Old Testament generally. Then the "one thousand years" reign—"the times of restitution"—His TIMES "who is the blessed and only Potentate"—the sabbatismos ("rest") that "remaineth to the people of God"—will come in their divinely-appointed order! All ultimates in the new heavens and new earth. It is best to keep in "the way, the truth, and the life"—i. e., Jesus in "his whole work."

NO GOOD IN SPIRITUALISM.

Wisely said Sir Bulwer Lytton that there was "something in Spiritualism, but nothing to benefit mankind." That is, there are, as nobody can deny, certain strange and inexplicable phenomena which are called "spiritual manifestations." But from not one of these, nor from anything connected, directly or indirectly, with them has the human race yet gained anything. They have revealed no loftier truth; they have inspired no nobler action; they have added absolutely nothing worth having to the sum of human knowledge. On the contrary, they have only tended to moral degradation and to infinitely lower our conceptions of the spiritual world. For in no single instance has there been given to longing mortals any indication of better or nobler states of existence there. Even the voices that profess to come to us thence, seem in that other region to have lost a good deal of the eloquence and power they possessed here.

The great men who have passed away from earth speak to us now, through these manifestations, in stammering accents, and the spirits of the great departed come "skulking behind the wainscot, instead of coming in robes of light, with a voice like music of the spheres." Indeed, Spiritualism, so-called, through all the years of its existence, can point to no achievement at all adequate to the magnitude of its theory. If it gave any real evidence that it was true, how eagerly men would look to it for revelations of importance; how science would seek to gain through it the confirmation of its grand systems, and how individual men would find in that belief assuagement for a thousand woes.

But up to this time, as Bulwer says, it has done "nothing to benefit mankind." It has been espoused chiefly by the ignorant and the vile, and its precepts and the practice of its disciples, have been to establish a very low system of morality. At the first glance, it seems to afford some satisfaction; but a closer examination reveals only rottenness, deceit and ignorance."—Boston Daily News.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brn.:—As some of the brethren seem to be anxious to hear from the work, occasionally, in these ends of the earth, I will try to report my labor for the past five weeks.

The fifth Sabbath in January I met a small congregation in Roark's Cove, Tenn. The weather being very wet, people could not get out. On Sunday the house was pretty well filled, notwithstanding the snow and piercing cold winds. I spoke at some length on the theory of the worlds conversion and signs of the times. At the close, I told the people that it was unreasonable to ask them to hear another discourse before returning to their homes, but they unanimously called for a second, and in thirty minutes we began. I spoke one hour on the coming kingdom. Although shivering with cold in the open house, and around a poor stove, the people gave the best attention, and showed their appreciation of the truth by contributing enough to pay the expense of my trip.

Here I met one of the heaviest trials I have had to bear. A good sister of the M. E. Church, thought to be in the last stages of consumption, requested me to sprinkle her, and call it baptism. The friends seemed to think that as she was too weak to be immersed, I ought to yield to her notion. But I could think of nothing but "whatsoever is not of faith is sin;" and believing that baptism can only be performed by immersion, and that it would be an abomination to say, I baptize thee, and then only rantize her, we prayed together, and I told her I could not sprinkle her and call it baptism.

Sunday night spoke to a large crowd at the University of the South. Monday, came down the mountain on a car load of coal, and met several of the kind friends with whom I formed a pleasant acquaintance last July. Spoke to a crowded house at night. Two ministers present. The precious friends here showed their appreciation of God's plain truth by showing that they think a minister's fare should be paid. I have become attached to those dear brethren and sisters, and trust we will all enter into the kingdom and spend eternity together.

The first Saturday and Sunday in this month I was with Bethel church, near Ottewah, E. Tenn. Found all well except Bro. Silas Smith. He was thought to be near death, with cancer, but as yet he still lives to speak for Jesus to all the friends who visit him. The church again chose me to preach for them this year.

The second Saturday and Sunday I was with Shilo church in Dekalb Co., Alabama, where Satan is doing all he possibly can to sow the seeds of trouble in the body; but I trust it will be choked out before it takes root deep enough to be a serious reproach. They elected Brn. Smith, Waldrop and myself to take the oversight this year, pledging to take up the cross more fully, and be co-workers together with Christ. The third Saturday and Sunday at Oak Grove, Ala. Found the little vine in the midst of persecution, but struggling hard for the cause of Jesus. I am sorry to say that there seems to be more prejudice there among the people than anywhere else in my field. The ministers have used long-range guns when we are miles away; and in several instances have grossly misrepresented our position and people. But, instead of replying behind their backs, I made a proposition to meet them, and see who has the truth. Not one will accept. One said he was no man for controversy. Another, that Boston was the birth-place of my cherished dogma. I consider that a poor argument indeed against the truth.

To-day is my regular time at Bethel; but, owing to the uncommonly heavy rains, all rail-road communication being cut off, I am at home. We have had no mail for four days, and it is said the trains will not run for a week. To-day I attended the burial of a preacher of the South M. E. Church, conducted by the Odd Fellows. Two ministers in the procession joined hands with some of the most wicked men in all this country, and all together sang "Hark from the tombs." This language came to my mind "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." Oh, that christians, and especially ministers, would be less conformed to this world and more transformed, by the renewing of their minds, that they might prove the will of God as well as tell it.

Brethren, I need some good, pointed tracts, such as "Thief on Cross," "Rich man and Lazarus," and the doctrinal points, which divide us from the Orthodox churches. These silent preachers are doing a mighty work. I seldom scatter valuable tracts promiscuously to the congregation, but give to individuals who I believe want the truth on these points, and will honestly and impartially investigate; and then I mail a great many to searchers after truth in different parts. I give the following extracts from a letter written by Bro. J. J. Newton, at Double Springs, P. O., in Tarrant Co., Texas. It was written to his grandfather, Caleb Smith, Ottewah, Tenn. I hope the Society will send him some tracts, that he may scatter truth in that great Western country.

"In regard to religious matters here, I can tell you they are low. A few churches here and there—Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Campbellites are the denominations. I have not heard a sermon on the prophecies since I have been in Texas; neither have I heard anything in regard to the final winding up of time; and I have attended the preaching of all denominations. So you may know from this that the ministers here have never studied this part of the sacred Word, or else they are shamefully negligent to publish the doctrine to the world. There is nothing taught more forcibly in the Word of God than that Christ Jesus will come again, and he will reign forever on earth with the saints. As to the principles of the doctrine, I have no works or ideas more than I have gathered from reading the sacred Scriptures. I have no books, only what you gave me,—the 'Great Controversy,' and a few tracts. I would like something to help me study the Scriptures in connection.

J. J. Newton."

The Lord has raised up help for us here in the ministry, to partly take the burden of seeing after the churches, so as to let me out into new fields more extensively. I have felt for some time that my duty is that of an evangelist, and have never felt it duty to be tied down to the care of churches. And I feel that the Lord is opening the way for me to labor in my proper place. We are living amid perilous times. Earth is groaning under the curse. Times are so very hard that I fear many will suffer before another crop can be made. Pray for us.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Received Jan. 7th, by Geo. T. Adams:—from J. B. Cook, $5.00. A. M. Bread, $5.00. W. Bassett, $2.00. J. Clifford, $1.00. March 8th, Cyrus Colborne, Vt., 5.00. A friend, $3.00. A. A. M. Society, $12.00.

J. P. Marquand, $2.00. A German Bro. in Minn., $2.00. A package of tracts from Volga, Ind. A barrel of valuable clothing from Sr. E. Treadwell, Chicago, with $2.00 for freight,—a generous and most timely gift for myself and others.

It has seemed as though God just told the friends when, and what, to send. Thus would I have it. None send without a special drawing; for I feel that my work is very insignificant, in comparison with that of many others; and when I have felt worldly needs, have sometimes thought there might be less need here than in some other places. But I have felt impelled to stay, and have thus far been wonderfully upheld and comforted with the conviction that I was doing right in instructing and encouraging this this poor people; and humbly ask that God may still direct, and enable me to be faithful to my trust.

There has been but little sickness, and although many say such hard times were never known, still there has been little actual suffering among those who will work and save.

My school-house has been crowded with earnest seekers after knowledge. The young people have idled few moments away, and they appreciate their privileges; often contrasting the present with the past. I hear a good report from all my pupils who are out teaching. The people are so proud to have school. Within an area of twenty miles eight schools can be gathered, and I hope to see them all furnished with teachers this fall, from this little nucleus. By fitting teachers of their own race, and sending them out into these back places, we can best disseminate knowledge among this people. This idea has stimulated me; for I know my own labor as teacher must soon cease.

Seven have been sheltered with me the past winter. Three have ate at my table, the cooking for whom and myself my own hands have done, they helping in other ways, so that order, harmony and profit, I trust, have prevailed. Now it seems best that all should seek work, and myself rest a little. Then I propose to them, if our Father so wills, when the crops are laid by and harvest is ended, to gather the older scholars and give them especial instruction for teaching, and encourage them to go out as earnest workers in life's great harvest field. I am sometimes appalled at the magnitude of the work needed in our poor lost world, while so little is done, and the working time almost over.

Will the dear christian friends, who have written so kindly, believe that I would gladly answer each, but I am afflicted with a chronic nervous affection of my eyes. The constant use of my glasses has aggravated this more than usual for the past two months, till now I know it is duty to give them rest. Dearly would I love to greet them, but it may not be till we pass over Jordan. May God grant that we be found among the washed and saved.

Caroline Tuller.

A Remedy Wanted.—A pastor seeks, through the Journal and Messenger, a remedy for a disease which is not peculiar to a number of his flock. He states that there is a good sister living about three squares from the church, whom he often meets in visiting half a mile from her dwelling, who attends public gatherings, church festivals, fairs, exhibitions, etc., but is entirely unable to go to her church, and has been thus afflicted for several years. She "deeply feels the privation of not attending Sabbath morning and evening, and the prayer-meeting during the week," but cannot possibly be present, though she has no small children, and can have good company, if she could only go. He desires to know what will remove this inability. Can't some of our physicians prescribe a remedy?—Exchange.

We would prescribe—Full Salvation.—Christian Standard.

Correspondence.

From Bro. C. H. Hurd.

Dear Brn.:—We feel encouraged to pray and not to faint; for the Lord has heard the cry of his children who have been asking him to revive his work in this place, and save our neighbors and friends from destruction. He has graciously manifested himself by working in our midst to the salvation of a few of the people. Praise his holy name for what has been done! We were almost discouraged, and near fainting in our minds as regards the cause here, thinking that the people could not be reached after standing out against the light so long, and that, too, after the severe judgments of God, in removing many a loved and cherished one from our midst by death, had been passed by without any apparent effect for good being wrought upon the minds of the people. But we rejoice to-day that the Lord has been at work, and we stand filled with wonder, love and praise at the great change that has been wrought within a few days at our very doors. Where sin, darkness, despair and death prevailed, righteousness, light, hope and life have sprung up to make glad the hearts of at least a few.

The work begun by some faithful brethren from other places, with some here uniting, and going from house to house to pray (the weather being such that but few could get out to meeting at the chapel), and the Lord was in the midst, and gave the increase from the commencement; one the first night, and so on until several made an effort to seek the Lord. Some have found him, to the great joy of their hearts, and they to-day are strong and faithful in the Lord's service; others seem weak and backward, but we trust they will yet become fully decided to follow the Lord by the way he would have them go, and thereby find peace and rest to their souls. All are heads of families, and in the middle age of life, excepting one—a young lady.

Arrangements have been made to have preaching at the chapel one fourth part of the time the present year; on the first Sabbath of each month, by a faithful worker in the Lord's vineyard, who will endeavor to supply our wants in ministering the Word of life unto us as the Lord may direct. Our brethren at Porter, Me., been preaching one fourth part of the time, on the third Sabbath of each month, and, as we are near their place, we unite to worship together, which gives us preaching one-half of the time for the present year. This would seem to be for our good as a church, and for the glory of God, if we do not depend too much on the preaching of the Word, and neglect other means that God would have us make use of in the advancement of his cause in our midst.

Freedom, N. H.

From Bro. O. D. Woodruff.

Dear Brn. and Srs. of Conn.:—I am reminded to-day forcibly that cold dreary winter is past, and that the wheels of time have not ceased to roll their rounds, and have thus brought us to another spring. The fields will soon show themselves ready for the laborer to come forth to sow the seed. By this we are reminded that we have a Mission Tent which should be in the field; and as soon as the traveling will permit, a Conference should be held to consult upon these matters of deep interest. Let us come up to the work together. Our efforts should be consolidated in this work. Our Master's business demands earnest workers. The severity of the winter has tested our strength to the utmost; but, thank God, although we have had to lay some of our dear brethren and sisters away in the tomb to wait till Jesus comes, yet a goodly number are permitted to live. The Lord of hosts nerve us with his presence, that, as the beauties of another summer put forth to cheer the heart of man and beast, we may be found at our post, presenting the beauties of the gospel in the great plan devised by our Lord to save the perishing of earth, and cheer the lonely, tired and sick, who are praying—Thy kingdom come.

Our motto is, Salvation through a coming Christ. Now, which of our sister churches desires this spring Conference? Let us hear from you soon, that we may make due arrangements. Direct to S. Woodruff, Pres., or O. D. Woodruff, Sec. and Treas.

From Sr. E. A. Fowler.

Dear Editors:—My father, Mr. George Hill, whose name I presume is on your list, wishes me to write a few lines for him, as his eyes are quite dim, for the purpose of thanking you for your kindness in sending him your valuable paper.

Perhaps it will do you some good to know that he has carried it every week to five or six different families to read, quite a number of years, and if it has done them as much good as it has me, then there is indeed a rich reward awaiting those who help make up the paper.

Many times when I have been so weary I could hardly think, I have taken up the Crisis, and after reading a short time, have felt like a new person, I was so refreshed. Why? Because it was sure to tell of a rest for the weary, balm for the sick, and a physician who makes no mistakes, and who never loses a case.

Brn., I am glad to say that I love this physician, and so does my good old father, and more here in Guilford. May the Lord bless you while you are comforting others.

Guilford, Conn.

From Bro. H. H. Tucker.

Dear Brn. in the vineyard of the Lord:—Knowing that it always rejoices the hearts of God's seed-sowers to hear of the conversion of men, I write a few lines for the Crisis that you may know what the blessed Lord is and has been doing in Granby, Mass.

Bro. W. G. Ruggles and myself have been laboring here for the advancement of the cause of God, and some have found the Savior precious. They have been led to rejoice in a Father's love towards them, and they have taken steps in the right direction, having organized themselves into a church, and they are holding up the banner of truth, that if possible they might, through the aid of the Holy Spirit, lead some to the Lord Jesus Christ.

We found some prejudice here when we first came, as there had been many things said to the people in a harsh way, by some professing godliness, but who were not of the Holy Spirit. Now let me just say to such, wherever you are, if we have not the spirit of our divine Lord, our words do not reach the hearts of the people. Men may hold the truth in unrighteousness. By harsh words we can neither lead nor win men to Christ. May the Lord help us to pray more and live better, so that our lives may be lights which are true, leading our neighbors and fellow-men to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world.

Dear brethren in the Lord, pray for this church here, that the Lord Jesus may prosper them in all their undertakings. Those wishing to labor for the Lord's cause in Granby, will please correspond with Bro. George Weatherby, Elder of said church.

Obituaries.

ROBERTS. In Windsor, Ct., Feb. 13th, 1875, Bro. Cicero Roberts.

He was born in Riverton, Hastford Co., Aug. 16th, 1821. At the age of nineteen he moved to Windsor, which continued to be the place of his abode through his life. He was one of the most useful and beloved men in the community. His death is felt to be a loss, not only to his family and to the Christian circle to which he belonged, but also to the whole town. At his funeral, the church was crowded to its utmost capacity. The gathering was not only of his immediate relatives and friends, but was a spontaneous pouring forth of the whole neighborhood to show its appreciation of his excellentlife and character.

His sickness was very distressing, but the Lord was present to his soul in sustaining power. He was borne up in an unusual manner, and we are comforted in having had it demonstrated to our very senses that Jesus can make even the dying bed a place of grace and glory. Our brother was one of those of like precious faith with the readers of the Crisis. He impressed all with the duty of looking for the coming of the Lord, and being prepared to meet him. He was generous in the support of the gospel, and not only by profession but by practice "adorned the doctrine of God our Savior in all things."

The above obituary was kindly sent us by Bro. J. Crowlish, Pastor of the M. E. Church, of which he says Bro. Roberts was a worthy member. On the day of his death he sent a check to the A. A. M. Society of $100.00. We trust he rests from his labors, and his works will follow him. J. C.

SHAW. In Wales, Mass., Feb. 24th, 1875, our dear mother, Rhoda Shaw, aged 86 years.

She made a profession of her faith in Christ in 1843, and has lived an exemplary life all her days. She was a good mother, and always ready to lend a helping hand to the poor and needy. She has left an only daughter, with other relatives to mourn her loss; but we mourn not as those who have no hope; for we believe she went down like a shock of corn fully ripe. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. Rufus Baker, from words chosen by the deceased, found in Isaiah 38: 1.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
All thy trials here are o'er;
Weary days and nights of anguish
Never shall afflict thee more.

Sad, we watched thee slowly dying
When the autumn turned the leaf;
And when winter winds were sighing,
More intense became our grief.

Gone from earth and all the loved ones,
Yet again with them thou'lt dwell;
And we bow in meek submission,
For He doeth all things well.

I. E. AINSWORTH.

NASH. In Worcester, Mass., Feb. 25th, 1875, Clifford E., only son of Bro. Henry H. and Sr. Emma J. Nash, aged 3 years and 4 months.

Dear little Cliffie is gone; the laughing eyes are closed in death, and the little dimpled hands, now cold and white, are folded for the dreamless sleep. The night is dark, but there is a flush of morn upon the mountains, and a gleam of sunlight glows along the distant hills; and He who holds the keys of hell and death will come back to open the graves, and call the sleepers forth. Then He who took the little ones in his arms and blessed them, will say as he said so long ago,—"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Bro. S. G. Mathewson spoke words of comfort to the afflicted family.

This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Just came to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise will bloom.

Safe on that distant shining shore,
Where the long parted ones shall meet,
And meeting once shall part no more,
There thou the loved and lost shalt greet.

M. L. WHITING.

LAKE. Ida Lake, youngest child of Joseph and Eliza Lake, of Providence, R. I., died Nov. 23d, 1874, of diphtheria. She was only four years and a few months old.

Many will remember little Ida at the Springfield Campmeeting, by her singing; especially the children. She was oft in their meetings, and often told them how she loved Jesus. How much we have heard her sing—"Sweetly I am resting in Jesus," and, "Safe in the arms of Jesus"; but she will never sing them again until she sings in the new earth. You will never see her at Springfield or hear her voice there again. She was a pure, every day little christian. I wish all that knew her at Campmeeting could have heard her talk about Jesus before she died. We well remember her waking and getting up early to attend the morning meeting in Bro. Grant's tent;—sitting in front in her little green chair. She will never sit there again. We will tell you more about her, and how she talked about seeing Jesus when we see you. I hope we shall all meet little Ida in the kingdom. N. D. BABCOCK.

ESTES. At Weeks' Mills, Me., Feb. 11th, 1875, Isaiah Estes, aged 44 years.

Bro. Estes loved the hope of the speedy return of our dear Savior; but his voice, which we have often heard when assembled with the people of God, is hushed in death. His sickness was short, but his suffering great. He looked "beyond," to that inheritance which is "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." This sad affliction fell with fearful weight upon his dear family; yet the blessed hope that he sleeps in Jesus, and that the trump of God will penetrate the grave, and rouse to life the precious ones, and that they will soon meet "where death and the tomb can divide them no more," comforts them amid the sadness and gloom which almost overwhelms them. Funeral services by Eld. J. R. Hall, assisted by Eld. A. H. Walker.

F. A. GRAY.

CURTIS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Goffstown Village, N. H., Feb. 9th, 1875, Marcia A. Curtis, aged 38 years.

She was a great sufferer, yet her long patience was a wonder to all. Her day of life was short and stormy, but her sufferings are over. Her sun had a peaceful setting. In early life she experienced a change of heart, but left her first love, and wandered from God, till he laid his hand of chastisement upon her, and brought her back to the peaceful mooring, where she sweetly breathed her last. It is said that not a word of impatience was heard from her lips during her sickness. She leaves a fatherless and motherless son and daughter. May God have mercy on them. A stirring sermon was preached by Bro. Sutherland, assisted by the Congregationalist minister, from Isa. 40: 1. J. R. BOYNTON.

CANFIELD. Fell asleep in Jesus, after two months sickness, of consumption, at Bridgewater, Conn., March 8th, 1875, Bro. Judson Canfield, aged 76 years.

He embraced the faith of the personal coming of Christ in 1868, and was baptized at the age of 70. He was a steadfast christian even to the end; always ready to give a reason of his hope, with fear and trembling. He has left a dear wife and two children to mourn his loss. We expect to meet him in the soon coming kingdom. Divine service attended by the writer.

H. K. WALLING.

MANSON. In East Rochester, N. H., Jan. 2d, 1875, of consumption, Sister Hattie N., wife of Bro. George H. Manson, aged 23 years.

She leaves a loving and faithful companion and two little boys in deep affliction, to mourn the loss of a faithful, devoted, and affectionate wife and mother. May the Lord bless them, and enable them to be all ready to meet her in the morning. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Bro. S. S. MOONY.

BLANCHARD. In Compton, P. Q., March 3d, 1875, Mrs. Eliza Clementina Blanchard, aged 66 years.

Mrs. Blanchard was a sister of Bro. Norman Stevens, whose death was recently mentioned in the Crisis. Like him she died suddenly. In one week from the day he was buried she died. They were the only inmates of the house, which in ten days has been left vacant. Sermon by the writer. Text, Psalm 90: 12. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

LYEN. At Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 15th, 1875, of heart disease, after about eight hours illness, Mrs. George Lyen, formerly of West Stafford, Ct.

In the death of Mrs. Lyen, her survivors are bereft of a faithful mother and a devoted christian, she ever having an interest in the welfare of her family, little caring for the things of this world. She leaves a husband and son to mourn her loss. GEO. OBER.

FENN. In Clinton, Iowa, at the residence of J. Derham, Mrs. Mary A., wife of Luther L. Fenn, and only daughter of Edward and Abiah Whipple, aged 31 years.

Her disease was consumption. She bore her suffering with christian patience, great fortitude and calm resignation. She will sweetly sleep until the triumphal morn of the resurrection, when she will come forth, clothed in immortal beauty.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, March 16. News is received here that the natives of Assam have massacred a surveying party commanded by a British Lieutenant, and consisting of sixty-three Sepoys and coolies.

A special telegram from Berlin to the London Times says that in a recent dispatch to the German Minister at Rome, Prince Bismarck suggests that all States with a certain number of Catholic inhabitants enter into an agreement to repel Papal interference with politics.

THE NEW KING'S POLICY.—Though only a few weeks have passed since Alfonso XII. was called to the throne by a military pronunciamiento which, to all seeming, has been endorsed by the nation at large, a change may already be noted in the foreign policy of the Madrid Government. The influence of Germany has lost ground, while that of France has increased. Under Marshal Serrano the authority of Germany at Madrid was necessarily supreme. It was to the policy of Prince Bismarck that the Marshal owed the recognition of his nominal republic the pressure exerted upon France to detach her from the Carlist cause, and a sort of undefined support which bore a close resemblance to a protectorate. Apart from personal considerations, the exigencies of his position compel Alfonso XII. to avoid any appearance of dependence upon Germany. With the view of detaching the priesthood from the Carlist cause, the young King and his advisers have lost no opportunity of indicating the Catholic character of his reign; and as Germany, under the leadership of Prince Bismarck, is engaged in a deadly conflict with the Ultramontane party, her alliance with his Most Catholic Majesty can hardly continue to be as cordial as it was with his predecessors in the government.—London Times.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 15. A special dispatch from Monteith, Mich., to the Commercial, says that a hail storm of great severity raged there for fifteen minutes yesterday, demolishing everything that came in its way. Twenty-four hours after it fell, stones were found measuring twelve inches in circumference.

Corinth, Miss., March 15. A severe rain and hail storm passed over this section last night. The town of Rienzi was nearly destroyed and the following persons killed: Porter Walker, Miss Mattie Palmer, and Jordan Reese and daughter. Several others were dangerously and many slightly injured. The waters are subsiding. The damage to railroads and telegraph lines is inconsiderable. All communications will be resumed to-morrow.

New York, March 16. The Herald's correspondence from Guadalajara contains an account of an earthquake of more than usual force, which, on the 11th of February shook a large portion of Northern Mexico. The little town of Cristobal was almost entirely destroyed, and seventy dead bodies were taken from the ruins. The centre of this disturbance appears to have been the volcano of Ceboruca. The earthquake occurred at night, and the terror of the people was increased by the darkness.

St. Louis, March 17. A dispatch from Chester, Ill., states that the steamer Lewis took fire from being forced very hard against the wharf boat while landing, by a high wind, which upset a blacksmith's forge. The fire was carried under the cook house by the wind, and from this point the flames spread through the upper works of the vessel, and in less than five minutes the steamer was entirely enveloped by fire. Besides the watchman, Charles Pritchard (colored), fireman, and five unknown deck passengers were drowned, and Edward McGerigan, another deck passenger, perhaps fatally scalded.

CONFERENCE.—The Delaware District A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet, and hold its annual session at the Advent Christian Hall, on Seventh Street, below Poplar, Philadelphia, Pa., commencing on Thursday evening, March 25th, at 7½ o'clock, and continue over the following Sabbath.

This is our annual meeting to hear the reports of all our preachers, officers, committees and delegates for the last year;—the progress, spread, and triumph of Bible truth, by the word of mouth, by the aid of religious papers, tracts, and pamphlets, and by every other gospel means;—to learn by reports the amount of monies received and paid out for the purchase and distribution of publications. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session. The Conference embraces the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathizing with us will be represented either by letter or delegates. Every church or religious body cooperating with this Conference is entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every ten members. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. G. JAYNE, President.
EDWIN KING, Secretary.

NOTICE.—We would like (if the Lord will), six or eight brethren and sisters to go with the Tent this season, filled with the Spirit and power of the gospel, to labor for the salvation of sinners, proclaim the signs of Jesus' coming at hand, and to help care for the Tent, etc. We want those who can give their time, talents, and voice. We will trust in the Lord for means to pay expenses other ways connected with it.

If brethren wish to contribute to help, it will be received gladly. Brn. F. and Asa Blaisdell and others talk of running the Evangel Tent, and I will furnish one or more, if help will be pledged, for Maine or vicinity. Let those respond at once who feel that the Lord wants them to go, as it will take sometime to make tents. Speak freely. We ought to have many tents in the field this season if Jesus does not come; and could if brethren and sisters would take hold of the business. Let us do all we can for a perishing world, and have it said "well done" when Jesus comes.

P. S. Direct H. B. SEVEY, Mt. Vernon, Me.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the N. H. Conference is to commence so as to hold its session over the last Sunday in April Any church wishing it with them, please write me soon, so we may give notice in good time. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Kansas Central Advent Christian Conference will be held at Melvern, Osage Co., Kansas, on Saturday, the 3d day of April next, and continue over Sunday. All interested are cordially invited to attend. H. H. KLOCK, Sec.

☞ TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Conference Notice.

The annual session of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Chelsea, Mass., in the Advent Christian Chapel on Heard Street, commencing Tuesday, April 6th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The business session will be held on Wednesday morning, and it is desired that all the business of the Conference may be begun and finished on that day. Therefore, ministers and delegates will endeavor to be in attendance in season to take part in said business matters. Churches whose membership is less than twenty-five are entitled to one delegate; over twenty-five and less than fifty, two delegates; over fifty, three delegates. Let there be a general rally. Come in the spirit of the Master, abide in it during the meeting, and return to your homes richly laden therewith. C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held at Rutland, Vt., commencing April 14th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a good gathering of the faithful ones at this meeting. Let delegates be sent from all the churches and localities where there are no regular meetings. We hope ministers belonging to this Conference will make a special effort to be present. Come, brethren, to this feast, to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing.

A. W. SIBLEY, Pres.
W. O. HIGLEY, Sec.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

CHARLTON.—By divine permission the Church in this place purpose holding a Protracted Meeting, commencing Thursday evening, April 15th, to continue over Lord's day. Brethren, sisters and friends in the surrounding towns are invited to attend. Come with the blessing of the good Lord to this feast. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, with others, will be here to preach the Word. In behalf of the Church, J. W. PATTERSON, Clerk.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The A. C. Churches of Northern Kansas, comprising the churches at Brantford, Clifton, and Sherman Centre, are cordially invited to meet in delegation with the A. C. Church at Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kan., on the 27th day of March, A. D. 1875, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of organizing a Quarterly Conference, in accordance with the usages of the A. C. Church. Brethren of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us.

F. O. CUTLER, Pastor of the Church at Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

H. B. SEVEY will lecture on the Prophecies from the Chart, at the Town Hall, Alfred, Me., Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings, March 23d, 24th, and 25th. Also at Springvale, Me., Friday and Saturday evenings, and over Sunday, March 26th, 27th and 28th. J. R. TRIPP.

NOTICE.—The brethren in Porter, Me., and Freedom, N. H., have arranged to sustain preaching one half the time. These places are near each other, and we unite our interests together and maintain but one meeting regularly, and we are very much in need of preaching. Will the Lord put it into the minds of some of his servants to come over and help us? Who will volunteer, and give notice in Crisis ahead for either of these places? We will meet them at Centre Ossipee, N. H., or Cornish, on their arrival, and do what we can to have them sustained, and to have the gospel preached to sinners. Will Bro. E. A. Stockman arrange to come sometimes? Here is a good field for labor, and a good congregation of attentive listeners, and through the blessing of God much good may be done. If any will heed this, please correspond with myself, or W. Sawyer, or J. S. Moulton. Address Porter, Me.

For the Brn., F. PHILBRICK.

NOTICE.—Being appointed "a special Conference Missionary and Evangelist, for the promotion of the interests of the cause of Christ," in connection with the Advent Christian Conference of the Province of Quebec, and to advance "its spiritual and organic interests," being somewhat improved in health, and able to labor to some extent, this is to request all persons interested in the several districts of the conference who may desire my labor in their neighborhoods, to correspond with me about it immediately, that I may make suitable arrangements, and go where duty may seem to call. My post office address is Magog, P. Q.. Box 37. Please attend to this at once, and let us unite our prayers and efforts for the advancement of a common cause. CHAS. P. DOW.

NOTICE.—The Adventists of Newmarket, N.H., have formed themselves into a church, with the undersigned as its officers. Feeling deeply our utter helplessness without the Divine blessing, we ask the sympathy and prayers of all God's people for his blessing on the effort.

Elder J. L. Chute will supply us the first and third Sabbaths of each month. Brethren wishing to preach on the remaining Sabbaths, please correspond with Elder J. L. Chute, Pastor.

J. L. CHUTE, M. L. WHITEHORNE, } Committee.
M. L. WHITEHORNE, Treasurer.
J. C. MEADER, Clerk.

NOTICE.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier, Vt. E. N. MORSE.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

BRO. ROLAND D. GRANT having accepted the call extended to him by the Second Advent Church of Athol, Mass., his labors as Pastor beginning Jan. 1st, 1875, to continue at least one year, all matters of exchange and supply are submitted to him. O. F. BROOKS, Clerk.

THOSE wishing to correspond with me, are hereby informed that my address hereafter will be at Fitchburg, Mass. H. F. CARPENTER.

NOTICE.—I would say to the preaching brethren, when they send their appointments to Richmond, please name the place, Reed meeting-house, Richmond Corner, or at the Village. F. BATES.

To Preaching Brethren.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

A NEW BOOK.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

A NEW TRACT.

"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"

A Work upon the Materiality of Man.

HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.

BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. AG'T.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED

ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

10 cts. AG'T.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

UNSPOKEN PRAYER.

A lady in feeble health felt herself on retiring at night, unable to kneel in prayer as usual, or even to put words of a prayer together, and casting herself wearily upon her pillow, clasped her hands, prayerfully whispering, "I lean my heart on Jesus!"

Too tired—too worn to pray,
I can but fold my hands,
Entreating in a voiceless way
To Him who understands,
How flesh and heart succumb—
How will sinks, wearied, weak;
"Dear Lord, my languid lips are dumb,
See what I cannot speak."

Just as the earied child,
Through sobbing pain oppress't,
Drops, hushing all its wailing wild,
Upon its mother's breast—
So on thy bosom I
Would cast my speechless prayer,
No doubt that thou wilt let me be
In trustful weakness there.

And though no conscious thought
Before me rises clear,
The prayer of wordless language wrought,
That thou wilt deign to hear;
For which at best I plead—
What here my spirit saith,
I only am a bruised reed,
And thou the breathing breath.

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN BISMARCK AND THE JESUITS.

The Pope shows no symptoms of abating his hostility to the German government. He has just declared his intention to excommunicate all the Roman Catholic priests who accept appointments to parishes from the Imperial government, as provided by Bismarck's new Ecclesiastical Laws. The Jesuits are plotting to unite France, and Russia and Spain in a war against Prussia, and are hoping to excite the Roman Catholics, who constitute one-third of the forty million Germans, to rise in revolt against Bismarck's Protestant government.

Their unscrupulous efforts to compass Bismarck's overthrow, if possible, are strikingly portrayed by the following correspondent of a London newspaper:—

"Not only has Prince Bismarck's yearning for repose, after twenty stormy years of political activity, prompted him to contemplate retirement into private life, but other and very powerful influences have been brought to bear upon him with the same object. His wife and daughter, who are fondly attached to him, have suffered a constant agony of terror, lest his life should again be attempted, ever since he was wounded by Kullmann at Kissengen. They incessantly urge him to give up his perilous greatness, quit Berlin, and live quietly with them in the country, the pleasures of which he keenly enjoys. Indeed, these exalted ladies lead but a melancholy life of it here, and profit but little by the wealth, glory and station achieved by their husband and father. The Prince goes not at all into society; the only parties given at his town residence are parliamentary soirees, the invites to which are strangers to his family, and not at all amusing from a feminine point of view.

"The medical attendant, too, who has closely studied his constitution, has repeatedly warned him that the chronic state of excitement in which his nervous system has been kept for the last six months is materially diminishing his vital power, and, to use a conventional expression, shortening his life. It is, moreover, unquestionably the fact that his nerve is shaken to an alarming extent. Let us not forget that he receives hundreds of threatening letters every week, many of which contain menaces of the most revolting description; that the police authorities have impressed upon him the urgent necessity of observing all sorts of irksome precautions, at home and abroad, besides exercising a surveillance upon his person which must be all but intolerable to a man of his naturally intrepid and reckless character.

"Three detectives watch his house day and night, aided by the street police, and when he goes outside his door (which is a rare occurrence), follow him, and 'keep their eye upon him.' He has been advised not to drive out in an open carriage, as was his wont for many years past, so he only uses a close carriage and sits well back in it. He has been implored not to ride in the Thiergarten or streets, so he takes equestrian exercise daily for an hour or so in the huge garden of the Ministerium des Auessern.

"All this may be very necessary, in common prudence, considering the danger his life is exposed to at the hands of furious fanatics and frantic zealots; but it is horribly annoying, vexatious, and depressing. Such conditions of existence must in time undermine the stoutest courage and wear out the boldest temper. It is deplorable that a man who, two years ago, could not show himself without becoming the object of popular ovation, and who is still absolutely worshiped—so far as the German nature is capable of worship—by millions of his fellow-countrymen, should have been worried and badgered until he dare scarcely cross his threshold, lest the assassin's knife or bullet should be aimed at his heart.

"When I saw Bismarck ride in the Konigsplatz, at the inauguration of the Victory Column, in commemoration of the German conquest of France, and witnessed his enthusiastic reception by an untold multitude; had any one told me that, within sixteen months from that day, Bismarck would not venture to walk down the Linden, or canter round the Thiergarten, for fear of being murdered, I am afraid I should have been rude enough to laugh in the face of the person making so apparently ridiculous a statement. But that person would have been perfectly correct in his prognostications. Such are the consequences of the May Laws and Ecclesiastical Penal Statutes.

"When Prince Bismarck last year asseverated that he was the worst-hated man in Europe, he knew very well what he was saying; but the must cruel part of the cruel truth he then gave utterance to is the painfal fact that he is more bitterly and dangerously hated by Germans, his own compatriots, than he is by Frenchmen, his country's sworn enemies. Eighty per cent. at least of the villainous communications anonymously sent to him are written by German hands. It is probable that many of the enraged Ultramontanists entertain the hope of driving him from power by sheer intimidation. The clerical party is always well informed with respect to what goes on in its enemies' camps; and it is quite aware that a man who has been twice shot at, and had two such terribly narrow escapes of death y assassination as has Prince Bismarck, is, in all human probability, peculiarly susceptible to the effects producible upon the nerves by anonymous threats.

"Nothing more lowering to the spirits can be conceived than the sort of life led in Berlin by this greatest of Germans, and by those nearest and dearest to him. Of what avail all his greatness and his wealth to him, so long as he is constrained to fear that every mouthful he eats or drinks may contain some grain or drop of deadly poison; that every stranger he meets may be seeking his life; that thousands of men, Germans like himself, wish him dead, and are even compassing his death? Which of us would accept princely rank, supreme power, and a million of money, on such terms? Will the most earnest German patriot have any right to reproach him, if he decide upon quitting a career over-weighted with such conditions?"

MY EXPERIENCE.

C. CASE.

The request is often made, Give us your experience. Thinking those with whom I had been associated in Ct., the land of my birth, with whom I had taken such sweet counsel, would like to know whether I am walking by the same rule and minding the same things as formerly, I felt impressed to tell them how I felt when, to all human appearance, the last battle was fought.

On the evening of the twenty-first of Dec., my husband and I called on a neighbor, and on our return I slipped and fell. It gave me a severe shock, and I was carried home insensible. I became conscious soon after reaching home, but could not move or speak, though my mind was as clear as ever in my life. I looked over my past life, to see how the account stood between myself and God. In a few minutes a crowd of people were present. One said to me, "We hope you will be better soon." I replied—"If it is best; not my will." I lay there happy and peaceful, examining to see if I could stand in the judgment. I felt like talking every minute, for, to all human appearance, my last testimony must be given soon. Said I, "If I live, I live unto the Lord; and if I die, I die unto the Lord. I am so glad I got ready while well; that is the time. Now," said I, "what do you suppose I would take for my hope?" My son-in-law said, "Mother, nobody could buy your hope." "No," said I, "gold, silver, nor worlds, could buy it. Jesus died for just such sinners as I am; that is all my hope." I called to mind errors in judgment, but every sin had been forgiven. Jesus stepped in between me and justice, and paid all the debt, so I could go free." I felt under no condemnation. I said to them—"I am the happiest one here." I said to some of my orthodox friends the next day, "The dead know not anything. There was no part of me, mortal or immortal, that knew anything last night, nor ever would till the resurrection, if I had been alone."

For some years I belonged to the Methodist church. After searching the Scriptures, as for hid treasures, for a year or two, to see if our Advent brethren were correct, I had to acknowledge they had the truth on their side. I had followed up the light as fast as I saw it. When the cloud moved I had stood ready to move also, for which I then felt the Master said, "Well done."

As I have said to friends since then, if I have a hope that sustains me when death stares me in the face, and my account as I suppose is about to be sealed up to the great day of accounts, God being my helper, I will walk by the same rule and mind the same things till Jesus comes, or I am laid away to await the sounding of the last trump.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

In behalf of the poor in Kansas, I acknowledge with many thanks the receipt of two barrels of clothing,—one from the Sabbath school at Sugar Hill, with money to pay freight; and one from Sr. Matthews, of St. Johns, N. B.; also twenty-five dollars in money by the hand of Bro. G. T. Adams; also $17.50 previously from the same.

Many hearts have been gladdened and much suffering relieved by the articles received; but, oh! how little in comparison with the vast amount of suffering yet unalleviated. With the opening of spring much sickness is anticipated on account of the destitution which the people have suffered and must suffer. Great as the suffering has already been, the prospect is that the worst is yet to come; as almost the entire population will be entirely destitute of breadstuff by the middle of April.

A large amount has been contributed, in money and goods, by the people of other States for the relief of the Kansas poor; but because of dishonesty and selfishness on the part of those to whom it is entrusted (I mean the officers of the various aid (?) societies in Kansas), only a portion of it ever reaches the suffering. So, brethren, whatever you have to give, do not give it to the general aid, as it will probably go to help fill the coffers of dishonest men; but send directly to some trusty person who will give it to those who need; or send it to Bro. Geo. T. Adams, Boston. Brethren, pray for us.

SPIRITUALISING.

The proper use of language is the communication to others of what we feel, think, or purpose; the words we speak are the symbols of what we think or feel; and, in order that the means may accomplish the end contemplated, it is indispensably necessary that there be a common understanding between speaker and hearer, or writer and reader, as the case may be, regarding the import of the terms employed.

In conversation any defect in this matter can be remedied by explanation, but written language, to convey the idea of the writer correctly, must be used and understood in a sense that is settled by usage and common consent; otherwise it would be impossible to have the conviction that we understood what the writer meant to express. These observations, of course, are as true of the language of Holy Scripture as that of any other writings; yet it is simply by acting otherwise that there are so many conflicting meanings put upon words spoken by the messengers of God to men.

If the Bible is a revelation of the mind and purposes of God, we surely ought to understand its terms in the same sense we would understand the same terms in any other book; yet strange to tell, men, apparently by common consent, treat the words of Scripture as if they were those of an enigma, rather than those of a revelation; and modes of interpretation the most capricious, empirical, and fanciful, have been applied to the blessed book; hence those whom it was meant to enlighten and save have been perplexed, bewildered, and led astray.

There are only two senses in which ordinary language is understood, namely, the literal and the figurative; but interpreters of the Bible affirm that its language is sometimes used in a third sense, which they call "the spiritual,"—a sense never sought for in the language of any other book. And what is meant by the spiritual sense? Not the figurative, which is as apparent, where it is used, as the literal; for where language is used figuratively the figure is either expressed or implied, and every term in such a sentence must have a literal signification; because a figure of speech does not consist in the terms of a sentence, but in their application to subjects to which they do not properly belong. . . .

Were the Lord to return to our world just now, how truly would he find his words verified: "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Faith in the hopes of the Gospel is rare indeed, and even where it exists is sadly mixed with fancy. Brethren in Christ, beware! Even among believers of the Gospel of the kingdom of God the spiritualising process finds too much favor. "Hold fast that form of sound words," given for your instruction, in the Bible. Let each of us be able to say, in the face of all men, "There is no article of my faith and hope which I cannot express correctly in the unaltered words of Scripture; and, whatever others do, I am determined, God helping me, to cling firmly thereto."—W. LAING, in Rainbow.

LINES

Suggested by the death of little Willie, only son of Bro. and Sr. Mix, of Yalesville, Conn.

WM. BERKLEY.

Brother, sister, why this weeping? why thy hearts so filled with grief?
Just remember Jesus liveth; he will bring you sweet relief.
Darkness now is brooding o'er you, and the cross is hard to bear;
Jesus is a mighty helper; he will all your sorrows share.

Your little one so rudely taken, sweetly now in Jesus rests;
'Tis not God that hath bereft you, but the cruel monster Death.
Thinkest thou that God will leave you, in this dark and gloomy hour?
He has always been your helper, he will crush the Tyrant's power.

In Rahmah once was sound of weeping,—lamentation loud and long;
Rachel weeping for her children; those she loved so well were gone.
But how sweet the consolation that is sounding in her ears—
"Now refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from bitter tears.

For thy work shall be rewarded, and thy little ones so dear,
Safely housed until the morning, then with Jesus they'll appear.
Pilgrims, this same consolation Jesus gives to you to-day;
He will wipe those tears of sorrow with his own soft hand away.

Little Willie, how we loved him! he was Jesus' little lamb;
So he used to sing when with us. Soon he'll sing at Christ's right hand.
Then be patient, wait for Jesus, soon in glory he'll appear;
Then the graves will all be opened, and his voice the dead will hear.

OUR BLESSED CONFERENCE.

Our meeting at St. Johnsbury, Vt., was a blessed one. It was blessed to feel the presence of the blessed God. It was blessed to preach and confess the blessed Savior. It was blessed to know that the blessed Spirit was brooding o'er the hearts of sinners and winning them to Christ. It was blessed to meet the beloved in Christ from various towns—from Waterbury, Wheelock, Waterford; from North and West Danville and Danville Green; from Salem, Burke, Victory, East Bethel, and Wells River, Vt.; and Sugar Hill, N. H. It was blessed to drink "living water" from wells of Divine love, opened in christian hearts. It was blessed to hear from many churches. It may cost some self-denial, some time and some money to go to these conferences, but it pays. It pays in those "riches" we most need just now. We shall not need silver and gold or scrip much longer, but we shall need to be rich in faith to enter the coming kingdom.

O, brethren, let us awake and purpose that we will go up to these feasts as often as possible.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. M. Stoddard.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I find a pile of letters accumulated upon my hands from dear friends, and as I have neither time nor stamps to answer them separately, I avail myself of a place in the Crisis to say to you that I appreciate heartily your favors to me while in a land of strangers. Many of my correspondents are aged ones, who have "borne the heat and burden of the day," while many more are sick and languishing, and need the sympathy of those in health. I would like to write something that would benefit these lonely ones, who are sighing for deliverance.

Your letters to me have been a precious boon, while toiling in my Master's vineyard, amid discouragements, perplexities and cares.

The winter has been so long and cold, and the roads have been so blockaded with snow, that I have suffered intensely in getting to my appointments, together with sleeping in cold beds oftentimes, has caused considerable irritation in my throat, so that I have coughed for nearly five months. I closed my labors at Kendall, Jan. 1st, with the dear people whom God has raised up during the two years of my efforts there, and they are left without a pastor; but my health would not permit me to endure the long stage ride through another winter.

Could some servant of God take that field, with a radius of eight or ten miles, and speak in the many school houses with which it is dotted, many souls might be gathered, as sheaves into the garner, when the Lord comes. I have never been able to accomplish the good I might, because I was not residing in their midst, and had no horse and carriage to do the work with. Preachers in this locality greatly need and must have a team, to work successfully in the "highways and hedges," for it consumes too large a part of their salary to ride in cars and stages.

Destitute places are calling for labor, but having so many domestic duties that claim my time and attention, I cannot respond readily, and my heart sickens at the sight of increasing wickedness, and no warning voice to be heard of the approach of coming judgment. In vain we call for laborers, for there are not enough means to sustain the faithful men and women who are already in the field. It would be thought that in the Northern States there need be no lack of means to sustain the gospel; but so it is. Amid the rich praries of the West, and the vast resources of wealth in the great State of N. Y., and the vast amount of business carried on in the N. E. States, it is talked over and over again about supporting a minister. As well might they talk about supporting their grocer, or tailor, or physician. This is not as Paul talked; for he said—"The laborer is worthy of his reward" (which is only a repetition of Jesus' words when he sent forth his disciples). Says he, "Not that I speak in respect of want; for I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know how to be abased, and I know how to abound; everywhere, and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need."

I have preached at Knowlesville two Sundays in a month for some time past, and a good interest is manifested. They had become nearly discouraged in their efforts to hold meetings to get the truth before the people, for want of a suitable public place, since their chapel was destroyed by fire some years ago, and but very few had met weekly at a private house to hold prayer and conference meetings. But now there has been opened a nice new Hall, which they obtain at a reasonable rent, and the Lord has signally blessed the undertaking by removing prejudice from the minds of the people, and causing investigation on the subject of the coming of the just One.

Last Nov. I took a tour into Cattaraugus and Chantuagua Co's., stopping at the home of old Bro. Wilson, the Bibleite, who traveled so extensively through N. E. States, and many times found a place of rest in our home at Worcester, Mass. I saw his picture on the wall of his room, sat in his old arm chair, read from his Bible, and noticed the marks made by the hand that lies so quietly in the grave. What memories rush to my mind! The song he sang in our house so many times, with such fervor and pathos: "Worthy, worthy is the Lamb." His devotion to the truth, his forsaking all the pleasant associations he had at Gerry, to sound the alarm to a guilty world, made me exclaim, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

I found a good home at Bro. William Wilson's, who, with his faithful companion, were looking for the same "blessed hope" that animated their sainted father.

The Advent people are much scattered in that locality, having preaching only once a month, by Eld. C. W. Low, and do not sustain a weekly prayer meeting. They worship in a Free Church, owned by those who are in sympathy with our views. Quite a company of believers could be gathered in that place, if some shepherd could devote his time in visiting the people among those hills, and preaching Jesus and his coming, "and set in order the things that are wanting." I believe many would rally around the standard of truth, and be found ready in that day to exclaim "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him."

I made a flying call at Jamestown, where thirty years ago a strong church was looking for Christ, and enjoying the ministration of Eld. L. P. Judson, now among the Baptists. Some have fallen asleep in Jesus, some backslidden, and some, for want of a home, united with the Baptist church, and some stand isolated, as "pilgrims and strangers," sighing for the promised land. I had the privilege of "contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," by showing what the hope of the church was from the days of Abel. The Lord blessed many of them, and I received an invitation to speak in their conference meeting, which I endeavored to do to the glory of God's truth. Mr. Erdman, the Presbyterian minister in the place, is preaching the coming of the Lord at the door, and would have been present to have heard me, but duties called him out of town. The Congregational minister came to hear, but the Baptist minister was sick.

I left Jamestown on Thanksgiving day for East Randolph, where Eld. W. A. Fenn, and Bro. Jonas Wendall pitched the N. Y. tent some four years ago. There stands a nice chapel, unoccupied, except occasionally by a Baptist minister on a Sabbath eve. The people were hungry to hear about the coming kingdom of God, and would sustain preaching at least half the time. They had become nearly disheartened at their disappointments in not having a preacher after they had expended so much in the repairs of the church. Here also there is no prayer meeting of Advent believers sustained, where they can talk their views freely, and "exhort one another." May the Lord send them a faithful servant, to gather the scattered flock, who will care more for them than for the fleece.

Spent a night or two with Bro. Bushnell's dear family, at Napoli, seven miles distant. There they stand alone, as to our precious truths. I went one evening with them to a Methodist revival meeting (so called), and heard "eternal torment" preached; and I did not wonder they went so many miles to hear the truth, if that was a specimen of what they were obliged to hear there.

The next day rode through a terrific snow and wind storm, five miles, to take the cars for home, via. Dunkirk and Buffalo, being remembered after a "godly sort," by Bro. Bushnell's family. Shortly after New Year's I went to Linden, where Eld. A. P. Moore resides, to assist him in a protracted effort; but had to leave for home, just when the people began to be interested in their salvation. Bro. Moore has labored long and hard to keep the truth before the people, and there are some precious ones there looking for the King in his beauty.

I have given you a specimen of my work. As I go, I distribute all the tracts I think will be read; for they are too precious to be given to those who would only cast them aside.

I wish some of you would send me Prof. Ives' work if you have done reading it, and any other tracts you may please to send, and it will turn to your account in the great reckoning day. Thanks for tracts from the Publication Society, and all others who have thus remembered me, by sending postage stamps in their letters.

Please accept this letter as addressed to my many correspondents, individually, and continue your favors as heretofore; and may the Lord enable us to endure to the end, that we may meet never to part, amid the fragrant fields of Canaan in the kingdom of God. Pray for me, that I may have strength and power to go forth to glean in the "highways and hedges," till Jesus comes.

From Bro. J. Feather.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have often thought of saying a few words to you through the columns of the Crisis, but forebore, lest I should crowd out something of more importance. How it cheers my drooping spirits with its weekly visits as it comes laden with the good things of the kingdom.

Think of me, away out in Central Kan., for the last sixteen months, having had the privilege of speaking to but two Brn. of like precious faith, and laboring in weakness for the cause of our common Lord and Master.

I lost my connection with the U. B. Church, on account of my peculiar notions, as they are called, with regard to the nature of man, and the second advent of our blessed Lord.

About one year ago, finding the cause of religion very low, I held, near here, two series of evening meetings, of two weeks each, with the result of about thirty members added to the Baptist and M. E. churches. A short time since I went to a neighborhood almost deprived of the means of grace, visited from house to house, and had a series of evening meetings of three weeks' duration. Twenty-five were hopefully converted to God, and a society organized and added to the M. E. Church, of about thirty members. I preached a present, free, and full salvation through the atonement of Christ, his second coming, and the resurrection of the dead as our only hope of a future life. I found a number who would not believe that the Bible was given by inspiration of God, because they said it taught that he is infinite in love and mercy, and yet exercises his power to keep his enemies alive, to torture them in a lake of fire and brimstone, throughout eternity. They are now rejoicing in the God of the Bible, as a God of love and mercy.

Brethren, I do believe the last judgment is about to be visited on a guilty world. O that God would warn the people, or that some one could take me to them and teach me the way of the Lord more perfectly. I have had but little of anything to assist me in studying the Bible, and feeling my weakness among so many scoffers, I have feared I could not give the trumpet a certain sound, and so I have not ventured to blow it.

If some brother or sister could help me by private letter or through the Crisis, or sending such books as would be useful to me, I will try to pay the postage, and use them to the glory of God. Works on the Second Advent, or the future destiny of this planet, I should like. My family is large, and I am not able to pay for them at present. Pray for me, that I may have my work done and well done, and be caught up together with you and the loved ones that sleep in Jesus, in the cloud, to meet our coming Lord in the air.

From Bro. W. J. Covey.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I wish to write a few lines for the Crisis. I have been a reader of it over two years, and it is a welcome visitor. When I read the letters from afflicted ones it saddens my heart. I have been afflicted with the heart disease four years, and was under doctors' treatment two years. They did me no good. I then prayed to my heavenly Father, and soon began to receive strength. God is my helper and strength in time of trouble. Praise his name.

There is a little congregation here who are contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. We are scorned on every hand, but, if we would live godly in Christ Jesus, we must suffer persecution. They tell us Christ never died. If their theory be true, and he went to heaven with the thief, then three days after that there was another Christ rose from Joseph's tomb, and said to Thomas—"Behold my hands and my feet, and thrust your hand in my side; and be not faithless, but believing." The apostles saw this same Jesus ascend into heaven, personally and bodily; and if Christ went on the day of his crucifixion, there are two Christs in heaven.

I believe Christ died and rose again, and appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos, and said—"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." If Christ says he did die, we ought not to say he did not. I believe we are near the judgment, and "what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness; looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God."

Brethren, stand firm, and let us hold up our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh. I believe the time is not far distant when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

Spavinaw, Benton Co., Ark.

From Sr. F. M. Shimper.

Editors of Crisis: Dear Brn.:—I wish to express my thanks for the paper having been sent me free, in my family affliction. I have been seriously ill myself, and am very slow in recovering. I did not know but that its very welcome visits might cease, as you heard nothing from me, but its faithful continuance has caused an increase of gratitude to God, and also to my brethren.

I wish also to say a few words through the paper, to many dear brethren and sisters, who were deeply interested in the sufferings of my daughter, and in our coming to this place for change of climate. They will be thankful to learn that she has had no hemorrhage of the lungs since we came to Vineland, one year ago last Nov.; and through the mercy of God and in answer to the prayers of his children, other dangerous symptoms are greatly mitigated; and did she not overdo, in her desire to "help mother," I think she would be quite comfortable in health, though even here we have some weather so cold this winter, as to affect her quite seriously. But the Lord is her helper and has wonderfully sustained her through my late sickness. She cherishes deep love in her heart for the dear children of God in Vermont;—remembers them daily at a throne of grace, and hopes to meet them all in the soon coming kingdom of our God.

My own health has been usually good until last fall, the power of endurance seemed to fail, and shortly after Thanksgiving, acute disease brought me low. But the Lord was graciously good through it all. Oh, how often I felt, "As one whom his mother comforteth," so comforteth he my heart; and while suffering physically, praise and thanksgiving often flowed spontaneously from a loving heart unto a kind, tender, loving heavenly Father. I want once more to bear witness that his loving-kindness faileth not. His precious promises are verity and truth. It is safe, oh, how safe, trusting in him. May all of our hearts be continually encouraged to do so.

Now, very dear friends, will you accept this communication in place of the many letters I truly purposed to write. I did not realize how closely time and strength would be used, in sustaining a home among strangers. But all are remembered in much love, and an earnest desire that we may each stand complete in Jesus Christ, ready to hail him with joy when he comes.

Vineland, N. J.

From Sr. N. Graves.

Dear Crisis:—Friends:—I never have written a word for your paper before, but I want to say one word for Jesus, and of my blessed hope, found in Bible truth. Oh, blessed hope of immortality and eternal life by a patient continuance in well doing. I want to tell you what Jesus has done for unworthy me. He has lifted me from the miry pit, and put a new song in my mouth, even praises to his blessed name. I renewed my covenant with the Lord at the commencement of the new year. I was a poor, miserable backslider; but father heard his child, and ran to meet me; and although unworthy to be called his child, he has accepted me, glory be to his name! and owns me as his. To-day I feel that I can claim his promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Blessed be our Father! we are sure of a home, if faithful, in the kingdom under the whole heavens, prepared by God from the foundation of the world. I am waiting, and watching with interest the signs of his coming, and mean to be faithful, by his grace assisting, until the day star dawns, and I hear him say—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Bath, Me.

From M. F. Berry.

Dear Brethren:—I thought I would like to say a few words through the Crisis for the dear Savior, for I feel that it is through his mercy that I live, and have hope of one day seeing him who died that we might reign with him. I often think of the great love of Jesus to a sinful race. When we were lost and ruined by Adam's transgressions, he left the glory he had with the Father, and came to our world to die for his enemies. As he hung upon the cross, with a scoffing multitude mocking his dying groans, he could turn his eyes to heaven and say—"Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." And to-day as he looks over our world of sin and blasphemy, and when it does seem as if the hand of justice must fall, he can pray—Father spare them a little longer.

O sinner! while time is being lengthened out for you, flee to him who stands with outstretched arm to receive you. Soon he will cease pleading, and come to judge the world, and to destroy all that do wickedly. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near."

I am so glad that I ever turned my feet in this direction, and that I ever came to Him and found peace and pardon. The way sometimes seems trying, yet he says, "My grace is sufficient." He is able to save to the uttermost all that will come, and he bids us come boldly to the throne of grace.

Come sinner, and find pardon before he rises up and shuts to the door. The signs tell us that probation is about ending. Christ will soon come to raise those that are held by death's cold embrace, and change the living saints, and take them to the place where sin and sorrow will never come.

Boston, Mass.

From Bro. T. L. Waugh.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—We are truly living in a grand and awful time. I realize that we have but a short time in which to prepare for the coming of Jesus. We need to awake to righteousness, if we would gain the heavenly portals. I must be there, and I will by the help of God. What is this world without Jesus? What are its vanities compared to the joys of the blest? I choose a home beyond this vale of tears. I am willing to let go every thing that binds me to earth, that I may be saved in the kingdom of God.

The grace of God is sufficient for us in every time of need. I am trusting in my Savior, and not in any works of righteousness which I have done; for salvation is a free gift, which we receive through faith, which prompts us to obedience. I am trying to live nearer to God than I have done in the past!

Oh, let us be faithful and obedient, that we may "eat the good of the land," and have a right to the tree of life. Let us overcome all things, and be permitted to reign with Jesus on his throne.

West Morris, Ct.

From Bro. S. P. Howland.

Editors of Crisis:—Allow me to say a few words concerning the state of things here. There are some investigating for the truth. I help them all I can. They need books or tracts to aid them, which we would gladly buy if we could, but the crops have been destroyed by the drouth and grasshoppers, so that we have to depend upon aid.

I am eighteen years of age, and have been in the faith six years this month. I am determined to press on, and do all I can in my feeble manner, to spread the glad tidings. You have my most heartfelt thanks for the aid I have already received, which is all I have to give now.

Vineland, Douglas Co. Kansas.

ADHERE TO PRINCIPLE.—Let the winds and waves of adversity blow and dash around you if they will, but keep on the path of rectitude, and you will be firm as a rock. Plant yourself upon principle, and bid defiance to misfortune. If gossip, with her poisoned tongue, meddles with your good name, heed her not. Carry yourself erect; let your course be straightforward, and by the serenity of your countenance and the purity of your life give the lie to all who would underrate and belittle you.—Nature's Arcana.

THE CRY, THE BITTER CRY!

The cry, the bitter cry, is coming up from the churches in every part of the land, "Give us bread—give us bread, or we die!" Granite, brown stone, or white marble, will not feed souls. "The Fatherhood of God" (transcendentally presented), or, copious extracts from the magazine literature of the times, as the staple of pulpit ministrations, will not feed souls. BREAD—living bread—the bread that cometh down from above, is what the people are crying for. And the people will have it, depend upon it! They have learned that there is "bread enough in their Father's house, and to spare"—and they cry out for it. And ministers who do not deal in bread will soon learn that the people will give them "leave of absence."—Christian Standard.

EARNESTNESS.—Rowland Hill, in once addresing the people of Wotton-under-Edge, raising himself, exclaimed, "Because I am in earnest, men call me an enthusiast. When I first came into this part of the country, I was walking on yonder hill, and saw a gravel-pit fall in and bury three human beings alive. I lifted up my voice for help so loud that I was heard in the town below, at a distance of near a mile; help came, and rescued two of the sufferers. No one called me an enthusiast then; and when I see eternal destruction ready to fall on poor sinners, and about to entomb them irrecoverably in an eternal mass of woe, and call aloud on them to escape, shall I be called an enthusiast now? No, sinner, I am no enthusiast in so doing; and I call on thee aloud to fly for refuge to the hope set before thee in the gospel."—Christian Standard.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SANITARIUM.

Sharp, raw winds, with frequent storms and sudden changes of temperature, are characteristic of this month, and these vicissitudes of the weather, with improper living, give rise to influenzas, throat ailments, and rheumatic affections, together with gout in those who are habitual high livers, and neuralgia in persons whose nerves are shattered by dissipation or overwork. Malignant affections of various sorts also appear in those who have filled their systems with grossness by the use of pork, stall-fattened cattle, intoxicating liquors and other unnatural and unwholesome articles.

A rigidly hygienic dietary, tepid ablutions, and wet-sheet-pack, are applicable to these diseases, as to all others which involve febrile disturbances. Local continuous applications of cold should be made whenever there is excessive inflammation with tendency to ulceration. One useful measure to prevent throat affections is to avoid breathing otherwise than through the nose. By inhaling the air through the nasal cavity, it becomes somewhat warmed before reaching the throat and lungs, and so does not disturb the temperature of those parts. The pain of gout, neuralgia, and acute rheumatism, may usually be much mitigated by the frequent, but not continuous, use of hot applications. Hot fomentations, bags filled with hot sand, salt, or corn meal, hot bottles, bricks, etc., are all useful for this purpose. In some cases, however, cool applications are more grateful to the patient.—Health Reformer.

MINISTERS VS. TOBACCO.—It seems that the clergy are really awaking, at last, to something like a proper sense of the necessity for raising their voices against a habit which threatens to exterminate the race, unless some measure can be adopted to stay its progress and rescue its victims. Ministers can do more to aid the anti-tobacco reform than any other class. They have a powerful hold upon the moral characters of their followers, and can exercise a mighty influence in instilling into their minds sound physiological principles as well as moral truths. But in no way can clergymen accomplish so much in this direction as by a correct example. It would be of very little avail for a preacher to declaim against tobacco in the pulpit when half his congregation were accustomed to meet him in the street with it in their mouth.—Health Reformer.

AIR FOR INFANTS.—Infants, even the smallest, need oxygen as well as older people; and yet their mothers often use them as though they were proof against suffocation. Some mothers are in the habit of allowing their young children to sleep with their heads entirely covered with the bed clothes in cool weather. Others always surround the little one's head with many thicknesses of shawls and blankets whenever it is taken into the air during any but the mildest weather. As the result of these practices, the young life is often extinguished just as a candle would be if shut up in a tight jar. Several instances of this kind have come to our notice. But if the child is not actually killed, it may suffer great injury; and, doubtless, thousands of babies could testify to this if they had an opportunity.—Health Reformer.

HAIR DYES.—So numerous are the preparations for coloring the hair, or restoring to it its lost hue, and so specious are the advertisements descriptive of these various compounds, that we deem it important to frequently call attention to their real character. We have reliable authority for saying that not one of these multitudinous preparations is what it claims to be. The so-called hair vigors and restoratives, said to restore to the hair its lost vitality, possess no such properties in the least degree. Every one of the mixtures contain rank poisons. Lead is an almost constant ingredient; and it is very common to meet with sad cases of lead poisoning from this source. The so-called vegetable dyes are arrant frauds, containing nothing but minerals, being equally dangerous with the rest.—Health Reformer.

MY HOME.

My home is on the other shore,
Beyond the billow's foam;
And yon green fields, to some so fair,
But part me from my home.

And oh! each pain-throb of the heart
Shall there forever cease,
And all the tumults raging here,
Be hushed to perfect peace.

Thank God! there's light to guide me home,
Where darkness reigned of yore;
A watch-fire on the narrow way,
A light-house on the shore.

The willow 'neath its burden bends,
It's borne my harp too long;
I'll strike again those trembling chords,
And raise a triumph song!

For now the pilgrim's almost home,
The pearly gates I see,
And, glory to his name, I know
They'll open unto me!

—The Restitution.

TEN SIGNS OF THE LORD'S SPEEDY ADVENT.

BY REV. WM. BROCK, M. A.

1. Infidelity or unbelief is a sign. I begin with this because there are so many who profess and call themselves Christians, who do not believe in these signs. How should they if they do not believe in their Master's words? The decline of faith is a sign which he has himself given. When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" The Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith." I am speaking now of a professed unbelief which prevails on all sides. Practical unbelief has always been common and has prevailed in Christian communities in all ages; but professed infidelity is comparatively a new thing. At the end of the last century it burst forth in France, and partially extended itself elsewhere. But of late years it has been openly avowed in the highest places of the church, and, as a natural consequence, it has spread with marvelous and fearful rapidity amongst the masses.

A refined and subtle infidelity has poisoned our literature and our education. It lurks too often under the attractive guise of pleasant tales and novels; or it is published under the form of so-called learned "Essays and Reviews." It hides itself with duplicity under the prophet's mantle, and it is given forth, instead of the oracles of God, from the professor's chair and from too many of our pulpits. Our universities and our public schools are infected with it; and the men who have sworn at their ordination to "banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrine contrary to God's Word," are now the corrupters of our youth, their guides in the path of irreligion, and the teachers of unbelief.

Hence the hollow condition of things all over Christendom; social and political, and moral ties are all broken together. Infidelity and unbelief are the parents of disintegration, of dislocation, of disorganization, and of disorder; they corrode the cement which binds society together. Where there is no religion there is no bond of union. Nations and communities which are leavened with infidelity are like timber that is worm eaten, or like walls and battlements without mortar, ready to fall to pieces at any moment.

2. Nor will Popery or Ritualism mend the matter. As a false religion produced infidelity and scepticism in France a century ago, so a false religion has bred infidelity again. "Puseyism" is a spurious christianity, it is a caricature of the gospel, and it has corrupted and weakened England, and left her a prey to numerous sure and certain causes of national dilapidation and decay. For the last forty years the Jesuits have had increased sway in Great Britain and Ireland and in our Colonies; and they have done their work thoroughly. They have crippled christianity all over the world by crippling it in England. They have damaged, discredited, and counteracted Christian Missions in all parts of the earth. They have concentrated all their lines of attack upon England and her Colonies, as hitherto, the great fortress of Christianity, or, as Dr. Manning tells us, "the great stronghold of heresy" amongst the nations of Christendom.

And they have had marked success. The British parliament subservient to the Romish party; the public press notoriously under its influence; a divided and distracted National Church; a perverted and debauched nobility; Bishops who have repudiated the protest of the Reformers, and are secretly permitting the re-introduction of the Romish mass; and a people who, for the most part, are lovers of pleasures, of wealth, and of ease, more than lovers of God—these are the sad and humiliating trophies of their triumph.

And therefore a second sign of the times which may be adduced is The Maturity and the Success of the Papal Antichrist. Her maturity and power in this once great Empire will tell, and is telling everywhere else. Never was the Papacy more thoroughly despised and deserted by the kings of the earth, yet never was she more thoroughly in earnest and successful. Her sins have reached unto heaven. They have culminated in her last crime, in the promulgation of the blasphemous dogma of "Papal infallibility;" and without doubt the Papacy is even now tottering to her fall. Her final doom is surely at hand. And yet so great, so stupendous is "the mystery of iniquity," and so deep also is the "mystery of God, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets" that in her fall she appears to be dragging down with her one after another the nations of Christendom. They have been partakers of her sins, and they shall receive also of her plagues.

How strikingly has this been exemplified of late years in the history of Europe. The Papacy has debased and degraded every nation she has entered. One of the results of the school board elections in the provinces has been the return of Romish priests and laymen in many large towns at the head of the polls. At Manchester, at Leeds, at Sheffield, at Birmingham, and in many other places Popery has triumphed; and now she has got her hand upon our national education in England, as she has long had it, though more indisputably in Ireland, and will she not poison it for our poor people if she can, as she has already poisoned it, by means of Ritualism, for our public schools and universities? England has made a rod for herself to be scourged with. And as it was severely and sarcastically predicted, in the fatal year of 1829, that thirty or forty foxes were more than a match for six hundred geese in the House of Commons, so it has come to pass and so it will go on unto the end.

3. Notice another sign, the increase of immorality. Vices that our fathers knew not of are common among the nations now. Profligacy and corruption, the fruits of exuberant wealth and luxury, have debased human nature in these latter days; and in our haunts of fashion, as well as in the lowest places of our great cities, vile iniquities prevail. Even the worldly journalists of the day are shocked with the soft luxury and unmanliness of the age. Our men have become women; and the fashionable women of the day have too often become repulsive and indelicate. Immodesty and silliness of dress are on the increase. A gross and exaggerated imitation of Parisian vice has been growing amongst us of late. Extravagance and debt belong to every class of society.

London abounds now with a clamorous crew of as idle, cynical, and worthless young gentlemen as can be found in Paris or New York. People spend grudgingly on what elevates the mind, and ministers to the cause of practical virtue and goodness; but they spend profusedly on whatever panders to the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. These are the things which sap a nation's life, and intelligence, and strength. These are the signs of a want of manliness, a want of mind, and a want of religion and virtue; and they betoken the decline and fall of a country. Even the Pall Mall Gazette can see this and proclaims it. The laws of morality are as immutable as the laws of nature and of God. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." This is true of nations as well as of individuals, and if England follows France in her wickedness and vice, she may have to follow her in her doom.

Truly men are "lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of them that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God." All these are given in Scripture as tokens of the latter days, and they will increase, and wax worse and worse, as the great crisis of the world approaches. (2 Tim. 3: 1–5.)

4. Notice still further the prevailing formalism in religion. There is a religious varnish over the immorality we have spoken of. "Having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof," this is the peculiar mark of the "perilous times," which are predicted by the apostle. "Form without power, a body without a soul, a religion without life," this is one of the signs of the last days. The show of piety is wide-spread; but a deep and genuine piety is rare. There is much profession; but while profession is on the surface, worldliness is underneath. Christianity now-a-days is, for the most part, a savorless thing which lacks the power, and the life, and the reality, and the self-denial of the earlier days of the church of Christ. We look in vain for that deep sense of sin, that simple trust in Jesus, that saintly and unearthly walk which marked the early christians. It is a worldly, self-pleasing, ritual, sacramental christianity which passes current now; and that will never stand the test either of persecution for righteousness' sake, or of the searching fire of the day of Christ.

5. Another sign of the latter days is the strange and incongruous mixture of opinion that prevails. The most absurd, the most blasphemous, the most impure, the most demoralizing, the most lawless, and the most Satanic ideas are afloat. An infernal propaganda of three evil spirits of antichristian infidelity, revolutionary lawlessness, and Jesuitical superstition has long been at work. It is described in the sixteenth chapter of the book of the Revelation, and it is there stated to be the immediate precursor of the Lord's second advent. "I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold I come as a thief, blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And he gathered them together in a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." Rev. 13: 13–16.

6. Another sign is the wide spread selfishness of the age, and the consequent loosening of all the bonds of human society. Men have always been lovers of their own selves, but they become more intensely so when iniquity abounds and as the end draws nigh. Our social systems are breaking up. Look at the strikes, lock-outs, and increasing struggle between workmen and capitalists. We hear much about fraternity in these evil days, but the world's brotherhood is without reality. All that is fair, and goodly and large-hearted, and generous, and loving, is fast disappearing from among men. Suspicion of each other is one of the rules of life. Except among a very small remnant there is no such thing as unity. It is the iron and the clay of the prophet Daniel which we see before us amongst the nations now. You cannot get union and a universal brotherhood until Jesus comes. "They shall not cleave one to another even as iron is not mixed with clay." Dan. 2: 43.

At the same time there is an attempt at a false and spurious unity. There is a society for the re-union of Christendom; a system "more Catholic in extent, and seductive by its pretentions than any which has yet been seen," but which may be characterized as unity without the truth, and which looks more like a confederacy against it and a specious apostasy than any thing else.

7. Again observe the weakness of all human government. Man is every day proving more and more his incapacity to keep the world in order. The power that God committed to man for this purpose has been abused. It has been stripped of its one element of strength and of stability, namely, dependence on God's truth; and consequently human government is failing every where. "Therefore as the fire devoureth the stubble and the flame consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossom shall go up as dust; because they have cast away the law of the Lord of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel." Isa. 5: 23.

8. And hence another sign: namely the world's restlessness and uneasiness. There is amongst the nations of the earth a fearful spirit of lawlessness and of anarchy, too furious and combined to be ultimately resisted. There is abroad in the world a passionate love of change, and there is a headlong rushing of the waters of popular commotion which cannot be long repressed. The pressure which has for ages been accumulating upon those barriers which ancient wisdom has erected for the stability of kingdoms will become irresistible at last, and wall and fortress, throne and temple will be overwhelmed.

Men who will go on in their vain attempts to govern the world without the fear of God, will be overturned at last. There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then they shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." Luke 21: 25, 26, 27.

9. Then there are signs of "wars and rumors of wars, earthquakes, pestilences, and famines, in divers places." These have come to pass; and they are still going on and increasing. Over the whole earth is heard "the long, low, distant, murmur of dread sound." The armaments of the nations are attaining the most formidable and colossal dimensions.

10, Then there is that sad sign of the increase of religious deceivers, which our Lord gave us to understand would precede the end. "There shall arise false Christ's and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch that if it were possible they should deceive the very elect. There are other signs: such as the spread of knowledge, and the increase of communication in the earth; the missionary Evangelism of the last seventy years; the vain and fruitless efforts of the world to accomplish its own regeneration by education, science, philosophy, and the like, without God's Word.

The signals of our days all point in one direction. The crisis of the world's history is at hand. The Judge is at the door, the night cometh, or rather I should say the night is far spent, and the midnight of the world is at hand. "It is settling down upon our cities and on our solitudes; upon the towers of our strength, and the palaces of our pomp, nor can the noisy rush of eager multitudes, hurrying to and fro for gain or pleasure, wholly stifle the utterance of fear and awe. Men cannot help foreboding evil, for who can tell them what may be in the womb of darkness?"

But it is written also, "The day is at hand?" therefore it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. Blessed thought! "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Stirring, and arousing, and practical thought! "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light," let that be our constant prayer, let it be our real and heartfelt desire. "Come Lord Jesus; come quickly," and it will be a sustaining and encouraging thought that the night though dark will be short, and that it will be followed by a bright, a glorious, and an endless day.—Signs of Our Times.

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

D. K. BARRETT, JR.

Some attempt to prove, from 1 Pet. 3: 18–20 and 4: 6, that Christ's spirit, while his body was dead, went and preached to the spirits of the antediluvians in hades. Let us examine these passages of Scripture.

"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."

1. "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." John 1: 1–14. See also Gen. 1: 1–25; Ps. 33: 6; Heb. 11: 3. The angel said, before Christ's birth, to Joseph—"Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1: 21. That was the object of his coming. And "forasmuch as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil; and deliver them who, through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Heb. 2: 14, 15. He did not take on him the immortal nature of angels (v. 16), but "was made a little lower than the angels [not less honorable, Heb. 1: 4–7, but having a dying nature] for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." v. 9.

If he had not taken a mortal nature, he could not have died for our sins. His death was predicted by Isaiah thus—"He was cut off out of the land of the living. . . . And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death. . . . Thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin. . . . He hath poured out his soul unto death." Isa. 53. He suffered the penalty of sin—death; and the fact that he suffered it shows us what kind of death it must be. As he did not die spiritually, then he must have died literally. "He gave himself a ransom"—all there was of himself. (See Matt. 20: 28; Rev. 1: 18.) The death of the body for the sin of the soul would not do, if the soul is a separate entity.

Spiritual death is not and cannot be the penalty for sin, from the fact that spiritual death is death to holiness. It would make sin its own penalty. Literal death is always meant where, as penalty, death is mentioned in the Bible. He redeemed us to God by "being put to death in the flesh"; but to be our Intercessor and Advocate, he must be made alive again; so we read—"But quickened [made alive] by the Spirit." (See Rom. 4: 25.) En is used of place, of time, of state, and of the means by the aid of which anything takes place, or is done; and is rendered "accordingly, in, during, on, at, within, by, through, by means of," according to Robinson's N. T. Lexicon of Greek. It is "by the Spirit" and "by which," instead of "in Spirit" and "in which," because the Holy Spirit was the agency "by means of" which it was done. "In prison" is of place, and "in flesh" of state. It is the almost universal opinion of Commentators that this refers to his resurrection, and that the preaching was done in Noah's time.

King James' translators evidently thought the same. "I lay down my life that I might take [Gr. receive] it again." John 10: 17. "I have power [Gr. right, commission] to lay it down, and I have power [right] to take [Gr. receive] it again. This commandment [Gr. direction] have I received of my Father." Had he been a sinner, he would have had no right to his life again. The Gr. Lexicon says the word here translated power was primarily used of moral right; it must include that here.

God is declared to have raised him from the dead "by his own power." (Acts 2: 23–32; 3: 15, 26; 5: 29–32; 13: 29–35; Rom. 4: 23, 24; 6: 9; 1 Cor. 6: 14.) Jesus did not need to be quickened or made alive "in spirit," unless his spirit was dead. Quickened is from a compound of two words; one "to make," the other "to live." It is improbable that Peter would talk of making to live what was already alive. By the power of the Spirit of God he raised up his body after three days.

2. "By which [Holy Spirit] also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient [When?], when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is eight souls, were saved by water." If they were alive in hell, they were still disobedient, and it need not say "sometime" "in the days of Noah." Their disobedience was at the same time of the preaching. The child is disobedient when he refuses to do as he is told. Noah was a preacher of righteousness; he warned them one hundred and twenty years, while he was preparing the ark.

"And God said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh; yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." That time measured their probation; and they were disobedient to all God's preaching by his Spirit, and through Noah, all that time. So that there were only eight souls saved. The rest were disobedient spirits,—spirits being used, as we often do now, for the whole being, as "restless spirits, roving spirits," etc. It is thus used in Scripture of angels, both good and bad. Souls in the same passage is used in this sense, all will acknowledge; and it is said they "are used interchangeably." Usually a distinction is manifest between the two words, however.

3. These wicked beings went down by the flood to the silent prison-house of death, described by Job 3: 18—"There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and the great are there." There "the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Job 21: 30; compare 33: 18–31. We are told that "the prison is the Hebrew sheol, the Greek hades, the English "hell." Let us see what kind of a place it is.

"Hades is the word used in the Septuagint as a translation of the Hebrew word sheol, and means literally that which is in darkness, hidden." "Though sheol in many places, such as Gen. 37: 35; 42: 38; 1 Sam. 2: 7; 1 Kings 2: 6; Job 14: 13, etc., may signify keber, the grave, as the common receptacle of the dead, yet it has the more general meaning of death; a state of death; the dominion of death."—Wilson. "If mischief befall him [Benjamin] by the way which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave" (sheol). Gen. 42: 38. "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave [sheol—Heb.] whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. Here is a plain Bible description of the place (sheol or hades) where Christ's "soul" went, as eight souls went into the ark, and Jonah into the whale's belly; only Christ had "poured out his soul unto death," and hence was dead, in death's prison. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell" (sheol). Ps. 16: 10. "Let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave" (sheol). Ps. 31: 17. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17; compare Isa. 38: 9–20.

Sheol is sometimes personified, as in Isa. 14: 9, 10, speaking of Babylon:—"Hell [sheol] from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming; it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the chief ones of the earth." "And they shall speak and say unto thee, Art thou also become as we? Art thou become like unto us? Thy pomp is brought down to the grave (sheol), and the noise of thy viols; the worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee." This speaks in as positive terms as the parable in the New Testament, where hades is spoken of in a similar way. Luke 16: 19. Ezekiel, speaking of Pharaoh, when he was overthrown in the sea, talks much the same. Ezek. 31: 15–17, and 32: 21–27.

But in reading all these places we should remember that in fact there is no knowledge in sheol, or hades. I do not know of another place where even in parable there is intimation of knowledge in hades; whereas there are abundance of plain literal passages that prove the contrary.

4. Jonas was in the whale's belly as an entire being, and so was the Son of man in the heart of the earth. Matt. 12: 40; Mark 15: 46; Acts 13: 29, 30. Certainly the place hewn out of the solid rock, where Christ lay during the three days, is what was meant by the heart of the earth; at any rate there is where it says they laid him. Says Trollope: "That is simply in the earth. So Tyre is said to be in the heart (or midst) of the sea [Ezek. 28: 2], although it was so near the continent that, when Alexander besieged it, he carried a causeway from the main land to the city." In the midst or heart of the sea was where the sea surrounded it; so in the heart of the earth is within the earth, covered out of sight.

"Who shall descend into the deep [abussos], that is to bring Christ up again from the dead?" Rom. 10: 17. This, I think, means the same prison, hades, we have been speaking of. The corresponding word occurs in Ps. 71: 21—"Thou shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth." This shows one not in a quickened state in the deep. "For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead." Because dead now, does not make it that they were when preached to.

We are told that "in death there is no remembrance of thee" (God). Ps. 6: 5. It would not be of much use to preach to them then. There is no connection between this passage in 1 Pet. 4: 6 and the other. Peter is talking of living a holy life. "Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh; arm yourselves likewise with the same mind"; not living "the rest of your time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."

"JUDGE THE QUICK AND DEAD." They are not to be judged while dead, but at the judgment day after being raised. Rev. 20: 13. The gospel was preached to those who are now dead for the same purpose it is now preached. We may have our sins go before to judgment, and have pardon; or continuing in sin have them follow us to the great judgment. But having our case settled, we should live according to God in the Spirit.

"Be ye followers [imitators] of God, as dear children." Eph. 5: 1. "So, then, they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you." Rom. 8: 8, 9. "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." "In the Spirit" here cannot mean after the body is dead, but while still living. There is no good reason for giving the antediluvians probation after death that would not apply between Noah's time and Christ's, or now, in heathen lands. Rom. 1: 18.

The bodies that rose were recognized as the "bodies of saints that slept." Matt. 27: 52.

5. Christ "led captivity captive." Psa. 68: 18; Eph. 4: 8. By his death he purchased our redemption; and because he lives we shall live also. He "led captive" or got under his control "a multitude of captives" or prisoners; that is, all the dead in the prison of hades; and will raise them up. And he purchased gifts for men, and gave abundantly the Holy Spirit on the day of pentacost and since, as well as grace, and the different gifts in the church.

He purchased the field wherein the treasure was, that he might have control of the treasure. Matt. 13: 44. Heb. 12: 22 will be seen to refer to the time of the gathering of the general assembly of the church of the first-born, written in heaven, in the New Jerusalem, after those things that can be shaken are removed. Rev. 21: 27.

There is no Scripture that declares that saints go now (at death) to be with Christ, or that they do not go to hades. John 14: 3; Acts 1: 11; 1 John 3: 2. Paul, as every christian does, desired to depart and be with Christ, which he considered far better than the two things, life or death, which he could not choose between. He was confident Christ would be magnified in his "body, whether by life or by death"; for, for him to live was Christ, and to die was gain. We may be sure a dead man is not alive. Death is extinction of life—its direct opposite. If in life there is consciousness, knowledge, happiness, or misery, in death there is neither consciousness, knowledge, happiness, or misery.

"DOCTRINAL PAPERS."

J HEMENWAY.

In Zion's Herald of Jan. 18th, 1875, Rev. K. Atkinson, under the heading of "Doctrinal Papers," berates the Second Adventists with more zeal than knowledge, representing them as "ignorant," "hypocritical," and a dangerous class of heretics. This slanderous article, abounding in false statements, is sanctioned and published in the Herald as a correct representation of Adventism. If the writer intended to injure the people, we give him the credit of availing himself of the meanest mode of doing it possible; namely, raising the cry of "heresy," "materialism," and "hypocrisy," thereby thinking to create prejudice and disfellowship for them in the hearts of the numerous readers of the Herald.

I would beg leave to remind him that his mode of attack is not new; it is the usual resort of opposers of truth. When arguments fail, and facts are wanting, slander and false statements are the last resort. The Jews, when successfully answered by Christ and Paul, beat a retreat into the same ditch for a defense.

The Adventists are not only represented as ignorant and hypocritical, but the doctrines held are falsely stated, and perverted. I give a few specimens:—"The doctrines are the legitimate outgrowth of the boldest materialism, and contradict or pervert nearly all of the leading doctrines of our Lord's gospel." To sustain this accusation he makes another equally false: "They talk much of conversion, but their idea of this change is entirely dissimilar to that generally entertained by christians." Then, to bring his false statements to a climax, assumes that according to our doctrine, there is nothing but the body to be converted. The above is a fair illustration of the spirit of the whole article.

Why did he not just show wherein we perverted the gospel? I respectfully challenge him to show that our views of conversion are "entirely dissimilar" to other classes called christians, or that we believe there is nothing but the body converted.

He also states: "This sect pretend to hold Jesus in great esteem, and yet rob him of his atoning glory by denying his proper divinity." Here we are accused of hypocrisy, and misrepresented as to our faith in the divinity of Christ. Finally he has not stated correctly any doctrine entertained by Adventists; or, in other words, the Adventists, as a people, do not advocate or believe any of the doctrines, as here represented. He came near the truth when he said—"They pretend to believe in eternal punishment." We not only "pretend" but believe in eternal punishment; but not eternal torment. The Bible teaches eternal punishment, but nowhere says the sinner is to suffer eternal torment.

While I read the list of false statements and accusations in this article, I am surprised that one claiming to be a representative of the meek and lowly Jesus should think he was doing his "christian duty." He must either be ignorant of what Adventists believe, or willfully malicious. Poor man! may God bless him, and open his eyes, instruct and forgive him, and fill him with that spirit that yields the peaceable fruits of righteousness.

Why did he not inform the readers of the Herald wherein we denied the proper divinity of Christ, by stating our belief, and then leave them to judge? When he says we hold Christ to be "a mere man," he either exposes his ignorance of our belief, or himself as a false accuser of those who hold Christ in as high esteem as any of the class he represents. When he charges us as being Pantheist in our faith, we are made to believe that his knowledge of Pantheism and Adventism is very limited. He calls us many names, indicating a desire to class us with about all the false doctrines he can remember; viz., "Materialism," Pantheism," "Atheist," "Socinianism," "Universalists," "Annihilationists," "Ignorant," "Deceivers," "Made up of malcontents and backslidden from evangelical churches," etc., etc.

This slanderous article is unworthy the notice here bestowed upon it, and would have been passed over in silent contempt, were it not sent to thousands who have no knowledge of Adventists, only what they have obtained from like slanderous reports. In the community where I reside there are many who are good humble christians, and who honestly believe we are infidels, destitute of saving grace; consequently we are disfellowshiped and misrepresented. And these infamous reports are sustained by leading men who ought and could be better informed if they were so disposed. "The priests bear rule, and the people love to have it so; but what will ye do in the end thereof?"

Westfield, Mass.

"CROSSING THE RED SEA."

Through the length and breadth of Egypt, one common wail of sorrow had gone up toward heaven; for the angel of death had entered every household, and save where the blood-besprinkled door-post marked the dwelling of the believing Israelite, in every house, the first-born, in all his pride and beauty, was stretched in death. And now, in terror and dismay, the proud enslaver came bowing down to his captives, and pressed upon them the jewels demanded from him; only asking, with eager impetuosity, that they would hasten their departure. This last signal vengeance from the hand of the Omnipotent Judge had unloosed the bars of their prison, and, loaded with the spoil of their enemies, the children of Israel confidently set forth to leave forever the house of cruel bondage.

The proud spirit of Pharaoh had quailed, but he was not subdued. Scarcely had the motley host departed, before his courage revived, and, quickly assembling his choicest warriors and charioteers, he pursued the flying captives. And now, behold those whom God had so victoriously brought forth "With a strong hand and a stretched-out arm," overtaken in a narrow gorge from whence there is no escape; before them is the sea, on either hand lofty mountains tower above them, and behind, the enemy in hot pursuit. Helpless and despondent, whither shall they turn? Escape they cannot, while to retreat is but to throw themselves into the hands of the exasperated king, who already exults over them as the eagle about to sweep downward upon his hapless victim.

In doubt and dire perplexity, they knew not whither to turn, when, through their intrepid leader comes the command of God, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward!" Strange command! What, forward into the sea, whose waves dash so fiercely against the shore, as if its huge mouth was already opening to swallow them up? Strange command! May not their leader have mistaken its import? No! there is no mistake. Again the command bursts upon the ear, "Go forward!" and tremblingly they prepare to obey, when, lo! the obedient waters divide and form on either hand a wall, firm as adamant; and all the mighty host march through the bed of the sea unharmed, while the Egyptians are drowned by the returning waters. Thus, once more has God appeared to deliver them, and has opened a path through the sea.

Often is it thus with the christian. He, too, is fleeing from the house of bondage, and often does he feel the hot breath of the pursuer whose willing captive he once was, upon him. He sees no way of escape; on the right hand and on the left God has hedged up his way. Whither, then, shall he turn? Shall he cease his flight and yield himself again to the captivity of sin and death? No! rather let him listen to the voice from heaven which bids him "Go forward" in the path of duty, whether it be into the sea or the furnace. He who opened a path for the Israelites, he who delivered the faithful three, who feared not to confess his name, from the fiery furnace, will deliver him and walk with him the onward path of duty. Forward, then, however rugged the way. God will be his guide and protector, the way will be opened, the darkness disappear, and God, even his own God will bless him, and bring him at last, when the toilsome pilgrimage is over, into the glorious land of promise.

Perhaps some duty, hitherto neglected, is pressed home upon the heart by the Holy Spirit. Shall he close his eyes again in spiritual slumber? No! still the watchword is "Forward," no matter what be the obstacles placed by the adversary who ever watches for his halting. Forward, is the command of Jehovah, and if we obey the heavenly voice, at God's command the mountains shall become plains, yawning gulfs be bridged, and even the sea become as the dry land. But if appalled at the prospect, we hesitate, alas! for us; helpless, maimed, and well-nigh dead, we shall fall an easy prey to the arch enemy of God and man, who walketh about seeking whom he may devour.—Sel.

TREASURES IN HEAVEN.—We read of a philosopher who, passing through a mart filled with articles of taste and luxury, made himself quite happy with this simple yet sage reflection: "How many things there are here I do not want!" Now, this is just the reflection with which the earnest believer passes happily through the world. It is richly furnished with what are called good things. It has spots of honor and power to tempt the restless aspirings of ambition of every grade. It has gold and gems, houses and lands, for the covetous and ostentatious. But the christian whose piety is deep-toned, and whose spiritual conceptions are clear, looks over the world and exclaims, "How much there is here that I do not want! I have what is far better. My name is in heaven."—Christian Standard.

WE should not desire to be godly by comparison with others, but by positive obedience to all God's commands through Christ.

POSTAGE.

There has been some misunderstanding among our subscribers about the additional twenty-five cents added to the subscription price of the Crisis, connected with the additional expense to the Office of publishing the paper, on account of paying pre-postage. We will state the case. The price of the paper was formerly $2.50, and some of the brethren thought that if it was reduced to two dollars a year, an additional number of subscribers might be obtained sufficient to make up the deficiency in the funds that might result from the reductiou. The experiment proved that two dollars did not quite meet the expenses, and the Board were discussing the question of increasing the price to two dollars and twenty-five cents, when Congress passed the pre-postage act, which caused the Board to immediately add the twenty-five cents. Not that it supposed the pre-postage would be just a quarter as some suppose, but that it would cost at least two dollars and a quarter for each paying subscriber to pay expenses.

GREAT MEETINGS.

Last Sabbath (March 14th) was noted for great religious meetings. In San Francisco Bro. E. P. Hammond spoke to some three or four thousand, in Union Hall, and it was said about as many others came, but could not get in. In M. Barnum's Hippodrome, in New York City, it is said that 20,000 were present to hear the gospel preached. In London, Eng., Bro. Moody addressed some 20,000 in Agricultural Hall. It is doubtful whether there has been a day when more persons assembled in three meetings than on that day. Let it be remembered these are union meetings for the purpose of leading sinners to Christ. Glorious results are being witnessed. The most earnest efforts are being made to accomplish this object. It seems like pulling men out of the fire, just before the hour of destruction. Common efforts now produce but little effect; but these great union meetings take hold of the people. It seems like the last call of mercy—like Lot's warning of the Sodomites; like Noah's preaching to the Antediluvians.

We have never before seen such a hearty union of ministers in christian work. Denominational walls are down, and it is prayerfully desired that they may never be rebuilt. It looks like preparation for the coming of the Son of man.

The union meetings now (March 17th) in progress in San Francisco, under the direction of Bro. Hammond, are accomplishing glorious results. About one thousand converts are reported already; and it is hoped this is but the beginning. Strong men, infidels and drunkards are coming to Christ, and engaging heartily in his service. Meetings are now held each day in Pacific Hall, in the California Theatre building, on Bush St., commencing at nine o'clock A. M., and continuing from two to four hours. There is speaking on the streets in various parts of the city. We have united in this work, and seen very encouraging results. The best of order prevails, and all classes seem anxious to hear the good news of salvation. Old Californians are astonished at what they see and hear. They did not think it possible that such a religious interest could be awakened in this and other cities, as is now being manifested. Open air meetings are also held on California Street, at noon, in the very heart of the business part of the city, like State Street in Boston, or Wall Street in New York, where the rich men congregate. The best of attention is given by the crowds that assemble. We think there must have been a thousand present. They are taken by surprise, when they see the boldness of Bro. Hammond, united with his sweet spirit, and earnestness. It makes christianity appear to them as a reality worthy of their candid attention. Quite a number of other preachers are also taking a part in these open air meetings. The happy union spirit manifested is doing much to remove the prejudice from skeptical minds, and lead them to Christ. We look for much greater things than have yet been witnessed.

FOREIGN NEWS.

We were never so deeply interested in reading the foreign news as at the present time. The European nations are advancing so rapidly towards the great anticipated national struggle, and the war tension has become so great, that it seems impossible that a general rupture can be much longer delayed. The Pope and Bismarck are rapidly approaching each other, prepared for a deadly and final conflict. The new ecclesiastical laws of Germany are driving the Jesuits to desperation. Every mail brings news of advanced steps taken by these fierce uncompromising antagonists.

Germany demands that the new king of Spain define his position as to being controlled by the Jesuits, or by policy, independent of the Pope's dictation. She still echoes her demand that her marred honor, in the recent insult of her flag by Ultramontane pirates, shall be speedily repaired. She is about to demand that all her trusted sons in civil service shall take a particular oath of allegiance; which means loyalty or death. The political elements in Italy are like the pent-up, boiling, surging lava of her Vesuvius, ready to burst forth into a flame of destruction.

Austria is straining her credit to its utmost capacity to obtain money to bring her army up to the present European standard, and furnish it with the latest and most destructive scientific armor. Russia's great Autocrat is beginning to boldly unroll his long-concealed programme, shaking his head significantly at England, and speaking defiantly to the Sultan's representative. England is profoundly desirous of peace, but she finds herself perfectly entangled in both the Eastern and Western snares; and if she attempts to relieve either foot, the other is fatally caught. If she arms to withstand the encroachments of Bishop Manning and the Pope, thus supporting Bismarck and Victor Emmanuel, Russia is ready to wave her triumphant banner over all the East, laying her hand upon Constantinople and England's vast possessions in India.

The last scratch of the bear, and menace of the old beast, has evidently aroused the lion to a sense of approaching danger, so that the regiments of the English army in India are ordered to be prepared to march at a moment's warning. The Queen's Premier exhorts his government to be prepared for an approaching unprecedented "religious war." The Jesuitical party are evidently just as bloodthirsty as they were during the days of racks and fagots.

Read the history of Bismarck for the last few months. See how he has to be guarded night and day, to preserve him from the fatality of their poison and steel. Read of their recent bloody deeds in Mexico, Brazil, and other places, where priest directed mobs have shed the blood of those who dare to open their lips against the proud Mother of the harlot family.

It seems to us that the angel hand has written the "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin" so plainly upon the Roman palace wall that every anointed christian eye may read, and correctly interpret it. God's predictions and foreshadowing types turn the unerring index to this grand period of universal excitement and unprecedented preparation for world-wide revolution. All things portend a new era;—the passing away of the old, and the ushering in of a new earthly administration.

The great heart of every class of men upon the earth is throbbing with increasing restlessness, dissatisfied with the status of its own government and worship, and with that of other classes, and is seeking, with a determined purpose, to improve its own, and to overthrow all others. The Monarchists are straining the tension of their governments to the breaking point, to suppress the multitudinous classes who are combining and threatening to disrobe the old, effeminate dynasties of their prostituted sovereignty, in order to establish their royalty upon a more firm and secure basis than they now enjoy.

The papacy firmly believes that God has determined to make bare his arm immediately, and make the Pope the absolute head of all earthly governments, as arbiter of both Church and State. The Protestant church understands that this is the period appointed of God for her to triumph over all opposition, and become the ruling class of the world. The Greek church entertains the same views in relation to its destiny. Republicans, Internationalists, Communists, Spiritualists, each class, everywhere, is determined to immediately improve its own condition by subduing and overturning all other classes who are in opposition.

Such a state of things cannot be protracted indefinitely; either this excitement and determination for a change must cease, or war and revolution must inevitably follow. Such great and powerful currents of human passions, of aspirations and revenge, never lose their velocity, as do the waters of a river quietly flowing into a lake or sea; but they inevitably increase, until they leap from some terrible precipice into the roaring confusion of the maddened waters below.

Reader, do you not see that these terrible currents have wonderfully increased within the last twelve months? We are evidently nearing the falls. The nations are "rushing like the rushing of many waters; but God shall rebuke them;" therefore, escape, O sinner; leap upon the rock which you are just passing, that you may be saved from the perdition into which you are now plunging. Wait not an hour; set your helm for the shore; catch the breeze just now; for a few moments delay may prove your eternal ruin.

THE Pope's income is about $1,000,000 per month, mostly from contributions.

MASS. STATE CONFERENCE.

The Chelsea Church has unanimously and heartily invited the State Conference to hold its annual session at its Chapel, and would say it will do all it can to accommodate all the brethren and sisters who may come to attend the meetings. We shall probably find the most difficulty in providing comfortable lodgings for all, and will suggest that we can lodge fifty or more of our brethren in the Chapel, if they will bring blankets or a little covering to answer in a warm house.

We do hope our sister churches will be generally represented in this important State convocation. Come, ye scattered and waiting ones, who love Jesus and his appearing; come from the mountains and vallies of the Old Bay State, and let us once more enjoy christian greetings, joining in sacred songs and heavenly devotions. Come to hear the last swelling notes of the gospel's judgment message. Bro. Stockman is expected to unite with us in the work and communion of this important Christian feast.

For the Chelsea Church,

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

We learn that a rumor has been quite extensively circulated that a proposition is being discussed to remove the A. B. Campmeeting from Alton Bay to Seabrook, New Hampshire. Such a report is an entire mistake; for such a propsition has never been made by any one that we have any knowledge of, neither would such an one be entertained by the Executive Committee under present circumstances, for a moment J. NOTICE.

On account of FAST, next week, our paper will go to press Tuesday morning instead of Tuesday noon. It will be necessary for us to get the appointments all in MONDAY NIGHT.

CATHOLIC AWAKENING.

The Roman Catholics are all astir throughout the world. They are most assuredly preparing for some special movement. Like an army just before a great battle, every man is examining with care all his armor and military equipments, to see if they are in prime order, before he enters the terrible conflict that is to decide the fate of his country. Such is the spirit now manifested by those who sustain the infallibility dogma of Pope Pius IX. Yesterday, March 17th, an immense Catholic procession was marched through the principal streets of San Francisco. It took thirty-five minutes for it to pass a given point. In the procession were military companies, with their war weapons glistening in the sunbeams, long lines of carriages containing priests and other church dignitaries, a host of cavalry, thousands of footmen, thirteen bands of music, so far apart that their sounds would not commingle, costly banners waving in the breeze, with some very marked paintings, indicating coming events. On one side of a large, elegant banner, borne on a frame by several men, so as to be seen by all, was a priest with his open book, in the attitude of preaching, and on the other side a soldier in steel clad armor, which seemed to say accept the teaching of the priest, or you will be met by the force of arms. Another banner had the priest on one side, and a mounted soldier and burning buildings on the other, saying again, Accept our religion or destrucion of your life and property. Such is the unchanging spirit of the Papacy. It has no law of reform, or of toleration. Its aim is to crush out Protestantism, and everything else opposed to Catholicism.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The church in San Francisco is doing well; and earnestly at work in the union efforts to save sinners. We have never before seen our Brn. and Srs. in this city working more faithfully than at the present time. We had baptism last Sabbath, and expect to baptize again next Lord's day. Next week, we are to hold revival meetings in the city of Healdsburg, in the Presbyterian meeting house, and hope for blessed results. Doors are opening in various places. This is a favored hour for the people on the coast. The convicting power of the Holy Spirit is felt by multitudes. The religious tide is rising every day, in all directions. It is a great blessing to California. Every day brings to light new converts. Some of them are already earnest and efficient workers in the Lord's vineyard.

P. S. We have just learned that Bro. J. W. Turner has returned East. M. G.

SISTER C. CURRY, of Nicholson, Wyoming Co., Penn., writes us that she feels it her duty to go into the field and labor publicly in the cause of Christ. She wishes to teach the people from evidences found upon the prophetic page that the end of all things is at hand, and wishes to obtain a chart, so as to present more effectually the symbolism of those prophecies.

If any one has such a chart not in use, and will send it to Mrs. Charles Curry, Nicholson, Wyoming Co., Penn., it will be gratefully received. J. C.

THE PAPISTS AMONG THE FREEDMEN.—We have occasionally referred to the efforts being made by the Roman Catholic Church to win the colored people to their communion. They are meeting with no little success. Dr. Fulton writes from the South, of the progress of their work: "Black nuns are beginning to abound; schools for the education of Romish priests are beginning to appear. Churches decorated with the choicest products of art, and flaming with tinselry and show, are seen in most of our large cities crowded with colored people. Colored people are welcomed to Romish churches, because Rome intends to increase her power by the colored vote, and appreciates the magnitude of her opportunity. In Baltimore there are fourteen colored schools. The Douglas Institute has a fine hall, a library and and reading-room, owned by colored people."—Ex.

CHRIST'S COMING PREACHED IN NEW YORK.

Dear Brn.:—I enclose a sketch from the N. Y. Daily Witness, of Mr. Henry Varley's discourse in Barnum's great Hippodrome to about twenty thousand people last night.

I went to the Hippodrome last evening very early, in order to get a good seat near the speaker. I expected, as it was his last meeting in that enclosure, that he would dwell upon the subject nearest his heart. He had intimated, on several occasions, that he felt it his solemn duty to speak of the nearness of the close of this dispensation, and I was anxious to see whether he felt the mighty responsibility on this great occasion enough to risk the displeasure of the committee in the discharge of his duty. I was not long in doubt. I noticed the bearing of the hymns on the slips printed for the occasion, and my poor heart was gladdened to hear Mr. Varley read the evening lesson from the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth chapters of Matthew. He read the thirty-fourth verse of the twenty-fourth chapter as follows: "Verily I say unto you, This age shall not pass, until all these things be fulfilled." If there is any good authority for using the word age instead of generation, one great difficulty to a correct understanding of this chapter would be removed.

The Christ life in the christian, is the great theme in all of Mr. Varley's discourses; and so simple and clearly does he present the truth, that I have longed to have some of our other revivalists come and learn this most effective way of preaching the truth on this point. Mr. Varley is to remain in New York a few weeks longer. The following is the report from this morning's Herald. Yours waiting for the kingdom,

K.

MR. VARLEY AT THE HIPPODROME.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Quite as large an assemblage as on the previous Sunday assembled to hear Mr. Varley last night. After the usual preliminary exercises of prayer, praise and the reading of the Word, Mr. Varley chose for his text the sixth verse of the twenty-fifth chapter of St. Matthew's gospel, "And at midnight there was a cry made: Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

Many thousands, said he, of the most thoughtful students of the Word of God have long since been deeply convinced that the common idea that the preaching of the Gospel was to continue until all nations are subdued to Christ must be given up. We believe, on the contrary, that the end of this dispensation is most solemn judgment. I know that I may perhaps press hardly upon the thoughts of some who have been long wedded to the idea I have just expressed, and they are prepared to say, "Sir, if I indorse that opinion I should give up energy and missionary enterprise, and so on." My dear brother, I do not quarrel with you in reference to the view that you hold. If the Gospel is to win its way until the millennium comes as a result, then I say I will stand with you shoulder to shoulder in the fight, and spread the glorious story of the truth unto the utmost of my power. Let no man attempt, however, to predict the day or the hour, or, if he does, it is in direct violation of the Lord's mind. But, observe, if the world be to-day as I believe it is, like a huge stranded wreck that a few more tides of time will see dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel, we should use the appliances for saving life which God has put into our hands. I see this great wreck crowded with human life from stem to stern. Let us get our fellow men off the wreck, men and women, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters and children. So that instead of want of energy, it infuses the energy of the shortness of time into every man who intelligently holds that view.

Now observe what Christ himself says: "As it was in the days of Noah, so it shall be in the coming of the Son of man. They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, and knew not until the floods came and took them all away." He adds: "So it shall be in the coming of the Son of man." So in the days of Lot, the angels took him out of Sodom, and when he was gone the fire of heaven descended upon those guilty cities, and the waters of the Dead Sea flow over them to-day, a testimony of the unchanging purposes of God in fulfilling his word. Do you think, sirs, that God has no plan? Is that book a medley? It is to those who do not understand it. Mark, sirs, the Jews have always been to us the great landmark in history in order to guide us, and this book pre-eminently belongs to them. One period of human history closed when Christ Jesus was ushered into our world. The nations of the past, Egypt, Babylon, Assyria, Greece or Rome, grew to their manhood. They did not conform to God's thoughts of a nation's stability, which is righteousness. He has judged them and they are gone for ever. There is no platform for the judgment of nations in eternity. They are to be judged in time. We first find the Jew represented in Abraham, the friend of God, then enlarged into a people. Their history culminated when Christ came, and now observe, they rejected Christ Jesus and attributed the power he put forth in healing to the direct influence of the devil. That was the unpardonable sin. He says to them, "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Under Titus their capital was laid in ruins, and the land of Judea is now trodden of the stranger according to the prophetic testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ. We had then the engrafting of Gentile history with its separate nations and various forms of government. Now mark, that when Christ came, the Jews sent messengers after him saying they would not have this man to reign over them, and Imperial Rome's verdict was that he was not fit to live.

We are now come nearly to the end of the six thousand years of human history, at the close of which time it is the deepest conviction of the most thoughtful students of the world that we shall have the finishing of the toil and turmoil and strife of sin, and the incoming of the great Ruler, the Lord Jesus Christ. Then the Sabbatical year shall be fulfilled, when righteousness shall reign throughout the world, from the river to the ends of the earth. I am aware, in entering upon this subject, of the prejudices existing in some minds on account of certain events. Remember this, that if a man makes a caricature of a thing, however honest he may be, it does not necessarily take away from the reality of the matter itself. It does not follow that because Charles Dickens never drew a christian character, that there are not christian characters in the world.

I want you to remember that the sign of the Lord's coming will be of the greatest moment and import to us all. First of all, he will come as a thief in the night. The thief chooses the very time when men do not anticipate his approach. When men shall say "peace and safety," then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child. It will be a time of universal wickedness, when infidelity will be rampant. It will be a time in which the forces of human power will be set in solid array against God's Christ.

This is no ipsit dixit of mine; it is written in the Book of God (Rev. 6: 15, 15): "And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb." Did you ever read anything like that? The wrath of the Lamb! A contradiction in terms, you will say. No, sir—he came before as a lamb for mercy. He comes again as the Lamb of God for judgment. Listen again: "The Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God." Is that the millennium? Is that the overspreading of the Gospel? The world with its boasted greatness supposes there is to be an indefinte progress on the human side.

After all the years of man's government there is not a nation under heaven can touch the question of its people's righteousness. All that you can attend to here in your great republic, is to look after property and life, and that very imperfectly. I do not blame you. I can say that of my own country. Christian England! No, sir! It is a lie. Cross the Channel; Christian France! No, sir! emphatically no. Christian Spain, Austria, Italy; No! Come over the Atlantic—the United States—No! distinctly no. I do not speak hastily. As God lives, the time of human rule has reached its crisis. It is breaking down the world over. Why, they are putting God's book out of the national schools. Has God's book no reference to the history of the world? Are you going to bring up your children idolaters? You answer, No. Well, remember the first commandment is God's protest against idolatry. The second against idolatry in detail. The third is a protest against blasphemy. The fourth constitutes a day of rest, which is a necessity for our physical well being, as well as a moral responsibility. The fifth touches our filial relationship. The sixth touches the defense of life. The seventh inculcates chastity. The eighth protects property. The ninth protects character, and the tenth is God's protest against selfishness. And are you going to put that out of the schools? You will then have a society constructed without backbone—a society that, as God lives, you will live to rue. You sow to the wind and you reap the whirlwind. But I have words of blessed comfort and solemn warning. I shall not be surprised to see Jesus in person before this hair is gray. We can fix nothing about dates, but it shall be announced—"And at midnight there was a great cry raised, 'Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!'" The meeting will take place in the air—He shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God.

The clarion shout shall wake the sleeping dead in Christ; every man, woman and child. They shall rise first, and we which are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord shall be caught up in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. Sirs, that is the most stupendous work that is yet in the future. This corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality. So sudden will it be that, as I read to you to-night, two women will be at the mill—the one shall be taken and the other left. That converted mother sleeping perchance beside the unconverted daughter, the mother gone, and the child in vain seeking for her in the morning. Two men in the field, one, perhaps, at the hafts of the plow, and the other at the horse's head, the one taken and the other left. And mark you, after that hour is passed, there is no preacher of the gospel left, not a christian left—they are gone to be forever with the Lord. Such is the church's hope. She waits for His Son from heaven. Mark this! The kingdom of heaven is likened unto ten virgins, emblematic of purity of character, and betrothal unto the Lord.

My friend, are you betrothed unto the Lord? Then listen: "He that hath this hope purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Note this, beloved friends: the foolish virgins are heard to say, "Give us your oil, for our lamps are going out." It is not "gone" out, but "going" out, as we read in the margin. There are thousands of professors who will keep it up until that time, but Christ's coming, while it causes the light of the real to blaze forth in brightness, precipitates the unreal into darkness. Be careful lest the wrath of God come upon you quickly, lest the rejection of Christ precipitate you into outer darkness. You will observe that Christ is everything in this book. He is the Alpha and the Omega. He it is that died on the cross for your sins. He is the Savior whom we make known to you to-night. He has waited for more than eighteen hundred years, pleading with the sons of men, "Be ye reconciled to God." Coming to him is all that is needed. He says, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Oh, when he comes, who of you will welcome him with joy? Don't forget the gloom of the last days. Don't forget that when the church is caught up, on the Gentile nations will rest the judgment of God's Christ. He will dash them in pieces as a potter's vessel. Mark you, when He came, it was in his Father's name. He says another shall come in his own name, whom they should receive, the Anti-Christ who will work miracles, and after whom the world will wonder. He will think to change times and laws, but in the zenith of his prowess the Lord Jesus will be revealed, and will destroy that wicked one with the brightness of his power. . . .

Thank God, we are near the close of the scene; we are near the time when all who shall receive Christ shall be welcomed into his presence, for he has said: "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go I will come again and receive you unto myself." Through out all those years there is not a christian that shall not live and reign with Christ.—New York Daily Witness.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence

From Sr. M. J. Clark.

Dear Friends:—Again I resume the pen to recount to brethren and sisters, scattered abroad, the wonderful dealings of God with us. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." He has abundantly verified the promise—"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

I do feel that our steps have been ordered, our path directed. We very much desired to go into the southern part of the State in compliance with requests from brethren in different places. I would say to many that have been encouraged to expect us that it has not been consistent to leave here. The cloud by day and pillar of fire by night have kept us in this part of the vineyard.

We commenced meeting at Maton Bell neighborhood, the 7th of Jan. It was a new field to us; no religious interest; only two families that made profession of the religion of Christ. We closed the effort the 31st. More than fifty made a glorious start for the kingdom of God; most of them were heads of families. The meeting was one of great interest, though the weather was extremely cold,—coldest of the season; still the interest kept increasing. We felt when we closed the meeting we had left an unfinished work. We organized a church of 28 members; all of them happy, working christians. There are ten or fifteen others waiting our return to go forward in baptism. May they be kept blameless unto His kingdom and coming, is my prayer. We never can forget the precious seasons we enjoyed with them. Our social meetings were among the best I ever attended.

Our labor has been confined to parts of three counties. Scores have been truly converted, and many have been led to see new beauty in the Word of God, and have learned to love the return of the Nobleman. The work is the Lord's, and it is marvelous in our eyes. My husband has baptized over fifty, notwithstanding the cold weather.

We went from there to Reiton, commenced meeting, continued it over two Sabbaths, baptized ten, organized a church of thirteen members, with a good prospect of many more. The Christian church felt that they would unite with them. How truly we can exclaim, The work is the Lord's. God has been raising up watchmen who will care for the flock. Bro. Hayworth, a noble christian man, will have the oversight of these infant churches. Last Sabbath he followed the Lord in baptism; sprinkling would answer no longer. Pray for us. More anon.

Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kan.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear ones in Jesus:—God bless you all. I would love most dearly to see you, and greet you with the words of life and hope, could it be the will of God for me to do so; but as it seems ordered otherwise I will be submissive, for in due time we shall meet

"Beyond this world of grief and sin,
With God eternally shut in."

Then we will have a jubilee in praising God together for all his abundant mercies and blessings to us, his poor erring children.

My heart is set upon that kingdom which has "foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Never did the things of this world look so worthless to me, as for the last few months. I feel so weary, so sick of everything that is not in accordance with the blessed will of God. I never felt to prize the blessed hope more than now; and never felt more like praying "Thy kingdom come," I know I love Jesus and his coming best of all, and I need patience. I sometimes fear that I shall not have patience to wait till he does come to gather his dear ones home.

What a long cold winter we have had; and oh, I want the dear Savior to come and end all suffering, pain, distress and want, and bring eternal redemption. O for one thrill of immortality to go through this weary body, causing life eternal to flow in every portion of it. There will be no more sleepless nights nor weary days of pain and distress. How many there are among the dear children of God sick and suffering, bound down by disease, who are longing for the morning to break forth and their sorrows to end. How we will thank God when it does come.

Well, dear ones, we will try and be patient, for then we shall have rest and a crown. We can make the hours pass more pleasantly by having Jesus for our constant companion. I know the blessedness of his company. To me he is "the one altogether lovely, and the chiefest among ten thousands." There is nothing but what I am willing to bear if I can enter that sweet home prepared for the saints.

God bless the dear ones, and may we all soon meet "beyond the smiling and the weeping," never to say farewell.

From Bro. D. N. Chadsey.

Dear Editors:—I want to say a word or two through the columns of our family paper—the Crisis—to let you and the brethren scattered abroad know that there are a few here of the waiting ones looking for the the blessed hope of the soon coming of the Nobleman, although there are many seeming difficulties to encounter on the way.

Bro. and Sr. McKinstry have been laboring with us for a few days past, and we have been led to rejoice in the hope of the coming kingdom so near. We had good preaching all the time while they were here. The interest increased till the close. The last meeting, Sunday evening, March 7th, was held in the Court House, which was crowded to the utmost; every seat was filled and more had to be furnished, and still some were standing in the aisle. All attentive listeners during the entire service of the evening.

A discourse was delivered by Sr. McKinstry, on the signs of the times and the coming of the Lord, which showed her a worker in the vineyard that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. Also one sermon was preached by Bro. McKinstry, relating to the fables of infidelity and the fog and mist of the philosophy of scientific men, so called, and the darkness of the present age. It was a strong argument against infidel skepticism and brain theology. And so the Word of the Lord triumphed, in spite of opposition. The topic of conversation among the people was with reference to these things whereof they speak concerning the kingdom of God.

We think we are safe in saying that very many were glad for their coming in our midst. No special move was made, but we think a salutary impression was made, and we hope and trust it will be a savor of life unto life.

We hope, if it is the will of the Lord, that they may come at a future time. May the Lord bless them in their labor, and give them strength to accomplish much in the name of the blessed Son of God. Yours in hope of life.

Colebrook, March 11th, 1875.

From Bro. W. D. Tucker.

Dear Friends of the Crisis:—I take this opportunity to let you all know that I am still striving to gain the glorious inheritance—the land of Canaan—promised to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession. We read—"If ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise"; and I do feel that I would be Christ's, in order that I may continue to be an heir to that blessed promise.

Signs are thickening faster and faster every day; men are waxing worse and worse; the powers of the heavens are being shaken, and soon I believe the Armageddon war-cloud that is hovering over the nations of the earth will burst in all its fury, and a time of trouble such as never was will commence. But those whose names are found written in the book of life will then be delivered, and caught up to meet the Lord in the air, there to stay till the indignation is overpast; after that to dwell in the new-earth home, with Jesus, forever.

Are we ready? If not, O let us get ready quickly; for it is but a little while before Jesus will come, and I know that we all want to be saved, whether we are ready or not.

Dear brethren and sisters, I want you all to remember me at the throne of grace. We do not hear the glorious gospel of the coming One preached here, from one end of the year to the other; but we have the blessed Word of God and the dear Crisis to comfort our expectant hearts. We are waiting for Jesus to come soon. Pray for us. From your Bro. in the Lord.

Haydenville, Mass.

From Bro. C. W. Clifford.

Dear Crisis:—Let me make known through your columns some of my thoughts, as I feel we ought to stir up each other as we see by signs that the coming of the Lord is close at hand. We have tried in our weak way to warn our fellows of a coming judgment, and to show them the preparation necessary to be able to stand.

Dear brethren and sisters, Jesus is coming soon, then deliverance will be given to them that are faithful to the end. It is my prayer that we all may be ready; for it will be a terrible day to those who are not ready. His promises are sure to all who put their trust in him. Jesus says—"Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved." Praise the Lord for what he has promised his children. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." Let us be faithful a little longer, that we may hear it said—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Dear brethren, we have but a short time to work; let us be diligent. There are thousands in this State who know nothing of the Lord's soon coming. It must be some one's duty to proclaim it. Who will help do it? I want to do my whole duty, and finally meet all the dear ones on the other shore.

Piermont, N. H.

From Sr. E. Marston.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—As Jesus has forgiven my many sins and transgressions, I want to do all I can for him. I do not write thinking to make any addition to or improvement upon the Crisis—our beloved paper. Every week it comes laden with comforting words, to cheer our hearts.

Dear waiting ones, let us still fight the good fight of faith, looking unto Jesus. What though we are persecuted on every hand, what though the storm beat upon our heads; if we have Jesus for our friend, who can harm us? May the Lord help us to "run with patience the race that is set before us; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

There are several in this vicinity who are looking for the return of our Savior,—who believe the end of this dispensation to be near. Pray for us, that we may get on the whole armor of God, and be ready to meet the coming King.

Ashland, N. H.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

I hereby state that I am now fully satisfied that in upholding James N. Wingate, as I have done in the past, I have acted unadvisedly, and have done wrong. Especially I wish to withdraw the statements made in a letter I wrote to the said J. N. Wingate, by his request, which letter was written by me, and dated at Richmond, P. Q., Nov. 15th, 1874; in which I justify the said Wingate, and unjustly condemn the members of the Advent Christian Conference of the Province of Quebec, whose action in the case of J. N. Wingate I now fully endorse and justify; as I have of late become better acquainted with his true character and unchristian dealing; and I would humbly ask forgiveness of all the members of that Conference for communicating the unjust charges of that letter, sent to the Crisis Office for publication by J. N. Wingate, and sent from that office to Eld. C. P. Dow, and now in his possession. And I wish to beg the christian forbearance of ministers and members of that Conference, and hope I shall have wisdom and grace to act more wisely and discreetly in the future than in the past.

I wish it well understood that I have written the above from a sense of duty, and have not been influenced by any person or persons, and request its publication in the Crisis. I have not done this with any ill feeling or hatred, but for the cause of truth I so much love. And I wish that he might even now open his eyes and see the error of his ways, and repent, and find mercy and be saved in the kingdom.

Your Bro. in Christ, F. M. DRAKE.

Obituaries.

GARRIETT. In New Hartford, March 3d, 1875, Ann E., wife of Bigalow Garriett.

Sister Garriett embraced the doctrine of the Lord's coming, and the resurrection of the dead, several years ago, and was numbered with our little church at Collinsville. She leaves a husband and one son to weep, but not as those who have no hope. We visited her in her sickness, and found her resting in Jesus. Her hours of suffering were many, but amid it all not a word of murmuring or complaining were known to escape her lips. She said her sickness was all right. This is the second time Bro. G. has followed a companion to the tomb. The arm of the Lord be with him. God bless the son, who is endeavoring to follow Jesus. Although deprived of a mother's counsel, may he and his companion seek the counsel of the Lord. Sermon by the writer from John 11: 25, 26. S. WOODRUFF.

A. C. Times, please copy.

CLARK. In Avon, March 3d, 1875, Abigail, wife of Warner Clark, aged 84 years.

Our aged mother has fallen asleep. She had in former days laid away six children and a companion to rest in the tomb; yet God, who is full of love and mercy, spared to her one son, that she might have a quiet, peaceful home in her declining years. For this she was often heard to express her gratitude. God bless those sons and daughters who remember their aged parents. We have often visited this home the past few years, and always received a welcome. We found Sister C. always pleasant and cheerful; never saw her in an ill frame of mind. Her hope was in the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. Words of truth and comfort were spoken by the writer from 23d Psalm. S. WOODRUFF.

NICHOLS. In Warren, Vt., Feb. 2d, 1875, Bro. Helon Nichols, aged 64 years.

Bro. Nichols has been for the past three years, at times, a great sufferer, and it seemed sometimes as if he could live but a little while. The enemy has at last conquered, and he now sleeps under the sods of the valley, resting until the trump of God shall sound, when we feel he will come forth with immortal vigor, to shout "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" An able and comforting discourse by Bro. A. A. Hoyt to the mourning friends, from Tim. 4: 7, we felt was truly applicable to his daily life. C. E. G.

DAKIN. In Bennington, Vt., Feb. 26th, 1875, of quick consumption, Charlotte J., daughter of George B. and Eliza Dakin, aged 8 years and 7 months.

It was painful to witness her suffering, but she sleeps in Jesus, and the time is hastening when the voice of the great Lifegiver will echo through the silent chambers of the dead, and Jennie will come forth clad in robes of spotless purity, to enjoy immortal glory and eternal life. May the parents be comforted with the assurance that she, with the other little one that sleeps, shall come forth from the land of the enemy. The writer spoke words of comfort at the funeral, which was held at the M. E. church. W. O. HIGLEY.

WALKER. In Green Point, Long Island, March 9th, 1875, of pneumonia, Bro. John Walker, in the 52nd year of his age.

Bro. Walker was converted into the Advent faith some twenty years ago, and lived a consistent christian—a burning and a shining light—up to the moment of his death. With a vigorous constitution and remarkably good health, he had escaped the sick-bed affliction till within two weeks of the time when he bowed to the power of the enemy and fell asleep in Jesus. He leaves a wife and one son bereaved, and a large circle of christian friends, who, in view of the approach of death, all exclaim—"O, let my last end be like his." He selected the writer to speak at his funeral from the words in Heb. 9: 27, 28. THOS. J. COX.

WOOD. In Webster, Mass., Dec. 6th, 1874, Amos L. Wood, aged 48 years.

Bro. Wood professed conversion in 1870, and maintained a christian character through life. Those brethren and sisters, who have labored in Webster for the cause of truth, may be glad to know that one at least was faithful unto death. While many fall out by the way, here and there, one will be among the saved ones. God help us to keep at the work of trying to save men a little longer, and then the Master will say, "Well done." H. DAVIS.

LANCE. In Cabot, Vt., March 8th, 1875, of consumption, Lydia, daughter of John D. and Prudence Lance, aged 17 years.

Sr. Lydia early gave herself to Christ, and has ever had an abiding faith in his return. She died in the triumphs of faith, and although her parents and brothers mourn her loss, yet they mourn not as those that have no hope, she having urged them with great earnestness to make their peace with God and meet her in the kingdom. Words of comfort by the writer. E. N. MORSE.

HAGGETT. In Standish, Me., Feb. 2nd, 1875, William Haggett, aged 86 years.

Our dear father sleeps sweetly in Jesus, waiting for a glorious resurrection to an immortal life. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Eld. True Jordan. E. M. HAGGETT.

ALLEN. In Woodstock Valley, Ct., Oct. 23d, 1874, Howard Morton, son of J. Melvin and Nancy V. Allen, aged 6 months.

His stay here was short, but full of suffering. Not so when he shall return from the land of the enemy. H. DAVIS.

LEACH. In Somerville, Mass., Dec. 10th, 1874, Mary H., wife of Charles Leach, aged 27 years.

Her sickness was long and painful, but she bore it all without a murmur, and left behind the assurance that ere long she will live in a land where the "inhabitants shall not say, I am sick." She was brought to Kennebunk, the place of her nativity, where at our Chapel we endeavored to comfort the bereaved husband and child, father and mother, sisters and brother, together with numerous other relatives and friends. May this affliction prove a blessing to all the bereaved, and their union in the better land ere long be sweet.

W. H. MITCHELL.

LORD. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Levant, Me., March 14th, 1875, Bradford H. Lord (formerly of Lynn, Mass.), aged 63 years.

Bro. L. leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss; two of which are quite small. He was very unwilling to die and leave his little children. He said they needed him to bring them up. His family miss him very much, and their home is made very lonely; but they have hope in the resurrection. O Lord, help his dear family to be also ready to meet him, with all the dear saints, in the everlasting kingdom of God.

CLEGG—WHALEY. In Philadelphia, March 10th, by Elder Wm. Campbell, Mr. HENRY CLEGG and Miss SARAH S WHALEY, both of Philadelphia.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, March 15. A dispatch to the Times from Berlin says a large consignment of horses purchased by French dealers in East Prussia recently were stopped in transitu at the Berlin depots.

A Papal brief, in answer to the address of the German Episcopate, is published. It declares that the Vatican decrees contain nothing which alters the relations of the Pope and Roman Catholics, or which can afford a pretext for further oppressing the Church and interfering with the election of the next Pope. It endorses the statement made by the Bishops that judgment as to the validity of the Papal election appertain to the Church alone, and concludes by urging the Bishops to continue to resist and expose error.

March 16. It is said that a confidential exchange of views in regard to the election of a successor to Pope Pius IX. is taking place between Germany and Italy.

March 17. A special telegram from Berlin to the London Times says that, in a recent dispatch to the German Minister at Rome, Prince Bismarck suggests that all States with a certain number of Catholic inhabitants enter into an agreement to repel Papal interference with politics.

GERMANY.

Berlin, March 16. In the Lower House of the Prussian Diet to-day debate was opened on the first reading of the new Ecclesiastical bill.

Dr. Folk, Minister of public worship, in a speech explaining the necessity for fresh legislation on relations of the State with the Church, dwelt especially on the fact that the Pope had authorized the Austrian Bishops to obey the laws similar to those which he denounced in Prussia. The State was not afraid of the encyclical, but considered the matter serious, and would not permit itself to be treated with scorn by the Church.

Prince Bismarck made a powerful speech in support of the bill. He said the maxim that more obedience was due to God than to man certainly did not mean that more obedience was due a Pope misguided by Jesuits than to the King. The Government was doing its duty in protecting the German freedom of mind against Rome. The House resolved to discuss the bill in a full sitting instead of referring it to a committee.

March 18. In consequence of the petition of the Archbishop of Cologne, to the Landtag against that part of the ecclesiastical bill which gives the people participation in the control of local church property, the Government has had the bill altered so as to deprive priests of any share in the administration of such property.

In the Landtag to-day the main clauses of the bill withdrawing the State grants from Roman Catholic Bishops, were passed by overwhelming majorities.

An Ultramontane member, amid loud protests, read the Papal Encyclical.

Prince Bismarck took part in the discussion. He insisted that it was the imperative duty of the State not to pay fomenters of insurrection.

CASTELAR RESIGNS A PROFESSORSHIP.—Castelar has resigned the Professorship in the University of Madrid, in consequence of the Government re-establishing in the schools and colleges the exclusive use of the text books and prospectuses prescribed during Isabel's reign and otherwise changing the manner of public instruction.

He resigned his professorship because the Jesuits were permitted to control the entire educational department of the Spanish government, just as they are designing to do in the United States. J. C.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Amherst, N. H., March 20. Mrs. Avah Goss of this place, the oldest person in the State, died this morning at the age of one hundred and five years one month and nineteen days. She took a cold about a week ago, which so prostrated her that although she seemed to be getting over it, yet she had not sufficient strength to rally. She was a native of Lunenburg, Mass., and had been a resident of Amherst for ninety years.

Augusta, Ga., March 23. The path of the tornado was from two hundred to six hundred yards wide. The cyclone was of a cylindrical shape and rotated with a fearful velocity from north to south. The front cloud was black as night and half a mile high, the rear was illuminated by a bright light. It traveled nearly due east, veering a little north.

After devastating Comak the tornado seems to have divided, one portion going east by north and crossing the Savannah river above and below Augusta, both proving equally destructive, laying waste everything in their track. Huge trees were broken like reeds, and in some instances were carried three-quarters of a mile.

The tornado was preceded by a dull, heavy roaring, as of heavy artillery in the distance. It spent its greatest fury in about three minutes. An eye witness says the senses were utterly deadened and appalled, there was a crash, a roar and the mingling of a hundred terrific and unearthly sounds. Houses were demolished and noble oaks, that had withstood the storms of a century, were snapped in twain. A wail of distress comes up from the devastated district, embracing eight counties in Georgia and two or three in South Carolina. The destruction of property is immense, and the list of killed and wounded appalling.

LOSS BY WEEDS AND INSECTS.—It is estimated that the value of produce annually raised in this country is $2,500,000,000, of which amount nearly or quite one-fifth, or $500,000,000, is lost, according to the American Naturalist, from the attacks of injurious plants and animals. A single campaign of the army worm cost the farmers of Eastern Massachusetts $250,000 worth of grass. Missouri alone loses from fifteen to twenty million dollars annually from insect depredations. The annual damage to the apple and pear crop from the codling moth amounts to several million dollars, and the work of the curculio is equally costly. A partial remedy is to be found in a close study of insect habits, with a view to ascertaining what insects there are which hold the depredators in check and destroy them.

A perfect remedy will be found in the coming of Christ, because he is coming to destroy the works of the Devil, and make an utter and eternal end of the curse. J. C.

Columbus, O., March 19. The troubles among the coal miners at Straitsville have recommenced. On Wednesday several miners were attacked by white miners and brutally beaten. W. B. McClurg, Superintendent of the Straitsville Mining Company, engaged in a pistol duel with a white miner who demanded his surrender. McClurg succeeded in wounding his antagonist. On being warned, McClurg and family and twenty-five miners departed for Logan.

Mr. Mitchell, foreman of the company, arrived in this city to-day, accompanied by Mr. Harbaugh, another employe of the company. Mr. Mitchell says that five or six men carrying guns entered his office at noon yesterday and made violent demonstrations. They threatened to club him with their guns, and pointed a cocked gun at him and threatened to shoot him. They gave him five hours to get out of town. Fearing to go to the depot, he took the horse road across the country to Logan.

Harbaugh left Straitsville this morning. He says the company's store and its contents were burned last night, involving a loss of $10,000 to $15,000.

DR. STRONG, fresh from Palestine, says the Turkish government has ordered the walls of Jerusalem to be torn down, and that ten years hence there will be nothing of them but a heap of rubbish.

☞ TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Conference Notice.

The annual session of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Chelsea, Mass., in the Advent Christian Chapel on Heard Street, commencing Tuesday, April 6th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The business session will be held on Wednesday morning, and it is desired that all the business of the Conference may be begun and finished on that day. Therefore, ministers and delegates will endeavor to be in attendance in season to take part in said business matters. Churches whose membership is less than twenty-five are entitled to one delegate; over twenty-five and less than fifty, two delegates; over fifty, three delegates. Let there be a general rally. Come in the spirit of the Master, abide in it during the meeting, and return to your homes richly laden therewith. C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held at Rutland, Vt., commencing April 14th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a good gathering of the faithful ones at this meeting. Let delegates be sent from all the churches and localities where there are no regular meetings. We hope ministers belonging to this Conference will make a special effort to be present. Come, brethren, to this feast, to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing. A. W. SIBLEY, Pres.
W. O. HIGLEY, Sec.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.

To the Brn. scattered abroad:—This is to certify that Eld. John F. Champlin (colored) is no longer acting as our agent to solicit funds for the Advent Christian church of Westerly, R. I. Per order of Board of Trustees.

R. T. CHURCH, Chairman.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 15th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will meet with the Church at the Lancaster schoolhouse, in East Bowdoinham, on Thursday, April 15th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the spirit of your Master, and work for the salvation of sinners and the good of the church. H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL, Sec.

CHARLTON.—By divine permission the Church in this place purpose holding a Protracted Meeting, commencing Thursday evening, April 15th, to continue over Lord's day. Brethren, sisters and friends in the surrounding towns are invited to attend. Come with the blessing of the good Lord to this feast. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, with others, will be here to preach the Word. In behalf of the Church, J. W. PATTERSON, Clerk.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—At a quarterly session of the A. C. Vermont Conference, held at Warren Dec. 9th, 1874, Bro. L. H. Brigham was duly set apart for the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of our hands, prayer, and the right hand of fellowship; and is recommended to the church of Christ wherever he may be called to labor. A. A. HOYT.
(A. A. HOYT for Conf. Board.) O. BECKWITH.
E. B. ROLLINS.

NOTICE.—The brethren in Porter, Me., and Freedom, N. H., have arranged to sustain preaching one half the time. These places are near each other, and we unite our interests together and maintain but one meeting regularly, and we are very much in need of preaching. Will the Lord put it into the minds of some of his servants to come over and help us? Who will volunteer, and give notice in Crisis ahead for either of these places? We will meet them at Centre Ossipee, N. H., or Cornish, on their arrival, and do what we can to have them sustained, and to have the gospel preached to sinners. Will Bro. E. A. Stockman arrange to come sometimes? Here is a good field for labor, and a good congregation of attentive listeners, and through the blessing of God much good may be done. If any will heed this, please correspond with myself, or W. Sawyer, or J. S. Moulton. Address Porter, Me.

For the Brn., F. PHILBRICK.

NOTICE.—We would like (if the Lord will), six or eight brethren and sisters to go with the Tent this season, filled with the Spirit and power of the gospel, to labor for the salvation of sinners, proclaim the signs of Jesus' coming at hand, and to help care for the Tent, etc. We want those who can give their time, talents, and voice. We will trust in the Lord for means to pay expenses other ways connected with it.

If brethren wish to contribute to help, it will be received gladly. Brn. F. and Asa Blaisdell and others talk of running the Evangel Tent, and I will furnish one or more, if help will be pledged, for Maine or vicinity. Let those respond at once who feel that the Lord wants them to go, as it will take sometime to make tents. Speak freely. We ought to have many tents in the field this season if Jesus does not come; and could if brethren and sisters would take hold of the business. Let us do all we can for a perishing world, and have it said "well done" when Jesus comes.

P. S. Direct H. B. SEVEY, Mt. Vernon, Me.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the N. H. Conference is to commence so as to hold its session over the last Sunday in April. Any church wishing it with them, please write me soon, so we may give notice in good time. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Kansas Central Advent Christian Conference will be held at Melvern, Osage Co., Kansas, on Saturday, the 3d day of April next, and continue over Sunday. All interested are cordially invited to attend. H. H. KLOCK, Sec.

NOTICE.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier, Vt. E. N. MORSE.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

A NEW BOOK.
THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine so set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

GOD SUPPLIETH OUR NEED.

M. S. HORNE.

"Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of these things."—MATT. 6: 32

Ye weary, sad, desponding,
 Along life's rugged way,
Complaining and distrusting,
 As flies each passing day;
Look to the pitying Savior,
 He hears your every sigh,
And he will surely help you
 If you to him draw nigh.
Think of the gracious promises
 So freely to you given;
Remember they are steadfast,
 Firm as the throne of heaven.
And He who hears the raven's cry,
 And marks the sparrow's fall,
Looks kindly on his children here,
 And hears them when they call.
See how he clothes in richest bloom
 The lily sweet and fair,
And gives the flower its sweet perfume
 That fills the balmy air.
And if he thus doth clothe the flower,—
 And well ye know he hath,—
Will he not much more clothe his own,
 'O, ye of little faith!'
A hundred fold the promise is,
 What would ye have beside?
For wheresoe'er the treasure is,
 The heart will there abide.
But He who walketh righteously
 Shall safely dwell on high;
The Lord will be his sure defence,
 His wants he will supply.

BAPTISM OF THE SPIRIT.

L. ROBBINS.

In the primitive church it was considered indispensably necessary that all believers in Christ should receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost. The apostles must tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high; for without this baptism they were unqualified for the work to which they were called. Peter and John must go down to Samaria, and instruct them in the way of God more perfectly, and pray for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost; for as yet they had only believed and were baptized. Paul was also of the same faith; therefore he inquires of the twelve "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" He was also minded to go to Corinth that they might have a second benefit.

In Acts 1-8, the Savior informs his disciples that they should receive this baptism, and then they would have power to witness for him to the utmost parts of the earth. A witness can only testify to what he knows personally, or what he has experienced himself; to this and this only is he a competent witness. In Rom. 8: 16, it is said—"The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." Again, "He hath sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." Now if called upon to witness to this fact, if I am in doubt, and have little hope that I have passed from death unto life, but feel that my heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; I fear I may be deceived; and how can such a witness be of any value? This is not for Christ; rather is it not against him? Is it not dishonoring to God, when he has promised his witnesses power to testify to the ends of the earth?

If then we would be God's true witnesses, we must be able from our own experience to witness to the truths of his holy Word; then can we truthfully say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he hath power on earth to forgive sins;" for he hath forgiven mine. I know that his blood can cleanse from all unrighteousness, for he hath cleansed my poor heart. I know there is freedom from condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. I know his yoke is easy and his burden light, for I bear it daily with delight. I know he is able to perfect us in that love that casts out all tormenting fear, for I have it in my heart to-day, thanks be to God! I know in whom I have believed, and that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him.

I thank God that he has a few faithful witnesses even in these last days, and he has promised to be with them to the end.

Dear reader, have you received this baptism? If not, will you not seek it at once? But if you have made a full consecration of all to God,—if you have taken Christ as a whole Savior,—if you have been saved from all sin by faith in Christ, and thus your heart been made a fit temple for the Holy Ghost, you know what this baptism is; for God is faithful to his promise. Then rest not here, but grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Savior; for he is able to do more than we can ask, or even think. We have need of frequent baptisms, for we are kept by the power of God. We must learn the happy art of living by faith alone. Of such who do not cast away their confidence, but keep the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end, he will not be ashamed to confess before his Father and the holy angels. Of such he will say—Well done, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

Let us not be of those who draw back to perdition, but believe to the saving of the soul.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

A. RICHARDSON.

What a thrill of sadness comes over me when I turn my thoughts to the parting scenes which are just before us. Parents and children, brothers and sisters, friends and neighbors must part to meet no more. Sad thought! Can we give them all up? Cannot some be gathered into the fold of Christ before it is too late? I wish I could be the means in the hands of the Lord of impressing these thoughts upon some poor sinner's heart?

Dear sinner, the time is soon coming when you will need Jesus for your friend. All has been done that can be done for your salvation. God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. He gave his own dear Son to die for us, that we, through him, might have eternal life. What love for us poor fallen creatures! How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation? Many will perish at last by their own neglect. It will be terrible to be left here with the wicked when the righteous are taken away,—when the Spirit of the Lord leaves the world. The door of mercy will be closed, and the time of trouble commence, "such as there never was since there was a nation."

I had a dream some years ago, which left a deep impression upon my mind. I thought I was riding on the cars. Suddenly the train stopped. I thought the end had surely come,—probation ended. The passengers all rushed from the cars. There seemed to be a multitude of people, in great confusion, rushing back and forth, wild with excitement. All restraint seemed to be taken away; they were left to themselves, to kill each other or anything else that came into their minds. I was in great fear that they might rush upon me and take my life. I had some hope that I might be delivered out of this time of trouble.

I believe that dream is something of a picture of what will be when the Spirit of the Lord really leaves the world.

Lord, help me to be ready, that I may be among those that shall look up and say—"This is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us." We shall stand speechless in that day if we are found without the wedding garment.

A CONDITIONAL PROMISE.

A. J. STONE

"Unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation." Heb. 1: 28.

The promise of the apostle is conditional. It declares a certain fact, and is applicable only to those to whom the promise is made. The promise is to be realized by those who comply with the condition of the text. There is a certain position enjoined upon all those who expect to reap the blessings it sets forth.

The text addresses itself to those who look for Him (Christ), and none others. To those who look for him is this promise made. They, and they only will be permitted to share in the blessings of that salvation so freely offered to all those that look for him.

A looking for Christ implies certain other facts, which come in connection with those already stated. We are to be ready for the reception of those blessings which God has in reserve for his people. It is also essential and necessary that we love his appearing; for in connection with this comes the crown of never fading glory. The divinely inspired apostle has written those things for our learning, and God calls upon us to believe his testimony, also the record which he has given of his Son.

If any one would like to know the reason why I am an Adventist, let him read the text. Should any inquire the reason why I love the appearing of the blessed Savior, it is because the glorious crown comes in connection therewith.

"May the Lord direct our hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." May we ever keep in remembrance the language of the apostle Peter,—"Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." This language is not man-made; it is of divine origin. It comes to us from an inspired apostle, and should claim our careful and candid consideration. It should enable us to wait with patience for God's Son from heaven, to believe in the immutability of his counsel, that we may be permitted to share the glories that shall be revealed "in the day of his visitation."

The promise is full and certain, and embraces all who comply with its demands. It is a perfect embodiment of the wisdom and goodness of God. The promise includes the earth restored to its Eden beauty; the occupants of which are God's immortalized saints, and the governor is "the Lord God over all, blesesd forever more."

N. Y. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE REPORT.

Conference met with the church at Springwater, March 12th to 14th. There was a very good representation of brethren and sisters present.

Preachers: M. R. Miles, B. P. Stevens, W. Vreeland, C. F. Sweet, W. J. Hobbs, E. F. Sergisson, J. E. Wells, A. P. Moore, R. G. Wells, and Ira Allen.

Delegates: J. S. Maynard, Rochester; Henry Hay, E. Shelby; Bro. Nace, Kendall; J. L. Knapp, Mortville; and A. Wiley, Springwater.

Devotional Com.: Brn. Walbridge, Morris and Withington.

Business Com.: W. J. Hobbs, B. P. Stevens, C. F. Sweet.

The subject of a general campmeeting was discussed at some length, and it was finally decided not to have one on account of the divisions in our midst, caused by the persistent pressing of Dr. Barbour's Elijah trine message; in consequence of which the following resolution was passed.

"Resolved, That we, the representatives of the A. C. Conference of the State of New York, in Conference assembled at Springwater, do deeply deplore the course of Dr. N. H. Barbour, as he has labored in the bounds of this conference, preaching, and making divisions, and claiming to be an Adventist, who has no license from this body or any other Adventist conference, preaching that the resurrection took place Feb. 14th last, and many other fanatical views. We, therefore, deem it our duty to warn the churches within the bounds or this conference to beware how they admit him into their pulpits. He says his work is to divide wherever he goes.

Will we ever be free from this kind of fanaticism? Why will not brethren and sisters learn wisdom by the past?

The chair appointed the following committee to draft resolutions for the general benefit of the body, to be presented at our Annual Conference in June: W. J. Hobbs, W. Vreeland, J. E. Wells.

Preaching Friday evening by M. R. Miles, from 2. Cor. 10: 12.

Saturday, P. M., by A. P. Moore, from Matt. 4: 19. Evening by E. F. Sergisson, from John 3: 16. Sunday A. M., by W. Vreeland, from Phil. 4: 11-13; P. M. by B. P. Stevens, from Matt. 24: 3. Evening by J. E. Wells, from 1 Peter 3: 15.

A. P. MOORE, Sec.

READER HAVE YOU THE SPIRIT?—The indwelling of God the Holy Spirit is the common mark of all believers in Christ. It is the Shepherd's mark of the flock of the Lord Jesus, distinguishing them from the rest of the world. It is the goldsmith's stamp on the genuine sons of God which separates them from the dross and mass of false professors. It is the King's own seal on those who are his peculiar people, proving them to be his own property. It is the earnest which the Redeemer gives to his believing disciples while they are in the body, as a pledge of the full redemption yet to come on the resurrection morning. This is the case of all believers. They all have the Spirit.—Rev. J. C. Ryle.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Ridley.

Dear Brn.:—It has been some time since I have written for the columns of the Crisis; but as I promised many of the dear saints in the East that I would occasionally inform them of my welfare, I will now try to keep my promise. Although I have been somewhat negligent about writing, yet I would not have you think that I have been idle altogether, or that I have ceased to love the Master or his work; for that is not the case. I love him more and more, and the way is continually growing brighter. Evidences of his soon coming are thickening, and becoming more plain. The dark war-cloud is coming nearer, and growing darker, and its muttering thunder is heard in the distance. Soon will it burst in awful fury on the world. Men of the world, "kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains" are watching the approaching clouds with fear and trembling; but the Lord's faithful watchmen view the onward rolling tempest with joyful expectation; for when it bursts in its fury, and overspreads the earth, then will come the time of deliverance for God's chosen ones. O hail happy day!

I am still preaching for the A. C. Church here in Manchester one-half the time, and the rest of my time is divided between the churches at Edgewood and Elk Valley. The Lord has been pleased to bless my feeble efforts in this vicinity, and the churches for which I have been acting as pastor are growing in numbers, and I trust that they have also been growing in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord. At Elk Valley I held a protracted meeting this winter, with the help of Eld. P. S. Buck and R. B. Dutton, and have set in order a church of twenty-five members, and more will join soon. I baptized six obedient souls the last time I was there, and shall baptize others soon. Doors are opening all around, and eyes, and ears, and hearts are open to receive the truth. Prejudice is giving way, and many of the Lord's children in other denominations are willing to worship with us. The church is ripening for the great harvest.

I think many times of the dear saints in the East with whom I have enjoyed so many precious seasons in the past, but I never have been sorry that I left them and came out here; for I have seen clearly the guiding hand of the Lord; and while I have tried as a pastor to feed the flock of God over which, I trust, "the Holy Ghost hath made me overseer," the great Shepherd has been feeding me. I am confident that it would be better for both the Advent church and ministry if very many of the preachers would travel less and watch over and feed the church more; and if the churches would cease endeavoring to secure a new preacher every week, and obtain a pastor to care for and instruct them in the way of our blessed Lord.

When I read Bro. F. A. Baker's little article on this subject in the Crisis of March 10th, entitled "The Great Need," I felt like saying, That is truth; every word of it. I would not say anything against having Evangelists, for they are needed;—men of God called to that work; much can be done by them in new fields, with tents, etc. But when churches are raised up, it is according to heaven's arrangement that they be set in order, the necessary officers chosen, and a pastor or shepherd to watch over the sheep and lambs; and my short experience and observation has been that those ministers and churches have prospered best who have thus walked according to the divine arrangement.

There was a church of about seventy members raised up a few years ago, not far from where I am now writing, who were left "like sheep having no shepherd," and as a result "wolves" got in, the sheep were scattered, and while a few found a home with some of our churches in other places, the majority became entangled in the bondage of Satan, and are now stumbling blocks in the way. One of them when being urged to return to the Lord, while those who had never before known the Lord were turning to him, replied that he had started once, and the church was left without any leader, and had all gone to pieces, and he did not want to go in the same way again; but if he could see any prospect of its being any better this time, then he would take hold and help all he could; and he doubtless expressed the feelings of many others.

But I am lengthening out this letter too far, and will close, hoping to meet you soon in the kingdom. Pray for me.

Elkport, Iowa, March 16th, 1875.

From Sr. R. E. Morrill.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I would say to all who enjoy the peace of God, and can exercise faith in him, as my haste and the confused state of my mind prevents me from writing anything very interesting to you, that I am one of the weak ones, and the exhortation is to the strong, to bear the infirmities of the weak. I will simply state my case and make known my request to you.

My health has been very poor for a few years past, and the nature of my disease has been very aggravating to my nervous system. For a few months past my feelings have been more deeply affected by the appearance of what the physicians pronounce a malignant cancer in my right breast; and its rapid progress renders it needful to make an effort immediately to have it removed; and I humbly ask all that can go to their Father, and believe that whatever they ask in his name they shall receive, to offer a petition in my behalf. For a number of years I have taken care of the sick a great deal, in nearly every disease that is common in our country, and have witnessed the sufferings of those who have died of cancer; and it is the disease most of all dreaded by me, as I know so much that is always suffered by them in the last stages. I have always thought if I could be spared that, I would submit to almost anything else. But the Father, in his wisdom, has seen it best to add this to the many bitter cups that I have been compelled to drink. I have sometimes felt to say, If it be possible let this cup pass; and though I hear him say, "My grace is sufficient," yet I have not got the witness in me that I can say, "Nevertheless not my will, but thine be done." But I can say to the praise of Him that doeth all things well, that I have been permitted to enjoy that blessing, and felt like Paul to say, I was persuaded that nothing should be able to separate me from the love of God; but to my sorrow I fell from my own steadfastness; so I see the need of the caution of the apostle, to take heed when we think we stand, lest we fall.

I am surrounded with many things unpleasant to nature, as far as worldly prospects are concerned; being of the class that Jesus said were always to be with us. I have sometimes suffered some inconvenience, but the promise has been verified that, if I seek the kingdom of heaven, all needful things should be added; and I am trying to do that with all my heart. I have some discouragements, but nothing but what I am sure is for my good, when I can see through the clouds. I know who has been tempted like as we are, and can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and never turns any empty away; and I am trying to be wholly his. But, dearly beloved brethren and sisters, do not judge me harshly, but remember that no chastisement seemeth joyous for the present, and pray that mine may work the peaceable fruits of righteousness in me, that I may get the victory over all that is offensive, and become more than conqueror by counting it all joy when I fall into divers temptations, and also glory in tribulation. May the peace of God abide with all who are not high-minded, but will condescend to those of low estate, is the prayer of your unworthy sister.

P. S.—Should any brother or sister be led to the town of Rome, N. Y., will they please call on me at the Kingsly Institution, where they doctor cancers.

[We ask all the faithful in Christ to remember this poor afflicted child, upon whom a dark shadow of suffering has fallen, and pray that the loving Friend of sorrowing humanity may have mercy upon her and safely pass her over the stream that seems to be rolling its dark waters across her pathway.

O when will the dreaded sting of death be removed, and the darkness of the grave flee away? J. C.

TRIP TO OHIO.

A. P. MOORE.

I left my home, Feb. 22nd, for Central Ohio. A Bro. Fritz had written me several times to come to his place, about fifty miles south of Cleveland, and hold a series of meetings. I found the place (Bolival) quiet and pleasant, with four churches, and yet sectarian bigotry not very plenty. He had the Lutheran church kindly offered by the trustees and minister, for me to preach in.

I preached in it eight times, and, notwithstanding the very bad roads, we had large congregations, and the interest kept increasing from the first, and the most prominent of the Lutherans, as well as those of the M. E. church invited me to their homes, and were eager to obtain the tracts I took with me. It was very evident that very many were receiving the truths I preached, and the Lutheran minister thought something must be done to stop people from investigating, and he came out publicly and utterly ignored what I had preached the evening previous; viz., that God was a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God. He said he had not a particle of confidence in the claim of many of direct answer to prayer, and took the infidel's arguments to try and poison the minds of the people against the doctrinal sermons that I had preached.

It brought a chill upon the meeting, and I was about to arise and say under the circumstances I did not feel at liberty to preach in his pulpit again, when a Methodist brother, apprehending my feelings, said, "Bro. Moore, you can preach in the Methodist church to-morrow evening if you wish." I replied, "very well; I will." The excitement was intense, and the M. E. church was filled the next night, and I preached five times in their house, and can say that many have received the truth in the love of it, and confessed it, and I hope will live it out.

I never saw the truth take so strong a hold upon people in so short a time before. Praise the Lord! The fields are all ripe for the harvest, and where the truth has not been disgraced by its professed friends there is an ear to hear.

Our prospects as a people were never so encouraging, so far as the outside world is concerned. The truth is spreading. Let us be of good courage, and "love as brethren," that we may not hinder the truths we try to proclaim.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

MRS. C. CURRY.

Now is the time to prepare for our feast of tabernacles. We who live isolated from the brethren ought, if possible, to have a tent or campmeeting this summer. Poor people find it quite difficult to meet the expenses; but if we commence early to provide means, I think we shall succeed. I have eschewed tea and coffee and put the money to our campmeeting fund. We must make sacrifices. Abraham was largely rewarded for his sacrificing spirit. The devil knows that money is a great lever, and he tries to keep God's children from the possession of it, so as to hinder the advancement of the Master's cause. The wealthy can travel many miles in pursuit of pleasure, unmolested by his satanic majesty; but let a christian try to lay by a little money for sacred use, and so many obstacles are thrown in the way that the faint-hearted are discouraged. Let us be firm in the resolve to attend tent meeting this summer, and God will bless us.

THE BEST RELICS.—A Popish preacher in the Strand was bewailing some time ago the barrenness of the country in religious privileges. "Some countries," he said, "have the bone of one saint, some the relic of another, but here there is nothing, no vestige of the blessed saints!"

"Ah," thought a passer by, "but we have, though! we have the best relic of the saints we could have! we have the first promise that cheered the heart of man, if we have no relic of the first man to whom it was given. If we have not a fragment of the harp of David, we have the sweet sounds that David's harp gave forth. If we have not a portion of the thorn which tried St. Paul, we have the comfort he received, 'My grace is sufficient for thee, etc.;' we have the arrow that first pierced him, 'Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?' and the balm which healed him, 'I am Jesus.'"

THE remedy for "hard times" is patient industry. Let those who complain try it.

IN MEMORIAM.

Revised and written in memory of dear Bro. George E. Lee. For the Parents.

ELLA M. LUNT.

Yes, George shall rise, and he shall live again;
Yield to the dust its dust; let sun and rain
With flowery beauty hide his place of rest,
Or wrap him with the snow-drifts' fleecy vest,
The books of God and Nature, not in vain,
The dying saint's consummate hope attest.

Yes, George shall rise, though there be some who say
Beyond the night of death there is no day—
That the pale face, and dark disheveled tress
Shall come not from the land—Forgetfulness.
But these walk on in night, without one ray
From the broad sun of truth and righteousness.

Yes, George shall rise! Oh, let no envious doubt
Come o'er my mind, to shut the promise out—
No dark-browed skeptic steal my faith from me:
For I the face of him I love shall see,
When awakened by th' archangel's joyful shout,
To put on blissful immortality.

Yes, George shall rise; for my Redeemer came,
Ere morning touched the dewy hills with flame,
Up through the rock-hewn portals of the tomb;
New songs were sung where bowers of Eden bloom,
And heaven shall ring with sweet and loud acclaim,
When Christ for him shall break its mortal gloom.

Yes, George shall rise! The day is hastening on,
Come! quickly come, thou ever glorious One,
Who tread on clouds, whom every eye shall see,
And rear thy throne in sovereign majesty!
But till Thy righteous will on earth be done,
Dear George shall rest in hope and wait for Thee.

Yes, George shall rise, and that frail dust, now resting,
Touched with the glory of the day shall shine;
Though worms deface his cheeks, his eyes decay,
May waste, while the short seasons roll away;
But in his flesh, illustrious and divine,
Shall George behold his God in that great day.

PATIENCE.

E. GORDON.

"For ye have need of patience." HEB. 10: 36.

The Spirit evidently gives this admonition to the flock of God just prior to the coming of the great Life-giver; hence it has a chronological application. We should not need patience if we had nothing to disappoint us, and could have everything our own way. Our first work is to do the will of God, then patiently wait for the fulfillment of his promise. "For yet a little while," adds the apostle, "and he that shall come will come and will not tarry."

It is plainly indicated here that there will be a seeming tarrying of the Bridegroom. But the church should not cast off her confidence on this account; for ye have done the will of God in thus going out to meet him, and now that ye have done his will, wait patiently, for it is yet but a little while and he will send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you.

This seeming to tarry may try our patience, but we may be assured that there is no real tarrying; for God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world, and according to the prophetic Word (Hab. 2: 3) "at the end it shall speak and not lie;" "though it tarry," says the prophet, "wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry." There will be no tarrying with God. When his time arrives the faithful promise will be fulfilled. We can afford to wait patiently for the Lord a little while.

When our fellow-men, in whom we have confidence, make us a promise, we can afford to wait on them, because we feel sure that they will do what they promise; but the best of our fellows may fail to fulfill their promise for want of means, or power to fulfill. But not so with our heavenly Father; he has the power and will to fulfill all he has promised; his counsel will stand, and he will do all his pleasure. Blessed assurance! We feel that we can, we will try by his grace to be patient.

Our Father knoweth that we have need of patience, and surely he will give us all we need. He may give us tribulation to work patience for us, but we will try to let patience have her perfect work, that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

"Now the just shall live by faith." (38th ver.) Faith in what? In the promise of his coming, of course, for this is what is under consideration; "but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Is it any wonder that those who turn from this blessed truth are barren and unfruitful, since God has said to such, My soul shall have no pleasure in him? This language indicates that there would be some who would draw back, and surely, do we not see this fact demonstrated? Alas! for them; they draw back unto perdition.

The devil will try to make us believe that we had better give it up. You have been waiting long, and borne the reproach and ridicule of the world, and ungodly professors of religion, and have been disappointed many times; you had better give it up; and some have given way to his temptations without stopping to think where they were going.

Give up this hope of seeing my blessed Lord in a little while? God forbid! Where should I go? To perdition, says the apostle. What a thought! Lord, give me patience, though it take tribulation to work it. My dear Father will not suffer us to fall, so long as we keep his Word with patience.

A little while, and he will come. A little while, and the inheritance which is incorruptible and undefiled will be given to all the faithful. Amen.

A TIMELY ARTICLE.

S. S. CHAMBERLAIN.

May the Lord bless Bro. Leslie for writing that poem on "Winter," lately published in the Crisis. It was indeed timely. And it can hardly be possible that it should fail to move many hearts and hands too. One case I will mention. The snow was growing "deeper, deeper at the door" of a poor brother who was in need of fuel, and he had asked a neighbor, who had abundance, for a little wood. But he could not pay for it then, for he had no money. So the man seemed to think it would be a hard matter to get the wood. The Crisis was at hand, containing that poetry of Bro. Leslie's. It was a good time (in the house of the rich man) to read, and the Crisis was there, and I rather think that piece was noticed; for it was not long before movements were made in the direction of the wood-pile, and soon a load of wood was at the poor man's door.

This is only one instance; but among all the thousands who read "our paper" many similar cases may have occurred.—And while praise goes up to heaven for the blessings bestowed, some may know that the Lord moved one willing hand to write words that moved many hearts to "remember the poor." There was a time when our Lord had not where to lay his head, and he does not forget the poor of his flock.

YORK CO. A. C. CONFERENCE.

The quarterly session of this conference, held in Depot Hall, Steep Falls, Me., was a season of deep profit and interest. It commenced Thursday, March 11th, and continued over Sunday. The preachers present were W. H. Mitchell, Jesse Gay, J. Hill, M. Stevens, G. H. Haines, L. W. Gowen, S. G. Low, and C. H. Sweet. G. W. Brown of Eliott, and C. S. Shattuck communicated with us by mail. A goodly number of brethren and sisters came in from Biddeford, Saco, Hollis Center, Burton, Bonny Eagle, Standish, Portland, Gorham, South Windham, West Poland, Keazer Falls, Porter and Freedom N. H. Most of these brethren brought in reports which indicated a degree of prosperity in this County and vicinity.

The business transacted at this conference was as follows: Secretary's minutes read and accepted. W. H. Mitchell, J. Gay, and C. H. Sweet appointed a committee on business. They submitted a report, which was accepted and adopted.

Voted, To choose a committee to confer with Bro. Blaisdell about the Maine Mission tent.

Voted, That this committee be instructed to take such steps with reference to cooperating with Bro. Blaisdell in the Tent Mission work, in York Co. and vicinity, as they in their judgment deem proper. W. H. Mitchell and J. Gay were chosen this committee.

Voted, That we raise funds by contribution to procure tracts for distribution, and to meet such other necessary expenses as shall accrue from our quarterly sessions.

The preachers present were requested to bring this matter before the churches in the places where they resided, and those churches that have no preachers among them are requested to select one of their number to attend to this matter. We hope for a generous response from all parts of the County, as we purpose, the Lord willing, to do much missionary work during the coming season.

A collection was taken up during the conference amounting to twenty dollars and ten cents. We thought this a good beginning. Each sermon in this conference seemed to be "meat in due season;" and all our social meetings were seasons of refreshing. At our love feast Sunday morning, we had sixty-two testimonies. One poor sinner requested prayers. We fondly hoped others would imitate his example, but in this we were disappointed.

Adjourned to meet in the chapel at West Parsonsfield, Me., the first Thursday in June next, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

HOME AND HEALTH.

WHAT THE SPARROW CHIRPS.

SELECTED BY M. SHATSWELL.

I am only a little sparrow,
 A bird of low degree;
My life is of little value,
 But the dear Lord cares for me.

He gave me a coat of feathers;
 It is very plain, I know,
With never a speck of crimson,
 For it was not made for show.

But it keeps me warm in winter,
 And it shields me from the rain;
Were it bordered with gold or purple,
 Perhaps it would make me vain.

In the sweet spring time that is coming,
 I shall make myself a nest,
With many a chirp of pleasure,
 In the spot I like the best.

And he will give me wisdom
 To build of foliage brown,
And make it warm for my birdies,
 With a lining of softest down.

I have no barn nor storehouse,
 I neither sow nor reap;
God gives me a sparrow's portion,
 But never a seed to keep.

If my meal is sometimes scanty,
 Close picking makes it sweet;
I have always enough to feed me,
 And "life is more than meat."

I know there are many sparrows—
 All over the world we are found;
But our heavenly Father knoweth
 When one of us falls to the ground.

Though small, we are never forgotten;
 Though weak, we are never afraid;
For we know that the dear Lord keepeth
 The life of the creatures he made.

I fly through the thickest forests,
 I light on many a spray;
I have no chart nor compass,
 But I never lose my way.

And I fold my wings at twilight,
 Wherever I happen to be;
For the Father is always watching,
 And no harm will come to me.

I am only a little sparrow,
 A bird of low degree;
But I know the Father loves me.
 Have you less faith than we?

ABNORMAL BRAINS.

How much the literature, politics and morals of the world may have suffered from the abnormal introcranial development of some who, like Byron, Napoleon and Loyala, have compelled the world's attention, we may guess, but can never know. Shakspeare's brain probably crowned a nervous system and a body that presented very little inharmonious growth. Doubtless the same may be said of Mary Somerville.

Brains rule the world and the individual. The problem of the age which educators are to solve, with all the light that experience, aided by physiology and reflection can give, is how to build the best brains out of the materials given to work with. The demand of humanity is: Give me the best possible brain for men and women both. Fortunately the necessity of answering this demand admits of no dispute. The best possible brain is as much a necessity for one sex as for the other. Indeed, such is the divine alliance between the sexes that it is impossible to produce the best possible brain for one sex unless you produce the best possible brain for the other. This constitution of human nature—the independence of the sexes, by which the advance of one is contingent upon the advance of the other, the best development of the masculine and feminine brain made so wait on each other, who together can unlock the secrets of the universe—is admirably expressed by Emerson in language that is as full of physiological truth as of poetic beauty:

From the pair is nothing hidden;
To the twain is naught forbidden;
Hand in hand the comrades go,
Every nook of nature through;
Each for other were they born;
Each the other best adorn.

E. H. CLARKE, M. D.

Yes, doctor, brain and thought are to-day occupying a very prominent place in the literary world; and physiology, anatomy, experience and science all say, If you desire intelligence, give us the best possible material for brains, and we will, in return, give you the best possible corresponding intelligence. The physiognomist or phrenologist will, at a glance, or by passing the hand over the head, tell you the character of the material, and what it will produce. The book of science and of cause and effect will tell you that brain is the mother of reason, and that man without brains is but a passive machine, void of volition either to let or hinder.

The idea that thought exists in the abstract has not enough of sound argument to it to cast a shadow. Hence the cause of the great diversity of thought. See the mathematician solving the great and mighty problem of the day; the astronomer up above the clouds surveying the sun, moon and stars; the geologist diving into the bowels of the earth, or the warrior going forth to victory or defeat. Notice the timid maiden, scared at shadows on the wall; the idiot, with his long sloping forehead, quarreling with his own shadow and laughing at his own folly. Why all this contrast of intellect? For the simple reason that all flesh is not the same flesh. If parents desire moral and intelligent posterity, they must look well to nature's laws, and nourish and cherish the material they are formed of themselves. If they would transmit intelligence, they must give culture to their own individual intellect. Who dare deny that imbecility and idiocy are the legitimate children of excess and dissipation? or that unexecuted crime, conceived and fastened in the brain of the parent, may eventually bring the unborn child to the prison or the gallows?

As fire and water produce steam, so organized matter and spirit will produce thought and reason. God formed man from matter (See Gen. 6: 7); and to say that matter cannot think is to say man cannot think, and that God holds an unaccountable being accountable and amenable to all his laws. Who among us desires to occupy this unenviable position?

DIPTHERIA.

TREATMENT. First rub the throat with any good strong irritating liniment, as hartshorn and sweet oil, oil of hemlock or cedar, etc. After this is well done, cover the throat around perfectly with a cloth dipped in ice water, and cover again with flannels to cause prompt sweating. Let the wet cloth be flannel or cotton, of three or four thicknesses, so as to cover the throat and top of the chest perfectly, if the breathing is much affected. Change this cloth once in two hours, and if very bad, every hour or half hour. The patient may eat ice all the time, taking little pieces in his mouth, the size of beans, and letting them melt over his throat freely. Besides this, take the following mixture every half hour, one teaspoonful.

Chlorate of Potash .... ½ oz.
Muriate of Ammonia .... 30 grains.
Liquorice Ball .... ½ oz.
Water .... 1 gill.

Use this mixture several days after the throat is better. Swab the throat faithfully with the following:

Nitrate of Potash .... ½ oz.
Chlorite of Potash .... ½ oz.
Common Salt .... ½ oz.
 or two teaspoonfuls each.
Loaf Sugar .... half pound.

Mix altogether. Swab the throat freely with this in a dry state, and rinse the throat with cold water. Take also a half to one teaspoonful of this mixture every half to one or three hours, according to the violence of the disease. This will soon wholly cure all the sore throat. Avoid taking cold afterward. If the above preparation cannot be obtained, equal parts of lemon juice and water may be used as a gargle, and a wet cloth applied to the throat.—Home Guardian.

PARENTAL SYMPATHY.

Parents express too little sympathy for their chidren; the effect of this is lamentable.

"How your children love you! I would give the world to have my children so devoted to me!" said a mother to one who did not regard the time given to her children as so much capital wasted. Parents err fatally when they begrudge the time necessary for their children's amusement and instruction; for no investment brings so sure and so rich returns.

The child's heart is full of love, and it must gush out toward somebody or something. If the parent is worthy of it, and possesses it, he is blest, and the child is safe. When the child loves worthy persons and receives their sympathy, he is less liable to be influenced by the undeserving; for in his soul are models of excellence with which he compares others.

Any person can descend from his chilling dignity and freely answer the child's questions, talking familiarly and tenderly with him; and when the little one wishes help, the parent should come out of his abstraction and cheerfully help him. Then his mind will return to his speculations, elastic, and it will act with force. All parents can find a few minutes occasionally, during the day, to read little stories to their children, and to illustrate the respective tendencies of good and bad feelings. They can talk to them about flowers, birds, trees, about angels, and God. They can show interest in their sports, determining the character of them. What is a surer way than this of binding the child to the heart of the parent? When you have made a friend of a child, you may congratulate yourself you have a friend for life.—Life Illustrated.

THE GREAT DESIRE.

"That mortality might be swallowed up of life."

A. C. J.

As dawn's faint light itself doth lose
Amid the brightening day:
As hide the stars their golden fires
Beneath its brilliant sway:
Thus, O our Savior, do we long to see
Mortality dissolved in life with thee.

As disappears the outline dim
'Neath fuller, stronger hues:
As, touched by skilful hand, the stone
Its shapeless form doth lose:
Thus, O our Savior, do we long to see
Mortality give place to life with thee.

As, in the flower, we lose the bud,
And in the cloud the bow:
As, to the sea, the fervent stream
Hastens with ceaseless flow:
Thus, O our Savior, do we haste to see
Mortality resigned for life with thee.

But, as by toil the picture grows;
As dawn doth wait for day;
As sun, and air, and fruitless soil
Give flowers each brilliant ray;
So do we wait, in patient trust, to see
Mortality laid down for life with thee.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.

SYNOPSIS OF BISHOP MERRIL'S SERMON.

"But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"—1 Cor. 15: 35.

The apostle in this chapter gives a clear statement of the doctrine, which he first states, then affirms, and proceeds to prove. "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Jesus risen; and if Jesus is not risen, then is your preaching vain, and your faith is vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not."

The doctrine is received by revelation of God. It is outside the domain of natural law and natural forces. Like all miracles it rises above ordinary laws. Much misapprehension in regard to the doctrine relates to the mode or manner of the resurrection. In regard to the doctrine we may have an intelligent faith, because God's Word declares the truth. In regard to the mode of it we believe nothing, because we know nothing of it. Most, if not all of the differences of belief in regard to the resurrection are traceable to the efforts of theologians to explain its nature and method. Philosophy comes in on its natural plain and bewilders and misleads. In our fruitless efforts to fathom the mystery we are hopelessly confused.

It will be found that all objections to the doctrine, as accepted in the evangelical churches, limit God's power. They, like the old philosophers, begin to declare what God can, and what he cannot do. They conclude that the axioms of science must interpose insuperable difficulties—much as the old schools taught that matter was eternal and "out of nothing, nothing could be made." That God made the world out of matter which had from the eternity past existed in chaos. That it possessed properties of evil which could not be eliminated. Hence the world is not very good, but nothing better could be made out of such material.

The resurrection is not dependent on nature, but on God whose wisdom and power are without limit. Natural laws and physical forces are subject to the mandate of Him who spake the world from nought. The first question: "How are the dead raised up?"

We may answer with emphasis: "By the power of God!" This is the teaching of the apostle, and surely ought to be satisfactory. This is the proposition which is affirmed and illustrated in the chapter of which the text is a part. He states simple truths, not to trace out existing analogies, but as proofs of divine power constantly exhibited: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain; it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain. But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body."

If a divine energy, proceeding silently and mysteriously, produces the germ, the blade, the ear, shall not the same divine force bring life from the dead? Is not the power of God sufficient? Then, the same line of thought is continued and further illustrated: "All flesh is not the same flesh, but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds."

God's power is exhibited in the varieties of flesh, each of which is a manifestation of his wisdom, care, and providence. "There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption."

These illustrations all serve the same purpose, in proving that God is able to raise up the dead. Not a word is said as to the mode of the resurrection. The apostle had not a thought in his mind in regard to it.

Before proceeding to an examination of the second question in the text, it may be necessary to remark that there are two theories proposed by those who do not accept the doctrine of a literal resurrection of the dead.

The first is called the "germ theory." It is assumed that in the body there is some particle, germ or element which never perishes; and that this indestructible germ develops into the new body. It is sufficient, perhaps, to say that such theory is without support in the Scriptures; nor is it in accordance with reason. If there is an indestructible germ, which survives death, it is not raised, and hence it is no resurrection. Te apostle affirms that the dead shall rise—the living seed is in no sense a dead body.

The second theory, which is more plausible, and which is a mixture of truth and error, requires more careful consideration. It may be termed a "progressive" theory. It is that man is a compound being, made up of spirit, soul and body. This, so far, is correct. But it is assumed that the spirit is the essence of the man and that the soul is the garment or vestment of the spirit—it is a physical body. At death, while the outer, gross, perishable body is dissolved, to mingle again with its kindred elements, the spirit with its physical body, or spirit-covering, rises and goes at once into the heavenly world—and this is called the resurrection! But this would be no resurrection of the dead. The spirit does not die, the soul does not die, and the material body does not rise. Then, wherein is there any resurrection?

Such theory antagonizes Bible teaching, since time intervenes between death and the resurrection. In every passage relating to the subject, the resurrection comes after and not at death. The son of the widowed mother, whom Jesus raised, had been dead some time, and was about to be buried, when the funeral procession was arrested, and the young man was restored to life.

Lazarus had been dead four days, when the Savior called him forth from the grave. Jesus had lain in the sepulchre three days before he was raised by God's power. Christ's resurrection is the pledge and pattern of ours. "He was the first fruits of them that slept." First fruits are a part of the harvest; in kind essentially the same as that which is gathered into the garner. This progressive theory also antagonizes that teaching of the Scriptures which connects the resurrection with the coming of Christ at the end of the world. The gospel speaks first of Christ's coming in his kingdom. . . .

He will come again "when the fulness of the Gentiles is brought in." When the tribulation is past, and when the gospel of his kingdom has been preached in all the world. He will come in the clouds with power and great glory. He will come not in his kingdom, but to deliver up the kingdom to the Father. As the heavens were opened when Jesus went up in the sight of the people, "So shall he in like manner, come again." Every eye shall see him. "Then cometh the end when he shall deliver up the kingdom unto God even the Father."

The second question in the text claims consideration. "With what body do they come?" The answer is easily given—the body that died. They will bring no other body. Every one shall have his own body. "He shall quicken (make alive) your mortal body." How shall this work be accomplished? "By the Spirit which raised Christ from the dead." The power which lifted Jesus out of death and the sepulchre "shall quicken our mortal bodies"—these physical bodies only are to be understood in such text.

It is objected that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom." What then? "Behold I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep. But we shall be changed." The living and the dead by divine power shall be changed, and fitted for the heavenly state. The adaptation of the body to the Spirit-life is with God "who is able to subdue all things unto himself." We shall be changed—our bodies shall be changed—not exchanged! The "vile body" is made like unto Christ's glorious body. O, what a mystery! The work is God's, and his own Word declares it.

The identity is not lost. It will be the same body transformed, purified from all grossness and made just like our Lord's; and yet it will be our own. Each shall have his own—it is a part of the "purchased possession." Redemption is a grand work, including the whole of our manhood, soul, body, and spirit.

Who shall come forth? "All that are in their graves." All that sleep in earth or ocean. The declaration of Jesus is explicit: "All that are in their graves (mnemeiois) shall hear his voice and shall come forth." The term grave signifies a tomb, and not the place of departed spirits! It is the same word which is rendered sepulchre, in which the body of Jesus was laid. So it means precisely the same thing in both passages.

The doctrine of the resurrection, as taught in the evangelical churches, is exceedingly precious to us when we lay away the remains of loved ones. But how is it with those who reject this doctrine? They bear their dead to the tomb and bury them out of their sight. The cold vault is dark, and not a ray of light brightens the future? This is the end: death shall hold its dominion forever! The soul, in its anguish, cries out:

"O, when shall spring visit this moldering urn?
O, when shall day dawn on the night of the grave?"

Philosophy responds, "never! never!" Not so with the believer in this glorious doctrine. Death's power shall be vanquished. The last enemy shall be conquered. Jesus has risen, and our precious ones shall come forth. We look into the grave, and remember that Christ has power over it. Our faith gives clearness to our vision, and

"On the cold cheek of death, smiles and roses are blending.
And beauty immortal, awakes from the tomb!"

THREE NEW THINGS.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Rev. 21: 1, 2.

"A new heaven."—A sky, and clouds, and atmosphere, of higher beauty and more genial temperature than those which now surround us with their loveliness—a heaven which no more robes itself in storms and blackness, nor flashes with the thunderbolts of wrath, nor casts forth plagues of hail, and fire, and judgment, nor gives lurking-places to the devil and his angels, nor is ever again disturbed with omens of evil, or commotions breeding disaster to the dwellers under them.

"And a new earth."—One which no longer smarts and smokes under the curse of sin, needing to be torn with hooks and irons in order to the bringing forth of its fruits—an earth where thorns and thistles no longer infest the ground, nor serpents hiss among the flowers, nor wild beasts, bent on destruction, hide in the forests; an earth whose sod is never cut with graves, whose soil is never moistened with tears or saturated with human blood, whose fields are never blasted by unpropitious seasons, whose inhabitants never say, "I am sick," whose ways are never marked with funeral processions or glutted with armed men on their way to war, but whose hills ever flow with salvation, and whose valleys ever resound with uninterrupted joy; an earth which glows from end to end with the blessedness of Paradise restored.

"And a new city."—A heaven-built home-place for the saints of God, decked and adorned with jewelry and glory "as a bride adorned for her husband," where the church shall rest from her long contest with ignorance and sin, and be comforted forever with the light and love of her Redeemer. John saw that city, and tells of it in terms which almost blinds us with their brightness. It is not built up from earth, but comes down out of heaven, blazing with the glory of God, and girt with radiance jasper-hued but clear as crystal. It is a "great city," fifteen hundred miles in length, and in breadth, and in height, with foundations and walls of precious jewels, gates of pearls, and streets of gold, so pure as to be like transparent glass, and needing no light of sun or moon, because illuminated with the eternal light and glory of God and of the Lamb—the true "eternal city"—the imperishable metropolis of the new heaven and the new earth.

And there, in that renovated and brightened scene of things, in that blest order when these present heavens and this present earth have passed their grand palingenesia, shall be that greater, higher, holier, final thanksgiving, of which these days of earthly praise remind us. And if in these old heavens, and this old earth, and in this earthly city, there be so much to stir our hearts and open our lips with songs of thankfulness, how shall it be when once that new creation opens up its beauties, and that golden Jerusalem has become our everlasting home?—Dr. J. A. Seiss in Restitution.

DIGNITY OF TRUE CHRISTIANS.

One of the best evidences of genuine conversion is christian obedience. The Psalmist exclaimed—"Oh, that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!" The first inquiry of Paul after his conversion was—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and years afterward we hear him saying—"I delight in the law of the Lord after the inner man."

Such obedience Christ owns and appreciates. He even puts a higher estimate on such obedient ones than on his "kindred according to the flesh"; for we are told (Matt. 8– 18–21) that on a certain occasion, when encompassed by a crowd of persons he was informed his mother and brethren were present and desired to speak with him, he replied—"My mother and brethren are those which hear the word of God, and do it."

We cannot doubt that Christ cherished ardent affection for her who bore him; for, while hanging in agony on the cross, he commended her with his expiring breath to the care of his beloved disciple John; nor have we any reason for supposing he had not a suitable regard for all his relations; and yet acknowledging and affirming he had higher affinities and relationships than those of an earthly nature, we find the relation which those who obeyed him sustained to him was even closer and nobler than that of brethren or a mother. We may accordingly learn that there is union to Christ in spirit which is more intimate and sacred than union to him in the flesh; that there is a dignity in faith and service surpassing even that of affinity and consanguinity; and that we can attain this exalted dignity by being "doers of the Word," doing the will of Christ in sincerity and truth.—Wayside.

TRUST.

O. B. MERRILL.

"Trust in him at all times."—Ps. 62: 8.

Trust is confidence, reliance. To trust God is to confide—put confidence in him. To trust his Word is to believe, credit, admit, rely and depend without doubt upon its truthfulness. If we have no confidence in God, then we are distrustful—do not trust him, confide in him, rely upon him, believe, credit, admit the genuineness or truthfulness of his Word, though we do not fully understand or comprehend it all now. If we will confide in him, he will make it plain. Let us believe God, though we cannot see him. We should honor God by trusting him. It will confound the devil and give us peace, comfort and rest. In times of trouble, and in seasons of afflictions, trust God; hold fast our confidence unto the end, and we shall receive a crown of life that fadeth not away.

Do we want wisdom? Trust the Lord and he will impart wisdom, and will upbraid us not. Do we want truth? Have confidence in Jehovah and the truth will be manifested unto us. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Do we want perfect peace? Trust God and keep our minds stayed on him, and we shall have our desires granted—"peace like a river." Are we feeble? Do we desire to be strong? "Trust ye in the Lord; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." "Happy is the man that trusteth in the Lord." When tried and tempted do not doubt God, but trust him, and we shall never be confounded. "Our fathers trusted in God, and he delivered them out of all their troubles." So he will those who trust in him now. Only believe and lean upon his arm, and all will be well. "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him," says Job.

O for a steady faith, a firm trust, a full reliance in the promises God has given! O for a scattering of all our doubts and fears! We have a Savior who saves "to the uttermost." He is "mighty to save," and can save from all sin. We believe in a practical salvation—a salvation that saves people from all that is not of Christ. Can this be so? We speak that we know, and testify of that we have seen. It will save from murmuring and complaining, from fault-finding and fretting, if things do not move as we would like to have them.

Brethren and sisters beloved, God wants us to trust him. He invites us to trust him. He loves to be trusted, and he will honor the trust we put in him. Let us trust the Lord and do good. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed." We have a good hope ere long of seeing him whom our souls love. The way is clear and the prospect bright for a home in glory with all the pure and holy—the trusting, faithful ones.

ACTIVE SUBMISSION.---No. 2.

B. MATHEWSON.

We are divinely taught to be active in prayer; but with all our importunity entire submission is requisite. We have the highest type of example furnished in this respect.

Moses, who was a type of Christ, had a most ardent and longing desire to set his feet upon that "good land" of promise, and earnestly besought the Lord to let him do so. But circumstances forbade the granting this request only in part; showing the blessed Lord grants every favor to his children consistent with the great plan of salvation. The Lord informed him he might ascend a mount of sufficient eminence to give him a view, but that he make no further request relative to going into this land to establish himself and people. How natural that he should anxiously desire to enter this land with a people he had loved sufficiently to throw himself into the breach and plead for them, when the divine vengeance threatened their entire extermination. Ps. 106: 23.

The Lord only knows how much he suffered, both in body and mind, during these forty years, when the contumacy and rebellion of the people were such that they were ready to stone him. But now they were just ready to enter the promised land, and Moses plead with God that he might lead them in; but as soon as he received the assurance of the divine will, what sweet submission is manifested in this great but meek man, chosen by God as his legislator for his people. Not a murmur, not a regret even, is expressed; proving his perfect confidence in God, and that his decision was the best, whether short-sighted mortals could see it or not. Actively zealous in pleading with God, until the matter was made clear, and then, like Him of whom he was the prototype, he sweetly acquiesces in the sentiment, "Not my will, but Thine be done."

But his affectionate interest for the people is not diminished, though he may not lead them in; and he importunes God to designate the man who shall fill his place. Like the Good Shepherd he cares for the sheep. His bowels yearn with tenderness toward the people over whom God had made him an overseer. God answered this prayer, and named a man of faith and ability who should be ordained to lead his flock and establish them in the land flowing with milk and honey.

Again, David fasted and prayed for the life of his son; but after all this agonizing prayer, the child died; which event decided to David the will of God, and he immediately submits without questioning the divine right to do as seemeth good unto him. Although the Lord could not consistently grant this request, he by no means upbraids David for making it, and manifesting the most poignant grief on the occasion. David had been warned of this calamitous event by the prophet Nathan; but it appears that he, with all the Old Testament writers generally, understood God's promises and threatenings to be conditional, though not expressed on every occasion; therefore he had recourse to fasting, humiliation and prayer; "For," said he, "who can tell whether God will be gracious unto me?" 2 Sam. ch. 12. At least, such resort was safe, and no doubt added greatly to his own consolation, that he had done all that could be done by mortal. But when God saw fit to decide against his desire, cheerful submission seems written upon his every act, not only in a proper attention to his business, but in administering solace to other torn and bleeding hearts; the latter being a work which emphatically demonstrates the declaration—"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth." While trying to bind up other wounded hearts, yourself will experience the healing balm.

THE GENERAL JUDGMENT.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

There is a deep and settled conviction in the minds of men that there is a great day of judgment coming at some time in the future. The end of the present age is by many believed to be the time of that great day, and thousands profess to believe that we are now very near that point—the end of time.

Without entering into argument or discussion here on the subject of definite time, I wish to present a few thoughts in regard to the fact or belief in the event—the judgment. That a day is appointed and established for this purpose, the Scriptures of truth plainly teach. If we were left to conjecture in regard to the individuals to be judged, we might suppose that a part of the human family would be left undisturbed in death. But when the Son of man comes in his glory, before him shall be gathered all nations. Also we read that the dead "small and great" shall stand before God.

Let us quote in full here, three verses from the 20th of Revelation: "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heavens fled away, and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which was the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to his works."

Here we learn that all the dead are to stand there, the small as well as the great; all that are found written in the book of life, and all that are not written there. And we are taught that the time of this great and general judgment is "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him." We find abundant Scriptural proof of the fact, but it is also in harmony with reason and analogy, and we venture a few words in this direction.

It is common in schools of almost all grades, to have a general examination at the close. And why should there not be an exhibition of the character of all men, at the close of their term of probation? We have seen, in these our days, great exhibitions of the industry of nations, vast outlays of capital being expended for this purpose. The great Crystal Palace is a display of the skill of man, and the works or machinery etc. found therein serve the same purpose. We might naturally suppose that the great Ruler of the universe would display his glory in "that day" on a scale of grandeur in proportion to his wisdom and power. And we are confirmed in this view by the Word and the Spirit of God.

"FEAR GOD."

M. A. NICHOLAS.

The wise man tells us to "fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." Now there are different kinds of fear, and they are not (I think) all pleasing to God. There is the fear that the poor subject feels when a tyrant reigns on the throne, and to whom he must pay all outward honor and respect or forfeit his life. There is the fear that the slave feels as he toils and bleeds under the lash of his hated master. There is the fear that the guilty sinner feels when his conscience tells him that all his sins must rise up before him in the presence of a just and mighty God at the judgment. Shall we exercise such fears as these before the God of the faithful? Will God be pleased or glorified by such fear?

Many a man or woman has trembled at the thought of meeting God face to face, but have still traveled on to destruction. Many a Felix has trembled before the faithful preaching of a Paul, and yet would not obey the voice of God. God does not love such fear; it is not pleasing in his sight. He does not intend to make slaves of his children, but he has opened a way whereby we may all be free.

How then shall we fear God? We should exercise the fear toward God which a loving and dutiful child feels for a kind and loving parent. We should have the fear that love always prompts—a fear of disobeying, a fear of causing sorrow, a fear of doing something to estrange us from God.

How often have we had earthly friends whom we sincerely loved and respected; how fearful and cautious have we been lest we should, in thoughtlessness, say or do something to wound them. How careful and to do that which we thought would add to their happiness. Was it a slavish fear that prompted us? I think not. It was a loving fear; and as we have done the loving deeds it prompted, we have felt our hearts all aglow with pleasant emotions that a slavish fear could never produce. So let us walk softly before God, fearing him and doing his commandments lovingly, patiently, willingly, satisfied that he should rule the universe and govern the creatures that he has made. Let us be truly thankful that we have so wise, so noble, so good a Sovereign; and with all reverence, love, and godly fear, let us try to do his will. In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence; and his children shall have a place of refuge.

"THE WRATH OF GOD ABIDETH ON HIM."—John 3: 36.

B. KNEPPER.

Upon the question: What does the wrath do? men would answer: It consigns them to endless life in torment. But the Bible alone can give us true information of the matter.

The Bible teaches us that the Lord's enemies shall be found out, and that he will "make them as a fiery oven in the time of his anger; for the Lord shall swallow them up in his wrath, and the fire shall devour them." Ps. 11: 8, 9. Here is swallowing up, and devouring fire named, as caused by God's wrath; something very different from endless life in misery. In Ezek. 21: 29, the Lord speaks about the wicked, and of a day coming when their iniquity has an end. Then verse 31 says—"And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee; I will blow against thee in the fire of my wrath. . . . . Thou shalt be no more remembered, for I the Lord have spoken it."

Again, the Lord declares that he sought for means to save the wicked from destruction, but found none; and now he declares the final doom of them, saying—"I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath." Ezek. 22: 30, 31.

In the above passages of Scripture the wrath of God (1) will swallow up the wicked; (2) by fire will devour them; (3) will make an end of them, no more to be remembered; (4) will make them fuel for the fire; (5) consume them. Here, then, is no eternal life in torment meant by the wrath of God abiding upon the unbeliever.

Paul speaks about "vessels of wrath" and "vessels of mercy"; and says the "vessels of wrath" are "fitted for destruction"; but the "vessels of mercy" are "prepared unto glory." Rom. 9: 21, 23. From this destruction, for which the unbelievers, as "vessels of destruction," are fitted, there is no redemption; hence it is said—"The wrath of God abideth on him" that believeth not the Son. In the seven last (none afterwards) plagues, the wrath of God is filled up. Rev. 15: 1.

SUCCESS IN LIFE.

E. A. BOYNTON.

I suppose that most people have, and every one ought to have, some great end in view; some important object for which he lives and labors; for the accomplishment of which everything else is made to bend. Now the question is, What is that important object at which we should all aim our endeavors? What is there in all the world which satisfies the desires and aspirations of those who have it, making him contented and happy; while those who have it not, however much they may possess besides, are still dissatisfied and uneasy? In other words, what is that the possession of which makes life a success, and without which it must certainly be a failure? This is a very important question, and one which ought to be settled by every individual in the morning of life. It is not only possible but perfectly easy for every one to decide this great question correctly very early in life.

I propose to show that there is something which will invariably make the life of any one a perfect success, and that it comes within the reach of all. Judging from the course pursued by most men, one would naturally suppose that the riches and honors of earth, with its luxuries and pleasures, made up the sum of all that is worth living for. But is this really the case? Do we find that those who live in ease and luxury, surrounded by everything that wealth can buy, are happy and contented with their lot? By no means. The rich enjoy life no better than the poor. Some rich people are happy, while some are very unhappy; and so it is with the poor. Do they who by talent, skill and perseverance, succeed in reaching the heights of earthly fame and power, find in these things the object of their desires? Most assuredly they do not. Do those who seek for happiness amid the exciting scenes of earth's giddy pleasures; who go with the young and gay to places of music and dancing, feasting and merriment,—do they find that for which they seek? Nay; I tell you they do not. None of these things can satisfy. They cannot bring that rich abiding joy and comfort for which every soul is hungering. One thing alone can do it.

The All-wise Being who created us knows just what we need to make us happy; and he has not left us in ignorance concerning the matter. He has given us a Book containing ample instructions for each and every one. If we are careful to follow the course marked out in that Book, we shall soon find that sweet peace and solid enjoyment which we so earnestly desire. True, we may be denied many of those things which we naturally long for, and perhaps we may sometimes be tempted to feel dissatisfied when we see our friends rising to positions of honor and distinction, while we are plodding along in the lower walks of life. It may seem hard to see others favored with skill and genius, by which they win the praise and admiration of those with whom they associate; while we, unable to excel in anything, have to pursue the most ordinary occupations, and so toil on through life unnoticed. But we must remember that God knows best. And one thing we should always bear in mind, that although there may be many things which we cannot do, we can do right and please God just as well as any body in the world. And this is the great work of life after all; for the noble and the gifted, as well as for the lowly.

If God has seen fit to cast our lot in an humble sphere, let us perform the work which he has given us to do "heartily, as unto the Lord," caring more for his approving smile than for the praise of men. He has said—"Them that honor me, I will honor." If we do not receive much of it in this life, we shall be sure to get it in the life to come. The shortest way to wealth and honor is not the surest way. In fact, neither riches, fame nor pleasure will afford us enough satisfaction to pay for the trouble of getting, if we do not obtain them in the appointed way. The good Book says—"Pride goeth before destruction"; and, "Before honor is humility"; and again—"Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." "Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly; but the proud he knoweth afar off."

If any man will make it the object of his life to know and do the will of God in all things, that man's life will be a success; but he who attempts to succeed in any other way will find his life a failure. Whoever is engaged in the service of God pursues a high and noble calling. Let him be careful, then, to do his work well, no matter how humble it may be, and he will have the approval of his God, his conscience, and of all good people here, and a glorious reward hereafter.

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." "Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

St. Johns, Mich.

"DELIVER US FROM EVIL."

E. H. SHERMAN.

There never was a time when this petition in our Lord's prayer needed more frequently to be offered up to God in faith than now. We are nearing the end of this dispensation, and Satan has "come down in great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time to work." Legions of evil spirits are hovering over the earth, aiding Satan in his work of destruction. From the evil one, evil spirits, evil men, an evil heart of unbelief, evil thoughts, evil speaking, evil actions, and an evil world, we need constantly to pray for deliverance.

Unbelief is the fountain from which all other sins flow; a tree whose fruit has poisoned the whole human family; and we need specially to guard against it. When Satan came to our first parents in Eden, he deceived them and prevailed on them to believe a lie. They doubted the truth of what God had told them. The seed of unbelief was then planted, and, being nourished by the old Serpent, it grew rapidly into a great tree, whose branches to-day extend all over the world, and bear a thousand kinds of fruit, and it yields its fruit every moment. The fruit being poisonous, death in every case ensues unless a special remedy is applied quickly, which is the blood of Christ. That alone can cleanse from sin. O that God's people might realize the heinous and evil tendency of unbelief! It is written—"Without faith it is impossible to please God"; and again—"Ye cannot serve God and mammon." And yet there are many who are vainly striving to serve both, and who think that in some way they shall go to heaven at last.

How Satan is blinding men in these last days! May the slumbering be aroused and trim their lamps and get a good supply of oil before it is too late, is my prayer.

THE END OF THIS WORLD.
2 Pet. 3: 3-14.

Luther once said, "The ways of God are like a Hebrew book, which can only be read from the end backwards." His meaning was that we cannot rightly understand this present world without first taking in the final outcome. It is only the conclusion that clears up the darkness and uncertainty which prevail till then. And if we would not hopelessly err in our whole philosophy of things, we must take particular account of the end, and settle ourselves firmly in what God has revealed concerning the grand finale; for the doctrine of the last things in the keystone is the arch of the Christian system, without which the whole fabric must tumble to pieces.

Reminders of that approaching end are again plentiful about us. On all sides there are symptoms and pre-intimations of it. Both the church and the civil years are drawing to a close. The fallen and withered leaves, and the scattered snowflakes gathered upon them, the shutting down of our windows, and the lighting up of our hearth-fires, the moan of the wind around our dwellings, and the frosty pendants that weep by the fountains, tell how rapidly the year is verging to the dead of winter. And all our church lessons for the season point forward to the sounding of the last trump, and the end of the world itself.

To many these are not welcome things. But what avails the shutting of our ears to them, if still the end must come, and every day, and hour, and heart-beat, is bringing us nearer and nearer to it? Rather let us give ear that we may hear, and open our eyes that we may see what Almighty God hath purposed, and will most surely bring to pass.—Signs of the Times.

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 7, 1875.

TAKE NOTICE.

All subscriptions for the "CRISIS," issued from this time forward, are at the rate of $2.25 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE FREE TO ALL within the United States, the Canadas, and the British Provinces.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

THOSE who send articles for the "CRISIS," should direct them to the EDITORS OF WORLD'S CRISIS," Boston, Mass.

PLEASE READ, REMEMBER, AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

The brethren, sisters, friends—one and all—whoever may write to this office, sending articles for insertion in the Crisis, or subscriptions for the same, notices, appointments, reports, or orders for papers, books, tracts, or anything of the kind, will confer a favor and do the right way by directing their letters in either one of the following ways:—

POSTAGE.

There has been some misunderstanding among our subscribers about the additional twenty-five cents added to the subscription price of the Crisis, connected with the additional expense to the Office of publishing the paper, on account of paying pre-postage. We will state the case. The price of the paper was formerly $2.50, and some of the brethren thought that if it was reduced to two dollars a year, an additional number of subscribers might be obtained sufficient to make up the deficiency in the funds that might result from the reductiou. The experiment proved that two dollars did not quite meet the expenses, and the Board were discussing the question of increasing the price to two dollars and twenty-five cents, when Congress passed the pre-postage act, which caused the Board to immediately add the twenty-five cents. Not that it supposed the pre-postage would be just a quarter as some suppose, but that it would cost at least two dollars and a quarter for each paying subscriber to pay expenses.

PERSONAL EFFORTS.

Those who have learned to do personal work for Jesus, by conversation with the unconverted, need not be informed of the blessed results. If every one to whom they speak turns a deaf ear, still they will reap a rich benefit themselves. Jesus calls for laborers. Shall he call in vain? Men are crowding the broad way to destfuction, while the mass of professors are making scarcely any effort to stop them in their wild career. Fathers and mothers allow their children to pass along heedlessly, without a single word of warning. The subject of christianity is treated as a matter of no consequence, while the fashions and follies of life receive their special attention, and no effort is spared to make their children respectable and attractive among the enemies of Christ.

One reason why there is so little personal effort to save people, is because professors themselves are in bondage. But one of the best ways to obtain religious freedom is to try to help another one out of Satan's prison. Lift and be lifted. Help and be helped. Lend a helping hand to the weak, and you will find your own strength increased. Said Jesus: "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye meet withal, it shall be measured to you again." Luke 6: 38. Said Paul: "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." 2 Cor. 9: 6. But few realize how much good they might do by personal conversation with the unconverted and backslidden; neither are they aware of the rich blessings that will come upon themselves, when they are faithful to others. We well know the cross felt when about to commence talking with the unconverted; but when the first word is spoken, the cross will have disappeared. The cross lies in dreading, not in doing. It is only Satan's scarecrow to keep us from doing anything to interfere with his business. When we submit wholly to Christ, he gives great boldness to enter the ranks of Satan's hosts, and hold up a crucified and risen Savior, as the special friend of sinners. When we have on the whole armor of God, we need not fear to meet any of the enemies of the cross.

Preaching has its place. It is like the heavy cannon on the battle field; but an army would be weak without the soldiers with their muskets and rifles; so a church is weak that does its work mainly through its minister. The working lay members are to the church what the men with the muskets and rifles are to the army. They are indispensable, in order to secure success. The personal talk by lay members, following the sermon, harrows in the seed sown by the preacher, and may prevent Satan from taking it out of the heart. One great need at the present time is more work on the part of lay members. They need it for their own benefit; and it is needed to reach the unconverted. Many a hardened sinner has been led to Jesus by a few words from some little christian child. The more we try to win souls to Christ, the better we get along ourselves. After we have talked with an individual, we have more faith to pray for them. Will not the reader try to lead some one to Jesus this day? Work for him. Crucify self, and great peace will follow.

DARK HOURS COMING.

The late Allocution of the Pope shows that he is feeling quite sad about the state of things connected with his system of religion. He says these are "sad times."

"But the times are opposed to our intention. The oppression which we suffer is such that we have not even the freedom of bewailing the afflictions of the church. No wonder that those differing from the church by hereditary errors hate the church and strive to attain their ends.

The children of the faith have become enemies of the church, and plot its destruction, grieving our hearts. Hence have come the deplorable calamities to the liberties, and possessions, and ministers of the church which we witness, powerless to resist."

This looks like the fulfilling of the prophecy in the seventeenth chapter of Revelation, that relates to the Catholic church just before the coming of Christ. He says: "The children of the faith have become enemies of the church, and plot its destruction." This is in complete harmony with Rev. 17: 16, which says of the "ten horns" on the last head of the scarlet-colored beast, that carried the woman, or supported the church at Rome,—"These shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire, for God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will. This prophecy shows that the last development of Roman power will be turned against what it formerly protected; that is, "the children of the faith," that for centuries sustained the church at Rome, will hate it, "and plot its destruuction." This is just what the Italians are now doing, and will, no doubt, be assisted by others.

The Pope is feeling his weakness, but is looking earnestly for help from some quarter. The final struggle seems to be near at hand. Let every follower of Christ be ready continually to welcome the coming of the Son of man. The christian's is truly a "blessed hope." It is becoming brighter and brighter, as we approach the hour of deliverance.

A POOR TIME TO SLEEP.

It is a poor time to sleep when the thief is creeping to your doors, when the smothered fires are secretly charring the timbers of your house, or when the heartless assassin approaches with deadly steel in hand. It is a poor time for the picket sentinel to sleep when a wily foe is stealing his march across the line to attack a slumbering army. It is a poor time for a mother to sleep when her darling child is exposed to destruction by approaching wild beasts, or is struggling fearfully with some threatening disease. It is a poor place to sleep in the crater of a burning mountain when it is trembling and vibrating with its pent-up fires.

So it is with the church of Christ to-day. The tramp of the approaching thief may be heard more and more distinctly every week, by all who are truly watching. Armageddon's clarion is heard more distinctly every day. Statesmen express themselves more confidently that an hour of blood is at hand. Servants of God, who have long slumbered upon this grand subject of Christ's speedy advent, and pleasantly dreamed of a good time coming, are awaking to impending doom.

O that all might see and fully arouse to a sense of the certainty that the day of the Lord is at hand. The thunders of national conflicts in Europe are sounding more ominously in every telegram the lightnings bring us. One of our best posted government officials tells us that this is probably the year in which a terrible conflict of arms will commence in the Old World. The Boston Journal gives his testimony thus:—

"IS THERE A EUROPEAN WAR IMPENDING?

The statement in our Washington despatches respecting the embargo placed by the North German Government upon the exportation of horses from that empire, as well as concerning the increased manufacture of arms by both the French and the German Governments, naturally excites the misgivings everywhere which are said to be felt in diplomatic circles in regard to the long continuance of peace in Europe. The best observers abroad have, indeed, been expressing such forebodings for some time.

A prominent representative of the United States in one of the European capitals says in a private letter home: 'If you come over here in the present year, I think you will have a chance to see some fighting. Unless I am much mistaken there will be a war on a grand scale before the end of 1875.' The gentleman to whom the letter was written, and who returned from an extended European tour about six months ago, concurs in the same conclusion. Both appear to be influenced mainly by the immense military preparations which are everywhere going on throughout the Continent, and which are so costly and oppressive as to make the sort of peace now prevailing the natural provocative of war, to which many even would turn as a relief.

What Germany and France are doing in this matter of armament has become tolerably well known, but we are constantly getting more, and more surprising information, as in this telegraphed item about the attempted purchase of ten thousand horses by the latter power, and the prohibition of their exportation by Germany. The two nations, in fact, are running a race of preparation for war, with this difference, that Germany had the start and means to keep it. She has an army on a war footing of 1,273,346 men, 31,195 officers, 281,542 horses, and 2700 guns. The French force at present is in a transition state, owing to the new military law, which provides for a total of 1,698,000 men and 36,000 officers. Germany spent last year eighty-seven millions of dollars on her army and navy, this sum being raised in the ordinary way, without reckoning eighty millions of dollars expended out of the proceeds of the French indemnity on fortresses and military equipments, or twenty-three millions used in strengthening the fleet, or twenty-eight millions held as ready money for the military strong box. It is very manifest that, with such interests involved, Germany has only to judge a war to be impending, to strike in just whenever she shall think it to be for her advantage. She will look at the whole situation from the strategic point of view, and neither public opinion nor the welfare of Europe will be likely to stand in her way, except so far as they may bear upon her military interests.

It is rather curious that even those who are most firmly convinced of the dangers of a general European war have no distinct idea of the issues which may precipitate it, or of the spot where it may break out. They imply rather that the condition of the Continent is what the insurance men would call 'extra hazardous,' so that a spark of collision anywhere would spread till all, or most of the great Powers, should be involved. The Eastern question, the religious difficulties in Germany, or chance disturbances elsewhere, may originate the trouble, but the result would be the same. We trust that the alarmists are mistaken, but the signs are by no means assuring."

We feel perfectly confident that, if such a war commences as these statesmen anticipate, Christ will make his second advent in connection with it, for the preparations being made for a coming war we feel assured agree perfectly with all the sacred predictions given of the preparatory events of the last battle. Brethren in Christ, sleep not a moment! Be sure and know that you are enjoying the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. Be not over excited and fanatical, but drink deep at the fountain of Divinity. Be fully separated from this world, and be gloriously wedded to the world to come.

A CATHOLIC PRIEST ON THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Rev. Father Walker, an Irish Jesuit Priest, recently from the South, is Pastor of St. Lawrence Catholic Church, in Eighty-fourth street. In announcing on last Sabbath morning that next Sundays collection would be for the benefit of the parochial schools, he took occasion to denounce the public school system in the most bitter manner. "Woe be to the parents," shouted he in the manner of one hurling anathemas, "woe be to the parents who send their children to these public schools! Woe be to those who secretly favor them in their hearts! I would not like to be in their places on the day of judgment. The public schools are the nurseries of vice. They are godless schools, and they who send their children to them cannot expect the mercy of God. They ought not to expect the sacraments of the church in their dying moments. I hope you and I will live to see the day when it will be understood that parents who commit this great sin will be refused the sacraments of the church. 'What! let them die without the rites of the church?' you will ask. Yes, I say so. I would as soon administer the sacraments to a dog as to such Catholics. Did not Jesus Christ suffer one of his apostles to die without the rites of the church in despair? So would I let these wretched Catholics perish. Catholics! They are no Catholics. They are Catholics of the pot-house politician stripe—men who deceive and betray the poor, ignorant, innocent Irish emigrants when they arrive in this country; men who make their poor countrymen, when they are only a few months in this country, perjure themselves to become citizens; men who have no faith or charity in their hearts.

You may say, 'Ah, but I know good men and women, good priests and bishops, good fathers and mothers, who were brought up in the public schools.' True, but they are the rare exceptions, one in a thousand or ten thousand. You will say also, 'But some of the teachers are Catholics.' What of it? What do they know about the vice all around them, the contamination and villainy? They don't know it; they never see it. But we priests know it. Go look at the water closets in some of your public schools and see the vile scribblings and markings on the wall, and you will realize the vice and infamy that prevail at these nurseries of crime.

I tell you, Catholics, you do not realize the dangers to your children. The great effort of the enemy of God's holy church in these days is to get control of the education of the youth in the hope of thus counteracting the blessed influence of the priests of God. The enemy has abandoned every other effort. Look to it, then, that you fall not a victim to his insidious arts."

The preacher then alluded to the wonderful growth of the church, and the iniquity of taxing Catholics for the support of schools they did not want and could not send their children to. He said there were 600.000 Catholics in this diocese alone, 400.000 more in Brooklyn diocese, and hundreds of thousands more in Albany, Buffalo, and Ogdensburg. If all these banded themselves together valiantly to demand their rights, think you they could fail? No; they could not. They would soon show their strength and triumph like their fellow-Catholics in Ohio."—N. Y. Times.

This priest evidently expresses the sentiment of the ruling class of the Catholic Church to-day. It is surprising that, while the Jesuits are boldly seizing the reins of government at all of our large, literary, commercial, and political centres, and are openly denouncing everything that has been reckoned as progressive for the last hundred years in all the departments of church and State, those who have boasted of this advancement should now tamely fold their hands and be carried back to their superstitious vagaries of the dark ages, yielding the liberty of conscience, pulpit and press without remonstrance, or making any particular effort to withstand the tide now sweeping away all the barriers which vast sacrifices of blood and treasure has raised against the encroachments of this terrible abomination.

Protestant ministers have taken the opiate of peace and safety, having taught the people so confidently that Catholicism and all other false religions have spent their day, and that the time has come, predetermined by God, for the conversion of the world; therefore they cannot warn the people of approaching danger without changing their theology, which makes them like "dumb dogs; they cannot bark; talking in their sleep." "Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough; and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter. Come ye, say they, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant."

The wily priests are fatally coiling the snare around the unfaithful ministers who are living on the fat of the land, rejoicing in the delusive hope that "to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant." Men, whose great anxieties are to secure the best places and largest salaries,—to be esteemed leaders, and called Rabbi, are unworthy the watchman's trust at such a time as this.

Satan, with all the fallen angels, wicked spirits and powers of darkness, are mightily aroused, sweeping into line of fearful contest all classes of unsanctified men, who are fired with uncontrollable zeal to gratify long pent-up revenge and satanic ambition for worldly riches, power and glory. A pure gospel and church, with everything that is sacred and ennobling to humanity, of holy devotion and human liberty, is threatened to be carried away as with a flood from the bottomless pit. The beast and false prophet are uncovering their masked batteries, while Atheism and Pantheism, with all the various shades of modern blasphemy, are raising up their hideous forms, protesting against Jehovah's purpose of immediately vindicating his supreme government over this world by executing his changeless sentence of judgment upon all rebels; thus ending rebellion and all evil in his limitless dominions.

As the dividing line is about to fall which shall eternally separate Christ's friends from his enemies, the great powers of the two opposing worlds are actively operating to draw as many as possible to take firm positions on the right or left. Flattery and compulsion are used by the satanic agents; holding up glowing pictures of worldly prosperity, wealth, honor, high social caste, and everlasting felicity; on the other hand, ignominy, shame, and eternal tortures are threatened. But God's servants rely first and last upon Bible truth, and gospel arguments, accompanied by the Holy Spirit. If these fail to bring men on to the right, then their efforts are entirely abortive. Sensationalism, whether by Catholics, Protestants, or any other class, only proselytes; never saves. If the Word of God does not move a man, he is going to the left, and not to the right.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Lord is doing great things in the union meetings in San Francisco. At this date (March 23d) over eleven hundred converts to Christ are reported. Strong men are bowing to Jesus. Drunkards are giving up the intoxicating bowls, and becoming christians. Harlots are crying for mercy, and leaving their haunts of vice. They are sending requests to have holy men and women come and pray with them, and prayer meetings are held in their rooms in the heart of wickedness. Open air meetings are held daily in various parts of the city. Large audiences attend, and listen with respectful attention. We have spoken several times in these meetings. The great revival is the leading topic for conversation in the city. The people are astonished at what they see and hear. Union Hall, which holds about three thousand, is crowded night after night, and probably three fourths remain to the inquiry meeting to converse about the way to be saved through Christ. Some nights, hundreds and thousands are obliged to go away for want of room. The interest is daily increasing.

Our Brn. and Srs. who are looking for the coming Christ are working nobly in these meetings, and are being richly blest in their faithful efforts to lead the people to accept Jesus as their great Savior. A wide door is open for christian work. The like has not been seen before on the Pacific coast. Yet there are some professors, like the spies sent out by Moses, who scatter evil reports, and seem to think no good can be done by those who have an imperfect theology. They have yet to learn that a person may have a clean heart, before he understands all the truth. We have great reason to thank the Lord that most of our Brn. and Srs. in San Francisco, and other places in California, are so free from sectarianism, and are ready to work any where for Jesus. The Lord is calling his people together in christian love, and to do all in their power by a united, earnest effort to save some more, if possible, before the sounding of the judgment trumpet. These union meetings have great power to move skeptics, and those who have turned away from the churches, because of the sectarian spirit which they have seen manifested. They say, this union spirit looks like christianity; but when they were divided into so many parties and creeds, we lost confidence in the whole, and concluded to let them alone.

Jesus felt the importance of christian union when he prayed: "That they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, that the WORLD may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17: 21. He knew that if his disciples became sectarian in spirit, and divided up into parties, it would cause the worldly people to lose confidence in christianity, and become skeptical. Christians in all denominations are beginning to learn, at this late hour, the sad results that have arisen from divisions caused by a difference in theology, when, at the same time, they admitted each other to be christians in character.

We are persuaded the time has come to make special efforts to remove sectarian walls, and to get all christians in every place to hold union meetings for the salvation of sinners, and the sanctification of believers. Union prayer meetings, and union mass meetings should be held in every town, village and city, and extra efforts made to save men and women from approaching destruction, and to arouse all cold-hearted professors from their perilous situation.

When we work with christians whose theological views may differ from our own, we make no compromise of the truth we may have above them, nor do we thus give any sanction to their errors. If a horse falls through a bridge, and christians and infidels unite to get him out of his perilous condition, there is no compromise of sentiments by either class, but simply a unison of their strength to help the poor horse out of his difficulty. So when christians in the various evangelical denominations unite their efforts to save sinners, they are not called on to sacrifice a single truth, but to unite in lifting the sinner out of his horrible pit of sin, and showing him the way to Christ.

Dear Brn. and Srs., let us enter into this work with renewed zeal. The Lord will give power, if we will use it to his glory. Pull off the sectarian gloves, and grasp the hand of every one who will labor with you in the blessed work of leading sinners to the Lamb of God. Our working days will soon be ended; let them be so spent, that Jesus will say "Well done, good and faithful servant." Let no opportunity for doing good pass unimproved.

SPIRITS EXPOSED.

Spiritualism is receiving some pretty heavy blows at the present time. The trickery practiced in dark circles is being exposed so fully, that candid people are satisfied. The following, from the Boston Globe, is a sample:

"Mr. J. T. Bates gave a performance at Beethoven Hall, before a fair-sized audience, in which he reproduced the ordinary phenomena exhibited by well-known spiritual mediums. Mr. Bates does all his tricks except one in the light, and by purely natural agencies. He offers five hundred dollars to any medium producing a manifestation which he cannot duplicate after seeing it done three times. His performance of last evening was truly marvelous, in many instances much more so than those of professed mediums. His first trick was that of turning water into wine, after which a committee of five was selected by the audience and stepped upon the stage to investigate the cabinet manifestations. This committee was composed of both skeptics and avowed Spiritualists, including Mr. Hersey, a well known Spiritualist, and a clergyman from Philadelphia who had assisted at the famous materialization seances of "Katie King."

We are glad to learn that the veil is being removed from the faces of these tricksters, who have been deceiving the people for money. In various places it is being clearly demonstrated that the dark circle performances of the Eddy Bros., Davenport Bros., Fay Bros., and a host of others, are only the result of deceptive tricks. This point may be considered as settled beyond further controversy.

THE CATHOLIC JUBILEE.

The Jubilee recently proclaimed by the Pope is now in full force in San Francisco, and the whole Catholic world. It is to last during the year. Its object appears to be to arouse the Catholics to greater activity in spreading their religion, and to stimulate them to do all in their power to re-establish the temporal power of the Pope, when the time arrives to strike the decisive blow. Their meetings in San Francisco are crowded and much enthusiasm is manifested. They exhibit a zeal that puts Protestants completely in the back-ground. No effort is spared to secure success. They are ever on the watch to obtain some advantageous position, or to put blocks in the way of every thing that does not harmonize with their principles. During this Jubilee year they expect to make much progress.

HEALDSBURG.

Last evening (Monday March 22nd) we commenced a series of meetings in the city of Healdsburg, California. We are holding them in the Presbyterian church. Bro. McLeod, the pastor, is a sincere, true man, who is anxious to have sinners brought to Christ. We had a meeting to-day at 2 P. M. One young man started in the service of Christ, others requested prayers, and tears flowed freely. At half-past six this evening, we are to have an open air meeting at the Plaza. Handbills are being printed, which it is purposed to carry to every house within twenty-four hours. This has been a day of fasting and prayer, that the Lord will display his power in a marked manner in this city during the week. We never felt more in earnest to lead sinners to Christ than at the present time.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.—In another column will be found a well-written article on the resurrection of the dead from Bishop Merril, taken from the "California Christian Advocate." We are rejoiced to find strong men speaking so much in harmony with the Scripture, on this important subject.

THE MESSAGE.

This world is doomed to destruction! All true prophets will ring out in clarion tones the coming judgment. All true prophets preach dispensational truth, and against the sins of the day in which they live. Noah preached it to a guilty world. Nathan preached it to the royal sinner—David. John the Baptist preached it to a cruel and licentious Herod. Peter preached it, taking up the refrain of Noah in words of fire (2 Pet. 3: 7)—"But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Jonah was charged to cry against the Ninevites; but he concealed the message and fled from his duty. The sailors had a poor opinion of Jonah. They say, "Why hast thou done this?" If christians do wrong, they will hear of it from those having other gods. The only alternative is to throw overboard such preachers. They are placing their fellows in imminent peril. Cast them into the sea and let God teach them.—Messiah's Herald.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM BRO. P. G. BOWMAN.

Dear Brethren:—Last Saturday I went by special invitation to Maysville, in Sumter Co., a little town about mid-way between Cartersville and Sumter Court House, lying directly on the line of the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta R. R. I preached three times on Sunday—morning and afternoon in the depot, and at night in a large empty store-house. The attendance was very full. I carried all the tracts I had on hand; they went after preaching, like snow before the sun.

A remarkable feature in the services was, the large attendance of the colored people. There must have been a hundred present morning, afternoon and night. All the whites present were astonished at their number; saying they had seen nothing like it since freedom. Having preachers of their own, they are very seldom seen at a white man's preaching. They were as eager for the tracts as any one else; and all through the day they were in groups discussing our views of the Bible. Numbers of the more intelligent of them came out publicly in defense of our views, throughout, as far as they could understand them. I think it more than likely there will be quite a stir among them before long.

It was my first visit to Maysville, and I was astonished to find so little opposition. I put to vote my going there again the fourth Sunday in next month, and every man and woman, white and colored, voted in the affirmative. The principal merchant of the place (with whom I stayed) said he would give us an eligible lot and $125 to build a house of worship on. So you see it was a pretty good day's work.

Before I get back again the clergy in the neighborhood will have heard of my visit and its effects, and perhaps see some of the tracts I scattered, and then the howl will commence,—"No hell," "Universalists," "Materialists," "Infidelity," etc., etc.,—all to deter the dear people from coming out; but the people will be there, and, God willing, I shall be there, if there are as many men and devils to oppose as there are spikes in the railroad.

On Monday morning, before I left, an intelligent Presbyterian lady sent for me. I found her a complete convert. She said after hearing me preach that our views were so different from what she had heard of us, that she was utterly amazed. She said she saw now plainly that the only reason why the people believed in the immortality of the race and the eternal existence of sin and suffering was the teachings of the pulpit and the influence of the clergy. She said—to persist in such a belief against the plain declarations of God's holy Word, seems like sinning against the Holy Ghost. I think hereafter this good lady will, by the help of God, vindicate his character and government from the foulest slander that was ever heaped upon any administration, human or divine.

Blessed be the Lord! he is raising up men and women here and there and everywhere, in these last days of this cursed Gentile domination, to proclaim the end of the conflict of ages, and the universal and everlasting establishment of immortality and eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen. We want more men at the South. There is evidently too much inequality in the distribution of our efficient men. Some States have hundreds, and others not one. Dear brethren, these things ought not so to be.

"The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." "The Judge standeth at the door." Yet a little while and he will come and will not tarry. Then probation closes forever, and hell-fire or eternal life fixes the destiny of the human race. O my brother preachers, do we believe it? Then scatter! O scatter! bid farewell to friends and kindred, wives and children, and let many miles and States separate you one from the other; and as you go, tell the people Jesus is coming—coming soon. Beg them with tears in your eyes to prepare to meet their God. And O, you lay brethren, will you not show the consistency of your faith by getting together and giving your means freely to keep some preachers in the distant fields to prepare the way of the Lord? And then I want more tracts. Who will send the funds to Bro. Adams, our Agent, and order him to send tracts to Bro. Bowman's mission? God bless you all, my dear brethren. Pray for me and mine. Yours in the blessed hope.

Lydia, S. C., March 25th, 1875.

HOLINESS is no blazing comet, amazing nations with a transient glory; it is a fixed star, which, with still, calm radiance, shines on through the darkness of a corrupt age. It is not holiness at all if it be occasional zeal and sensational piety.—Spurgeon.

Correspondence

From Bro. S. P. Howland.

Dear Editors:—Allow me to thank you for the tracts you sent me for distribution. I am giving them to those who will read them, and I trust they are doing some good. May God aid you in the noble cause in which you have long since enlisted.

Brethren and sisters, let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh. Soon will our blessed Redeemer stand upon the earth, to abolish sin and death. Prophecies teach it, and signs indicate it. Never before has the christian's prospect been brighter, and the worldling's darker. Let our lamps be trimmed and burning, ready to meet the Bridegroom. Let us gird on the whole armor, and fight valiantly for Jesus. The world is full of crime and wickedness. Those who advocate the truth are persecuted and scoffed at, but what is that to be compared with the crown that awaits us. It is not on "flowery beds of ease," but through "much tribulation" that we enter upon our reward.

What a dark and dreary road would be before us if it was not for the promise of a soon-coming King to subdue sin and death, and rule in righteousness. Read the political papers; they are full of death and crime on every hand. They all predict that there is a great political change to take place soon, and that "Europe is soon to become one vast battle-field." O, let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and work for Jesus. The race is almost run. Let us not give up now. We have but to put forth our hand and receive the prize. Can we stand idly by or be so engrossed in worldly care that we cannot warn our fellow men. Rush to the rescue now, or it will soon be too late.

Dear reader out of Christ, it is not for argument's sake that we assail your theories. If it was for popularity we were striving, we would not advocate what we do We do it in obedience to God's law. We do it through love to our fellow men just as we would save you from drowning. In this present age of the world it behooves us to "search the Scriptures" and see if we are right. Soon it will be too late. Do you long for his coming? if not, your condition is unsafe. If you love him, you will also love his appearing.

I feel to rejoice when I read the news from the nations that occupy the old territory of the Babylonian kingdom; not because I like to hear of bloodshed, but because it indicates the speedy coming of the King from heaven. I am glad to see so many faithful in the good work, and may I hold out faithful to the end, is my prayer.

Olathe, Johnson Co., Kansas.

From P. S. W. Deyo.

Brn. Editors:—I am in the midst of the work of the Lord. I came to this county and began a meeting on the 6th of March, near Bro. P. S. Converse. Stayed nearly a week, and something like a dozen started to serve the Lord. I have been in this town—Fraer the little R. R. town in the northern part of the Co.—since the 12th, and sixteen have presented themselves for baptism. Between thirty and forty have started to serve the Lord. It seems like old times. I have strong opposition from the Methodists. Before I began the meeting I sent a messenger to their preacher to hold a union meeting, and since have seen him myself; but he refuses to do so. I occupy the Congregational church, and one night they had a sociable, so I tried to hire the M. E. Church for one night, but was refused.

When we first began here we held meetings in a school house till the floor gave way. We used Bro. M. A. Newcomb's house that evening. We took up the carpet, because we would rather go to this trouble than to break down the school house. I shall remain here over the next Lord's day. I have a good attendance, and hope to be able to report something more before we close.

Brethren, I love this work, and there is plenty of work to do if the friends of Jesus would do their duty toward us. We are willing to do all we can, but cannot do all the sacrificing, for we have loved ones at home that must be cared for. I have been much discouraged for want of being able to do more for Jesus, when so many are in need of hearing the glad news of the soon coming of the Lord. I often ask myself the question, Can the brethren believe that the Lord is coming, and not have more of the missionary spirit? There is but little done in this State. I hope there will be a waking up, and something be done to put the Iowa Mission Tent in the field again this summer. If my mission is done here, I hope that the Lord will open a way for me to go to some other State, or to the Pacific coast that I may be the means of saving some poor perishing men. Brethren, think of this, and pray for the Lord to direct us all in the path of duty. More anon.

Fraer, Tama Co. Iowa.

From Sr. M. L. Field.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—I have been interested and benefitted in reading letters in the Crisis from the dear children of God, and have felt for some time past that it was my duty to write and express some of my feelings.

I was converted eleven years ago, but have been one of the doubting ones, hardly dared to reckon myself the Lord's, I felt so unworthy; but, praise his name, I have learned a better way to live. Instead of looking at my unworthiness I now look to Jesus, and I feel an assurance in my heart that I am his and he is mine. I attended the Alton Bay meeting last August, and there I received light and strength, and learned to trust fully in Jesus. Oh, how plain the way is! All he requires is perfect submission to his will and faith in his promises. God's Word never looked so plain, and never seemed so precious to me as now; and I never felt the importance of clinging fast to that Word as I now do. It will make us wise unto salvation if we give heed to its plain teachings.

My heart is pained to see some who profess to be Adventists perverting the Word of God, and teaching for doctrines the commandments of men, and calling it new light. "To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them." O, what folly to try to explain away the plain word of God; for after we explain it away to our heart's content, it still reads the same as before, and will judge us in the last day.

My prayer is that we may keep so near our Shepherd that we may know his voice from that of a stranger. Praise the Lord! he is coming soon to save his people. My heart says, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Searsport, Me.

From Bro. J. G. Orchard.

To the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad:—

It is with emotions of gratitude that I seat myself this beautiful morning of spring, to pen a few thoughts in this little remote corner of the Master's vineyard to others of his laborers scattered throughout the land. I feel grateful for this privilege. The good Shepherd has watched over me with such tender care, and given me so much of the Spirit of truth—"the Comforter"—that will lead us into all truth. I am joyful, because this beautiful spring morning reminds me of what my Master left on record to comfort us in our toilsome pilgrimage. He said—"Behold the fig tree and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is nigh at hand."

I can see that the everlasting summer time is near, very near at hand; but of that day and hour I do not presume to know; still, if we are the "children of light," we do know that "that day will not overtake us as a thief;" but we shall be ready at all times.

O brethren, for the love and mercy of God, let us rectify whatever we can find amiss in ourselves, as individuals, and then we will be ready to meet the Lord.

The believers in the soon coming of Christ away off here are few. There are two genial faces and warm christian hearts missed from our midst. Bro. and Sr. Patterson, whose liberal hospitality will never be forgotten by those of their brethren that they leave behind, and whose zeal and earnest labors in the cause will be felt and missed more than we can tell. May God bless them richly in that bright summer land to which they have gone, and save them in the everlasting kingdom.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

Dear Editors:—This acknowledment would have been made sooner, but I have been much worse of late, and am very poorly yet, and especially need the prayers of the dear brethren. I hope they will not forget to write, for a word of sympathy is so cheering in my lonely hours of suffering. The following is acknowledged with many thanks:—Mr. Parker, $2.00. N. L. Storms (by the hand of Geo. T. Adams), $1.00. Jefferson Magell (by the hand of Geo. T. Adams), $3.00. Bro. Aaron Anderson, $1.00. Bro. G. C. Meigs, $1.00.

Obituaries.

PRATT. In Chelsea, Mass., Feb. 18th, 1875, Eva J., wife of Wm. I. Pratt (son of the late Elder Walter Pratt), and daughter of W. Morse, of Southbridge, Mass., aged 21 years.

She experienced religion at the age of 14, but lost its enjoyment by neglecting to follow Christ in bearing his cross, though she held firmly to the great principles of the gospel. She expressed strong premonitions of her early decease, which caused this world to fade and the world to come to appear more glorious. It seemed cruel for death to throw a fatal dart at one just bloomed to womanhood, and whose heart had just been wedded to him who had chosen her as the bosom friend of his life. She embraced for a brief hour an infant son—the fruit of her travail and death pangs. May Christ love and angels guard the motherless babe. The husband is left in grief no language can describe. May infinite grace prepare the family to meet where death will never afflict or divide them. J. COUCH.

KENDALL. In Hyde Park, Mass., Feb., 1875, of consumption, Mrs. Jettie Kendall, wife of Mr. Wm. I. Kendall and daughter of Mr. Jarius and Susan Pratt, aged 21 years.

She was from infancy taught to believe in the Savior, and devoutly reverence that sacred book—the Bible. She was not only religiously instructed by her parents, but had a "grandmother Lois" who presented her, by precept and example, the "unfeigned faith" of the gospel. She walked with a firm step up the rugged path to the summit of womanhood, and there stood a brief hour a noble hearted, christian woman, the joy of her parents and the queenly bride of an endeared husband. She was a flower which bloomed beautifully but faded suddenly. May the great Restorer of blighted humanity at last plant her in the curseless soil of God's holy mountain, with all her weeping friends, where the glory shall never depart, and partings never come. J. COUCH.

SAWYER. In Porter, Me., March 13th, 1875, Clarence Wesley, only child of F. W. and S. F. Sawyer, aged 2 years.

Clarence was a lovely child, and his death seems very sad and untimely, and many hearts mourn that are not of the family. His death occurred by his falling into a pail of hot water, with which his mother was engaged in washing the floor, her attention being diverted for a moment. It is thought that the little fellow, in his play about the room, attempted to pass by the water and slipped; as the first that his mother knew of his danger, the sound made by his falling into the water reached her ears. He was immediately taken out, and his clothing cut and torn off as quickly as possible, and every thing was done for his relief that loving hearts could do, but all in vain. He was so severely scalded that, after lingering in distress very patiently for two days, he died. It is well with the child. He sleeps quietly in his little narrow house upon the hill-top; but only for a little while. Soon he will come forth unto the resurrection of life eternal. "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." May the heart-stricken parents, and other sorrowing friends, find that comfort and support in this deep affliction which Christ will give unto all that serve him.

CHAS. H. HURD.

WARREN. In Victor, De Kalb Co., Ill., March 11th, 1875, my father, John R. Warren, in the 84th year of his age.

He was born in Boston, Mass., but in early life removed to N. H., and from there to Vt. He was converted when a young man, and united with the Christian denomination. In 1843, during the labors of Elders Shipman and Thurber in Marshfield, Vt., he heard the doctrine of the coming of Jesus, and heartily embraced it. Since that time he has been patiently waiting for the return of the Nobleman. He had thought of late years, notwithstanding his age, that he should live to see the King in his beauty; but his eyes are closed in death; his voice is hushed; he rests in hope.

Sleep, dearest father, sleep;
Death cannot hold thee long;
For in the morning thou shalt wake
And join the blood-washed throng.

MRS. R. W. GILLESPIE.

CARD. In Natick, R. I., Feb. 22d, 1875, Bro. Job Card, in the 70th year of his age.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer. Those of our preaching brethren, who have had the pleasure of his acquaintance, will recollect him as an ardent lover and earnest advocate of the coming of the Lord and its kindred doctrines, as held by Adventists. Binding with a band of faith the blessed hope of the gospel about his failing heart, he calmly sank to sleep in Jesus, fully assured of awaking to life and incorruptibility at his appearing. A. DURFEE.

BOOTHBY. In West Newfield, very suddenly of heart disease, Dr. A. Boothby, of Denmark, Me., aged 71 years.

Our brother embraced the Advent faith in '42, and has been a firm believer and a true christian ever since, as we are informed by those who knew him best. He has been blind a number of years, but has always rejoiced in the thought that he should see in the kingdom. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn, but not without hope. He was brought to Denmark for burial. Funeral sermon by the writer, from Job 14: 14.

H. S. PINKHAM.

ARMS. In Waterbury, Vt., March 16th, 1875, of pneumonia, Ira Arms, aged 11 years, son of Bro. Geo. C. and Sr. Abby Arms.

The family of our dear brother and sister mourn deeply Ira's sudden death. He was an active boy, and in his death a bright sunbeam has been shut from the household. But never have we seen the keenest anguish and the ripest christian joy so sweetly blended as in this case. They could say, "Sorrowful, yet always rejoicing." They have the earnest sympathies of an entire community, and, better still, those of heaven breathed in Lam. 3: 23. H. F. C.

MATTIN. Fell asleep in Jesus in Newport, Vt., July 15th, 1874, Sr. Chloe Mattin, wife of John Mattin, aged 39 years.

Sr. Mattin was converted in 1851. She was a great sufferer, but bore it with christian fortitude, and died a full believer in the speedy coming of Christ to put an end to sickness, sorrow, pain and death. As the friends gathered around in her last moments, she requested them to sing—"We shall sleep, but not forever." She will be missed by a large circle of friends, and especially in the prayer meeting. She leaves a husband and one child to mourn her loss, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. Funeral services by Eld. S. Stiles. WM. P. DROWN.

BURTON. At Wyoming, R. I., March 15th, 1875, Sister Cylinda Burton, aged 63 years.

Funeral services at the Advent Chapel, Wyoming, on the 18th, by the writer. "Sweetly she's sleeping in Jesus." A. DURFEE.

BOOTH. In North Greece, March 14th, 1875, Milty, only child of James and Julia Booth, aged 6 years.

This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Just came to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise will bloom.

C. M. BOOTH.

FOREIGN NEWS.

RUSSIA.

Berlin, March 27. The Post has a report that the Khan of Khiva recently asked Russia for further assistance against his unruly subjects, and it is said he has offered to become altogether a vassal of the Czar.

March 30. Dr. Henry Foerster, Bishop of Breslau, has been summoned to resign his bishopric, because he promulgated the Papal enclyclical against the ecclesiastical laws.

The conference of the Roman Catholic bishops at Fulda is held with closed doors. The object of the meeting is to discuss and issue pastoral letters concerning the bill before the Prussian Diet withdrawing the State grants from the Church.

The King of Spain has conferred on Prince Bismarck the Order of the Golden Fleece.

The probable speedy abdication of the young King Alfonso of Spain is suggested.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., March 29. Intelligence was received this morning of an outbreak in the colleries at Buck Mountain, Eckley, Drifton, Jeddo, Ebervale and Hazleton, composed of a large mob of miners in a state of frenzied excitement. They started simultaneously at Buck Mountain and Eckley with a determination to visit all the mines in the neighborhood. They disarmed the special police from Philadelphia stationed at Buck Mountain, and took the arms along, sixteen shooters and revolvers. They then went to Jeddo, when policeman King was shot in the head, but not fatally wounded, and policeman Warner and Meyer were badly beaten with clubs and their weapons taken. The men were forced to go with them from Eckley, Drifton, Jeddo and Ebervale. They also called at the Mount Pleasant colliery and forced the men to go with them, although Mr. Taggart is paying those in his employ the rates of 1874 basis. There was no damage to property.

The raiders marched through Hazleton at 2.20 P. M., where Father O'Hara, the Catholic priest, exhorted them to return peaceably to their homes, and at last accounts they were quietly dispersing. A general feeling is expressed that if the miners continue in their outrageous course the operators will call on the Governor for troops, and that the time has come for the safety of life and property.

LATER.

The raiders, knowing Mr. Taggart had not signed for the whole of 1875, thought that the men in his employ were paid on the basis of 1874, determined to call and make him sign. On hearing of their coming Mr. Taggart met the raiders near Hazleton and signed the agreement in their presence, and they did not go to his colliery as before reported.

A large company of men were raised in Hazleton and taken to Stockton, where they did picket duty, but returned home after news came of the retreat of the raiders. All is reported quiet in the places visited, but it is impossible to say how long it will last.

DETAILS OF OUTRAGES.

Galveston, Texas, March 30. A dispatch to the News from Corpus Christi, dated the 29th, says: A letter from the Postmaster at Nueces, who was robbed and had his house burned by raiding Mexicans, says that on the 26th instant, about four o'clock, while conversing with a man named Smith, I discovered three Mexicans approaching my store. I went into the sorting room for my rifle and had secured it, when Smith rushed in with a Mexican following him with a gun pointed and prepared to fire. My wife interfered and prevented him. He then pointed his gun at me, but I proved too quick and saved my life by taking his. I then aimed at the nearest of the cut-throats in the store, when discovering about fifty of them outside I did not shoot, knowing my only chance for life was to secrete myself, which I did in a subterranean passage where I found Smith. The robbers completely sacked my store, packing the valuables in wagons. About this time the mail rider from San Antonio arrived. They took him prisoner, and the mail never reached me. Smith now left his hiding place and ran, and they gave chase and murdered him. The store was fired and I was compelled to leave my place of concealment, which I did unnoticed. I remained near and witnessed the destruction of my home. The Mexicans left, believing me consumed. My children were shot at twice while they lay on the ground from fright.

Before leaving my store the Mexicans had several American prisoners, whom they subjected to the most cruel treatment, stripping some of them and compelling them to go barefooted before them. One man who fainted from exhaustion was beaten and left on the road side.

(Signed) T. J. NOAKE.

One of the leaders was captured and lodged in jail on Saturday. A meeting of citizens was held here to-day to consider what disposition should be made of the prisoner, and it resulted in his immediate trial by the people. A court was formed and the prisoner arraigned; counsel for the prosecution and defence were appointed and a jury impaneled. The evidence showed the prisoner guilty of murder, arson, robbery and false imprisonment and torture of Americans. He was sentenced to be hanged, and the sentence was immediately executed.

New York, March 29. A Sydney, N. S. W., letter of Feb. 16 says another cargo of 160 Communists have arrived from France in a wretched condition, and were sent to the interior of New Caledonia. The Governor of the French Colony has been instructed by McMahon to crush out Freemasonry, and several eminent merchants have been arrested and sent to France on suspicion of being either Freemasons or Communistic friends of Rochefort.

Pottsville, Pa., March 27. The laborers and miners who are on a strike dumped a number of cars loaded with coal, ready for shipment, at Locust Gap during the night, and burned the depot and telegraph office of the Reading Railroad Company at the same place. A number of special police from Philadelphia and Reading have been sent to Mahoney Plain to protect property and assist in operating the road if necessary.

San Francisco, March 29. A boarding house filled with occupants was burned this morning, at one o'clock, at Benecia. All the inmates except three escaped by jumping from the window. Several were severely burned. The three men who perished were named Finnerty, Shea and A. C. Hanscom.

☞ TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Conference Notice.

The annual session of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Chelsea, Mass., in the Advent Christian Chapel on Heard Street, commencing Tuesday, April 6th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The business session will be held on Wednesday morning, and it is desired that all the business of the Conference may be begun and finished on that day. Therefore, ministers and delegates will endeavor to be in attendance in season to take part in said business matters. Churches whose membership is less than twenty-five are entitled to one delegate; over twenty-five and less than fifty, two delegates; over fifty, three delegates. Let there be a general rally. Come in the spirit of the Master, abide in it during the meeting, and return to your homes richly laden therewith. C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

☞ ALL those wishing to attend the Conference at Chelsea, commencing April 6th, going from or through Worcester, can procure tickets via. Nashua R. R. to go and return for one fare. Tickets to be had by calling at E. G. & F. W. Higgins', No. 3 Maple Street, a few steps from the depot. Tickets good from April 6th to April 12th inclusive. E. G. HIGGINS.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held at Rutland, Vt., commencing April 14th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a good gathering of the faithful ones at this meeting. Let delegates be sent from all the churches and localities where there are no regular meetings. We hope ministers belonging to this Conference will make a special effort to be present. Come, brethren, to this feast, to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing. A. W. SIBLEY, Pres. W. O. HIGLEY, Sec.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish timber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. DOWNING, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. SWAIN, for Com.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.

To the Brn. scattered abroad:—This is to certify that Eld. John F. Champlin (colored) is no longer acting as our agent to solicit funds for the Advent Christian church of Westerly, R. I. Per order of Board of Trustees.

R. T. CHURCH, Chairman.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will meet with the Church at the Lancaster school-house, in East Bowdoinham, on Thursday, April 15th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the spirit of your Master, and work for the salvation of sinners and the good of the church. H. D. REED, Pres. H. S. MITCHELL, Sec.

CHARLTON.—By divine permission the Church in this place purpose holding a Protracted Meeting, commencing Thursday evening, April 15th, to continue over Lord's day. Brethren, sisters and friends in the surrounding towns are invited to attend. Come with the blessing of the good Lord to this feast. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, with others, will be here to preach the Word. In behalf of the Church, J. W. PATTERSON, Clerk.

NOTICE.—We would like (if the Lord will), six or eight brethren and sisters to go with the Tent this season, filled with the Spirit and power of the gospel, to labor for the salvation of sinners, proclaim the signs of Jesus' coming at hand, and to help care for the Tent, etc. We want those who can give their time, talents, and voice. We will trust in the Lord for means to pay expenses other ways connected with it.

If brethren wish to contribute to help, it will be received gladly. Brn. F. and Asa Blaisdell and others talk of running the Evangel Tent, and I will furnish one or more, if help will be pledged, for Maine or vicinity. Let those respond at once who feel that the Lord wants them to go, as it will take sometime to make tents. Speak freely. We ought to have many tents in the field this season if Jesus does not come; and could if brethren and sisters would take hold of the business. Let us do all we can for a perishing world, and have it said "well done" when Jesus comes.

P. S. Direct H. B. SEVEY, Mt. Vernon, Me.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the N. H. Conference is to commence so as to hold its session over the last Sunday in April. Any church wishing it with them, please write me soon, so we may give notice in good time. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

NOTICE.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier Vt. E. N. MORSE.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—I may be addressed again at my home, at Porter's Mills, Eauclair Co., Wis., about May 1st, 1875. Any who feel that my labors will benefit them, can write me at that place.

GEO. W. TURNER.

NOTICE.—Bro. and Sr. McKinstry have received and accepted a call from the church in Danville, P. Q., to take the pastoral charge, and all arrangements for the supply of the pulpit must be made through them.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren are hereby notified that the church at Exeter, N. H., is supplied with labor by W. M. Harmon. All changes relative to preaching here will be referred to the committee. Per order of Com., W. M. H.

BRO. ROLAND D. GRANT having accepted the call extended to him by the Second Advent Church of Athol, Mass., his labors as Pastor beginning Jan. 1st, 1875, to continue at least one year, all matters of exchange and supply are submitted to him. O. F. BROOKS, Clerk.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."
BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

A NEW TRACT.
"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"
A Work upon the Materiality of Man.
HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.
BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. AG'T.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

10 cts. AG'T.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

heart's content, it still reads the same as before, and will judge us in the last day.

My prayer is that we may keep so near our Shepherd that we may know his voice from that of a stranger. Praise the Lord! he is coming soon to save his people. My heart says, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Searsport, Me.

From Bro. J. G. Orchard.

To the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad:—

It is with emotions of gratitude that I seat myself this beautiful morning of spring, to pen a few thoughts in this little remote corner of the Master's vineyard to others of his laborers scattered throughout the land. I feel grateful for this privilege. The good Shepherd has watched over me with such tender care, and given me so much of the Spirit of truth—"the Comforter"—that will lead us into all truth. I am joyful, because this beautiful spring morning reminds me of what my Master left on record to comfort us in our toilsome pilgrimage. He said—"Behold the fig tree and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is nigh at hand."

I can see that the everlasting summer time is near, very near at hand; but of that day and hour I do not presume to know; still, if we are the "children of light," we do know that "that day will not overtake us as a thief;" but we shall be ready at all times.

O brethren, for the love and mercy of God, let us rectify whatever we can find amiss in ourselves, as individuals, and then we will be ready to meet the Lord.

The believers in the soon coming of Christ away off here are few. There are two genial faces and warm christian hearts missed from our midst. Bro. and Sr. Patterson, whose liberal hospitality will never be forgotten by those of their brethren that they leave behind, and whose zeal and earnest labors in the cause will be felt and missed more than we can tell. May God bless them richly in that bright summer land to which they have gone, and save them in the everlasting kingdom.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

Dear Editors:—This acknowledment would have been made sooner, but I have been much worse of late, and am very poorly yet, and especially need the prayers of the dear brethren. I hope they will not forget to write, for a word of sympathy is so cheering in my lonely hours of suffering. The following is acknowledged with many thanks:—Mr. Parker, $2.00. N. L. Storms (by the hand of Geo. T. Adams), $1.00. Jefferson Magell (by the hand of Geo. T. Adams), $3.00. Bro. Aaron Anderson, $1.00. Bro. G. C. Meigs, $1.00.

Obituaries.

PRATT. In Chelsea, Mass., Feb. 18th, 1875, Eva J., wife of Wm. I. Pratt (son of the late Elder Walter Pratt), and daughter of W. Morse, of Southbridge, Mass., aged 21 years.

She experienced religion at the age of 14, but lost its enjoyment by neglecting to follow Christ in bearing his cross, though she held firmly to the great principles of the gospel. She expressed strong premonitions of her early decease, which caused this world to fade and the world to come to appear more glorious. It seemed cruel for death to throw a fatal dart at one just bloomed to womanhood, and whose heart had just been wedded to him who had chosen her as the bosom friend of his life. She embraced for a brief hour an infant son—the fruit of her travail and death pangs. May Christ love and angels guard the motherless babe. The husband is left in grief no language can describe. May infinite grace prepare the family to meet where death will never afflict or divide them. J. COUCH.

KENDALL. In Hyde Park, Mass., Feb., 1875, of consumption, Mrs. Jettie Kendall, wife of Mr. Wm. I. Kendall, and daughter of Mr. Jarius and Susan Pratt, aged 21 years.

She was from infancy taught to believe in the Savior, and devoutly reverence that sacred book—the Bible. She was not only religiously instructed by her parents, but had a "grandmother Lois" who presented her, by precept and example, the "unfeigned faith" of the gospel. She walked with a firm step up the rugged path to the summit of womanhood, and there stood a brief hour a noble hearted, christian woman, the joy of her parents and the queenly bride of an endeared husband. She was a flower which bloomed beautifully but faded suddenly. May the great Restorer of blighted humanity at last plant her in the curseless soil of God's holy mountain, with all her weeping friends, where the glory shall never depart, and partings never come. J. COUCH.

SAWYER. In Porter, Me., March 13th, 1875, Clarence Wesley, only child of F. W. and S. F. Sawyer, aged 2 years.

Clarence was a lovely child, and his death seems very sad and untimely, and many hearts mourn that are not of the family. His death occurred by his falling into a pail of hot water, with which his mother was engaged in washing the floor, her attention being diverted for a moment. It is thought that the little fellow, in his play about the room, attempted to pass by the water and slipped; as the first that his mother knew of his danger, the sound made by his falling into the water reached her ears. He was immediately taken out, and his clothing cut and torn off as quickly as possible, and every thing was done for his relief that loving hearts could do, but all in vain. He was so severely scalded that, after lingering in distress very patiently for two days, he died. It is well with the child. He sleeps quietly in his little narrow house upon the hill-top; but only for a little while. Soon he will come forth unto the resurrection of life eternal. "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." May the heart-stricken parents, and other sorrowing friends, find that comfort and support in this deep affliction which Christ will give unto all that serve him.

CHAS. H. HURD.

WARREN. In Victor, De Kalb Co., Ill., March 11th, 1875, my father, John R. Warren, in the 84th year of his age.

He was born in Boston, Mass., but in early life removed to N. H., and from there to Vt. He was converted when a young man, and united with the Christian denomination. In 1843, during the labors of Elders Shipman and Thurber in Marshfield, Vt., he heard the doctrine of the coming of Jesus, and heartily embraced it. Since that time he has been patiently waiting for the return of the Nobleman. He had thought of late years, notwithstanding his age, that he should live to see the King in his beauty; but his eyes are closed in death; his voice is hushed; he rests in hope.

Sleep, dearest father, sleep;
Death cannot hold thee long;
For in the morning thou shalt wake
And join the blood-washed throng.

MRS. R. W. GILLESPIE.

CARD. In Natick, R. I., Feb. 22d, 1875, Bro. Job Card, in the 70th year of his age.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer. Those of our preaching brethren, who have had the pleasure of his acquaintance, will recollect him as an ardent lover and earnest advocate of the coming of the Lord and its kindred doctrines, as held by Adventists. Binding with a band of faith the blessed hope of the gospel about his failing heart, he calmly sank to sleep in Jesus, fully assured of awaking to life and incorruptibility at his appearing. A. DURFEE.

BOOTHBY. In West Newfield, very suddenly of heart disease, Dr. A. Boothby, of Denmark, Me., aged 71 years.

Our brother embraced the Advent faith in '42, and has been a firm believer and a true christian ever since, as we are informed by those who knew him best. He has been blind a number of years, but has always rejoiced in the thought that he should see in the kingdom. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn, but not without hope. He was brought to Denmark for burial. Funeral sermon by the writer, from Job 14: 14.

H. S. PINKHAM.

ARMS. In Waterbury, Vt., March 16th, 1875, of pneumonia, Ira Arms, aged 11 years, son of Bro. Geo. C. and Sr. Abby Arms.

The family of our dear brother and sister mourn deeply Ira's sudden death. He was an active boy, and in his death a bright sunbeam has been shut from the household. But never have we seen the keenest anguish and the ripest christian joy so sweetly blended as in this case. They could say, "Sorrowful, yet always rejoicing." They have the earnest sympathies of an entire community, and, better still, those of heaven breathed in Lam. 3: 23. H. F. C.

MATTIN. Fell asleep in Jesus in Newport, Vt., July 15th, 1874, Sr. Chloe Mattin, wife of John Mattin, aged 39 years.

Sr. Mattin was converted in 1851. She was a great sufferer, but bore it with christian fortitude, and died a full believer in the speedy coming of Christ to put an end to sickness, sorrow, pain and death. As the friends gathered around in her last moments, she requested them to sing—"We shall sleep, but not forever." She will be missed by a large circle of friends, and especially in the prayer meeting. She leaves a husband and one child to mourn her loss, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. Funeral services by Eld. S. Stiles. WM. P. DROWN.

BURTON. At Wyoming, R. I., March 15th, 1875, Sister Cylinda Burton, aged 63 years.

Funeral services at the Advent Chapel, Wyoming, on the 18th, by the writer. "Sweetly she's sleeping in Jesus." A. DURFEE.

BOOTH. In North Greece, March 14th, 1875, Milty, only child of James and Julia Booth, aged 6 years.

This lovely bud, so young and fair,
Called hence by early doom,
Just came to show how sweet a flower
In Paradise will bloom.

C. M. BOOTH.

FOREIGN NEWS.

RUSSIA.

Berlin, March 27. The Post has a report that the Khan of Khiva recently asked Russia for further assistance against his unruly subjects, and it is said he has offered to become altogether a vassal of the Czar.

March 30. Dr. Henry Foerster, Bishop of Breslau, has been summoned to resign his bishopric, because he promulgated the Papal enclyclical against the ecclesiastical laws.

The conference of the Roman Catholic bishops at Fulda is held with closed doors. The object of the meeting is to discuss and issue pastoral letters concerning the bill before the Prussian Diet withdrawing the State grants from the Church.

The King of Spain has conferred on Prince Bismarck the Order of the Golden Fleece.

The probable speedy abdication of the young King Alfonso of Spain is suggested.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., March 29. Intelligence was received this morning of an outbreak in the colleries at Buck Mountain, Eckley, Drifton, Jeddo, Ebervale and Hazleton, composed of a large mob of miners in a state of frenzied excitement. They started simultaneously at Buck Mountain and Eckley with a determination to visit all the mines in the neighborhood. They disarmed the special police from Philadelphia stationed at Buck Mountain, and took the arms along, sixteen shooters and revolvers. They then went to Jeddo, when policeman King was shot in the head, but not fatally wounded, and policeman Warner and Meyer were badly beaten with clubs and their weapons taken. The men were forced to go with them from Eckley, Drifton, Jeddo and Ebervale. They also called at the Mount Pleasant colliery and forced the men to go with them, although Mr. Taggart is paying those in his employ the rates of 1874 basis. There was no damage to property.

The raiders marched through Hazleton at 2.20 P. M., where Father O'Hara, the Catholic priest, exhorted them to return peaceably to their homes, and at last accounts they were quietly dispersing. A general feeling is expressed that if the miners continue in their outrageous course the operators will call on the Governor for troops, and that the time has come for the safety of life and property.

LATER.

The raiders, knowing Mr. Taggart had not signed for the whole of 1875, thought that the men in his employ were paid on the basis of 1874, determined to call and make him sign. On hearing of their coming Mr. Taggart met the raiders near Hazleton and signed the agreement in their presence, and they did not go to his colliery as before reported.

A large company of men were raised in Hazleton and taken to Stockton, where they did picket duty, but returned home after news came of the retreat of the raiders. All is reported quiet in the places visited, but it is impossible to say how long it will last.

DETAILS OF OUTRAGES.

Galveston, Texas, March 30. A dispatch to the News from Corpus Christi, dated the 29th, says: A letter from the Postmaster at Nueces, who was robbed and had his house burned by raiding Mexicans, says that on the 26th instant, about four o'clock, while conversing with a man named Smith, I discovered three Mexicans approaching my store. I went into the sorting room for my rifle and had secured it, when Smith rushed in with a Mexican following him with a gun pointed and prepared to fire. My wife interfered and prevented him. He then pointed his gun at me, but I proved too quick and saved my life by taking his. I then aimed at the nearest of the cut-throats in the store, when discovering about fifty of them outside I did not shoot, knowing my only chance for life was to secrete myself, which I did in a subterranean passage where I found Smith. The robbers completely sacked my store, packing the valuables in wagons. About this time the mail rider from San Antonio arrived. They took him prisoner, and the mail never reached me. Smith now left his hiding place and ran, and they gave chase and murdered him. The store was fired and I was compelled to leave my place of concealment, which I did unnoticed. I remained near and witnessed the destruction of my home. The Mexicans left, believing me consumed. My children were shot at twice while they lay on the ground from fright.

Before leaving my store the Mexicans had several American prisoners, whom they subjected to the most cruel treatment, stripping some of them and compelling them to go barefooted before them. One man who fainted from exhaustion was beaten and left on the road side.

(Signed) T. J. NOAKE.

One of the leaders was captured and lodged in jail on Saturday. A meeting of citizens was held here to-day to consider what disposition should be made of the prisoner, and it resulted in his immediate trial by the people. A court was formed and the prisoner arraigned; counsel for the prosecution and defence were appointed and a jury impaneled. The evidence showed the prisoner guilty of murder, arson, robbery and false imprisonment and torture of Americans. He was sentenced to be hanged, and the sentence was immediately executed.

New York, March 29. A Sydney, N. S. W., letter of Feb. 16 says another cargo of 160 Communists have arrived from France in a wretched condition, and were sent to the interior of New Caledonia. The Governor of the French Colony has been instructed by McMahon to crush out Freemasonry, and several eminent merchants have been arrested and sent to France on suspicion of being either Freemasons or Communistic friends of Rochefort.

Pottsville, Pa., March 27. The laborers and miners who are on a strike dumped a number of cars loaded with coal, ready for shipment, at Locust Gap during the night, and burned the depot and telegraph office of the Reading Railroad Company at the same place. A number of special police from Philadelphia and Reading have been sent to Mahoney Plain to protect property and assist in operating the road if necessary.

San Francisco, March 29. A boarding house filled with occupants was burned this morning, at one o'clock, at Benecia. All the inmates except three escaped by jumping from the window. Several were severely burned. The three men who perished were named Finnerty, Shea and A. C. Hanscom.

TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Conference Notice.

The annual session of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Chelsea, Mass., in the Advent Christian Chapel on Heard Street, commencing Tuesday, April 6th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The business session will be held on Wednesday morning, and it is desired that all the business of the Conference may be begun and finished on that day. Therefore, ministers and delegates will endeavor to be in attendance in season to take part in said business matters. Churches whose membership is less than twenty-five are entitled to one delegate; over twenty-five and less than fifty, two delegates; over fifty, three delegates. Let there be a general rally. Come in the spirit of the Master, abide in it during the meeting, and return to your homes richly laden therewith. C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

ALL those wishing to attend the Conference at Chelsea, commencing April 6th, going from or through Worcester, can procure tickets via. Nashua R. R. to go and return for one fare. Tickets to be had by calling at E. G. & F. W. Higgins', No. 3 Maple Street, a few steps from the depot. Tickets good from April 6th to April 12th inclusive. E. G. HIGGINS.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held at Rutland, Vt., commencing April 14th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a good gathering of the faithful ones at this meeting. Let delegates be sent from all the churches and localities where there are no regular meetings. We hope ministers belonging to this Conference will make a special effort to be present. Come, brethren, to this feast, to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing. A. W. SIBLEY, Pres.
W. O. HIGLEY, Sec.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish timber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. DOWNING, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. SWAIN, for Com.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.

To the Brn. scattered abroad:—This is to certify that Eld. John F. Champlin (colored) is no longer acting as our agent to solicit funds for the Advent Christian church of Westerly, R. I. Per order of Board of Trustees.

R. T. CHURCH, Chairman.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will meet with the Church at the Lancaster schoolhouse, in East Bowdoinham, on Thursday, April 15th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the spirit of your Master, and work for the salvation of sinners and the good of the church. H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL, Sec.

CHARLTON.—By divine permission the Church in this place purpose holding a Protracted Meeting, commencing Thursday evening, April 15th, to continue over Lord's day. Brethren, sisters and friends in the surrounding towns are invited to attend. Come with the blessing of the good Lord to this feast. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, with others, will be here to preach the Word. In behalf of the Church, J. W. PATTERSON, Clerk.

NOTICE.—We would like (if the Lord will), six or eight brethren and sisters to go with the Tent this season, filled with the Spirit and power of the gospel, to labor for the salvation of sinners, proclaim the signs of Jesus' coming at hand, and to help care for the Tent, etc. We want those who can give their time, talents, and voice. We will trust in the Lord for means to pay expenses other ways connected with it.

If brethren wish to contribute to help, it will be received gladly. Brn. F. and Asa Blaisdell and others talk of running the Evangel Tent, and I will furnish one or more, if help will be pledged, for Maine or vicinity. Let those respond at once who feel that the Lord wants them to go, as it will take sometime to make tents. Speak freely. We ought to have many tents in the field this season if Jesus does not come; and could if brethren and sisters would take hold of the business. Let us do all we can for a perishing world, and have it said "well done" when Jesus comes.

P. S. Direct H. B. SEVEY, Mt. Vernon, Me.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the N. H. Conference is to commence so as to hold its session over the last Sunday in April. Any church wishing it with them, please write me soon, so we may give notice in good time. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

NOTICE.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier Vt. E. N. MORSE.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—I may be addressed again at my home, at Porter's Mills, Eauclair Co., Wis., about May 1st, 1875. Any who feel that my labors will benefit them, can write me at that place.

GEO. W. TURNER.

NOTICE.—Bro. and Sr. McKinstry have received and accepted a call from the church in Danville, P. Q., to take the pastoral charge, and all arrangements for the supply of the pulpit must be made through them.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren are hereby notified that the church at Exeter, N. H., is supplied with labor by W. M. Harmon. All changes relative to preaching here will be referred to the committee. Per order of Com., W. M. H.

BRO. ROLAND D. GRANT having accepted the call extended to him by the Second Advent Church of Athol, Mass., his labors as Pastor beginning Jan. 1st, 1875, to continue at least one year, all matters of exchange and supply are submitted to him. O. F. BROOKS, Clerk.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."
BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

A NEW TRACT.
"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"
A Work upon the Materiality of Man.
HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.
BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. AG'T.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

10 cts. AG'T.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

THE ROCK THAT IS HIGHER THAN I.—Ps. 61: 2.

ELVIRA S. JENNINGS.

While in affliction's darksome night
I drift upon a stormy sea,
The clouds of gloom obscure my light,
And hide the sheltering Rock from me.

O'erwhelmed my heart, depressed my soul;
My sinking spirit lifts the cry,—
While wave on wave of sorrow roll,—
Where is the Rock that is higher than I?

The raging storm abates at length,
And dimly through the mist I see
A hand outstretched—an arm of strength
Is reaching still from the Rock to me.

'Mid doubts and fears faith struggling long,
Her frail bark tossed by wind and tide,
Would near the Rock so high and strong,
Fain drop the anchor, and there abide.

Grasping anew the falling oar,
While one lone star of hope I see,
And pushing toward the star-lit shore,
Safe to the Rock it leadeth me.

Though other lights and hopes may flee
On which my faith and love rely,
There shineth ever true to me,
The "Star"—the "Rock" that's higher than I.

O Rock of ages—Rock sublime!
Cleft for the fallen, helpless, poor;
Unmarred by storms, unchanged by time—
We will cling to thee forevermore!

Rochester, N. Y.

ENTIRE CONSECRATION AND DRESS.

BY REV. L. R. DUNN.

One thing, at the outset is very clear, that is that all persons cannot, and all should not dress exactly alike—whether male or female attire be referred to. Climate, taste, complexion, education, social position, financial ability, etc., will always modify, more or less, the character, the expensiveness, or the style of the dress. There was a time when Mr. Wesley wished that he had so ordered it that all his people should dress alike—after the manner of Friends. This, we think, would have greatly circumscribed the influence of his labors, and checked the growth of his societies. This, perhaps, as much as anything else, has shut up the Society of Friends within very narrow limits; and while it has formed an almost impassable barrier to their growth, it has, evidently, been one of the most prominent causes of their decline. So that we regard it would have been a serious, not to say a fatal mistake, if Mr. Wesley had adopted and enforced the rule of uniformity in dress. But while we readily admit these things, it is further evident that the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, where it is dominant in the soul, will regulate and control this question, as well as all others connected with our spiritual well-being.

Complete consecration to Christ, not only consists in giving up our soul and body into his hands, with all we have and are; but, also, that we shall ever after this act is performed, endeavor to please him in all our words, actions, thoughts, plans, purposes, dress, in the employment of our time, and in the employment of our wealth—be it more or less. In a word, this spirit of consecration is to regulate our whole being, and control our whole character and life. We are aware that many have thought the question of dress is one of non-importance, or of indifference. But it has not been so regarded by the prophets and apostles of our Lord—nor by the Fathers and Reformers of the Christian Church. The former speaking and writing under the immediate inspiration of the Holy Spirit; and the latter endeavoring to obey their teachings, and to submit to the leadings of the same Almighty and All-wise Agent.

The evangelical prophet Isaiah speaks in no measured terms about the pride in dress exhibited by "the daughters of Zion," and of the punishment which was sure to come upon them for it. In the day of their visitation he says, "the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, their cauls (net works) and their round tires like the moon. The chains (sweet-balls), and the bracelets, and the mufflers (spangled ornaments), the bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the head-bands and the tablets, and the ear-rings, the rings and nose-jewels, the changeable suits of apparel, and mantles, and rumples, and crisping-pins, the glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods and vails. And it shall come to pass that instead of sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle a rent; and instead of a well-set hair baldness; and instead of a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty" (Isa. 3: 18–24). Thus spake the Holy Ghost by the mouth of the prophet twenty-six hundred years ago; and with a few changes of words described the toilet and dress of a fashionable belle at the present day.

With equal emphasis does the apostle Paul give directions to the female members of the churches in his day. "In like manner, also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness (this now, Alford says, is very improperly translated, and should be rendered—shamefastness—and sobriety—(self-restraint); not with braided, or plaited hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10.

This is still further confirmed by the inspired words of the apostle Peter to the wives and women to whom he wrote. "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on apparel—literally, dresses—but let it be (rather) the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4. How lightly these inspired utterances are passed over by multitudes of women professing godliness at the present day! And yet, we are not to suppose that God's estimate of these things has changed.

Let us pass on now and see what some of the Fathers and Reformers of the Church have said on this question. First of all, we quote from Tertullian. He says to christian women, "Let your comeliness be the goodly garment of the soul. Be arrayed in the ornaments of the apostles and prophets, drawing your whiteness from simplicity, your ruddy hues from modesty, painting your eyes with bashfulness, your mouth with silence, implanting in your ears the Word of God, fitting on your neck the yoke of Christ. Clothe yourself with the silk of uprightness, the fine linen of holiness, the purple of modesty, and you shall have God himself for your lover and spouse." He denounces the flame-colored heads of the women built up with pads and rolls, the slough perhaps of some guilty wretch now in hell. "St. Jerome says, what business have paint and rouge on a christian cheek? Who can weep for her sins, when her tears wash her furrows bare on her skin? With what trust can faces be lifted to heaven, which the Maker cannot recognize as his own workmanship? We might also quote from St. Cyprian and Clement of Alexandria, but our space forbids.

Calvin, during his control—both ecclesiastical and civil—in the city of Geneva, was very rigid in his rules concerning dress. It is said that he once kept a woman in the pillory for some time because she had worn a vail. Mr. Wesley's sermon on "Dress" ought to be familiar to every Methodist. Formerly it was ordered to be read every year in all our societies; but of late this rule has passed away with other specific rules concerning dress, and our Methodist people are now famed for their love of dress and show. It was not so in our early history. Our Methodist people were then characterized by great plainness and modesty in their style of dress, and any variance from this was met by stern and faithful rebuke.

How changed is all this now! Many a Methodist woman has invested in her wardrobe, and jewel-case, a sum sufficient to support three missionaries and their families in India, China, or Japan for a whole year. And there can be no doubt that there is more money annually expended by our people for articles of expensive dress, and jewelry, than for the support of all our missionary interests in the world. And if this amount thus wasted upon excessive dress and needless jewelry, could be added to what should be saved from the use of tobacco, and vain and foolish, not to say, sinful amusements—our treasury would receive no less than from three to five millions of dollars annually. And will not "the Son of the Church" when he cometh hold us to a strict accountability for this waste, or misuse of his money?

But from nothing we have said should it be inferred that we should be indifferent to our attire. No, every christian man and woman should be scrupulously neat, plain and cleanly. Anything like slatternliness, untidiness, and uncleanliness, is as much opposed to the religion of Christ as an excess of dress. If the white robe of christian purity is upon our hearts, everything about our external person should be in harmony therewith. And while all who are thus purified will not, cannot dress exactly alike, yet, they will be led by the light of the divine Word and of the divine Spirit into all truth on this as well as on all other questions pertaining to their spiritual well-being, or their usefulness to others. Certain it is, however, that no excess in dress or ornamentation will ever be indulged in by a truly enlightened and consecrated heart. But, it ought to be remembered here, that the Lord does not show, even the truly sanctified believer, all things in his heart, or character, or life, that may not be in harmony with his will, at once. The light will shine upon one thing after another, and all these excresences will melt off, one by one, as the frost melts under the morning beams of the sun. "If in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you."

O, if we have the true spirit of submission to Christ, the spirit of consecration, how sweetly, how gently we shall be led into all the truth on these questions! And how easy it will be to give up, to abandon those things which mar, or injure, or deface us, when once they are made known. Let it be then our first and constant aim to realize heart-purity, and all will sweetly follow in its train.

"Jesus thy blood and righteousness,
My beauty are my glorious dress;
Midst flaming worlds in these arrayed,
With joy shall I lift up my head.
Bold shall I stand in Thy great day,
For who aught to my charge shall lay?
Fully absolved from these I am,
From guilt and fear, from sin and shame."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The sky presents a variety of phenomena from which, by careful observation, we may learn when to expect showers and storms. There is nothing more common than for people to regard the tokens in the sky and take observations respecting the weather; especially, if they have important business to do which might be unfavorably affected by a change; or if they anticipate a pleasure dependent upon its condition. Jesus said, "When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat! And it cometh to pass." The Mediterranean Sea lay to the west of Palestine, and a cloud rising in that quarter showed the accumulation of vapor, and indicated a shower. Elijah understood this, when from the top of Carmel his servant saw the little cloud, like a man's hand, rising out of the sea, and giving warning to Ahab of an abundant rain, he escaped to Jezreel before it began. The Desert of Arabia lay south of Palestine, and a wind from that quarter, was accompanied with heat. Knowing this, the inhabitants could use means to exclude the hot air from their dwellings.

It was something to understand these signs and to profit by them. But a more important science was that of knowing the signs of the times to which they gave no heed, incurring the censure, "Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye discern not this time." It was the time of their visitation, and the concluding period of their national trial, which, on account of their culpable ignorance and unworthy conduct, was about to terminate in their national overthrow, and the destruction of their city and polity. Their lack of discernment arose from their sensuality and pride. Their unbelief was occasioned by their self-righteous formality, worldly-mindedness and hypocrisy. It was not for want of means that they were deficient in knowledge. The Word of God and the ordinance of religion were theirs. It was not from any natural defect that they were so stupid. They were intelligent beings, and capable of understanding; but their hearts had waxed gross, their ears were dull of hearing and their eyes they had closed, so that they could not see nor hear nor understand. The doom could be averted only by repentance toward God and faith in Christ! but they had made themselves incapable of repenting or believing. Yet they were inexcusable. The fault was their own.

In the ordinary business of life, men are generally disposed to compromise differences, which, if pushed to a legal result, might end in ruin. A prudent man avoids danger by timely precaution. He makes peace with his adversary before matters come to the worst.

We should bring the same prudence to bear on spiritual and eternal things which are of the last importance. We are called to the kingdom and glory of God, and urged to make instant preparation for that future state. Preparation can be made only in this life. We must work while it is called to-day; the night cometh when no man can work.

We must get ready and keep ready, that whether we live or die we may be found in Christ in peace at his coming; for he will come again to ransom his saints from death and glorify them with himself. We know not the day of his coming, yet there are signs which indicate its approach. It will come as a thief in the night upon a careless and indifferent world. It will take them by surprise. It will fall upon them as a snare. But if we watch and wait for it, it will not overtake us as a thief. Let us observe the signs of the times. There is a specialty in the times in which we live. We seem to be approaching some great crisis. What is it? It may be that the Lord is near! Are there no signs to indicate that the day of the Lord draweth nigh? Enough to excite in many minds apprehensions of some fearful overturnings of society in both church and state. Enough to enforce the Savior's admonition to watch. Watch, therefore, for ye know not the day or the hour when the Lord cometh.—The Prophetic Times and Watch Tower.

HE CARRIES ALL MY BURDEN.

E. A. BOYNTON.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee.—PSALM 55: 22.

My heart is happy, light and free;
Pray tell me why it should not be?
For Jesus is so kind to me,
He carries all my burden.

When days are dark and all goes wrong,
And clouds above my path are hung,
My loving Savior comes along,
And lifts my heavy burden.

And when with doubts and fears I'm tried,
And troubles thick on every side,
My Savior's arms he opens wide,
And takes away my burden.

When, weak and weary in the race,
I toil along with faltering pace,
My Savior comes with smiling face,
And carries all my burden.

And thus it is 'mid grief or care,
No matter when, no matter where;
My loving Lord is always there,
And carries all my burden.

O what a wondrous, matchless friend!
Who loves his people to the end;
Who always will their cause defend,
And carry all their burden.

In days to come, whate'er betide,
In Jesus Christ I'll still confide,
I know he surely will provide,
And carry all my burden.

And when these days of toil are o'er,
Upon that heavenly, shining shore
I'll dwell with him forevermore
Who carried all my burden.

St. John's, Mich.

MY EXPERIENCE.

AMOS SANFORD.

Early in the spring of 1868 I had a conversation with Dr. Alexander, of Prairie City, Ill., upon the nature of man, in the course of which he referred to a tract entitled "What is Man?" by M. Grant. I was then a member of the Free Will Baptist church, but was so much interested that I purchased from him "Spiritualism Unveiled" and other tracts. In April of that year I moved to Kansas, where I have lived ever since, until within the past week, when I moved to this place.

The writings of Bro. Grant led me to read the Bible for myself, and I am now rejoicing in the "hope of Israel" for which Paul was bound in chains. For seven long years I have been a careful Bible reader—a learner. It is my settled determination to continue to be a learner, follower or disciple of Jesus till he comes, or I am called to "sleep the sleep that knows no waking" except at the sound of the trump of God. I am trying to be an overcomer, that I may have "a part in the first resurrection," with the blessed and holy ones.

Seven years ago I went to Kansas with high hopes, and in which I was not disappointed. "Honors" seemed to be "easy," and I was elected Judge and declared to be Honorable the first year. Then I held a seat in the Legislature, and other positions of trust in which I won the applause of my fellow men. But the question "What is Man?" followed me, and in my retirement the Bible was my best, my truest friend. I got so after a while that I "searched the Scriptures daily," and finally I "left all" for Jesus. Not feeling satisfied with my F. W. B. immersion in 1866 (because I did not then believe the gospel), I was "buried with Christ by baptism" Feb. 19th, 1874, since which time I have been engaged in the proclamation of the "gospel of the kingdom"—the "good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people."

During the past year I have delivered over three hundred lectures and held five discussions in S. W. Mo. and S. E. Kansas. My former friends deserted me, as a matter of course; some mocked, some called me crazy, while others pitied me and tried to persuade me to quit preaching and return to the practice of law. One of the latter class—a Baptist, after finding that I could not be persuaded from my course said, "If we had known you wanted to preach, we would have helped you into a position where you could get $1000 or $1500 a year; but these 'soul-sleepers' will never pay you a cent." I have often thought there is more truth than poetry in the remark, but I am not discouraged. The Lord is near, and my constant, daily, hourly prayer is, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." The following text even now comforts me and encourages me to go on: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, AND VERILY THOU SHALT BE FED." Ps. 37: 3.

While I was a politician, lawyer, editor and legislator, I was addicted to the use of tobacco. Chewing and smoking cost me about $50 or $60 a year. The articles which appeared from time to time in the Crisis led me to think much upon the matter of smoking and chewing up so much of the Lord's money, and the injury it was doing me physically; but I could not command sufficient will-power to enable me to quit, until I became an obedient believer of the gospel. When I entered Jordan, I left pipe and tobacco on the other side. Praise the Lord for his goodness! I am now free from tobacco. I am nearly 39 years old, and I would advise all men, of my age and under (and women too, for women actually chew tobacco in this section and in the South), to quit the practice at once and for ever. But upon this question each one of God's children must be left to act for themselves. The adoption of church rules will not reach the case. The promise to overcomers (Rev. 3: 21) is stronger than any church creed.

Auna, Ill., March 22nd, 1875.

ARMAGEDDON AT HAND.

A careful survey of the existing European situation seems almost sufficient to justify a belief in the prediction of the enthusiasts who declare that the true interpretation of John's Apocalyptic vision shows that "the battle of the great day of God Almighty at Armageddon" is actually at hand. All Europe is at present like one vast camp. The nations are arming from the British Channel to the Ural Mountains; from the Mediterranean to the Baltic, as if with a prophetic understanding that a terrible and portentous crisis is at hand. According to the Paris Republique Francaise, a German "Camp of manœuvers for one hundred and fifty thousand men is about to be formed near Treves, under the immediate command of the Emperor. According to the Kolnische Zeitung (Cologne Journal) the French are about establishing a similar great camp for drill and military manœuvers near the German frontiers. The nations are becoming armies; the general masses of the people are being turned into soldiers. Russia has a greedy eye on India and the Sick Man. Austria has long coveted a portion of the territory of Turkey. France is said to be still cherishing feelings of bitterness, and revolving schemes of revenge.

There are also those who predict a great Ultramontane combination for the restoration of Rome and the temporal power of the Supreme Pontiff. Rumors of schemes of conquest, of plots, conspiracies, and new alliances fill the circumambient air, as motes people a sunbeam. The arsenals are busy shaping more deadly implements of destruction than were ever before known. The foundaries are casting collossal cannon, compared with which those heretofore used in warfare are but children's toys. The powder with which these mighty engines were to be charged was not thought to have sufficient power, and the world is now given to understand by the Baltic Gazette that the German government has discovered or secured the secret of a new "prismatic powder" for its heavy guns, which is immensely superior to any used or known elsewhere in Europe.

When we contemplate the present attitude of the Continental Powers; when we estimate the vast numbers of their standing armies; when we consider the amount of interruption to the arts of peace, and the crushing burdens upon the people, which they entail; when we see Germany and France arming to the teeth, and by their vast preparations compelling their neighbors to strain every nerve and tax every resource for the same purpose, in order to be ready for the fearful crisis which all seem to anticipate—when we see these things we may well feel thankful that our happy position, with no powerful nations upon our border, exempts us from such necessities; that with a feeble navy, and a standing army inferior to that of any fourth-rate power of the old world, we still draw peaceful breath, and sleep untroubled by dreams of danger from any external foe. —S. F. Chronicle, Jan. 30th, 1857.

WHAT IS IT TO FIND JESUS?

J. E. CLARK.

To be converted is to find Jesus. The believing, penitent soul discovers in the crucified Redeemer what he never saw before; he obtains from Christ what he never had before; he becomes what he never was before—a christian. What a precious treasure Christ becomes to the converted soul. He declares that something is changed. Ah! yes: it is the man's own heart, so that everything is different from what it was before.

We find in Jesus a rich and inexhaustible treasure. In finding Christ we find forgiveness of all our sins. He comes to us, as sinners, with the offer of pardon in his hand. It is a precious gift, stained with his own precious blood. When we bow in penitence before Jesus he speaks to our hearts—"Thy sins are forgiven thee." The old handcuffs and chains of bondage and condemnation are taken off, and pardon comes full and free.

Again, in finding Jesus we find great peace. He is the "Lord of peace." He "hath made peace by the blood of his cross." The enmity between our offended God and ourselves is taken away. A half hour of communion with Jesus does more good than anything else. It restores the equilibrium of a disturbed mind. It produces a calm. When Jesus possesses the soul all is peace, patience and love. The Lord will keep in perfect peace all those whose hearts are stayed on him.

Wisdom is also found in finding Jesus. This is better and deeper than knowledge. I have seen many people who not only received grace by conversion, but at the same time a degree of good sense. Their minds grow steadier, their judgment more sound. Religion clears their minds, warms their affections, and cheers their hearts; and the Holy Spirit guides them into all truth. Before conversion they walked in darkness; since they found Christ they walk in the light, even as he is in the light.

If unconverted men knew the joy, peace, wisdom, pure affection, that the religion of Christ produces, they would seek and find him—the chiefest and most lovely of all earth's sons. They who seek him early shall find him.

SPIRITISTS' TRICKS.—Prof. S. S. Baldwin, in Cooper Institute recently exposed the dark closet revelry. He said that he would show the audience how the Eddy Brothers, Warren, Slade, Foster, the Davenports, and others humbugged the people. There was a cabinet on the stage about seven feet high, four feet deep, and six feet wide, with folding doors and a small window in front. On its walls were hung bells, a dilapidated tambourine, and a fish horn. Mr. Baldwin was tied by a committee, the doors were shut, and in less than ten seconds hands appeared at the window, bells were rung, and the tambourine flew out on the stage. The double seance tricks of the Davenport Brothers, imitations of the Eddy Brothers, and Katie King materializations were given with wonderful rapidity and clearness, and clearly explained to be only smart feats of jugglery. —New York Sun.

ONE MORE.

R. AND E. S. WILLARD.

One more added to the blessed communion seasons in the church in our house, which we have enjoyed this long winter, which to us has seemed short on account of these precious weekly returns.

On this occasion our beloved Sr. Harrold, from Hammonton, was with us, and refreshed us much in the Lord; for she could tell of his power to raise up when she was brought to the gates of death; and by faith she yet lives to praise him. Also Bro. H. T. Taylor, who has just returned from England, spoke to us from these precious words—"And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." He was very happy in his remarks, which were made a precious introduction to a conference, one with another, that revived and comforted us all, and quickened and encouraged one dear soul to own her Lord and Master, and go on her way rejoicing.

With you, dear christian friends, we are close observers of the signs of our times, which truly are portentous, and we do bless God, as we read our various mediums of communication, for faithful expounders of his Word in these perilous times. Pray for us.

Haddonfield, N. J., March 21st, 1875.

CHILD OF SORROW.

Child of sorrow, child of sorrow,
Murmur not beneath the rod,
There may be a joyful morrow
Treasured up for thee with God.

When the night of pain is darkest,
When thy path is cold and drear,
Trust in God—he surely marketh
Every pang and every tear.

If thy spirit bow before him
With a heartfelt humble prayer,
If thy fervent faith adore him,
He will banish thy despair.

He will teach thee resignation,
He will give thee heartfelt peace,
Blessed hope and consolation,
Riches and immortal bliss.

BISMARCK IN DEBATE.

Bismarck is by no means a finished, not even a ready or natural orator. The knightly appearance of the Prince, his ease of manner, and, above all, his reputation as diplomatist and statesman, would lead us to suppose him an orator—either one who would deliver a profound and well arranged speech without hesitation or effort, or, still more, an orator of natural eloquence, whose words and figures would flow from his lips as the creations of the moment, and entrance or enkindle the hearts of his hearers. But this is not the case. Occasionally he may be seen at his desk winging his way rapidly with his quill over a narrow strip of paper, while some member is on the platform. All know what this means, and at a slight bow of his head the President announces that Prince Bismarck, Chancellor of the Empire, has the floor. As he rises there is a general demand for silence all over the house, with the exclamation, "He is speaking!" He inclines his body toward the Assembly, winds his thumbs around each other, and casts an occasional glance at the House; but he stops, hesitates, sometimes even stammers, and corrects himself; he seems to struggle with his words, which ascend unwillingly to his lips; after two or three there will be a short pause, when one can almost hear a suppressed swallow. He speaks without gesture, feeling, or emphasis, and often fails in the accentuation of final syllables, so as to weaken his thought.

One wonders if this is the man with a parliamentary career behind him of more than a quarter of a century, during which period he has been in every legislative body of his country, meeting with bitterest opposition from the Liberal party in his early career, parrying their most caustic words in kind, and replying, with wonderful presence of mind, by the wittiest impromptus or the most cutting sarcasm. It is the same man, and presently he will prove it. Gradually his speech flows with more warmth, and unfolds its peculiar attraction: a series of original, fresh, gritty, and significant expressions, which tell more by their power than their beauty. His speeches are collections of sentences rather than the development of a smooth and logical train of reasoning. Many of them have gone into history as proverbial, such as "Cataline existences," "Blood and iron," "Austria must move its centre of gravity toward the Orient," etc.

Some months ago, after listening to long diatribes about the evils of the recent wars, and the burdens which they have brought upon the people as a nation, he quietly arose and said: "After each one of the recent wars the nation has enjoyed a greater amount of parliamentary liberty than before them." This was so strikingly true that it was folly to argue that they had led to tyranny. And he closed by saying: "But, nevertheless, gentlemen, the German nation has a right to expect from us that we shall prevent the return of such a catastrophe; and I am convinced that the allied governments desire nothing so much as to effect this purpose." With this beautiful admonition, simple though dignified, and expressed with fervor, he electrified the audience as if he were the greatest orator, and then sat down amid deafening applause from all parts of the house. Thus, with apparently no oratorical power, he seldom takes the floor without confirming his nation in the belief that, take him all in all, he is a statesman such as Germany has never before enrolled in her annals, and whom the world at large may well envy her in possessing.—Prof. Wm. Wells, in Scribner for April.

COMING hastily into a chamber, I had almost thrown a crystal hour-glass; fear lest I had, made me grieve as if I had broken it; but, alas! how much precious time have I cast away without any regret! The hour-glass was but crystal—each hour a pearl; that but like to be broken, this lost outright; that but casually—this done willfully. A better hour-glass might be bought, but time lost once, lost ever. Thus we grieve more for toys than for treasure. Lord, give me an hour-glass, not to be by me, but in me! Teach me to number my days. An hour-glass to turn me, that I may turn my heart to wisdom.—Thomas Fuller.

HUMAN NATURE is like a bad clock; it may point to the right time now and then, or be made to strike the hours, but its inward frame is all wrong. Striving against nature, by our own efforts, is like holding a weathercock by the hand; as soon as the force is removed, it will veer with the wind.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SOMETHING WRONG.

BY MRS. J. CARTER.

"When I get a great, large woman, I will make all the cake I want, and give all the little girls some. I won't be stingy, and when I have cake tell a story, and say I have none, just to keep from giving a little girl some, like ma."

"When I grow up, I will keep all the kittens, and not drown them as Uncle John does, for I guess kittens like to live as well as we do."

"I will never whip my little girls, when they tear their clothes, or break dishes, or put anything out of place. Girls, look here, and see where my ma whipped me yesterday. 'Tis all black and blue. I only broke a plate. I often wish I could die as Esther did. Her ma used to whip her every day, and now she says, If Esther was alive, she would never whip her."

I sat by my open window, listening to the busy tongues of a party of little girls, playing in another yard, and all at once the play had ceased, and they were talking with great earnestness, and the wisdom falling from their lips arrested my attention, and the little rosy-cheeked girl, of six years, who wished for cake, I knew. Her mother, a near neighbor of mine, was a member of a fashionable church. Her name always headed the lists of charity; her children were always fashionably dressed, and went regularly to the Sabbath school. Often had I heard her spoken of as a pattern woman, and the entertainments given by her were pronounced faultless. I heard her pastor say, "Any church would stand secure with half a dozen members like her, for she was always at the prayer-meetings; and if she was not at church on Sabbath, he knew she was very ill." Yet the little daughter could brand her with falsehood, and impress her words as truthful upon her little hearers. Yes, there was "something wrong," and there was growing up in the dear child a lack of confidence in the one whom God designed should lead her to him.

Little Margaret I knew grieved for her pet kittens, as she lived just across the way. I heard her crying one morning, "Oh give me my kittens. I will take them away;" and so earnest was she, that her uncle gave them to her with the understanding that she was to let her playmates have them. She took her three kittens, aud found homes for them, kissed them good bye, and went home with her heart a little lighter for the thought she had saved their lives; but the next morning, her pets had found their way back to their old home, and she was up just in time to see her uncle put them in a bag, and take them to the creek, and drown them. Oh! how she talked, and plead, but all of no use; and from that time Uncle John was no longer a friend of hers. He had made a wound which time would scarcely heal. There was something wrong, for Uncle John was a member of an Orthodox church; lived up to all its rules strictly; was known among men as an honorable, upright christian gentleman; but to his little niece, he was the embodiment of cruelty."

"I will never whip my little girls." Poor little Jane! I saw her arm when she was showing it to the girls, and I knew she was telling the truth. Many a cruel blow must have fallen on the frail little arm. My heart ached when I heard her wish for death, for I had been with Mrs. Brown when her little Esther died; had listened all night long to wailings and regrets for the cruelty to her child, and with what pathos she would repeat over and over the question asked her by her little Esther, "Will God whip me, mamma?" Regrets and tears could not bring Esther back, but it seemed to me it might influence the mother of little Jane to stay her hand, and govern herself; so I, full of zeal in little Jane's cause, went to see Mrs. Brown, and urged her to plead with Jane's mother.

"It is of no use, she said. "I have told her over and over again how wrong she is doing; but the more I talk, the harder she whips; and as we are both members of one church, I took the liberty to tell her it was not Christ-like to crucify her child as she was doing; and she asked me if I was not Satan reproving sin?" I could only say, I was heart-broken over my own wrong doing.

After I left her, I called on our minister, and asked him to talk with her. He told me it was not in his line of duty, so I concluded to say no more, yet I know "something is wrong." I went home, and to my closet, where I might plead with Jesus to show those who have the care of the dear little ones, to live as becometh righteousness, living daily lives of truth, patience, and love; leading the lambs to Him, who has said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Nevada City, Cal.

DIPHTHERIA.

The disease diptheria has been very prevalent and fatal during the past season in almost all the large cities, and also in the small country towns. It has been confined mostly to children; but there have been a great many grown people who have had the disease, and some have died from it. When a very young child—one less than a year old—has diptheria, under the ordinary treatment it is likely to receive it is quite likely to die; but the older the child the more hope of recovery. In the city of New York there has been as many as fifty or sixty deaths every week from this disease for many weeks, though it has been very largely confined to the tenement houses, where hundreds of people live in confined rooms, breathe foul air, wear dirty clothes, never bathe; and where the drainage of the house is very imperfect, allowing the escape into the rooms of sewer air in great abundance. In those parts of the city where the drainage is perfect and reasonable attention is paid to cleanliness, diptheria is almost unknown. The same is true of the source and locality of this dread disease in all cities. But how is it in country towns, where people are not crowded together, where the air is supposed to be pure, where light and air have little obstruction? Does it always spread from one person to another, or does it come from some source outside of human beings? There is no doubt it spreads from one person to another, but there is also no doubt but it arises from filth.

So many instances are on record of diptheria breaking out in a family which had not been exposed to any human source of the disease, that other sources must be looked for. The following case is an instance of how diptheria may arise from filth. It was in a family of nine—husband and wife, four children and three servants. One day, while the wind was blowing toward the house, a cesspool was emptied about twenty yards from the house, into which the drains of the building emptied. Three or four days after the four children became sick with diptheria, as did the wife and two servants. None escaped but the husband, who was away that day, and one servant. This is a sample of some twenty cases where diptheria has broken out in a family of ten or a dozen of persons who had not been exposed to the disease, but had been exposed to the emanations of cesspools. Now such sources of diptheria are to be found in country places as well as in city places, and there is no doubt but the lack of knowledge and sanitary care in many a household has been the reason why this disease is nearly as common in the country as in the city.

The way, then, to stamp out diptheria is to wash away the filth, to have a standard of cleanliness equal to that the Quakers have; to, in other words, keep everything clean, inside and outside our houses. So, too, when a case breaks out in a neighborhood, at once make a sanitary survey of the house, inside and out, also the barn, the water-closets, the sinks; and, without fail, have every source of evil removed by disinfectants and water.

It may be said that diptheria sometimes goes to clean houses, and that it does not always spread where there is filth. This is true; but in all such cases, if the facts could all be known, there would be no contradiction. These infectious diseases spread by seeds, and they do not exist in all filth, or under all circumstances. Filth may exist and they be absent; and so, too, where there is apparent cleanliness there may be unseen filth, as there is generally in most places. In former days the great word was educate, educate, EDUCATE. It is a grand word, and education has done much for our country; but there is another word we must add to it, a word of three syllables, a word not truly appreciated, a word the real meaning of which is unknown to most people. That word should be the watchword of sanitary reformers; it should be on their banners; it should be printed in capitals on the walls of all the houses; it should be taught to every child; every servant should know its meaning, and practice it. That word is Cleanliness. In a clean world there will be no diptheria.—Herald of Health.

FRUIT AS FOOD.

Fruit is food; it should be used as such. It should form an essential part of every meal. Not simply placing upon the table a little of one kind of sauce to be dished out as a dainty in small sauce dishes, or to be eaten as a luxury, ever so sparingly. Fruit should be set before our families and guests in variety, in abundance, both the acid or sub-acid, and the sweet fruits, leaving to each a choice as to what kind shall be eaten, leaving to the taste to decide which, then and there, is best. This fruit I would have either at the commencement, or during, or at the closing of each meal, according to the desire or appetite of each. Perfect freedom as to time, kinds, or quantity is the rule. Fruit should be enjoyed with family and friends at regular meal times, never to be selfishly eaten alone between meals. None know the full value of fruit as food who are constantly munching self-indulgently by themselves, to say nothing of the very unhealthy practice of eating between meals.

Reformers are more and more studying the indications of nature, as made known to us in the tastes, needs and callings of unsophisticated childhood; hence the systems of Froebel, Pestalozzi and others, in education; and if we would seek to know the why of children's love for fruit, that inordinate desire for sweets that we witness everywhere, that craving for the juicy acids, we should not, as now, deny them that which God designed should form an essential part of their every day living. Vinegar is not a substitute for the tart of the fruit, neither is common sugar. Nature's gift for the loss of her conserved and perfect cell-formed sweetness, as found in the well ripened products of orchard, garden and vineyard. And such fruits in all their rich variety of goodness, flavor and richness, may be had upon our tables every day the whole year round.

To be sure, there will be two or three months during which but one or two kinds of our common productions will be in their season; but thanks to Alden and other inventors, and to the process of canning, and still more to the art of preserving in fruit houses in perfect freshness from year to year, we can now, at a trifling expense, enjoy, not only the real fruit, but have it full flavored also. But of this in due season.—Herald of Health.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DUTY.

S. P. HOWLAND.

Christians, wake! the time is nearing
When our blessed Lord shall come;
Signs the christian's heart are cheering,—
Signs that we are almost home.

Let us then be up and doing,
Ever battling for the Lord;
Up! it is Jehovah's calling;
Go and teach his blessed Word.

Though the world despise, forsake us,
Though we're but a little band,
Crowns of endless life await us;
We shall see that promised land.

Onward! ever ready, willing,
Let us work before 'tis night;
Up! and do our Savior's bidding;
Up! and stand for truth and right.

Let the world despise and leave us,
Yet our Savior will descend;
And eternal life he'll bring us,
If we're faithful to the end.

THE VERY SAME JESUS.

J. R. SMITH.

"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1: 11.

These words of comfort were spoken unto the apostles by two shining angels, who were commissioned by God many years ago to bring the glad tidings. And although the common theology of the day teaches that Jesus Christ will never come upon this earth again, except by his Spirit, yet God's living Word informs us that he will come again; that he will come personally and bodily, and that it will be the very same Jesus. The Word of God explicitly informs us that it will be the very same Jesus whose feet pressed the soil of Mount Olivet, where he had gathered his disciples who witnessed his ascension, after he had given his commandments unto them. It will be the very same Jesus who suffered and died upon Calvary's mountain; the very same Jesus that was buried in Joseph's new tomb; the very same Jesus that burst the bands of death, that led captivity captive, and rose again the third day according to the Scriptures, who is coming again. Some were unbelieving and skeptical about his resurrection at first, and thought he was a spirit; but Jesus gave them many infallible proofs of his identity. He showed them the prints of the nails in his feet and in his hands; he partook of a broiled fish and of a honeycomb in their presence; they handled him, and found that he had flesh and bones; and were fully convinced that he was not a spirit, but that he was the very same Jesus.

"After his resurrection he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve, and was afterwards seen of more than five hundred brethren at once"; to whom also he showed himself alive after his crucifixion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking to them of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God; and being assembled with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? and he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which God hath put in his own power, but ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come, in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Glory to God! for this blessed assurance. Jesus lives; and because he lives we shall live also. He has ascended up on high, and has passed into the heavens as our great High Priest. He is seated upon his Father's throne, "angels, authorities and powers being made subject unto him." All power both in heaven and in earth is given unto him. He is the Mighty God, the Prince of Peace, Wonderful, Counsellor, our Advocate upon the Father's throne, making intercession for us according to his will, in the courts of glory. But he is coming back again to receive his bride, who is watching for his appearing; and it will be the very same Jesus. When he was here upon earth with his disciples, he promised them that he would come again. He had previously told his disciples that he was going away, and that where he went they could not go. They were grieved and troubled about his going away to leave them, and to comfort their hearts Jesus said—"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." Glory to God! for this "blessed hope."

Dear saints of God, let not your heart be troubled. Listen to the promise as it falls from the lips of your crucified Redeemer—"I will come again." Dear, suffering, tried, and weary ones, lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. The very same Jesus those Galileans saw as he went to heaven in a cloud—the very same Jesus who walked upon Mount Olivet's lofty heights—the very same Jesus who healed the sick, who opened the eyes of the blind, and caused the deaf to hear—the very same Jesus who stopped the funeral procession and raised the widow's son; who spoke the life-giving word and a dead Lazarus came forth, is coming again. He is coming to raise our loved ones who are so silently sleeping in their dusty beds. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so [in like manner] them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." He is coming to redeem his people from death's cruel bondage. The monster Death shall then be destroyed, "together with him who had the power of death, which is the devil. We shall then "see Jesus as he is, and be made like him." The righteous living will be changed, and have bodies fashioned "like unto his glorious body"; bodies that will never feel another infimity; bodies that will never know another sigh nor tear nor groan; neither shall they have any more pain; for the former things shall have passed away. Glory to God! How sweet it will be when our weary feet shall at last press the shining strand beyond the dark river of death, and we range the fair banks of deliverance and pluck ambrosial fruit from life's fair tree, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

Hallelujah to God for this "blessed hope," which has been the beacon light of joy and comfort to God's dear saints all these long and weary years. It was the hope of the resurrection, and the personal coming of this same Jesus, that cheered the heart of good old Job while wading through the deep waters of affliction. Were it not for this hope in Christ, Job would have been an unhappy being. But listen as he breaks forth in language of inspiration which is unmistakable—"O that my words were now written! O that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead into the rock forever! for I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

New Bedford, Mass.

"THE TWO ADVENTS OF CHRIST."

Every one who receives the testimony of the Scriptures believes that Jesus Christ hath come in the flesh" (1 John 4: 2), and also that he "is coming in the flesh" (2 John 7.) There are two advents; the first is past, the second is future. At his first advent he appeared to the Jewish people as a root out of a dry ground—the despised representative of a line that had long sunk into obscurity, having no form nor comeliness to make him desirable—the powerless heir of a fallen throne. At his second advent, he will far transcend in the glory of his condition and the greatness of his power all that they had conceived respecting him. Amidst the obscurity and meanness of his surroundings at his first advent there were not wanting indications of his real estate as the Son of God. The angelic annunciation—the appearance of the angels to the shepherds of Bethlehem—the star which led the wise men to the place of his birth—his converse with the doctors—the dove-like symbol and the heavenly voice at his baptism—the transfiguration on Mount Tabor, and the wonderful miracles he wrought, bespoke him more than man, proclaimed him Son of God. He also frequently referred, in his teachings, to a glory he had previously sustained, and spake of his coming again in that glory. After telling his disciple of the sufferings he should endure in accomplishing the object of his first advent, and that they would also be called to suffer for his name's sake; he depicted to their minds the glory of his second manifestation, and promised them a share in that exalted condition. He said, "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

He came the first time, in accordance with the purpose of God to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. He will come the second time, according to the same purpose, to complete the work of redemption, to save and glorify his elect church, and subdue and reconcile all things to God under his government. There is abundant evidence in the Old Testament Scriptures that Christ must come twice to fulfill the purpose of God. Take the first declaration of redemption made to fallen man, in the doom pronounced upon the serpent, the devil, who beguiled Eve. "I will put enmity between thee and the woman and between thy seed and her seed. He shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Christ is the woman's seed, and the bruising of his heel indicates a condition of suffering, to be succeeded by a triumph in bruising the serpent's head. The first advent fulfilled the predicted sufferings; the second shall fulfill the predicted triumph.

Isaiah contemplates the Messiah in two different conditions. In one he is a plant out of a dry ground, destitute of worldly rank and power; of sorrowful mein and compassionate heart; relieving the sufferings and healing the sicknesses of mankind, and by his stripes giving health and cure to the fallen and depraved. In the other he is a glorious prince, distinguished by the most exalted titles, sitting upon the throne of David and reigning over the house of Jacob. It is evident that these two conditions cannot be predicted of the same person at the same time; and since they both belong to Christ they belong to different manifestations, and require two advents for their accomplishment. These two conditions are seen in all the prophets and the Psalms, showing that Christ must first suffer and afterwards enter into his glory.

The first class of these predictions has been literally accomplished in the first advent of the Son of God; and the second class will also be most completely fulfilled in its season. The advent of humiliation and suffering was the most improbable of the two; and yet strong and incongruous as it was that the Son of God should take the form of a servant in the likeness of sinful flesh and suffer the death of the cross, it was exactly fulfilled; and shall not the advent of power and glory which is consonant with his nature and relations be also literally fulfilled?

Surely he who came forth out of Bethlehem as the seed of the woman in the incarnation, will come again in the clouds of heaven, as the Ancient of days in glorified humanity, in that very body with which he ascended into heaven. For the angels of the ascension testified to the gazing disciples, saying, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Prophetic Times.

ACTIVE SUBMISSION.—No. 3.

AND

PAUL'S "THORN IN THE FLESH."

B. MATHEWSON.

The New Testament Scriptures afford some striking examples of submission where God did not see fit to grant their request. But one thing is apparent; that it is always quite safe to "carry every thing to God in prayer." Indeed the Lord gives his children a special invitation to "cast all their care upon him," adding this affectionate reason—"He careth for you." Blessed assurance! Do we duly appreciate this divine asseveration?

One of the literati of Israel's church, whose strong but honest prejudice needed a miraculous interposition to turn his mind in favor of the Man of Calvary, yielded when he saw where truth lay, and became a mighty champion without digressing from the straight and narrow path; equally bold in defense of the cause, whether before courtiers or peasants; declaring that this same despised but now risen and glorified Jesus is indeed the Christ, and that salvation can only be obtained by believing in his name.

God loves such a faithful, uncompromising heart; but, strange as it may appear to the inexperienced, he suffers just such a man to be tried by one of Satan's messengers. Again and again did this faithful man of God have recourse to prayer, until the Lord gave him to understand his request could not be granted, but that he would take care of him, and make this apparent hindrance work out for the glory of God. Though the clouds looked dark and ominous, Paul believed God, and so perfect was his submission that he even gloried in these obstacles, before so painfully trying; believing God would give strength for every emergency, just as he will all who trust him.

So far as this entire, yea, exultant submission is concerned, it matters not what the thorn or obstacle to be removed was; Paul gloried in having the will of God done, though his desire was not granted.

Where so many learned theologians have disagreed upon what constituted Paul's "thorn in the flesh," from which he so actively sought deliverance, it may seem pedantic for one unskilled in theological lore to say anything. But if the Scriptures interpret themselves, we will rejoice. In 2 Cor. 12: 7, the apostle states the fact of having a "thorn in the flesh," and at the same time as distinctly states that it is "the messenger of Satan," and then just as clearly declares that the work of this messenger is to buffet him.

Now let us look at each of these phrases, and see if we can find their meaning. Thorns were the fruit of man's sin; and the wicked are compared to thorns in the Old and New Testament Scriptures; and at last they are to be destroyed, "as thorns cut up and burned in the fire." Matt. 7: 16, 19; 2 Sam. 23: 6, 7; Nahum 1: 10; Isa. 33: 1, 2.

God warns the Israelites to exterminate the idolatrous nations, and informs them what the effect will be if they neglect to obey this command. In Num. 33: 55, it reads thus: "But if ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you, then it shall come to pass that those which ye let remain of them shall be pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell." In Josh. 23: 13, God tells them that these nations shall be "thorns in their eyes until they perish." In Judges, 2nd chap., an angel is sent to reiterate this matter thus: "And ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land; ye shall throw down their altars: but ye have not obeyed my voice; why have ye done this? Wherefore I also said, I will not drive them out from before you; but they shall be as thorns in your sides, and their gods shall be a snare unto you."

In the days of Ezekiel, Israel had become exceedingly wicked and rebellious, utterly refusing to hearken unto God. And God calls them impudent and hard-hearted; and in Ezek. 2: 6, he calls them briers, thorns and scorpions. Also in chap. 28: 24, the enemies of God's people are compared to thorns. Many other passages show that thorns were much used to designate those who greatly annoyed God's people.

The term "messenger" is so clearly understood, by Scripture as well as lexicographers, to mean "one who carries messages from party to party," as to preclude the necessity of further explanation. Here, then, is a messenger employed by Satan to buffet the apostle.

To "buffet" is to strike, attack, contend. It may be with the hand; it may be with the tongue. It seems to be the one peculiar business of this messenger to undo or overthrow that for which the apostle so ardently labored—salvation through Christ alone.

We see he often refers to some, in this very epistle, who are laboring to subvert his teaching. He speaks very boldly on this point. A few verses before the mention of this "thorn in the flesh," he warns and argues against a false apostle. No doubt it was a person of ability; probably a fluent speaker, and of apparent piety. The words of the warning, that "Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light," look as though he were prepossessingly pious in his manners, plausible in argument, and they were in danger of being captivated by him.

What more distressing to a faithful servant of God than to see a church, for whom he has travailed, turned away from God and himself by a false yet pretended friend! Of course this false apostle would use the best weapon his Satanic majesty proffered, to bring contempt upon Paul. The weapon of ignorance could not be brought to bear, because his deep erudition was widely known; his cogent reasoning from the Scriptures, proving this to be indeed the very Christ, was well understood. His honesty and moral integrity were invulnerable; and his self-sacrifice none could deny. Then what weapon shall be used to lessen Paul in their estimation? His writings were profound, but his personal appearance and elocution were anything but prepossessing. The apostle was himself aware of this, and expressed gratitude to those churches that waived this infirmity, and received him none the less as the apostle of God, because he lacked a commanding figure and eloquent utterance. In Gal. 4: 14 is a sample: "And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus."

This apostle often makes mention of his infirmities, which, as before proved, were not of a mental nature, but the possessing of an inferior body and defective speech. Also, it has been shown that a thorn is a favorite comparison of the wicked, who greatly annoy God's people. That the simple reading of the case as given—"a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet me"—proves this messenger to be the thorn, and his work a flagellation (of some kind) of the apostle.

Now, is it not reasonable that the strongest weapon would be that of ridiculing Paul's person and speech, which had been called contemptible? Several commentators are of the opinion that it was this false apostle who had seduced some of the Corinthians into an ill opinion of Paul, on account of his mean appearance and exterior disadvantages, who calls his speech too contemptible to be listened to by the wise (chap. 10: 1–10). The author of the Cottage Bible states that Lucien Treiphon called this apostle "The big-nosed, bald-pated Galilean, who had traveled through the air into the third heaven."

There are ingenious and subtle men, who could do much in some communities by taking such a course, especially if they possess intellectual ability, and are in deep earnest. Who does not know that it must be a great cross for one, especially *un*comely in person and greatly defective in utterance, to stand before a congregation and preach, when ability is engaged to make this uncomeliness bear against this precious doctrine, and to bring it with himself into disrepute and degradation? Is it any marvel that an apostle should pray for deliverance from such a thorn? And then, the answer God gave to his earnest entreaty for redress from this trial further proves it to be physical uncomeliness, of which this minister of Satan availed himself to set the apostle with his doctrine at nought. This is God's answer: "And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness."

The comment of Adam Clarke on this verse is in accordance with my mind. I transcribe it: "Thou shalt not be permitted to sink under these afflictions. Thy enemies shall not be able to prevail against thee. The more violently thou art afflicted and tried, being upheld by my power, and prospered in all thy labors, the more eminently will my power be seen and acknowledged. For the weaker the instrument I use, the more the power of my grace shall be manifested."

Scott thus speaks: "A thorn, fixed and rankling in the flesh, would give great and constant pain; so some particular trials of the apostle caused uneasiness to his mind of a similar nature. Probably these arose from the personal defects of which he was conscious, which gave his enemies, especially the false apostles, a color for reviling and deriding him. These things seemed to obstruct his usefulness. Being thus constantly harassed and 'buffeted' he besought the Lord to remove this thorn."

I was not aware until the present hour that so much from commentators was with me on this point; but I forbear to give more.

This apostle, upon receiving assurance from the Lord that he should have strength for his day, and that God would get the more glory by using a weak, uncomely instrument, exultantly exclaims, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." He now sees that Christ will be the more magnified by having this thorn remain, therefore he takes pleasure in these very infirmities, from which he had so earnestly prayed to be delivered. When the apostle says—"There was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan," why say it is not a messenger of Satan? When the Scriptures prove that his work was to buffet (strike or attack) this apostle, and bring him and his work to nought, why not receive it? When it is clearly proven by Scripture as well as history that his bodily presence was weak and uncomely, with a very defective utterance, why not believe this the weapon used to prick and goad this man of God? Why not take the plain simple reading of the Scriptures, rather than seek for some cabalistic or hidden meaning?

"THE VALLEY OF THE SHADOW OF DEATH."

J. A. GOODRICH.

The valley of the shadow of death. The child of God regards the 23rd Psalm with peculiar tenderness. Other portions of Scripture may be too abstruse for our narrow comprehension, or too high for the scope of our faith, but around this simple portion the thoughts of the young christian and the mature saint alike delight to gather and linger. The 23rd Psalm should be read in connection with the 22nd and 24th; for the three linked together furnish a sublime picture of the complete redemptive work of our blessed Lord. In the 22nd Psalm we behold him as the good Shepherd, and in the midst of such agony as finds utterance in the bitter wail of the sixty-ninth Psalm; from out of the darkness of the cross comes the sweet tones of eternal consolation for lost and perishing ones. The good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. In the 23rd Psalm our Lord is presented as the great Shepherd standing forth in resurrection power. He has conquered death; he has limited Satan; he has atoned for our sins; and now, as the interceding High Priest, he ever lives in the courts of heaven to save the sinner, to plead for the saint, and to guide and defend all who submit to his divine leading.

In the 24th Psalm we get a glimpse of Jesus as he will be, when as the chief Shepherd he appeareth in his glory—the King of his saints, the Judge of his enemies, and the Lord of the whole earth. Thus when salvation is accomplished, intercession completed, and judgment executed, the themes of these three Psalms shall constitute the burden of one triumphant song to the Lamb. Let us turn to the fourth verse of the twenty-third Psalm.

Two interpretations have been given to this portion of the Word. One class have found its application in life, the other in death. The former discern the counterpart of this dark valley in the sorrows, and temptations, and doubts which believers encounter during their earthly pilgrimage, while the latter regard it as a vivid picture of the dark Jordan of death, through whose chilling waters the feet of countless saints must tread, ere immortality shall be exchanged for glory.

The only safety of every christian is in his leader; and in him there is, indeed, perfect security; though Satan hurl ten thousand weapons of destruction against him, they shall all fall harmless. Blessed thought! the rod of his correction may bend our necks, but the staff of his divine promises shall also support us when weary and ready to faint. As Israel of old was borne in remembrance before God, so our priestly Shepherd, inside the veil, makes our wants, and griefs, and our infirmities the occasion for his intercession.

But if it be that early training and life-long prejudice hinder some of us from seeing any other than the one meaning, namely, a view of the dying hour, three thoughts in this chapter shed a surprising brightness across the picture. We notice first, that a valley is spoken of; then it is the valley of a shadow, and lastly, there is a walk through it. We think of valleys as places of dreariness and danger; but there is also another view, equally true; the valleys of earth are its most fertile spots; and are not the believer's valleys his places of richest blessings? I think so. Is it not when his humility and contrition are most manifest, that streams of refreshing flow forth in greatest abundance from the sympathizing Christ? It is even thus. Our times of lowliness are his opportunities of exaltation for us; our seasons of sorest need his moments of promptest succor. So when the better experience of the final hour comes, the saint will find abounding grace awaits to stay his panting soul, and bear him safely to his rest.

The word shadow occurs in this verse, and that one word alone disarms it of its terrors. The shadow of a substance can never harm us. A temporary death, a conquered grave, is all that remains to terrify the christian. Only shadows of the once dreadful reality. Listen to the voice of Him who has led captivity captive: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen. And have the keys of hell and of death." "Because I live, ye shall live also."

The experience is spoken of as a walk through. Death shall not forever hold us in its bands. Thank the Lord! The resurrection of the Lord is the earnest of our own resurrection. The weariness and bitterness shall have speedy accomplishment, and when the journey through the valley is ended, we shall enter into light, life, and joy unutterable. The ungodly flee before destruction, but the godly have no occasion to thus hasten away. Calmly as men walk for pleasure, the saint may walk through the valley of death. "Thou art with me," is his reason for not fearing. He has the assurance of a divine, abiding presence to the end.

TRIAL OF FAITH.

H. P. SIKES.

"That the trial of your faith being much more precious than that of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 1: 7.

True faith, or confidence in the goodness and promises of God, must always be tried. It must be made manifest to angels, to devils, and to men, of what sort it is, whether genuine, or spurious.

There is one particular phrase or kind of faith on which I design, with the help of the Lord, to say a few words. It is that species of faith which multitudes, and myself also, have possessed, and which has been tried year after year for these many long years, concerning the greatest and most glorious event that mortal eyes have ever gazed upon,—the immediate coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Again and again has it been suggested to me by the great arch enemy of all good, that possibly I might be mistaken after all;—that possibly my hopes and expectations of soon seeing Jesus might all be built upon the sand. And repeatedly—perhaps scores of times—during these twenty-six and a half years past, have I reviewed the whole ground with the utmost care, and with the most earnest prayer to God, that he would preserve me from believing error, and that he would lead me into the truth on this momentous and all-important subject.

And the invariable result has been, I have come out of the ordeal each time more firmly rooted and grounded upon the hope of the gospel. Yes, brethren, there is but one alternative; either we must believe that our dear and blessed Master is soon coming to reign on the earth, or, we are driven to take the fearful ground (which almost makes me shudder to think of), of rejecting the Bible and all revealed religion. There is no middle ground. The same unbelief that rejects the former (when properly presented to the mind), would also reject the latter, were there no hindering power.

Here, then, we are shut up to believe this grand and glorious truth—the King of kings is soon coming to reign. But our faith in this great and crowning event has been severely tested. Yet this is no strange and uncommon thing. Indeed, all christians that have ever lived, have had to have their faith in God and his promises tried; some in one way, some in another. Especially must the last generation of christians, who are to be translated, like the prophet Elijah, experience a trial of faith corresponding in some feeble measure, to the transcendant magnitude of the glorious event which they are anticipating.

But suppose, for a moment, that the coming of the Lord had taken place in 1843; I ask where would have been the trial of faith in relation to it? The Advent brethren were believing and expecting that it would come; and had there been no disappointment, there would of course have been no trial. But let no christian think that he is going to glide into the kingdom of God without having his faith tried. Saints never have done it, and never will do it.

Look, for instance, at David. God had promised to give him the throne of Israel, and the prophet Samuel had been sent to anoint him to be king; but his faith in the promise of God that he should be king must be thoroughly tested. Accordingly, he is most bitterly persecuted by the wicked king Saul (for God often makes use of the wicked to try and chasten the righteous); and he seeks in every possible way to put them to death. He hunts and pursues him from mountain to mountain, from cave to cave, and from desert to desert, until, almost despairing that God's promise ever would be fulfilled, David sorrowfully exclaims, "I shall now one day perish by the hand of Saul; there is nothing better for me than that I should flee into the land of the Philistines," etc. While there, his seven years trial terminates. Saul and his sons are slain in battle, and he is called to reign on the throne of Israel.

We might also mention the sojourning of the Israelites in Egypt, as another example. Again and again had it been promised them that their people as a nation should possess the land of Canaan. The antitypical Canaan is doubtless yet in the future; but the land of Canaan or Palestine was promised them as a nation. Yet, for four hundred years were they left to groan and to sigh under the most abject and cruel bondage. But their cries that God would remember his promise were at length answered. Deliverance came; and the land of Canaan became theirs.

We might also mention the history of the patriarch Joseph. Indeed, all their prophets, apostles, martyrs, yea, and all the saints who have ever lived, all witness to the same thing. And shall this last generation of christians—shall we who expect soon to be translated "to meet the Lord in the air" be an exception to the general rule?

Northfield, Mass., March 29th, 1875.

No; there can be no exception for the last generation; but the Bible everywhere teaches, by type and precept, that the last hour-period—of time will be one of temptation, which should come upon all the world to try them. J. C.

The avaricious man is like the barren, sandy ground of the desert, which sucks in all the rain and dews with greediness, but yields no fruitful herbs or plants for the benefit of others.

FAITH. WHAT IS IT?

D. K. BARRETT.

"Now faith is the confidence (margin) of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen." Heb. 11: 1. I think we should have a clear idea of this subject, if possible, for "through faith" comes the gift of salvation; "not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2: 8, 9. The clause—"Faith is the substance of things hoped for," used to confuse rather than enlighten me. I find Robinson's Greek Lexicon gives the original for substance (hupotais) well-founded, trust, firm expectation, confidence." It occurs in Heb. 3: 14—"For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end;" and in 2 Cor. 9: 4 for "confident boasting," and in 2 Cor. 11: 17. It is given—Figuratively substance, reality, essence, being; Heb. 1: 3; rendered "person," "express image of his person." It is found only in these five places. The idea of the text is plainly—Faith is the confidence, well-founded trust, or firm expectation of, or concerning things hoped for; the conviction of the reality of things not seen. Belief and faith are from the same word.

To have faith is to believe, a very simple thing. In order to believe we must be convinced, and to be convinced we must have proof. In court the evidence is considered, then comes the decision. Hence we read—"Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. 10: 17. It matters not so much how we believe, as what we believe; or, in other words, what kind of faith, as what that faith grasps.

People are often troubled for fear they have not the right kind of faith. Do not be troubled about that. But is there not different kinds of faith, as dead faith, intellectual faith, etc.? We do read—"Faith without works is dead," but it is the same kind after it is dead as before. The body without the spirit is dead; but it is not a different kind of body, but the same in a different state, having died." So some people's faith, for want of being lived up to, or having corresponding works to keep it alive, dies, and is of no more use as faith, than a dead man is as a man. James 2: 26.

As for intellectual faith, the Bible does not mention it unless it be the kind in Rom. 10: 10. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.' I think that but one kind of faith can be found.

What then must we believe to be saved? There are a great variety of things professedly believed. But to be saved we must believe that "there is a God in heaven," as Daniel declared. "For he that cometh to God must believe that he is." Heb. 11: 6. "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" Rom. 10: 14. Evidence here is overwhelming. None need be adduced to prove that God is. You believe then "that there is one God. You do well in believing; but it is not all, for the devils believe this and tremble.

We must believe his Word. "Thy Word is truth;" whether spoken from heaven, as at Sinai, or by prophets, apostles, or his Son. Christ said—"Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me." "But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?" "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest." Acts 26: 27. The fulfillment of God's Word proves it reliable. "Ye believe in God, believe also in me." "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him."

Then we must believe in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, and Savior of sinners. The devils believed he was the Christ, the Son of God, that was to "bruise the serpent's head." They believed that sometime he would destroy them; but their faith made them fear and tremble. We must believe more; we "have sinned and come short of the glory of God," and must have redemption, or be lost.

Christ is just what we want. Forgiveness of sins is preached in his name. "Whoso believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." We can then if we implicitly believe God's Word take any promise of his, and rely upon it. For instance: "Whoso cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

Come then with all sincerity, and, believing, you are accepted. "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness." "To us also it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus, our Lord, from the dead, who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." God is no respecter of persons, and the promises are for me, and you, and every one that believeth. Search out the promises, and lay hold, by faith, "of the hope set before us in the gospel." "Have faith in God." "Ask and receive, that your joy may be full."

JESUS.

G. R. MERRILL.

Jesus is the one altogether lovely, the chiefest among ten thousands. He is all we need. Do we want truth? If we have Christ we have the truth. Do we want life? He can give us eternal life. Do we want to know the way to God? He is the way. Yes, he says—"I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." To the weak he will be strength.

O, what a wonderful being! To all who believe in him he is precious. If ye would be pure and holy, come to Christ; have faith in his blood; for the blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin. If ye want rest, O come to him, and you will find rest to the soul. They that believe do enter into rest. Amen.

THE CURSE.

The curse, which God decreed should rest upon the earth on acconnt of man's transgression, embraces all the natural, physical evils under which our world has groaned since the Edenic rebellion.

It is very hard for us to comprehend the magnitude and severity of these evils. We cannot comprehend things only by comparison or contrast. If we could see and enjoy a perfect rest, where there is no evil, and then be transplanted into the midst of the terrible scenes of the curse, then we could know by contrast much more about the awfulness of the light of this world than we now do.

We have seen no real brightness, and tasted no real sweetness. We have heard no real harmonious music, or enjoyed any perfect, undisturbed society. All we have seen and known is shockingly marred and deranged. The sun-rays lose much of their radiance by wandering through the dense vapors of our atmosphere, and the queenly glory of the moon is darkly veiled with the curtain of our woes. The glorious tranquility of a God-governed world is lost in the thunderings, quakings, roaring and jargon of a broken up, distracted world. The heavens gather blackness, and pour out desolation and death. They gather up plague and pestilence, scattering them without reservation among beasts and men. The pent-up waters in the great ocean basins enjoy no hours of quiet. The attracting moon and howling winds give them everlasting restlessness. The submarine upheavings suddenly build the foretold sea-wave mountains, melting the heart of the courageous mariner with the prophetic roaring as it rolls from continent to continent.

The weather changes are a continuous series of fatal charges upon human life. The scorching heat and poisoning miasma of summer, with the chilling frosts and piercing winds of winter crowd millions of our race through the dark portals of death annually. Earth's soil is shockingly cursed, and become like a stubborn, rebellious child, hindering the good and producing the evil, unless it is constantly subdued by wearisome toil and exhausting sweat. Weeds and thorns grow spontaneously, but wheat and corn are the fruit of an aggressive war.

The curse is seen in the manifest derangement—the ragged mountains, deep and fearful gorges, barren deserts, fringed glaciers, and the fruitless salt-lands. It is witnessed in the withering grass and fading flower, the falling leaf and decaying tree; in the blazing lightning and burning cities, the ceaseless thunder of waterfalls, and the roar of devasting tempests. It is known in universal restlessness in all earthly elements and beings, producing saddening and continuous changes. It draws all creatures with a resistless power, from the tiniest insect to the most noble statesman, with a fearful, hurried step across the narrow stage of this life, from birth to death, as the bullock is drawn to the slaughter.

A terrible curse! It's iron hand bears heavily upon all. It carries all down to the fearful mansions of darkness and silence. It invades our world in every part, in every being and thing. All are fallen; all are spoiled. Satan glories in it, and seeks to protract it; but Christ deprecates it, and has given his life to end it. Then all who are wedded to Christ, in sympathy with his heart and purpose, will, under the influence of his Spirit, naturally and spontaneously pray for the accomplishment of this glorious work of the ending of sin and the curse; so that Jehovah's will may be as perfectly done on earth as it is done in heaven.

Glorious hope! Sublime anticipation! The salvation of a lost, cursed world! The restitution of all things, the making all things new,—a new heavens and a new earth. With this glorious hope in our hearts the sweet sentence is ever sounding from the lips of Jehovah—"There shall be no more curse." Then shall its bitter fruits of tears and crying, pain and dying, forever cease.

These grand truths stand at the focal point of divine revelation. All lines of promise converge to this point. The types point to it, and all the prophets predicted it. Jesus came and manifested his power and purpose to accomplish it. It was the all-inspiring hope of the apostles and the primitive church. The martyrs died in hope of enjoying a curseless world.

When will this curse be removed, and the earth be robed once more in its heavenly garments? When Christ comes the second time; for he is coming for that purpose. This is the grand reason why the early church so ardently desired that glorious event. They did not look for the crown until that day when the Judge should appear; therefore, all who were seeking that heavenly world Christ had promised to give them, would love that appearing, at which they would receive it.

It now appears from the sacred records that the curse has drawn its blinding curtain over our world to near the close of the six dark and toiling days of human woe, and that the eternal rest and glory awaiting the loyal friends of Jesus is very soon to be enjoyed. Blessed prospect! Glorious dawning! Joyful anticipations of speedy deliverance and everlasting happiness. J. C.

THE OUTLOOK.

To the christian who has been watching the course of events, as foretold in Scripture prophecy, the "outlook," at the present, is one of thrilling interest. It produces a sensation quite like that felt by the people when the first symptoms appear that indicate an approaching tempest on the ocean, or earthquake on the land, or the outbursting of a volcano. The first thought is about our safety, and the means needed for security. That being accomplished, we wait for the approaching event with a calm composure, that is highly enjoyable, awakening emotions full of grandeur and sublimity, that pay for a journey of thousands of miles. Such is the position of the christian watchman ot the present hour.

He who has carefully kept his eye on the sacred prophecies, and their accurate fulfillment, shown by the faithful historic records, can but feel an undoubted satisfaction that the greatest of all events in the history of this planet is but a short distance in the future. It is no less than the return of the Lord Jesus Christ, our dear Savior, to raise the sleeping saints, cleanse the sanctuary, put an end to the existing governments, and set up "the kingdom of God," that "shall stand for ever." O glorious hope! How grand the position now occupied in the history of the human race. Soon the question will be settled who shall live eternally, and who shall be destroyed. The day of deliverance is at hand for the faithful, humble disciple of Jesus, "the Son of the Highest." If any of our readers are in rebellion against this Savior, submit at once, and obtain pardon, before the sign of the Son of man appears in the heavens.

In conversing with the members of the different churches, who are living in the enjoyment of the christian religion, we find they are being deeply impressed that the present dispensation is near its end; that the spirit of union, which is taking possession of the best members of the different churches, indicates preparation for the coming of Christ. In connection with this is the remarkable movement on holiness, which is now a very important matter, and worthy of our best attention, and most hearty support, if we wish to be ready for the glorious appearing of our great King.

The war spirit among the nations is manifesting itself in their gigantic preparations for the bloody field. There is a very lively interest showing itself among the Catholics on the Pacific coast, and the world generally. They are holding extra meetings, which are crowded and enthusiastic. The countenances of their leaders seems to say, We will be ready for business soon, when our opponents will find we are not easily put aside. As one is reported to have said, The Protestants will find we have not been asleep for the past few years. The Catholics are forming and drilling military companies all over the world. When the Pope gives the order, they are ready to obey. His chief object is to have his temporal power restored, and a belief in his infallibility accepted by the whole world. These two things the Protestants will oppose to the utmost; hence a collision seems unavoidable. When the conflict begins, it will be terrible, and at that time the saints may expect everlasting deliverance. Those who wish the Lord's protection should not trust at all in carnal weapons, or human associations, but come out from the world and be separate. Jesus is abundantly able to protect all his children. They need have no fears, but may sing:

"All is well." M. G.

HEALDSBURG.

The meetings in the city of Healdsburg, California, are progressing gloriously. We have not been in any more interesting on this coast. They are union meetings, composed of the northern and southern Methodists, and the Presbyterians with their respective pastors. They are held in the Presbyterian house in the evening, and in the southern Methodist at 2 P. M., daily. We commenced this series of meetings a week ago, and during that time between twenty and thirty have given their hearts to Jesus, and are happy in his love. Men and women are attending who have not darkened church doors for years. Atheists, Deists, Spiritualists, Chinamen, Mormons, fast men, and various other classes, have become much interested, and several of them are under conviction. Last evening, one of the strongest infidels in the city, whose head is being frosted with age, sent in a request for prayers and was himself present. Although he has been a professed atheist, he has begun to pray. He is an intelligent man, but has been a sceptic all his life.

The Spirit of the Lord is moving powerfully in this city, and we expect blessed results the coming week. We are visiting from house to house, calling on every family, as we go, and praying with them. We never enjoyed the work of God better than at the present time. It seems as though this was the gleaning time, when it requires very earnest labor to accomplish even small results, but this fact should only serve to stimulate us to greater diligence in the service of our divine Master. Soon the great harvest may be expected to commence. We never before felt the force of the following Scripture, more than at present:

"Beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; how that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit. But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. And of some have compassion, making a difference; and others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh." Jude 17–33.

The people are much interested in the sermons on the prophecies. We have up the great chart, prepared by Bro. S. C. Adams, which is a valuable help in showing the fulfillment of prophecy. Last evening (March 28th) we spoke on the evidences, now before the present generation, that show our Savior will soon appear. We felt no opposition, for the evidence is so clear that the candid are compelled to admit that we are truly in the last days. Satan is very bold in his children, but christians should be much more so in the Lord. Men are made sceptics by the inconsistent lives of many professors of religion, and such professors necessarily lack courage to talk to the unconverted, and are among the special hindrances to the spread of pure religion. It is too bad that Jesus should be so wounded in the house of his professed friends. Is the reader doing this shocking work? If so, ask pardon at once, and live a pure life.

The time has come when only the genuine, earnest, every-day christianity, that makes a man perfectly honest, truthful, kind, and loving, can expect to have any success in leading men to Christ. The counterfeits are abundant, and are being exposed on every side. Men seem to be acting out what is in them more than ever. Restraints are being thrown off, cloaks laid aside, veneering pulled off, and the inside exposed to the world. The true christian is perfectly willing, and indeed longs to be inspected. He has no fears when he is to be examined in the most critical manner, by the keenest observers. Pure gold is most appreciated when put to the strongest tests; so with the true christian. No doubt we are rapidly approaching a period when the faithful disciples of Christ will be tried. Remember, the Lord has said, "My grace is sufficient." He loves to help those who trust in him. Let none trust in works, or good resolutions, but alone in Jesus. He is "mighty to save." Those who wish to stand in the approaching conflict with the powers of darkness, should at once clothe themselves with "the whole armor of God," so freely provided for the christian soldier. M. G.

ALFONSO XII. AND THE POPE.

It now appears that the Pope hesitates as to the right of Alfonso receiving the holy unction from his hand, as a Catholic king. He had evidently pronounced his benediction upon Don Carlos as to the divinely appointed heir to that throne; and, as he claims infallibility, he does not see exactly how to change the decision. The Boston Pilot, a Catholic paper, speaks upon the subject thus:—

"The telegraph has been busy in relating the statement that the newly proclaimed King of Spain had asked the Holy Father for his benediction, and that this request had been complied with. It now turns out however, that there has been considerable exaggeration and adornment in the story. The facts of the case are these: The newly elected king of Spain sent a letter to the Pope, who is his godfather in baptism, offering his congratulations to his Holiness for the New Year, and, it may be, informing the Pope of the events which had taken place in Spain. The Pope wrote to the young king, his godson, giving him paternal advice, and perhaps a blessing besides. Such an act, however, has no reference to a formal recognition of the newly established Spanish Kingdom. Whatever the Holy Father may do in the future with regard to this kingdom it is certain he has only written a letter to Alfonso XII. as a private individual, not as a monarch. The nations of Europe which were most eager to recognize the government of Serrano have been the earliest in recognizing the new government which has arisen on the destruction of the former. The Holy Father pronounces no judgment on the constitution of nations, nor does he interfere in their internal life; but that position is something far different from a formal recognition. Later news informs us that Alfonso before leaving Paris did write to the Pope acquainting him with his proclamation to the Spanish throne; but we do not know of any answer being given to that letter. Besides, it must have been written about the fifth or sixth of January."

This hesitation of the Pope to acknowledge Alfonso, greatly strengthens Don Carlos; for the priests understand that the Spanish government, which may be acknowledged by the Pope, will receive the support of the entire Catholic church. These circumstances produce discouragement and division in Alfonso's cabinet, and so doubtful is the struggle, that the Madrid government is soliciting the Republican leaders to unite with them in supporting Alfonso. This puts the new government to its wits' end to know what to do; for it first attempted to gain over, from Don Carlos to Alfonso, the Pope with all the Ultramontane party, by re-establishing Catholicism as it was during the reign of Isabella; but they have not yet gained this object, and by doing what they did, they have alienated the Republicans, and produced among the Protestant nations distrust and alienation. The London Times presents the subject thus:

"Under somewhat inauspicious circumstances, King Alphonso XII. has taken up the reins of his government again at Madrid. He has to deal with an incurable dualism in his Cabinet; all the efforts of the President of the Council, Canovas del Castillo, to effect a bona fide reconciliation between the Moderadoes and the Unionists—Conservatives and Liberals—having hitherto proved unavailing, and allowing little hope that the King's personal influence may succeed where the adroitness of his Prime Minister failed. The chance is now supposed to lie in a combination of Canovas and his Liberal colleagues with Serrano and other members of the late Cabinet (Republicans), some persons even pointing to Sagasta as the able man who is alone equal to confront the grave emergencies of the situation. It is questionable, however, whether the Conservatives will be disposed to withdraw from the field, as they feel themselves strong in the support of the priests and of the Ultramontane party—a party to which the imminent arrival of a Papal Nuncio is expected soon to give consistency and directness of purpose. The priests and the Pope, it is felt, had only accepted Don Alphonso as a temporary benefit, when fortune and popular enthusiasm seemed to favor his accession and to insure the triumph of his cause. But the priests' cause is still with Don Carlos, and they will never wholly desert it, so long as they see his standard floating on the towers of Estella, or his bayonets gleaming along the defiles of the Amescoas. To make matters worse, Canovas del Castillo, whose firmness of purpose is by no means as great as his ability and the uprightness of his intentions, has flattered himself that he could propitiate the clerical party by giving in to their unreasonable demands, and by adopting at their suggestion measures which were not recommended by good policy, even consistent with strict legality. He seems to have forgotten that the task of a Provisional Government, as the Ministry of the Regency undoubtedly was, should have been to govern and not to legislate; that it should be limited to the restoration of order and the furtherance of the Civil War, and that any attempt at organic legislation under present circumstances could have no other effect than to create alarm and suspicion, and set the perplexed and dormant, but by no means extinct, parties by the ears."

We do not hesitate to say that all these great national games, which are now being played with such wonderful determination upon the European chess-board, by all parties, moving as if their everlasting destiny depended upon victory in this effort, will end in the eternal overthrow and complete destruction of the Papacy. J. C.

PATIENCE.

We are well satisfied that many backslide because of their impatience in their families. No one can be happy in Jesus, when out of patience. When things go wrong at home, or elsewhere, thank the Lord they are no worse; and look to him for strength to bear the burden cheerfully. Fretting is of no benefit to any one. It always injures the one who indulges the evil, and usually the one who hears it. There are two rules which all christians should observe: (1) "Never fret about what can't be helped. (2) Never fret about what can be helped. If it cannot be helped, what is the use of fretting? If it can be helped, then why fret about it? Whenever one gets out of patience, he always loses his peace, and very much injures his influence for good. The word of inspiration says: "Be patient towards all men." The more injuries one bears patiently for Jesus' sake, the sweeter his peace, and the brighter his hope. M. G.

FADING AWAY.

In Europe, the Pope is losing his influence over the people. If he does not make a startling movement soon to regain lost power, he will pass the rallying point. Many are having their eyes opened to see the true character of the Papacy. The following foreign intelligence shows the feeling in Poland:

"The Pope is rapidly losing the Poles. Recent orders from the Vatican have led to open defiance. The seceders from Rome already number fifty thousand, and the movement is said to be rapidly spreading. The movement is a perfectly spontaneous one on the part of the people."

The omens indicate clearly, that a change of some kind must soon take place at Rome. The Catholics and anti-Catholics are each determined on success. The spirit of hostility is increasing, and one or the other must be thoroughly subdued. No doubt the contest will be fearful. Religious wars are the worst of all, but if they were true christians, they would not fight. M. G.

PRUSSIA AND THE POPE.

The conflict between these two authorities rages with increasing earnestness, and we are now informed by telegraph from Berlin that it is anticipated that the old laws forbidding intercourse between the Pope and the Catholic clergy in Prussia, except through the Government, will be re-enacted, and that the Pope's authority will be wholly suspended within the kingdom until he abandons his claim to cancel its laws. It is to be observed that the status of the Papacy in Prussia differs from that in most European countries, dating, as it does, only from the year 1821, when a bull was issued by the Pope defining the rights of the Church in Prussia. It was accepted by the King, and has since remained in force unchanged. On the one hand, it is claimed that this was in the nature of an agreement or contract, which cannot be annulled by Prussia without a violation of faith; on the other, it is contended that this was a sovereign act of Prussia, which had no binding effect over the future. It is needless to say that the latter is the view of Bismarck, who further has the frankness to declare that it is the duty of the State not to give incomes from the public purse to those who deny and oppose authority and foment insurrection. Thus far the higher Catholic clergy have been paid by the State; the Archbishop of Breslau receiving $8500 a year, and the other Bishops about $5675; while the parochial clergy of both the Protestant and Catholic churches are supported mostly by endowments. It may also be added that, according to the "Statesman's Year Book," the Protestant faith is preferred by 64.87 per cent. of the Prussian people, and the Catholic by 32.56 per cent.,—all other creeds having 2.57 per cent. of the population.

Prussia, therefore, is not a Catholic State, and it would seem that the papal pretensions might well be somewhat abated there, in comparison with the rights claimed and exercised in Austria, Spain, and Italy. And yet the Pope, in his encyclical letter to the Catholic clergy in Prussia, says: "It is not to the great ones of the earth that the Lord has subjected the bishops of his Church in what relates to his holy service, but to Peter, to whom he has entrusted his lambs and his sheep. It is for this reason that no temporal power, however exalted it may be, has the right to deprive of their episcopal dignity those who have been nominated by the Holy Spirit to rule in the Church."

Thus the issue is made directly between the Papacy and Prussia, or, in other words, the Pope and Bismarck. There is no question that the latter is upheld by the unanimous Protestant population of Prussia, and even many of the Catholics, whose patriotic impulses are stronger than their ecclesiastical prepossessions, are with him in this controversy. Undoubtedly he will prove triumphant, as he ought, unless the course of many of the Catholic prelates in Prussia has been greatly misrepresented.—London Times.

CALL TO MIND THE FORMER TIMES.

H. MUNGER.

Nothing is more interesting to one class of people than to hear their fathers give an account of the Revolution, with their trials and incidents connected therewith. All the old Revolutionary soldiers were honored, however humble a part they took in the war. Although many reject the principles of free institutions, yet it made its mark for ever.

While on my last trip, I stopped with one of the old preachers, who started out to sound the cry of "The kingdom of God near," which is the truth that will revolutionize the theological world.

A short account of the pioneer's work may be interesting to a class of the readers of the Crisis. This old friend related his experience in the work, which will illustrate many other cases of those who bore the heat and burden of those days. He started out to preach this truth in school-houses and kitchens, where a few would come, and others would scoff and oppose.

The first six months he got two pairs of stockings, two pocket handkerchiefs, and less than one dollar in money. He wore his clothes out and hired out, to boat wood, till he got a suit of clothes and twenty-five cents in cash, and then started out again, peddling this truth and scattering the seed through towns and farming districts; in some places holding meetings a week or two, and received less than two dollars a week.

Sometimes he had to stop with a family where the wife would scold her husband for taking that Advent preacher home with him. How many times some of us have passed through such scenes years ago.

These former things will come into our minds.

This brother I have been speaking about has worn out his voice in this work, and gone to work to get a living; but the faith is there still. Many have died with the harness on, like King Hastings and others, who were out in the cause scattering seed by the wayside and earning a living in other ways for their families. Bro. Hastings would work haying till 4 o'clock P. M., and go to Middletown, forty miles, to preach on the Sabbath, get two or three dollars, and home again Monday to work. Our young Advent preachers would be scarce if they had to endure such privations and opposition, with so little pay. They know but little about it. There are but few left who enlisted thirty years ago, and they are growing less every year; yet I believe this generation of Advent preachers will not all pass away till the truth of their message will be realized.

God is moving on the minds of many to look at this last-day truth, and some are preaching it. Wicked nations, and a lukewarm, backslidden church, are preaching it. The tumults of the sea and spasms of old earth are preaching it. The atmospheric disturbances, whirlwinds and cyclones are preaching it. All the prophecies touching the end of the world and second coming of Christ afford sufficient evidence to the old warriors that their warfare is about ended. We have the experience, and God knows us all, and our work, and we shall get our reward for our work. We have sowed where others reap.

Some incidents of former work or times are refreshing. A few weeks ago, while tired and almost sick, I called at a house near the depot, as it was raining, to inquire where the preachers stopped, as I had an appointment that evening. The lady informed me I could stay there. In the course of conversation she said—"Many years ago we went to a funeral of a neighbor, and you preached the sermon. We belonged to the Congregationalist church, but we heard things that were strangely new to us; and it made such an impression on our minds that we went to searching, and came out in the truth, and are there yet; and our house is your home while we live.

Such incidents are encouraging us to keep sowing seed. Our message and truth has made a great revolution in the theological world, especially on the doctrine and object of the resurrection. We have had much ignorance to contend with on this doctrine. It is no gospel that has not the literal resurrection for its foundation. Who will be responsible for such ignorance among professors on the doctrine of the Bible resurrection? Let us keep up this light.

PROFESSION NOT PRACTICE.—Some men talk like angels, and pray with fervor, and meditate within deep recesses, and speak to God with loving affections, and words of union, and adhere to him in silent devotion, and when they go abroad are as passionate as ever, peevish as a frightened fly, vexing themselves with their own reflection; they are cruel in their bargains, unmerciful to their tenants, and proud as a barbarian prince; they are, for all their fine words, impatient of reproof, scornful to their neighbors, lovers of money, supreme in their own thoughts, and submit to none; all their spiritual fancy is an illusion; they are still under the power of those passions, and their sin rules them imperiously, and carries them away infallibly.—Jeremy Taylor.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence

From Bro. F. P. Dingley.

To all of our heavenly Father's waiting ones, Greeting:—Dear brethren and sisters in Christ:—You know there is no fear in love; and if we love the Lord Jesus with all our hearts, and his cause as we should, we shall not hesitate to do anything consistent with his will for the benefitting of any of those for whom Jesus shed his precious blood.

Feeling this love for him and his cause, and hoping that I may be the means of encouraging some to press onward towards the mark for the christian's reward, I now take the courage to address you through the columns of our paper—the Crisis.

I desire to know my place in the cause of Christ, and at all times to be found in it. This is the only way that I can be of any service to him; and I need not expect to hear the words "Well done" said to me at last, unless I am willing to be found in my place. The words "Well done" will be said to those who do as well as they can with what the Lord commits to their trust; and the Lord will give us grace sufficient to qualify us for any calling in life which he designs us to follow. Of those unto whom much is given, much is required. Of those to whom little is given, little is required. Whether much or little is given, if we have a heart to obey the Lord in everything that he bids us do, it will be well with us here hereafter. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.

Dear brethren and sisters, how precious are these words of our Savior—"I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." How sweet and heart-cheering to weary pilgrims are the tidings of the soon coming Savior, to destroy the enemy of the human race, and save his people,—to restore the earth from its fallen condition, and to establish his throne of righteousness under the whole heavens! How consoling to those who have dear friends in the cold embrace of death is the thought that they shall come again from the land of the enemy, and come to their own border; that those same sweet voices which often spake words of comfort and cheer to the saddened heart will, at some future time, be heard praising God in a land where no sorrow, nor pain, nor any of the ills of this life, will ever be known; and where joy and gladness will fill every heart and beam in every face. How precious, heart-cheering and consoling the christian's hope is! It buoys us up amid all the tumults and strife of this age of wickedness, and begets within us a longing for that time when Jesus shall come and begin his peaceful reign.

It is surely a blessed hope. Peter calls it a lively hope. How thankful we should be for such a hope! What holy lives we ought to live! How much better we ought to live than the world's people do! We can afford to live better than they do, inasmuch as our hope is so much better than theirs. The Lord pity them.

I believe that our hope will very soon be consummated—that Jesus will soon appear. I believe it because I have faith in the sure Word of prophecy, which was given to lighten our pathway until the day dawn, and the day-star arise. Paul says—"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." Again he says—"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, ... for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

We have recorded in the Scriptures not only the time, by figures that will not lie, of our Lord's appearing, but we have the principal events that would take place from the time the Scriptures were written to that appearing. These were given in their order, to mark the different places along the coasts, so that we may know our whereabouts on the stream of time, and our nearness to the christian's port; and they were given in a manner so plain that no one need to mistake them.

While each prophecy is being fulfilled, the watchmen can exclaim in the language of Peter—"This is that which was spoken by the prophet." Peter says—"No prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Their sayings were written out for the instruction of the generations that should come after, and have been handed down to us for our consolation. Let us not despise them, but profit by them. Let us study their meaning and application.

We have also the testimony of Jesus—the spirit of prophecy, the more sure Word—and of the apostles. These all, when compared with past events, clearly show that the dark reign of Satan is nearly ended, and that very soon the morning of the eternal day will break forth in its full splendor. Oh, blessed will that morning be! How blessed the consolation that it will soon dawn!

Every beacon light written on the chart of divine truth has been passed by the gospel ship, except the last; and this is now heaving in sight—preparation for war among the nations—and is being proclaimed by the watchmen to the ship's crew. The old chart has proved so true in the past that I am compelled to believe that the remaining jots and tittles will be fulfilled exactly as predicted. Signs indicating the fulness of Gentile times, and that the King of glory is about to take possession of the governments of earth, multiply every day.

See men running to and fro, and knowledge being increased; iniquity abounding, and the love of many waxing cold. See Satan transforming himself into an angel of light, and taking the attention of the people from what is just coming on the earth, by deceiving them in every way that he can. See the state of the nations at the present time, and the waking up of the mighty men to prepare war.

Do not these all prove that the world's harvest is fully ripe and ready for the sickle to gather the clusters of the vine of the earth? Most emphatically they do. Will the church fail of seeing the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, after having witnessed every sign that indicates his coming? I do not believe she will. Why, the hope of Israel is wrapped up in the glorious appearing of Jesus! The prophets of old all looked for their reward at the coming of the Lord, and died in faith, not having received the promise; but they saw it afar off, embraced it, and confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers on the earth. Jesus taught his disciples that they should be recompensed when the Nobleman came from the far country. And ever since Jesus left the earth, there has been a people called forth to serve the living and true God, and to wait and pray for his return from heaven.

The Lord has a people in the world at the present time who are watching and longing for his coming. Weary pilgrims, cheer up. Great things are in reserve for you. The prayers of the saints have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, and he is coming to reward his faithful ones. O be faithful till then. If faithful, all things are yours. The prize seems too precious to be lost now, when the time of obtaining it is so near.

What if some have been mistaken in the time of our Lord's appearing? it does not prove that he is not coming. It only helps to fulfill prophecy. Be patient. "Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Let us remember the Savior's two last admonitions to the church—"Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is." O how important that we take heed to these warnings. Although the precise hour of the Master's coming may at the present time be unknown to us, still we know that at the appointed hour—his own good time—he will come and will not tarry.

By knowing this, let us take courage to keep on watching, praying and trusting; if we do, we shall hear from the lips of the Judge—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Brethren and sisters, pray for unworthy me, that I may prove faithful to the end, and with you all have a share in the kingdom of God's dear Son.

So. Casco, Me., March 31st, 1875.

From Sr. M. A. Seymour.

Dear Editors:—It is very seldom that I presume to ask room in your over-crowded paper to insert my meagre ideas; but last evening, while reading in your issue of March 24th from Sr. Stoddard and Bro. S. S. Brewer, my mind was stirred to write in confirmation of these articles.

Anxiously I followed Sr. S. in her account of labors in Catteraugus, N. Y., for this was my parents' home for more than forty years; and I have three sisters still there. Then the places she visited were familiar to me, and persons mentioned were known to me. I then followed Sr. S. home, where she found so much domestic work accumulated in her absence, and many letters waiting an answer, without the means to pay the postage.

This story is in perfect keeping with my own experience for many weary years. How oft I have had to say, "I cannot go," to urgent calls for help in the Lord's vineyard, "because I cannot hire a domestic without means to pay one." This is and has been to me a daily trial; and when I see sisters in the decline of life wear God-forbidden ornaments about their persons, enough to sustain one preacher in the field, and yet out of their abundance they do not give the value of one of their sleeve buttons per annum to support the gospel; when I see these things, I ask seriously, Do they love Christ? Do they believe the end is near? How true is the following extract from Sr. Stoddard's letter: "In vain we call for laborers, for there are not enough means to support the faithful men and women who are already in the field."

Next came Bro. Brewer's article—"We all do fade as a leaf." How this affected my heart. The truthfulness of this text is verified in the persons of those who first proclaimed—"Behold He cometh," in the early days of the so-called "Millerite movement." Many of these have fallen under the dominion of death; and most of the remainder are feeble and gray, but are still waiting, expectant, for immortality to be put on by the quickening energies of God's power, at the appearing of Christ, our Life-giver. For this long-expected consummation let us wait, watch, and pray.

From Bro. S. P. Hayward.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have just finished reading the various letters in Crisis of March 31st, and taken up my pen to respond, hoping that by adding my testimony I may help cheer some waiting one as those letters cheered me.

Hardly a year has passed since I was convinced that the kingdom of heaven was near at hand, and that in order to enter in, there was something for me to do, as there is for every one that desires to dwell therein. During this time I have endeavored to "lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset," and to run the race, let it cost me what it will; for he that loseth this life, shall find it. I am convinced it is better to be a Lazarus this side of the grave than a rich man the other; and have great faith that I shall live to see the Lord come in the clouds of heaven. Should I fall asleep, I want that hope that takes hold of a better life, and thank the good Lord I have it.

I endeavored to serve the Lord when quite young, but must allow that it was more from a fear of eternal torment that I was taught awaited me, did I do otherwise, than from any other reason. And as is generally the case, I was dead wood to the cause of Christ; a puny plant starving for God's immutable truth. But now I have light in the binnacle. God's message to man seems reasonable to me when I read it as I believe he meant me to understand it. And instead of looking upon him as an implacable tyrant, and serving him in fear, I try to do his will because I believe it my duty. Not only that, but I see a reward in the future, when Jesus comes, "for a patient continuance in well doing," even eternal life. Heavenly gift! Precious boon! Who wants it? Every one. Who shall have it? Every one that hath forsaken houses, or or brethren, or sisters, or father, or husband, or wife, or children, or lands for my name sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

Let us fight the good fight, and lay hold on eternal life.

East Pepperell, Mass.

From Sr. Fannie Roberts.

Dear Crisis:—I have never written any for your paper, but I want to say that I love Jesus, and that I am striving to live so that when he comes I can have a home in his kingdom. When I first started I tried to hold the world in one hand and religion in the other; but I found that would not do, and how I bless his dear name that I gave up the world. Now there is no pleasure here for me but in serving Jesus. I feel that I have a dear friend in Jesus, one that will not leave nor forsake me. O, how much he has done and is still doing for me. How glad I am that I started just as I did to serve him. I want to live so that when he comes I can have the "Well done" said to me, and I know I shall if I am only faithful.

I started one year ago to serve him with a whole heart, and I believe he is soon coming to take his people home. Pray for me, that I may have my work done and well done when he comes. I am determined to serve the Lord as long as I live, feeling certain that he has heard my prayers and accepted me. Glory to his name for the precious promises that he has given me in the Bible.

Warner, N. H.

From Bro. M. H. Bishop.

Through the mercy of God, I am spared to complete my fiftieth year. I was converted when about fifteen, and united with the F. W. Baptist Church in this place, then in a flourishing condition. I rejoiced in the God of my salvation; but after a while trials came, and I lost confidence in many that I esteemed. I learned by this that man at the best was fallible.

I struggled along between hope and fear for some years, not willing to give up, and not living up to my privilege. Thus I lived in darkness, with now and then a gleam of light to cheer my path. At the age of twenty-five I married and settled in life; and by the advice of Eld. Wm. Simonds, we established a family altar, which, by the blessing of God, has not been thrown down. We have embraced the Advent faith with its kindred truths. The Crisis is about all the preaching we have, and we prize it very highly, and take much pleasure in perusing its columns. We have but few in this section of like precious faith, but the Lord is still our portion, and we expect soon to meet all the dear people of God, to sing his praises in the new earth.

From Bro. O. King.

Dear Editors:—By your permission I would like to say a few words through your valuable paper; for it is all the preaching we have of our faith. My desire is the good Lord will direct some one that has the Word of life to this new country. It might be the means of doing good. No one has ever been here to preach the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and other kindred doctrines of the Advent faith. I cannot give any encouragement as to remuneration, for there are but few here that know what the Advent doctrine is, and the people are generally poor on account of being visited by the grasshoppers the two past years.

Dear brethren and sisters, it almost seems to us that those who have gospel privileges hardly know how to prize them. We have not heard an Advent sermon since we left Maine, nearly six years ago; but I am glad some can have the privilege of hearing the Word of life. Pray for us, that we may ever prove faithful until the Chief Shepherd shall appear, and we with you receive the crown of life.

Willida, Lyon Co., Iowa, March 20th.

AN EVIL EYE.

Far too little is said about those forms of subtle evil that seek expression through looks only. The tongue can give expression to the heart's emotions, to only a limited extent. But the eye can speak unutterable things, and speak them too, when, one would fain suppress the unseemly language. There may be a careful, discreet, or cowardly bridling of the tongue, while the eye is allowed to dart angry glances, and send forth sneering, contemptuous, poisonous looks. Women have been known to coolly, leisurely, superciliously eye the dress of another, and, without uttering a syllable, give pain and mortification to a poorer, less well-dressed sister. Men can leer and wink, and elevate their eyebrows and scowl. And thus they can make evil suggestions, and give sly stabs, and create an atmosphere of ill-feeling and uneasiness, and stir up all bad passions.

Greed, envy, impatience, surliness, general sourness, and minute meannesses, may lurk in the eye and dart forth in the looks. An evil eye is one of the fruits of a bad heart. Christ classes it among "thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, laciviousness." One ought to carefully guard the language of the eye, for its evil looks are among the things that come from within and defile the man.

The love of Christ dwelling richly in the heart can cleanse and change the outflowing language of both tongue and eye. His Spirit dwelling within the heart will make the eye single, clear, and good, so that it will beam forth with new light and utter a new language of "love, joy, peace."—Banner of Holiness.

DICKSON. In Emden, Ills., July 18th, 1874, Ernest C., youngest son of S. J. and Jane E. Dickson, aged 5 years and 8 months.

Dear little Ernie is gone, and another one of our sisters has been bereft by the cruel hand of death. He was a child of unusual intelligence and loveliness of character;—a bud of promise, ripe for the kingdom. Day after day we would hear his sweet voice singing his favorite little hymn—"Jesus love me." The infant lips have asked—"Mama, shall I have a home on the new earth?" The mother's answer was—"Yes, my darling, when Jesus comes." The stricken friends, though filled with anguish, know that sweet little Ernie sleeps in Jesus. He is safe, sorrowing mother, until Jesus comes to return to your empty arms your boy, where shall be wiped away all tears, and where there shall be no more death.

LAWRENCE. In Hedgesville, Steuben Co., N. Y., Feb. 24th, 1875, of scarlet fever, Maie A., only daughter of G. and A. Lawrence, aged 13 years and 11 months.

Maie was a remarkably good girl, and believed the teachings of the Bible. She was sick only three days. The day before she was taken sick she sang with me some of those beautiful pieces, composed by Bro. Geo. E. Lee, also the one—"We shall sleep, but not forever." Well, she is laid away for a little while, soon to "come again from the land of the enemy." If the Lord had been here the child had not died.

COLLINS. In Eagle Harbor, N. Y., March 19th, 1875, Sister Augusta S., wife of Bro. L. F. Collins, aged 69 years.

Sr. Collins was an earnest, faithful christian; one beloved by all who knew her. The writer preached her funeral discourse in the M. E. Church, at Eagle Harbor, assisted by Bro. WARREN J. HOBBS.

FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY.—Destructive Floods in Asia Minor. The famine, which has carried off large numbers of the population, has been succeeded by a most destructive flood, which appears to have completed the misery of the wretched inhabitants. The valleys of the Meander and Hermus, the great agricultural districts of Smyrna, have been inundated for the past month, to the complete suspension of all farming operations, and to the destruction of a great deal of valuable property. Writing on February 20th, a correspondent says, last Wednesday a number of boats, served by gendarmes, were sent up by rail to the assistance of the inhabitants of a village in the neighborhood of Ephesus, whose houses had been either clean swept away or else greatly damaged by the overflow of the Kaistor. The report was that these unhappy wretches had taken refuge in trees and on the tops of rocks above the level of the waters, and that so desperate was their situation that unless speedily rescued they must infallibly perish. A friend, writing from a village ten miles from Aidin and three from the Meander, says that he navigated a raft from his factory gate, right over intervening fields and high above their enclosing hedges to the river. Since that date all communication with him has ceased. At Menemen, on the Hermus, between thirty and forty houses have actually been carried away. At Cassaba, on the same river, a large cotton ginning factory has been entirely destroyed, and many houses with it.

The prospects of the agricultural classes are gloomy in the extreme. To add to their distress, great mortality prevails amongst their animals. With characteristic improvidence, the Turkish peasant makes no provision for the foddering of either his cattle or sheep; he trusts to Providence or luck, and turns the poor creatures out into the open fields and commons to take their chance of what they can pick up. I have heard of a case of only ten sheep remaining out of a flock of a thousand; and this is not considered an exceptional one. The country is literally strewn with the carcases of sheep and oxen, and those animals that have escaped starvation are such mere bundles of skin and bone that they will not be fit either for the shambles or for labor for a long while to come.

PERSIA. The intense cold in the upper part of the Persian Gulf still continues; and we learn by the arrival of the British India steamer Burma, Capt. Saunders, on Monday last, that it is greatly in excess of any that has been known for the last twenty-five years. For miles along the Persian shore of the Gulf, the fish were driven, by the unusual temperature, to leave their own element and fling themselves on the beach to die, in preference. Some of the fish, we are told, would weigh from one hundred to one hundred and fifty pounds.—London Times.

LONDON, April 2. The Cologne Gazette states that Spain has made a formal demand on Prussia, in virtue of an extradition treaty with that country, for the arrest of Don Alfonso, and it is said the Prussian authorities have in consequence received instructions to arrest the Prince if he enters Prussian territory, and hold him until the grounds of Spain's claim are examined.

April 5. The Times' correspondent at Berlin says there is reason to fear that the impending deposition of the Archbishops of Breslau may occasion delicate complications in the relations of Austria and Prussia, owing to the fact that a portion of the archi-episcopal diocese lies in Austrian territory.

April 9. Senor Salmeron, a professor of Madrid University, and formerly president of the Ministry, and Professor Azarate, also of Madrid University, have been arrested. The former has been sent to Lugo, and the latter to Miranda. Other arrests are expected. The Government declares its intention of exiling all professors who protest against the recent educational laws, or who resign chairs on account of their promulgation.—Boston Globe.

SPAIN. An influential German journal publishes an article in which it points out that, whereas the Pope has recognized King Alphonso, the Spanish clergy who are controlled by the Jesuits, and also a portion of the French clergy, are adherents of Don Carlos. The article adds that the overt support of the Pope is given with the object of enticing the King into concessions towards Rome, and of estranging him from the Liberals. This once obtained, it would only remain for the Pope, i. e., for the General of the Jesuits, to choose a day for overthrowing the King and making room for Don Carlos, either immediately or after some interval.—London Times.

TROUBLE IN PERSPECTIVE.—The Turkish Government, terrified, it is said, by the rumor of a secret understanding between Servia, Roumania, and Greece, is actively assisting the Jesuits in converting the Bulgarians to Roman Catholicism. The Jesuits, with the help of the Polish emigrants in Turkey, are believed to have already converted some hundred thousand Bulgarians. Agencies for conversion have been opened in all the larger towns of the Province.

THERE is no sign of abatement in the excitement in the coal regions. Yesterday a band of about one thousand men entered Tamaqua and drove off some miners who were at work in the Alaska colliery at that place. The leaders of the strike declare that there is no thought of weakening on their side, and the storekeepers are reported to be extending credit to the strikers liberally. No troops have yet been called out, but a large force of special policemen is in service.

FOUR hundred millions of persons have been carried by the London Metropolitan Railway Company without a single accident.

Notices.

TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Notice.—Alton Bay.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet on the camp-ground TUESDAY, MAY 4th. J. COUCH, President.

Hoosick Valley Conference.

The second quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held at Rutland, Vt., commencing April 14th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a good gathering of the faithful ones at this meeting. Let delegates be sent from all the churches and localities where there are no regular meetings. We hope ministers belonging to this Conference will make a special effort to be present. Come, brethren, to this feast, to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing.

A. W. SIBLEY, Pres.
W. O. HIGLEY, Sec.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish timber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. DOWNING, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. SWAIN, for Com.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman.

WAYNE COUNTY MISSION TENT.—The shareholders of the Wayne County Advent Mission Tent are requested to meet at the church in South Butler, Tuesday, April 27th, at one o'clock P. M., to make arrangements for the summer campaign, and transact other necessary business. The Lord has blessed the labors of this Tent in the past, and we hope to see it in the field early this season. Do not fail to be on hand promptly.

ROBERT C. BROWN, for the Brn.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The third session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will meet with the Church at the Lancaster schoolhouse, in East Bowdoinham, on Thursday, April 15th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the spirit of your Master, and work for the salvation of sinners and the good of the church.

H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL, Sec.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the New Hampshire Conference will meet with the church at East Canaan, to commence Thursday evening, April 29th, and hold over the Sabbath, May 2nd. Ministers are desired to attend and make the meeting as interesting as possible. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

OHIO STATE CONFERENCE.—The Ohio State Conference will convene at Norwalk, Huron Co., on Friday evening, April 23d. Business session on Saturday, at 10.30 A. M. Let our brethren and sisters be present, as far as possible.

E. MCCULLOCH, President.

ADVENT MEETINGS will be opened in "Ainsley's Hall," at Auburn, DeKalb Co., Ind., to continue two weeks, commencing Sunday, April 11th.

ELD. C. MENDENHALL.

CHARLTON.—By divine permission the Church in this place purpose holding a Protracted Meeting, commencing Thursday evening, April 15th, to continue over Lord's day. Brethren, sisters and friends in the surrounding towns are invited to attend. Come with the blessing of the good Lord to this feast. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, with others, will be here to preach the Word. In behalf of the Church, J. W. PATTERSON, Clerk.

NOTICE.—We would like (if the Lord will), six or eight brethren and sisters to go with the Tent this season, filled with the Spirit and power of the gospel, to labor for the salvation of sinners, proclaim the signs of Jesus' coming at hand, and to help care for the Tent, etc. We want those who can give their time, talents, and voice. We will trust in the Lord for means to pay expenses other ways connected with it.

If brethren wish to contribute to help, it will be received gladly. Brn. F. and Asa Blaisdell and others talk of running the Evangel Tent, and I will furnish one or more, if help will be pledged, for Maine or vicinity. Let those respond at once who feel that the Lord wants them to go, as it will take sometime to make tents. Speak freely. We ought to have many tents in the field this season if Jesus does not come; and could if brethren and sisters would take hold of the business. Let us do all we can for a perishing world, and have it said "well done" when Jesus comes.

P. S. Direct H. B. SEVEY, Mt. Vernon, Me.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the N. H. Conference is to commence so as to hold its session over the last Sunday in April. Any church wishing it with them, please write me soon, so we may give notice in good time. For Com., LEVI ALLEN.

NOTICE.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier Vt. E. N. MORSE.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—I may be addressed again at my home, at Porter's Mills, Eauclair Co., Wis., about May 1st, 1875. Any who feel that my labors will benefit them, can write me at that place.

GEO. W. TURNER.

NOTICE.—Bro. and Sr. McKinstry have received and accepted a call from the church in Danville, P. Q., to take the pastoral charge, and all arrangements for the supply of the pulpit must be made through them.

NOTICE.—Preaching brethren are hereby notified that the church at Exeter, N. H., is supplied with labor by W. M. Harmon. All changes relative to preaching here will be referred to the committee. Per order of Com., W. M. H.

BRO. ROLAND D. GRANT having accepted the call extended to him by the Second Advent Church of Athol, Mass., his labors as Pastor beginning Jan. 1st, 1875, to continue at least one year, all matters of exchange and supply are submitted to him. O. F. BROOKS, Clerk.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."
Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS" is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the "Slaying of the Witnesses." 10 cents. AG'T.

A SONG OF DELIVERANCE.

(Published by request.)

I saw a weary traveler,
In tattered garments clad,
A struggling up a mountain,
It seemed that he was sad.
His back was burdened heavy,
His strength was almost gone;
He shouted as he journeyed,
"Deliverance will come."

CHO.—Palms of victory, crowns of glory,
Palms of victory we shall bear.

The summer sun was beaming,
The sweat was on his brow,
His garments were all dusty,
His steps were very slow;
Still he kept pressing forward,
For he was wending home;
He shouted as he journeyed,
"Deliverance will come."

The songsters in their arbors,
The pleasures of the way,
Attracted his attention,
Inviting his delay;
Still he kept pressing forward,
For he was nearing home;
He shouted as he journeyed,
"Deliverance will come."

I saw him in the evening,
When the sun was bending low;
He'd overtopped the mountain,
And reached the vale below;
His eyes were dim and heavy,
His journey it was done;
He shouted as it ended,
"Deliverance will come."

Then they closed the blinds around him,
And locked him up alone,
That nothing might disturb him
Till his best friend should come.
Hope made for him a pillow,
And Faith a garment rare,
To keep him in his slumbers
Till Jesus should appear.

At length the trumpet sounded,
The shadows fled away,
The gilding rays of glory
Proclaimed the coming day;
Then when the light of morning
Broke in his little room,
He rose and cried "Hosanna!
"Deliverance has come!"

I heard the song of triumph
He sang upon that shore,
Saying, "Jesus has redeemed me,
I'll suffer now no more."
And casting his eye backward
On the race that he had run,
He raised the loud hosanna!—
"Deliverance has come!"

THE FAITH OF THE SHUMANITISH WOMAN.

"And she answered, It is well."—2 KINGS 4: 26.

SELECTED BY T. FOOTE.

Short words; soon spoken; but to have a heart in agreement with them is one of the highest attainments of faith. To be sure it is well; we think so when all things go according to our wishes; when there is nothing in Providence crosses our desires, that sinks our hopes, or awakens our fears. Submission is easy work then; but to have all things seemingly against us, to have God smiting in the tenderest part, unraveling all our schemes, contradicting our desires, and standing aloof from our very prayers; how do we behave then? This is the true touchstone of our sincerity and submission. Here "is the patience and faith of the saints." This shows what they are made of, what they are within.

There are many instances in the book of God, wherein we find this sweet frame prevailing; as Abraham, Job, David, and the Shunamitish woman; than whose story we meet with few things in Providence more affecting.

If you look back a little you may see what were her circumstances, and those of her family. She was a great woman; and that she was a good woman is shown by the whole account. Her husband and she wanted but one thing to make them as happy as they could be amid the vanity and uncertainty of human affairs. They had enough of the world, and they seem to have had the enjoyment of it; for, when Elisha, to requite her kindness, asks—"What shall be done for thee? Would'st thou be spoken for to the king?" she answers "No; I dwell among my own people." They only wished then, for a child to comfort them now, and to inherit what they had when they were gone. God miraculously granted their request. The child grew up, and was, no doubt, the delight of its parents. When, just at the time of life when children are most engaging, God lays his hand suddenly upon him, and takes him away.

The dearest comforts are but short-lived, and the dearer they are when living, the deeper they cut when removed. Many of you can judge what the loss of a son, an only son must be, and when there is no hope of a Seth instead of an Abel. But, behold, he taketh away, and who shall hinder him?

Well, what does the mother do now? One would think all her hopes were cut off, and all her comfort was dried up. No, it is far otherwise. The same power that gave him could raise him. In faith of this she lays him on the prophet's bed and makes all the haste to him she could. Concealing what had happened from her husband, he objects to her going. "Wherefore," he asks, "wilt thou go to him to-day? It is neither new moon nor Sabbath." and she said "It shall be well?"

Thus faith sets aside every obstacle. It shall be well. The end will be peace. God is with me, and he will make all things work together for good, is its language under afflictions.

Commentators in general, make very light of this woman's answer to Elisha's message. Some suppose she had a reserve in her breast when Gehazi asks after her family, and that this "well" only referred to her husband; others think that it was only an introduction to something further, as if she had said, "All is well; do not hinder me. I have urgent business with your master Elisha, and cannot stay to talk further with you upon any matters." This is the sense to which most annotators incline, which I the more wonder at, because all agree that the apostle's words in part refer to this story. "Women receive their dead raised to life again." How they received them is here specified, viz., by or through faith; faith, not in the prophet, but in the persons who had their dead restored to them; or else there would have been no need to make mention of any by name.

Now, wherein this woman's faith appeared, my text and context make manifest. She exhibited an unmoved dependence upon God's promise. He had promised her a son; a son not to love, but to have comfort in him; and she acted as if her heart said, "As for God, his work is perfect; he does not raise his peoples' expectation for nothing—to give, and to immediately take away again. My son is dead, but God, all-sufficient, liveth. Why should I mourn as though I had no hope? There is no abatement in God's power and faithfulness." With these views she makes no preparation for his burial; tells her husband nothing of his death, but speaks to God by the prophet, and expects help from him. See how she expresses herself. "Is it well with thee?" asks Gehazi; "Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" and she answered "It is well.

Here is the greatest submission in the deepest distress; her son, her only son, the son of her love, the son of her old age, is taken away with a stroke, and yet all is well. There is nothing amiss in the dispensation; had she chosen it, she could not have had it so; but as God hath chosen it, it is well, it is best; she has nothing to object. Here are submission and faith both discovered in their sweetest exercise; submission ro what God alone hath done; faith in what he is able to do, and in what she believed he would do.

"By faith women received their dead raised to life again;" so that the words, thus explained, afford us this plain and useful observation. Faith, where it is in exercise, will teach a christian to say of all God does, "It is well."

Salisbury, N. H.

READY AND WAITING.

B. C. CRABTREE.

There is seriousness of great magnitude attached to the word "ready" and "waiting," which shows our expectation of something we are in readiness to meet.

No doubt most of you, my dear readers, have journeyed by the R. R. You have got ready, and repaired to the depot to wait for the coming train. You have understood by the Company's time-tables that the train is due at such at an hour. The time arrives, and the expected train does not come. Still you wait, believing the train will be along, you have read the figures on the tables. Sometimes you stand upon the platform, looking down the track, very anxiously, expecting to catch a glimpse of the coming train. Still you wait; and, after some delay, the iron horse, with its train, rolls into the station, and you step on board and move away.

Our absent Lord has left us word that he will return to this earth, the second time, to reward the faithful, and all that are ready for his coming. We can understand by his revealed Word when we may expect him. So there is no excuse why we should not be ready. If we are ready, and waiting at God's great depot of grace, we shall surely find ourselves among that number whose through tickets are endorsed by the blood of the Lamb, into the city of the living God.

How blessed to be ready!—to have our work done, and have a full assurance that we shall be accepted of him in that day when he comes to make up his jewels. Let us be ready in the morning, noon and evening, and the Lord will be ready to save us. We read—"They that were ready went in to the marriage."

Dear readers, I want to say right here, that I mean to be ready and waiting for the coming of our absent Lord. I am satisfied the heavenly train is nearly due. I seem to hear the rumbling of the great chariot wheels, coming through the land. I have not a doubt existing in my mind about this matter. I read this in the blessed Book, and believe. I know my absent Lord is coming.

Thank God, I have no disposition to doubt his Word. I would not delay his coming. My song is, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." I am expecting any moment to hear the sound of the trump of God. What a blessed hope! What a blessed position to be in—ready and waiting.

I tell you, dear readers, if we are ready and waiting, the pleasures of this world we shall care but little for. We shall not want to grasp its riches; we shall not want its fashions or its pleasures.

Let us see to it that we are ready and waiting for the Son of righteousness to appear, and give us the promised Canaan.

THE BIBLE.

By Alanson B Wolveston, born Sept. 18th, 1810, died Oct. 15th, 1828, in the nineteenth year of his age.

The Bible is a brief recital of all that is past, and a certain prediction of all that is to come. It settles all matters of debate, resolves all doubts, and relieves the mind of its scruples. It reveals the only living and true God, and points the unerring way to him; it sets aside all other gods, and exhibits the vanity and folly of those who trust in them.

The Bible is a book of laws, to point out right and wrong; a book of wisdom, which condemns all foolishness and vice; and a book of knowledge, which makes even the simple wise. It is a book of truth, that detects all lies, and confutes all error; and a book of life, which leads in the sure way from eternal death.

The Bible is the most compendious work in the world; the most authentic treatise and interesting history that ever was written. It contains the earliest antiquities, the strangest events, the most wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, and unparalleled wars; it describes the celestial, terrestrial, and infernal worlds; the origin of the angelic hosts, the human tribes, and hellish legions.

The Bible can instruct the most accomplished mechanic and the most skillful artist; it can teach the ablest rhetorician, and exercise the powers of the most profound mathematician; it can perplex the wisest anatomist, and confound the ablest critic.

The Bible presents a complete code of laws, a perfect body of divinity, and a narrative which has no equal. It is a book of lives, a book of travels, and a book of voyages. It is the best covenant that was ever made, the best evidence that was ever given, the best deed that was ever signed, and the best testament that was ever sealed. This book is the king's best copy, the magistrate's best rule, the parent's best guide, the servant's infallible directory, and the young man's best companion. It is the schoolboy's spelling book, and the learned man's master-piece. It contains a choice grammar for the novice, and deep sayings for the sage. It is the ignorant man's schoolmaster, and the wise man's dictionary. It furnishes knowledge, witty inventions for the ingenions, and dark sayings for the grave; and it is its own interpreter. It encourages the wise, the warrior, and him that overcomes; and promises an eternal reward to the conqueror. But that which crowns the whole is, its Author is without partiality and without hypocrisy; for in him is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

The Bible suits all orders, ranks and conditions of men. It speaks alike to the rich and the poor, to the honorable and the ignoble. The gift of such a book is worthy its Almighty Author, and exemplifies his justice and goodness to the understanding of every rational being. Inexcusable is he who dares not read, and unwise is he who gains no instruction; for to guilty man it is a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death.—

LETTER.

H. MUNGER.

I see by the Crisis of March 31st an article in relation to the Seabrook Campmeeting taking the place of the Alton Bay meeting, which has no foundation in fact. For some three years there have been remarks by Brn. Smith, Grant, and others, that we ought to have a campmeeting near the salt water, for the benefit of our back country friends. Bro. Smith thought about a place at Hampton, near his brother's; others have looked and proposed other places on the coast, but nothing was settled upon. Last year I was called to look at a place in Seabrook, and found a good location, and informed Brn. Smith and Grant of the fact, and wished them to look at it.

Last fall the church at Seabrook wished me to look at it again, and they agreed to take a lease of land for the purpose of a local meeting, not to conflict with either of the large meetings, at Springfield or Alton Bay; but have it the week between them, which would be the right season of the year to visit the seashore, and give people a chance to come from the Springfield meeting to Seabrook on the reduced fare; thence to Alton Bay the week following. These facts ought to be known, and then all will be plainly understood. It is not to be a meeting of a separate interest, as some may have supposed.

This winter past the brethren in that vicinity chose a committee of seven, in different places, who took a lease of land for five years, and established the meeting as above. It is a Second Advent meeting, and so put down on the arrangements made with the Eastern R. R. for reduced fare.

I know all about it from first to last, and know that there is no reason to suppose it was to take the place of any other meeting; especially the Alton Bay meeting, which would overrun the whole place, grove and all. But that this meeting will benefit many there is no doubt—spiritually and temporally. It is within forty rods of the depot, and about seventy-five from the salt water. The committee have made arrangements to accommodate all with tent ground, free of charge. Lumber can be had for building tents for about $15 a thousand, shingles for $3.50; and there are men who will help put up tents, or take jobs putting them up, and furnish lumber if desired. The ground will be laid out in June, and made ready for locating lots for tents by calling on the committee. The first applicants have their choice, if they will build a tent or pitch a cloth tent. There will be rooms to let by the inhabitants, as there are some thirty to forty small tenement houses within one-half mile of the ground. We invite all to come to this meeting, who want salt-water breeze and a good meeting.

LETTER FROM VERMONT.

W. H. WHEELER.

A great wave, as it were, of religion, seems to be rolling over the State. We see parties succumb to it who have stood out against all influences for good for years in the past. The papers have told and repeated the story, and I really hope much good will be the result.

In this connection I am led to ask, What is serving God? Are we to announce that we have decided to serve God, and then do it by merely speaking and singing his praises in meetings, and uniting with a church? Is God a great, vain, selfish, egotistical being, who takes delight in having men praise him? Can we serve God at all, otherwise than by doing good to his creatures? Is it reasonable to talk about serving God, and working for God, as though he were a being who must look to us for benefits; as though we could minister to any want, or in any way benefit the Almighty, or add to his pleasure? If we can add to his pleasure, is he Almighty.

I believe God is Almighty. I believe it is not in our power to minister to any want of the Supreme Being, for he has no want which he is not able to supply—and not only able to supply but does supply—for if he is almighty, he has the power, and if he has a want, he of course has the will to supply that want, and where will and ability are combined, the thing that is willed is accomplished.

Believing that we cannot serve God, then, by ministering to any want of his, how are we to do it? By ministering to the wants of his creatures. We are his creatures, and subject to such laws as he, for reasons which we cannot expect to fathom, has fixed for us. The violation of any law brings a penalty. If we hold our hand in the fire, we violate a law, and suffer the penalty of that violation. If we wrong our neighbor, we incur the penalty of an accusing conscience. If we practice any vice, we violate a physical law, and a physical penalty follows. Then if we persuade any to refrain from violating any of these laws, we thus save them from the penalty of a violated law, and consequently do them good. If we prevent a man from holding his hand in the fire we save him from being burned, and thus do him good. If we prevent a man from committing a crime or practicing a vice, we save him from the penalty of this violation of laws, and thus do him good. This I believe to be the true and the only true way of serving God—by doing good to his creatures. To sum it all up, I know of no better way to serve God than by serving man,—his creature.

In so far as making a public profession induces others to strive to make themselves better; in so much as speaking, praying, and singing in meeting leads those who hear to desire to lead better lives, these services are real services of God; because they do good to his creatures who are not, like him, almighty. Then religious exercises are good, and are a service to God, simply inasmuch as they benefit the participants and the spectators, and are by far the least part of religion; while the actual deeds of every-day life are the only true test, and the greater part of the service of God must be performed outside of church walls.

The deacon of the church, who gives twenty-five dollars to support the minister, makes a long prayer once a week at the weekly prayer-meeting, asking forgiveness for the sins of others, puts a penny into the contribution box every time it comes around, and gives five dollars for the missionaries in South Africa or the Sandwich Islands, feels that he has rendered God service, while the little Irish boy around the corner, who perhaps swears a little, does not go to church three times a year, but who will go without candy when he has earned a quarter by carrying coal for the deacon, and gives the quarter towards buying a pair of shoes for his little sister, perhaps cries for a while, all by himself, because he feels, as Topsy did in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "I'se so wicked." Now I believe, if either of these parties find themselves left out in the day of reckoning, it will be the deacon, and little Mike will be as happy in that day as he made his little sister when the new shoes were brought home.

It is now as it was when Christ was on earth. A rich and arrogant Pharisee receives the homage of men, and feels sure of heaven, while the poor but earnest publican beats himself and cries, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

Religious meetings are good, and I love to participate in them. I enjoy the religious meetings as a school-boy does a holiday, as a season of enjoyment, and I believe those who attend and enjoy them do good not only to themselves but to lookers-on, if their every-day life corresponds. There are those who make loud professions, and occupy the chief seats in the synagogues, but who will tell half a dozen lies in making a $5 trade for the sake of getting fifty cents more than they otherwise might. The public exhortations and prayers of such men, instead of serving God, are among Satan's greatest auxilaries.

ZION.

IDA AHLBORN.

Zion, blest by love of God,
Whose arms enfold thee ever;
Oh, no sin or grief may come,
Thy Lord from thee to sever;
For Jehovah knows no change,
He is the same forever.

In the time of pain and need,
Thou shalt not be forsaken;
No evil shall befall thee,
When heav'n and earth are shaken;
When, upon the call of God,
The dead from sleep shall waken.

Zion, oh, so richly blest,
In God alone confiding,
Oh! soon shall the clouds of sin,
Now his face from thee hiding,
Vanish away and leave thee
In his pure light residing.

FRANKFORT, ME.

F. A. BAKER.

Twelve years ago I first visited this village, about sixteen miles below Bangor, on the Penobscot river, west side; though the river cannot be seen from the village by reason of "Treat's Mountain"; but vessels of considerable size can come in through "Marsh Stream," and large ships have been built here. I came at first by direction of Eld. Jas. Hemenway, to spend two weeks; but the Lord blest, and about sixty persons, old and young, professed faith in the Lord Jesus, and forty-four were then baptized. I remained some three years, and baptized about thirty more, and in March, 1866, moved to North Searsport, where I lived one year, and then moved to Levant, Penobscot Co., about nine miles from Bangor, where we have lived until last November, in our home given us by the late beloved Bro. Joseph Turner, who gave a thousand dollars to the A. C. P. Society, and a like sum to Bro. H. L. Hastings' work in the Southern States, and a third thousand towards "The Levant Union Bethel," built at Levant, Me., and half of it owned by the Advent Society.

We moved to Bangor the twelfth of Nov. last, where we labored during the winter, and saw the blessing of God on the dear and tried church and people worshiping in Concert Hall, till on the first Sabbath in this month (March 7th, 1875). It then seemed to be our painful duty to bid them farewell as their Pastor. The largest company sat down to partake at the Lord's Supper that day that I have seen commune in Bangor. We parted amidst many tears, but having "assuredly gathered" that the Lord had called us, after an absence of nine years, to return to Frankfort, we packed our little household stuff and came to this place.

Frankfort, Waldo Co., Me., is our Post Office address, and the place of our sojourn for the present. This will be our chief point of labor. There is no other minister or meetings in this village, and a wide door seems to be open. The interest is low; the sheep are scattered by reason of so long being without a shepherd; but we are hoping and praying for the Lord to visit and save this dear people. But I intend to visit the churches at Bangor and Levant occasionally, as I may be able, until they can be otherwise provided for.

Let all mail matter be directed to this place. We ask the prayers of all who are interested in the salvation of souls, for us and for this people.

Frankfort, Waldo Co., Me.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.—Among the prisoners taken captive at the battle of Waterloo, there was a Highland piper. Napoleon, struck with his mountain dress and sinewy limbs, asked him to play on his instrument, which is said to sound delightfully in the mountains and glens of Scotland. "Play a pibroach," said Napoleon; and the Highlander played it. "Play a march." It was done. "Play a retreat." "Na, na!" said the Highlander, "I never learned to play a retreat!"

"No retreat" should be the motto emblazoned on the standard of every christian warrior, as he goes forth to battle, "not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against the rulers of the darkness of spiritual wickedness in high places."

BETTER a thousandfold sacrifice elegance than fervor; better crucify refined taste than quench holy passion; better have the outward forms of devotion imperfect and inartistic, than lose the spirit which alone gives them value; better that music should be discordant than soulless, the prayers broken and rugged than cold and undevout, the altar bare and unattractive than the fire that ought to burn on it extinguished.

SINFUL DRESSING.

In part, I am a seclusionist—not of choice—from necessity. When I go abroad into the world there is so much gaiety, and the current rushes so contrary to that running in my mind, that it makes me feel old-fashioned, unnatural, out of place, and so I turn homeward, as the one of few places to feel rightly. Abroad there is a sense of insecurity, as if the multitude were thronging the downward road through the enchantment of opiates and finery, and I too, near the precipice! At home God seems to surround me as the mountains surround Jerusalem, and I fear no evil. I am becoming every day more and more puzzled—so many professing christians dressing themselves up in all the newest fashions, this surprises me! Has religion changed, and is mine out of date? When I consider the solemn responsibilities of life, and the great need there is for money to carry on the gospel plan of saving lost humanity, I dare not venture out into the labyrinths of fashion. Others do it, and are religious. In this community only two or three old-fashioned beings like myself can see any harm in fine dressing. Can we few, obscure creatures be right against the multitude? Our conclusious often waver on this point. Mr. Wesley's "dare to be singular," and the apostolic injunctions about adorning one's self must be continually called into requisition to stay us in this dilemma.

To dress plainly at this era, requires complete deadness to the opinions of the multitude; and where are the women so determined in their christian profession as to breast the onward tide? Echo answers, where? Scarcely any in this community have dared to do it. And, indeed, it will take a larger share of piety than falls to most professors to make the venture. The sacrifice in such a direction looms up as impassable mountains before those who really like not the present state of things. No beaux, no sweethearts, no friends, no caste in society! No! they cannot make the sacrifice. To tell them they have mistaken notions of what is truly attractive, weighs nothing with them. Fashion has them bound hands and feet; they cannot, will not break her fetters. But how out of place it all seems to your old-fashioned correspondent. A nation groaning under oppression and heavy taxation! Well may her groans be unheeded by her cruel law-makers; they sound hysterical, coming as they do through laces, ribbons, and finery.

What can be done to put down the present rage for showy dressing? Writers and preachers are disheartened about it. Christ's true disciples have always been, and must ever be, a plain, self-denying set of people. It is a mistake to think otherwise. "Except ye take up your cross daily and deny yourselves, ye cannot be my disciples." Has this saying of our Lord become obsolete? From the example of most professors, it really appears so. Yet some few of us are disposed to think otherwise, and if we err, are determined to err on the safe side. We had rather be esteemed "righteous overmuch," than to get to the very gate of heaven and find, when it is too late, that our righteousness was inadequate to gain admittance there. We are too fearfully impressed with the earnestness of God in his declared will—the Bible; with the awfulness of damnation, and the certainty of the joys of redemption and heaven, to run any risks.

In conclusion, let me forewarn these fashionable christians, that though God may bear long with them, they will be called to give an account before him of every dollar spent in needless ornaments and self-indulgences. Sooner than may be expected, this reckoning may be required of many. The Judge is at the door.—Banner of Holiness.

RELIGION.

"It cannot be said of this age that it has too much religious belief. On the contrary, it is an age of skepticism and indifference. The trouble with the majority of people is that they care nothing about the unseen realities. Science is gradually sapping faith, especially among the 'professors' on one hand, and the thoughtless and uneducated on the other. Materialism is eating away earnestness. The interests of the day are so absorbing that most persons do not trouble themselves with what is intangible and invisible. They may even go through with religious forms and ceremonies, but it is with scarcely more sense of their real meaning than had Cicero's augurs of the rites of Roman worship. It is not so much unbelief—with the masses—as indifference, which kills religion. Now, the veriest skeptic who still believes in the eternal principles of morality, must rejoice at any thing which can arouse the cold and dull sense of this age to 'things not seen and eternal.' Whatever touches the religious sentiment and conscience touches the whole moral nature of the man.

Religion, if it have the faintest semblance of its appropriate and natural power, must make men better parents and more faithful children, truer in all relations of the family, more honest as business men, and public spirited as citizens. Men are moved to realize all other grand sentiments and principles by great waves of sympathy. Our public meetings and orations and addresses at the beginning of the war were efforts at a 'revival' of patriotism. Temperance has at times been equally impressed on a whole community by such excited efforts. Many men are exceedingly torpid and almost dead to truths which do not affect their everyday interests. Even the extravagances of a revivalist may be useful in arousing them.—New York Times.

PARTIAL KNOWLEDGE.—A traveler, as he passed through a large and thick wood, saw a part of a huge oak, which appeared misshapen, and almost appeared to spoil the scenery. "If," said he, "I was the owner of this forest, I would cut down that tree." But when he had ascended the hill, and taken a full view of the forest, this same tree appeared the most beautiful part of the landscape. "How erroneously," said he, "I have judged while I saw only a part!" The full view, the harmony and proportion of things, are all necessary to clear up our judgment.—Dr. Olin in Ex.

BEAUTIFUL and touching are the words once uttered by a worthy Quaker in counsel to a young christian: "I expect to pass through this world but once; and if, therefore, there can be any kindness I can show, or anything I can do, to any fellow human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it; for I shall not pass this way again."

BE READY.

G. B. MERRILL.

The christian should be ready for every event of life. Provision is made for us; promises made to us. The words of Jesus are—"Be ready." Yes, ready to meet, endure, and derive benefit from our troubles, and ready to meet our foe. Death—the enemy—reigns, and we should be ready, having our accounts settled, and we, at peace with God. Jesus is coming, and we should be ready to hail him with joy. He will come in like manner as he went away. We must meet him.

The appearing of Jesus should be the object of our tenderest hopes, warmest desires, and sweetest anticipations. We should look for the coming of Jesus as the watchman looks for the morning,—as the bride for the expected bridegroom, and as the bondman for the morning of emancipation.

My brother, let me, at parting, say to thee, "Be ready." Jesus is coming soon. Very soon the cry may be heard, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Oh, to have our loins girt about with truth, our lamps trimmed and burning, and we all ready to meet Jesus.

Worcester, Mass.

GOD LOVES ME.—Some years ago two gentlemen were riding together, and as they were about to separate, one addressed the other thus:

"Do you ever read your Bible?"

"Yes, but I get no benefit from it; for, to tell you the truth, I feel that I do not love God."

"No more did I, replied the other, "but God loved me."

This answer produced such an effect upon his friend that, to use his own words, it was as if one had lifted him off the saddle into the skies. It opened unto his soul at once the great truth, that it is not how much I loved God, but how much God loved me.

IN OUR land the seed of the Word is sown broad-cast, in printed Bibles, tracts, religious papers and books; from the pulpit, in Sabbath schools, in Bible classes. It is a solemn work to be one of God's sowers, to preach or teach his Word, but it is just as solemn to hear it. It depends on the manner in which we hear and receive the truth, whether it shall prove to us "a savor of life unto life or a savor of death unto death." "Take heed, therefore, how ye hear."

GOD is not an impatient gardener. He knows that the sun must shine on his trees, and the wind blow on them, and the rain and the dew fall on them for many a year. He doesn't expect fruit from saplings; all they have to do is to grow up and up towards the light. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain.

HOME AND HEALTH.

NOT YET.

J. R. BOYNTON.

"Not yet," said the fair young school-boy,
There is time in the future for me;
My fun must not be interrupted,
The pleasures of life I must see.
When I am a man I will tell you
How the counsel of truth, so sublime,
Reached the deep of my soul's affection,
With radiance my heart to enshrine.

"Not yet," said that young man of twenty,
My school summer days are o'er;
And now in pursuance of business,
For riches and honor I explore.
Should God in his mercy thus bless me
With riches, and honor, and fame,
Riper years of my life in devotion
Shall herald abroad his dear name.

"Not yet," said that man of business,
My cares are too many to lay by;
Soon I will retreat to the quiet of life,
And then can get ready to die.
But the rush of my business is such,
I cannot find time now to pray,
But if God will have mercy and spare life,
I will serve him at some future day.

Roll on! ye years of oppression;
Borne on by the flight of time;
Bring back the sweet memories of childhood,
That around me so dearly entwine.
Come back to me, dear old homestead,
The laurel, the oak, and the pine;
The school-house, the church-yard, the snow bells
How sweetly in memory they chime.

Long years in exile I have wandered
In the path that I knew was wrong;
I neglected the advice of a mother
For the gain of a paltry song.
That gain to my soul has been bitter,
That song to my ear gives pain;
I'll fling to the fiend his own treasure,
And seek mercy and pardon again.

"Not yet" is a thief of destruction,
And hundreds are led in that throng,—
The monarch, the peasant, the drunkard
Are deceived by its syren song.
Oh, may it never be your lot
To spend years in folly and pride,
To be chilled by the cold sombre shadows
Of the sorrows of life's ebbing tide.

POPULAR AMUSEMENTS.

The Liberal Christian has some sensible views on the much-abused subject of amusements; and now that this subject is agitating the public mind, we give them further circulation: "There is altogether too much play-going, and party-going; altogether too much public entertainment and excitement for the mind and conscience, the health and happiness of our people, especially in the cities and large towns. We are losing something of our seriousness and steadiness, and relaxing our hold on the solid and satisfactory realities of life altogether too much, we fear, in the enervating air and languor-giving intoxication of public excitement and frivolous revels. It would be incalculably better for most of our people if they kept at home more than they do, and made that a more cheerful, attractive, satisfying place than it is.

Many people have an idea that to be happy they must go with the crowd to some ill-ventilated assembly room, and be jostled and jammed, piqued and snobbed, stepped upon and run against, bothered and bored, until worn out and ready to faint, and then get home as they can to pass a half-sleepless night and be half-sick the next day."

The main trouble is that most young folks are inclined to go to extremes in seeking amusements of which older people have already seen the folly. Such amusements as are found in the modern play-house are only a form of dissipation, terminating in physical exhaustion, if not in disease.

The only remedy is in right moral and religious training, with rational recreations at home in the family. If parents were more considerate, they would provide rational and healthful entertainments, in which all could participate—such varieties as reading aloud, recitations, dialogues, music, vocal and instrumental, light gymnastics instead of dancing.—Phrenological Journal.

A large part of one's religious duty is to care for the physical frame. Many a sad mood of the soul comes from a diseased body. Many religious perplexities are due to a dyspeptic stomach.

WHY OUR WOMEN FADE SO QUICKLY.

Many times we have vague impressions of a certain truth, which will never be brought to our minds with all its force unless brought out by external circumstances. It is a sad and deplorable fact, that we cannot fully apperciate a blessing until it is lost to us. A girl comes to woman's estate fair, fresh, beautiful as a velvety rose sparkling with crystals of dew in the first blush of a summer morning. One to look at her, would hardly be reminded that the lovely structure is composed of hot soda-biscuit, strong coffee, cake, sweetmeats, etc. But such is the leniency of nature, that one may arrive at this age on such fare and appear wholesome. But how transient this beauty when its consistency is tested by the stern experience of life! Under the sober cares of womanhood it fades as the morning glory in the hot sunshine. From three to five years from maturity we see evidence of decay in proportion to the meagreness of the foundations. The rich nut-brown hair becomes thin and scraggy; the pearly teeth become decayed and unsightly, so that when the mouth is opened you are reminded of the opening of a long-closed sepulchre, "full of dead bones and uncleanness." Next you perceive that the skin has lost its fresh and rosy hue. The rose and the lily have vanished and given place to something that reminds one strongly of the parchment used for drum-heads. The face that was so peachy and fresh is now shiny, flabby, and wrinkled. Is it necessary that this beauty should be so short-lived, instead of a joy that is commensurate with life? No! a thousand times no! As a rule, look at a man at the age of thirty-five, and a woman at thirty. Let them stand side by side. What a picture! The man broad shouldered, straight, stout, rosy, smooth skinned, and healthy looking. The woman thin, sallow, wrinkled.

But the early degeneracy in health of the women of our land cannot be chiefly attributed to bad dietetic habits, for if such were the case it would include the men also. It is, however, due to fashion. How can they be healthy wrapped in such swaddling bands? See them dragging about heavy, trailing, clinging skirts! some loaded like coats of mail, making it a heavy task for them to be even parlor ornaments. Such clothing hinders activity, and activity is necessary to prevent stagnation of blood. Most of us know that a bounding circulation is essential to beauty, and that a bad circulation gives a person a blue, pinched look, like a quail divested of its plumage.

Another great enemy to beauty is foul air. Men as a rule, are exposed to the best air that the market affords the greater part of the time. Hence it is that their food, although it may not be of the best quality, is better digested and assimilated. How is it commonly with women? Without sufficient bodily exercise to produce a good circulation, they also increase the difficulty by staying in close rooms heated by coal, and breathing the gases pent up therein. One cannot breathe impure air and long retain the beauty God has given her.

The remedy is obvious. First, dress healthfully. Dress so that the precious life current can have free course from the now stultified brain to those numb hands and feet. Dress so that the delicate machinery within can maintain its natural position. Dress so that locomotion, work, play, fun, or frolic will become a pleasure.

Breathe. Take long, deep draughts of pure, vitalizing air, the purest you can get. Breathe until your purple cheeks become carmine. Breath until your tallowy skin—which no cosmetic can altogether hide—becomes fresh as a little child's. Breathe until your heart and tongue break forth into song, as in the joyous days of sweet sixteen. Breathe, and let the sun every day bestow on your shrunken cheek a lingering kiss. And every day let the winds play hide-and-seek among your flowing locks until you acquire a school-girl's freshness and vivacity. And let no care press too heavily.

Work. Work off languor and low spirits. Have a heart in it. Work is a necessity to health and beauty. Have an eye single to some glory. In other words, seek an object in life worthy of your noble nature. Do not seek a dozen objects and work a little at each one. But seek one only, and bend all your energies to its accomplishment. Decide early in life upon the course you intend to pursue. Decide it by finding out what you like best—by what you are most inclined to do. That will be the calling whereunto God has called you. Do not look upon marriage as the goal—unless you decide that it is your heavenly calling—but only a side issue in human existence. As long as one-half of the human family is so fearfully dependent upon the other half, it is the height of folly to talk about equality.—Science of Health.

MY HOME JUST OVER THE RIVER.

I am watching and waiting for Jesus to come,
Who will give me a place in that beautiful home,
Where sweet rest will be mine forever;
Rest from life's wearisome sorrow and care,
Rest with loved ones who will be gathering there
In that home just over the river.

No aching hearts will be in that beautiful land;
Tear-dimmed eyes belong not to that angelic band
Who are coming to welcome me thither;
Coming to lead me through golden paved streets,
Where I may bow in devotion at the dear Savior's [feet,
In that home just over the river.

When there I shall know why I have suffered so here;
For the way has often seemed darksome and drear,
And hope seemed to leave me forever;
But I've learned to look from earth cares away—
And have caught bright light from the beautiful ray
From my home just over the river.

THE FIRST RESURRECTION AT HAND.

By the Rev Sir W. Tilson Marsh, M. A., of Oriel College, Oxford, England.

The apostle Paul did not doubt that he should share in the resurrection of the dead. He could never have entertained an idea of the possibility of his being left behind in the darkness of the tomb, when all the nations that are in their graves "shall hear the voice of the Son of man, and shall come forth." He looked onward to the resurrection of the dead as to a future, but divinely predicted, and, therefore, certain event. He anticipated that glorious morning, when "this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality," and when "death shall be swallowed up in victory." He saw, with faith's clear sight, that, when his earthly tabernacle should be dissolved, there was prepar for him "a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." And, in the hallowed rapture of that hope, he could say, "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept. . . . O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 15 : 20, 42, 51-58; 2 Cor. 5 : 1.

But, then, what is the apostle's meaning when he also says, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead"? Phil. 3 : 11.

An explanation is furnished by referring to the original Greek for the word resurrection in this passage. The word is exanastisis, which denotes the "resurrection out from among the dead," that is, the resurrection of the righteous, exclusively, out from among the whole of the dead, both righteous and wicked. It is, in short, the elect resurrection or "first resurrection" of the saints, which is to take place at the second advent of Christ, at the commencement of the one thousand years of the Millennium. Rev. 20 : 5.

1. This "first resurrection" is the special resurrection of which our Lord speaks when he says, "They who shall be accounted worthy to attain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more, for they are equal to the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." And this he elsewhere calls "the resurrection of the just," viz., "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

This, then, must be styled "the resurrection of the just," as distinguished from the resurrection of the unjust. And to obtain it, is to receive a peculiar privilege, and to be awarded a special honor. For our Lord speaks of those who shall be accounted worthy to attain it, as "the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke 20 : 35, 36; 14 : 14.

St. Paul also announces that "the dead in Christ shall rise first." As our Lord was the first-fruits of this electric resurrection, so the just seem to be a kind of first-fruits of the general resurrection of the dead, as it is written—"Christ, the first-fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming."

It was with this resurrection in view that the martyred saints suffered and endured, counting it all joy, "that they might obtain a better resurrection." And it is on those who attain to the same reward of grace that St. John pronounces the solemn and emphatic word of blessing—"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection." This, then, is the elect resurrection to which, above all things, St. Paul desired to attain. It is a prior resurrection. Those who participate in it will live and reign with Christ our King during the thousand years of millennial glory. Hence arises the importance of preparation. Hence the being counted worthy to obtain it is, indeed, a peculiar privilege. 1 Thess. 4 : 16; 1 Cor. 15 : 23; Heb. 11 : 25.

It will be the commencement of inconceivable happiness and glory to such as shall then rise, to be with the Lord where he is. They will "behold his glory," and see him "face to face." They will be "like him." As they behold him, they will reflect the beauty of his perfections. Love, joy and peace will form their moral character, and beautify their glorified bodies. As was the Savior on the mountain of transfiguration, so shall they be. They shall be clothed in raiment "white as the light, exceeding white as snow, so as no fuller on earth can white them." They shall "eat of the tree of life," and "of the hidden manna." They shall be "crowned with the crown of life." They shall possess "the white stone with the new name written in it." They shall have "power over the nations." They shall be "made pillars in the temple of God, and go no more out." They shall "walk in white in the streets of the new Jerusalem." Never shall their names be blotted out of the book of life. And to them it shall be granted "to sit with the Savior on his throne." Such are the rewards of the children of "the first resurrection." 1 John 3 : 2; Rev. 2 : 7, 17; 3 : 5, 12, 21; Mark 9 : 3.

2. The wise virgins, or one hundred and forty-four thousand sealed christians, who are waiting for and desiring the personal advent of Christ, will escape beforehand from the great tribulation which will usher in the dawn of the millennial day.

The millennial thousand years are to be preceded by a night of troubles. And that night will come suddenly upon the earth. Brief, indeed, will be the premonitory twilight. For, when the world is saying "peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh; the day of the Lord will overtake them as a thief in the night." No more warning will be given than the thief gives of his approach. "As a snare will it come upon all them that dwell upon the face of the whole earth." Then will be the overwhelming flood. "The overflowing scourge shall pass through." For "this will be God's controversy with the nations." It will be "the shaking of all nations"; it will be "the gathering of the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to the battle of the great day of God Almighty."

Then will "the earth reel to and fro. The earth shall be utterly broken down. Fear, and the pit, and the snare, will be upon its inhabitants." The breath of the Lord, when he cometh in his anger, shall be as an overflowing stream. Then "the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted on that day"; then "shall men enter into the rock, and hide them in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his Majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth." Isa. 2.

But deliverance out of these troubles is secured to the sealed children of God. As, in Ezekiel's vision in chapter 9, the man clothed with linen, with the writer's inkhorn, was commanded by the Lord to "go through the midst of the city, and to set a mark on the foreheads of the men that did sigh and cry for all the abominations done in it," nor could the destruction come upon the doomed city until these had been sealed; even so God's servants must be sealed now "unto the day of redemption" by the divine Spirit, that they may be delivered from the destruction which impends upon the apostate nations of Christendom.

All the one hundred and forty-four thousand sealed ones—the definite and selected number who shall stand with the Lamb upon Mount Zion—will be caught up into the air, and changed, when the parousia of the Lord takes place (that is, his coming into the air near the earth, as distinguished from his apocalypsis or subsequent manifestation upon the earth at Mount Olivet), when "one shall be taken and another left." . . . .

For this is the special promise made to those who, at the sound of the archangel's trumpet, shall be found waiting for and desiring the coming of the Lord. They shall "escape all those things that shall then come to pass." They shall be delivered from the great tribulation. They shall stand in their lot at the end of the days. Being clothed in the wedding garment, they will be admitted to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Having oil in their vessels, they will be ready for their Lord's coming, and will enter in, like the wise virgins, whilst the foolish will be left outside the doors of the palace. . . . . .

Noah must be in the ark before the fountains of the great deep are broken up. Lot must be out of Sodom before the fiery tempest can descend. Elijah must have ascended in his chariot of fire before the threatened evil fall upon Israel. The Christians must have reached Pella before the armies of the Romans finally beset Jerusalem. So the church of waiting believers must escape before the sword of the Lord finally devastates Christendom. The salt must be taken away before the elements of destruction can ferment.—Signs of Our Times.

THE FULNESS OF CHRIST.

"I have found it an interesting thing to stand on the edge of a noble-rolling river, and to think that, although it has been rolling on for six thousand years, watering the fields, and slaking the thirst of a hundred generations, it shows no sign of waste or want; and when I have watched the rise of the sun, as he shot above the crest of the mountain, or, in a sky draped with golden curtains, sprang up from his ocean bed, I have wondered to think that he has melted the snows of so many winters, and renewed the verdure of so many springs, and painted the flowers of so many summers, and ripened the golden harvests of so many autumns, and yet shines as brilliant as ever; his eye not dim, nor his natural strength abated, nor his floods of light less full for centuries of boundless profusion.

Yet, what are these but images of the fulness that is in Christ? Let that feed your hopes, and cheer your hearts, and brighten your faith, and send you away rejoicing. For when judgment flames have licked up that flowing stream, and the light of that glorious sun shall be quenched in darkness, or veiled in the smoke of a burning world, the fulness that is in Christ shall flow on throughout eternity in the bliss of the redeemed. Blessed Savior, Image of God, Divine Redeemer, in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore!"—Dr. Guthrie.

PAUL AND THE JUDGMENT.

"But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment; yea, I judge not my own self. For I know nothing by myself, yet am I not hereby justified; but he that judgeth me is the Lord." 1 COR. 4 : 3, 4.

It was a malady of the old Greek commonwealths, that there was a constant tendency to factions and bigoted clans. The same also appeared in the early Greek churches, particularly the one planted by Paul in the city of Corinth. Quick at learning, these people speedily attained a wealth of spiritual gifts and scriptural knowledge for which the apostle specially commends them. But their steadfastness and continuance in progress were not so satisfactory. They presently became too learned, especially in their own conceits, undertook to judge and decide in matters beyond their sphere, and hence fell into the common vice of their race, separating into antagonistic parties, and suffering their religious zeal to run into a factious enthusiasm for this or that particular man. There soon was a Paul faction, an Apollos faction, a Peter faction, and a Christ faction. These and other consequent irregularities called forth the apostle's displeasure, and drew from him certain letters, in which he chides them as fleshly and carnal, and needing to go back and learn over again the true spirit of the religion which they had been led to profess. He finds special fault with them for their manner of judging between the ministers of Christ and of exalting one over against the other, as heads of so many different schools. And it is in connection with this point that the words now before us occur.

The subject for our present consideration, then, is, the way Paul felt with regard to the judgments of men.

1. The opinions and conclusions of people in this world he esteemed of very trifling consequence. His words are: "With me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you or of man's judgment." The original, and other translations have "man's day" instead of "man's judgment." So also in the margin. The expression is peculiar, and stands in antithesis to "the day of the Lord," when there shall also be a rendering of judgment of a sort much more to be considered than that which men may pronounce. The time in which the apostle wrote, and the whole interval between that and the coming again of Christ to judge the world is "man's day."

This present course of things is much under the control of the human will. Man's opinions and resolves now have the sway. All the governments, courts, judgments and decisions of this world are of man's wisdom and making. The laws of society and the standing of men in it, are but the aggregate of human opinion and human adjudication. This age is the period of the exercise and rule of human self-will, in which man is the chief actor and in which things are judged according to present interests and necessities with very little regard to God, or what shall be hereafter. And according to the wisdom and conclusions which now govern, there is scarcely anything that is rightly judged. "Man's day" is particularly unfair to the things of God and eternity. Its discernment does not seem to penetrate them at all or to have any capacity to decide upon them with justice.

Judged by "man's day" the whole economy of God is reversed, the cross is a stumbling-block and foolishness, and those who live and act with reference to eternity are looked upon as weak, shunned as unphilosophic, and often denounced as enthusiasts, visionaries, and fanatics. And a miserable set of men the early christians were, if the decisions of "man's day" concerning them had been without appeal or future rectification. But the light of "man's day" is a very poor light. Its judgments are superficial, formed only from outward appearances and utterly without force beyond this brief life. They can, when favorable, bring nothing but a poor ephemeral good, and when adverse, they can inflict but a short-lived and feeble disadvantage. This is the light in which Paul viewed them, and so considered it "a very small thing" that he should be judged by these Corinthians or "of man's day" in general. No praise or censure of men could materially affect him, or have a feather's weight to turn him from his plain duty as an apostle of Christ. And blessed is that minister who can in like manner rise above what the world may think of him and live and preach in the light of other judgments than those which earth may render.

2. He did not rest even in his own judgment of himself. His conscience was indeed clear. He had nothing with which to charge and condemn himself. What he had done he had done honestly and faithfully as far as he understood his own heart. He knew of no failure on his part in the full performance of his duty as a minister of Christ. He was free from all compunctions for official dereliction, unconscious of having at any time faltered or come short. And a most blessed state it is to have a conscience thus "void of offence toward God and toward man." How few christians or ministers are able honestly to make such a profession! Many would consider it a state of perfection, than which there could be nothing higher. But Paul did not consider even this conclusive in his favor. "Yet am I not hereby justified." It is possible for the best of men to be mistaken in their judgments of themselves, as well as of other things.

People may have clean consciences and know of nothing in which they are derelict. In the best wisdom and self-searching which they can exercise, they may find nothing with which to condemn themselves. And yet in the eye of God, things may wear a very different aspect. Because we think that we are all that we ought to be, we are not to conclude that matters are with us just as we think they are. Our own consciences are not the ultimate judges. It is possible to be very conscientious and still be eternally lost. Conscience is too weak and blind a thing to count its decisions an infallible basis upon which to estimate our real standing before God. With all his great gifts and superior enlightenment, Paul would not rest in what his conscience testified, nor consider himself irreproachable, because his conscience did not reproach him. He knew the deceitfulness of the human heart, and that there was a possibility of his being led to form too favorable an estimate of his state. He knew that God might see defects where he suspected none. He would not therefore involve himself in the folly of trusting to his own judgment.

3. He committed himself to the unerring judgment of God. He was aware that God would judge him; that God's judgment alone is that by which he would have to stand or fall in the end; and that from God's judgment there is no appeal. To that, therefore, he referred his whole case, knowing that God would judge righteously as well as mercifully, and that the decisions of the great day would do him full justice, without mistake and without partiality or undue severity. It was thus his heart took refuge from the various criticisms and censures passed upon him and from the dangers of reliance upon his own self-estimation. Men could not know him as God knew him. Nor could he know himself as the Lord knew him. Human eyes could only look upon the outward appearance, but God was acquainted with all that was stirring in his heart, his inward longings, motives and strivings, his inarticulate sighs as well as his uttered prayers, and with what degree of earnestness, devotion, and self-sacrifice he had given himself to know nothing but "Christ and him crucified." He might be mistaken in his judgment of himself; but the Lord could not be deceived or mistaken. He would do right. He would judge fairly of all that was in him. And he would not wrong him by favors that he ought not to have, or by censures and disparagements which he did not deserve. Therefore, to God's judgment he appealed, and to that he referred himself as the remedy for all the misjudgments of "man's day," and as a refuge from all this world's poor decisions. And happy is that man who can at all times and in all his trials rest in the thought, "He that judgeth me is the Lord." Earthly censures have no sting to wound such a one. He is shielded as only a true christian can be shielded, against disturbances of what men may think of him, and from the follies of an overweening self-confidence. It is a fearful thought, but for a good man, it is also full of comfort. From this subject, then, let us observe and reflect.

1. There is a day of final judgment coming. We are now in "man's day;" but it will not continue forever. It will soon have an end; and then will come the "Lord's day," the day when the drag-net of this dispensation shall come to shore—the day appointed in which God shall judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained—the day when those solemn words of Jesus shall be fulfilled: "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Nor need we be in doubt as to the coming of such a day. For almost six thousand years has the world been hearing of it from all the holy prophets and sacred books that have ever been upon earth.

A day of judgment—a day of judgment—has been proclaimed ever since the time when Enoch preached on the other side of the flood. Symptoms of it have often shaken the world, and it already began to be realized by the resurrection of Christ from the dead. It is necessitated by all the conditions of nature and of grace. Without it, the world is a mere foundation without a superstructure, accountability which lies upon us from our earliest infancy, and follows us into all the relations of life, a mere superstitious conceit, and the church a miserable interference with the native impulses of our being. If it come not, then God has no government over men and all our spiritual fears, misgivings, and apprehensions are false prophets, and the great revelation of God is nothing but a gigantic lie. Existence itself has no object, no sense, no rational explanation and justice, no reality, if there shall be no day of judgment. But there will be such a day. It is inlaid in all the structure of things. God has declared it by the mouth of all his holy prophets. Jesus has fore-announced it. Conscience refers all men to it. The eternal claims of inexorable right demand it. And however long delayed it must eventually come. You, and I, and all that shall have lived, will see it as certainly as we exist.—Prophetic Times.

— Greatness lies not in being strong, but in the right using of strength; and strength is not used rightly when it only serves to carry a man above his fellows for his own solitary glory.

THE OUTLOOK.

A. P. MOORE.

Never since God brought us out to "wait for his Son from heaven" have we had such abundant encouragement to "lift up our heads" as at the present time. Truly "our redemption draweth nigh." The "signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars," have been witnessed, as also the signs in the moral, political, and natural world. We have lived to see the Papacy pass into the last stages of consumption, just as we have been preaching for the last half century, at least. We now live to see a war-cloud gathering in the East, that is assuming just the position of our application of the latter part of the eleventh of Daniel, when the "sick man" will be driven to "plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas, in the glorious holy mountain," where he will "come to his end, and none shall help him"; and then Michael will stand up for the deliverance of his people.

Our prospects are glorious. The faithful, tried, "pure" and true will very soon see the "King in his beauty," and "be made like him; for we shall see him as he is." It has not been an idle tale, or a "cunningly devised fable" that we have been declaring to the world. Devout men of God have sounded the alarm in his holy mountain, and the "gospel of the kingdom" has been heralded among all the nations of the earth. The world has heard and trembled in view of its swift approaching doom.

The glorious truths that distinguish us as a people, for which we are reproached, never were spreading so fast as at the present day. When men sneer at the productions and preaching of so called Second Adventists, and men come out and stand, like Moody and Sankey, and move the whole of Europe, and Varley comes to our shores and boldly declares the grand and glorious truths of the soon coming of Jesus, to audiences of twenty thousand, and their utterances are reported for the masses to read and become familiar with, they will look at them favorably, and think perhaps there is something in that doctrine after all.

When we have tried to rescue the glorious, forgotten and buried truths on the nature of man, and his destiny and home, many have sneered, and railed, and fought; but nevertheless the truth has been working like leaven. Though men raise the cry of "ignorance" when Adventists speak or write, yet when such men as Prof. C. F. Hudson dare wield the mighty pen in honor of God's truth, many will read, and the glorious doctrine of the end of sin and the sinner receives an impetus as never before, working in a very different channel, and reaching a very different class of minds.

When Rev. Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland, came out before the world with his scholarly work on the "Nature and Duration of Future Punishment," it was like throwing a club into a nest of hornets; but the sensation soon passed, and now in so short a time he has nearly revolutionized Europe on the subject, and multitudes of her best ministers are ably defending the doctrine of Destruction, against that of Eternal Conscious Misery. When Dr. C. L. Ives, of Yale College, had moral courage and nobility enough to reprint Constable's work in this country, and also write his own blessed work on the Soul, it sent a thrill of joy to the heart of one class, and of terror to another;—joy to those who have labored hard and long, "bearing the burden in the heat of the day," trying to defend the truths of the Bible against that God-dishonoring doctrine of the endless wailings of the lost; and terror to those who feared their position was unsound. But the truth thus set in motion has boldly gone marching on.

When Dr. True tried to read his Essay on the destruction of the wicked before the "Methodist Preachers' Meeting" in New York, and was hissed down, little did those zealots think they were taking just the course to get men to inquiring after the truth; thus proving true that "no weapon formed against the truth shall prosper." Dr. True could well afford to be patient under such circumstances, knowing that such treatment would cause men to investigate much more readily than as though he had given his essay unmolested.

Well, thousands have embraced these grand and God-given truths since then, and some have found that we are too far down the stream of time to smother investigation. Many know of no way so effectual (seemingly to them) as to slander, falsify and try to prejudice people against our faith, like Rev. K. Atkinson in Zion's Herald of Jan. 18th, 1875, and as many have tried to do in the same way in the past; but in spite of all this, men will read, think and meditate upon those subjects that are agitating the world.

Well, brethren, we have nothing to fear from the whole outside world on these heaven-appointed issues. Truth is mighty, and must prevail. All our fears are from within. If we, as a people, stood as a unit, manifesting the spirit of the Master, what a work we might yet see. If we are to be rent and torn by envy, jealousy, hatred, variance, wrath, strife and seditions, we may rest assured God will raise up others to give these truths to the world and get the blessing. The *out*look never was so bright; but how of the *in*look? I call on all who read these lines to look to it that you have "clean hands" and a "pure heart." Live for God. Live above the world, the flesh, and the devil. Let not bickering and strife exist among yourselves, and then it will not in the body. The great day of God is at hand. Brethren, are we preparing for it? We must be "pure in heart" to enter the City's pearly portals. We must be cleansed from all sin to live with sinless beings. We must be "holy in all manner of conversation" to meet with the approbation of the King of kings. He that "hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure."

"Lift up your heads, desponding pilgrims,
Give to the winds your needless fears;
He who has said Redemption's nearing,
Soon is to reign through endless years."

My brethren in the ministry, preach the coming of Jesus. Do it in love; not as a theory, but as a solemn reality. Be terribly in earnest. Live out the truth that you preach. Warn the perishing. Labor to save souls. Live above reproach; live only for Christ. Be so humble as to have influence with God and man. Exalt Jesus, and humble self. Do not let worldly aspirations close your mouths on these truths. Magnify the riches of his grace before all the people. And soon it will be said, when called before the presence of his glory—"Well done, good and faithful servant."

Linden, N. Y.

THE TRUTH COMING OUT.

Let us now glance at the testimony of a few of the more recent expositors, and bless God that a most precious but much-neglected truth of his Word is beginning to be restored to its proper place in the esteem of many of the ablest writers.

Olshausen, the distinguised German commentator, says: "The Revelation teaches in sublime imagery, agreeing perfectly with the statements of our Lord and the apostles (which are less formal, and rather take the doctrine for granted, and thus are more incidental) that a period will come in which not only, as has already been the case, the spirit of Jesus Christ should prevail in secret, and guide men's minds, but should also gain the victory externally, and found a kingdom of peace and righteousness upon earth. Now, that with the arrival of this reign of peace there will be connected on the one hand, the appearance of Jesus Christ, and a resurrection of many saints and pious men, and, on the other, a previous mighty struggle on the part of evil—does indeed follow very naturally from the fundamental idea, and the supposed development of good and evil; but these points are only incidental. The principal idea is the perfect return of the supremacy of good, the restoration of the lost paradise to an earth which has been laid waste by sin. Millions desire this most earnestly, hope and pray for it even, without ever imagining that it is the very doctrine which they think themselves bound to oppose, or at least unable to admit, without deviating from correct belief."

Hackett, whose Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles has received the warm commendation of those best able to judge of its merits, says, on chapter 3, verse 20: "The apostle enforces his exhortation to repent by an appeal to the final coming of Christ, not because he would represent it as near in point of time, but because that event was always near to the feelings and consciousness of the first believers. It was the great consummation on which the strongest desires of their souls were fixed, to which their thoughts and hopes were habitually turned. They lived in expectation of it; they labored to be prepared for it; they were constantly, in the expressive language of Peter, looking for and hastening unto it. It is then that Christ will reveal himself in glory, will come 'to take vengeance on them that obey not the gospel, and to be admired in all them who believe,' will raise the dead, invest the redeemed with an incorruptible body, and introduce them for the first time, and forever, into the state of perfect holiness and happiness prepared for them in his kingdom. The apostles, the first christians in general, comprehended the grandeur of that occasion; it filled their circle of view, stood forth to their contemplations as the point of culminating interest in their own and the world's history, threw into comparative insignificance the present time, death, all intermediate events, and made them feel that the manifestation of Christ, with all its consequences of indescribable moment to all true believers, was the grand object which they were to keep in view as the end of their toils, the commencement and perfection of their glorious immortality. . .

It is to be acknowledged that most christians, at the present day, do not give that prominence to the resurrection and judgment, in their thoughts and discourse, which the New Testament writers assign to them; but this fact is owing, not necessarily to a difference of opinion in regard to the time when Christ will come, but to our inadequate views and impressions concerning the grandeur of that occasion, and the too prevalent worldliness in the church, which is the cause or consequence of such deficient views. If modern christians sympathized more fully with the sacred writers on this subject, it would bring both their conduct and their style of religious instruction into nearer correspondence with the lives and teaching of the primitive examples of our faith."

Alford, whose Critical Commentary on the New Testament is the most masterly production of the age, and places him in the front rank of expositors, says: "The Lord will come in person to this earth; his risen elect will reign here with him. This is my firm persuasion, and not mine alone, but that of multitudes of Christ's waiting people, as it was that of his primitive apostolical church, before controversy blinded the eyes of the fathers to the light of prophecy." . . .

In the fifth volume of the Memoirs of Dr. Chalmers, which embraces much of his correspondence, we find a letter to Dr. Bonar in commendation of certain doctrines published by the latter, and then it is added: "It is not of your prophetical, but of your theological views, that I now speak, though to the former, also, I approximate much nearer than I did in my younger days." . . . "But without slacking in the least our obligation to keep forward this great (missionary) cause, I look for its conclusive establishment through a widening passage of desolating judgments, with the utter demolition of our present civil and ecclesiastical structures."—Prophetic Times.

— Suffering well borne is better than suffering removed.

SPIRITUALISM UTTERLY INCOMPATIBLE WITH THE BIBLE.

So, also, its associate idea of Incorporeal Existence—it denies the Resurrection.

To the Editor of the Press:—SIR: Our "fond desire" and "longing after" a peep into the unseen world explains the readiness with which so many intelligent persons have "sought unto familiar spirits," astrologers, and spiritual mediums. We all want to know the secrets of the great hereafter. Marvellous it is, that all we want to know is laid down for us with perfect distinctness in our Bibles, and yet that we grope for it as in the dark. We go, anxious to satisfy our curiosity, to see the speechless Benjamin Franklin, or to hear the erratic Katie King, and learn what is meant by "progress" in the spirit land; and we return with curiosity more highly stimulated, and yet more unsatisfied, but astonished to think that we have really conversed with the denizens of that better world, who turn out to be very outrageous frauds in the flesh. We revel in imaginings of our own, and through them are deceived by crafty imposters, yet we have a Book prized by millions of us, as Revelation, from the Almighty himself, which professes to tell of this better land, and which we all believe to contain the whole and exact truth. One idea alone perverts this truth, or blinds us to it; and that is the idea so strongly held by Spiritualists, that a man can be a man without a body. Now, the Bible plainly tells of a body for us in the future world as well as in the present, and it is by no means difficult to obtain from the Bible some very commonplace facts with regard to this body, which ought to be sufficient in themselves to dispel the idea on which Spiritualism is based.

Is this future body described in the Bible as immaterial? Not at all. Two instances are given of actual resurrection from the dead. In both it was necessary to remove the stone that closed the mouth of the sepulchre in order that the material person should come forth. This should remove from our minds the idea of immateriality, either for the resurrected Lazarus, or the risen Jesus, or for ourselves, since we are very plainly told that we shall be in the likeness of His resurrection, and that not in a figurative or moral sense only, but also in a very prosaic and physical sense. Then we have the assertion of our Savior that he still had "flesh and bones," and we have his call upon the disciples to handle him, and to Thomas to touch him, and to thrust his very hand into his side, that he might not doubt the solid materiality of his person. It is a matter of wonder that these positive facts should not outweigh the mere supposition of an immaterial state, regarding which we read nothing in the Scriptures.

But there is more than this. It would perhaps shock many good churchmen to be told that they will require to eat and drink in the better land no less than here. Such an idea is perfectly abhorrent to the whole theory on which Spiritualism is built. It is expected and believed that with hunger and thirst all necessity for ordinary food will be done away. Yet we only read that "they shall hunger no more; neither thirst any more," while there are special promises with respect to food. What does the Bible actually tell us? We find the risen Lazarus eating with the Jews, and our Savior also after his rising eating in the presence of his disciples, and we read his promise that they should eat and drink with him at his table in his yet future kingdom, and that he would there drink of the fruit of the grape with them. This matter of food is of no little importance in respect to a right understanding of what and how the future life will be, although it may seem that we are inquiring about a very trivial thing. Not so, however. The idea that is at the bottom of Spiritualism and of its allied theories is that of self-existence—of life self-sustained, requiring no daily food, and, therefore, wholly independent of that providential care which provides for the necessities of our present lives.

The Bible holds out no such expectation. On the contrary we are expressly told that the eternal continuance of life is to be made dependent, as at the beginning, on the use of a certain fruit of a certain tree, and that "the right" to eat of this tree and "to enter" where it may be had is the gift by which immortality will be sustained, and that this "right" will be conferred only on those who have been raised from the dead. Now, a body, which should pass through cabinet walls, or through other walls, without breach of continuity, and which shall exist deathless, yet without food, is not such a body as the Bible leads us to expect will be raised from the grave, as the "spiritual body." Such an incorporeal body would not be a body at all. The theory itself denies the resurrection of a body, and also denies other points (besides those alluded to) that are related to us in the Bible, respecting our prospects in the world to come.

If our theories of an hereafter were based upon the Bible, and not upon the traditions that have come to us from Pagan sources, we should look for their realization only at the time of our resurrection, and of the return to earth of Him who left it eighteen hundred years ago with the promise that he would return in like manner as he went away.—Philadelphia Press.—Selected by W. F. Fahnestock.

A GREAT MAN'S OPINION.—Mr. Gladstone says, "There is a fixed purpose among the secret inspirers of Roman policy to pursue, by the road of force, upon the arrival of any favorable opportunity, the favorite project of re-erecting the terrestial throne of the Popedom, even if it can only be re-erected on the ashes of the city (Rome) and amid the whitening bones of the people."—Herald of Life.

AGENT.

THE CHELSEA CONFERENCE.

The Mass. annual State Conference, held week before last at Chelsea, was very fully attended, and was a very good meeting. The weather was fine, which was favorable for large congregations. The business was transacted with much unanimity of feeling, and with christian forbearance where differences of opinion existed. The social meetings were heart-cheering, sweet, heavenly seasons. They were not injured as many are by a few monopolizing the time with long tedious prayers and exhortations, but there seemed to be a desire to work, and give all others an equal privilege with themselves. Great love for Christ, and strong sympathy, and sweet fellowship for each other were manifested. We do not know that a single jarring note was heard, or a word of strife spoken.

The preaching was esteemed by nearly all present, of our brethren and others, as being excellent, sound, appropriate and spiritual; well calculated to produce faith in Christ's speedy advent, the importance of thorough and immediate preparation for the judgment, and to raise a high standard of christian life by inducing hearty obedience to Christ. All felt confirmed in the faith that Christ's glorious appearing is emphatically near at hand. A deep conviction rested upon the people that God has led out a class of this generation, and made it their specific duty to proclaim to the world the prophetic message of approaching judgment, as Noah and Lot were called to warn the people in their day. All seemed to have the conviction revived and strengthened that it is our special duty to make this prophetic message the leading, dispensational truth, around which all other truths should cluster, as the grand central theme of human and heavenly thought at the present time.

Some idea of the size of the meeting will be known when we say that our brethren and sisters took their dinner and supper in the vestry, under the chapel, where twenty-three hundred meals were eaten, from Wed. noon till Monday morning.

We consider these general christian gatherings very important for the establishment and continuance of christian sympathy and sweet gospel associations. God has clearly manifested his pleasure in this matter, from the earliest dates of revelation to the present time.

The ancient people of God were required to meet in solemn devotion around the sacred tents in the wilderness whenever the trump of convocation was sounded. The nation was required to assemble its hundreds of thousands, notwithstanding the enormous expense, three times a year on Mount Zion, and devoutly approach the sacred altars of their holy house. When they became worldly and covetous, and lost their pleasure in these God-appointed reunions and renewals of holy covenant, withholding the sacrifices necessary for their enjoyment, God cursed them, collectively and individually, in the field, family, and temple. When they willingly brought their offerings into the store house of God, he never failed to respond with overflowing blessings from the heavenly windows.

When Messiah came to establish a new ritual and introduce new convocations, the gospel trumpet immediately sounded the notice for general assemblies, to hear the glad tidings of salvation, in town and country, in the highways and on the sea shore, in the wilderness and sides of the mountains, in the synagogues and temple. He manifested his approbation of these frequent and protracted meetings, by kindly beckoning the people to come near and hear the great proclamation from his gracious lips, and from those whom he had called to echo his voice of love and warning to all the people.

He forever ratified the principle of calling the people, under proper circumstances, to leave their homes and worldly business and spend days at the christian altar, in hearing the gospel, and uniting in holy devotion, by miraculously feeding the people so as to protract these heavenly associations. The more we are filled with the true spirit of the gospel, the more we are inclined to assemble together, and the more ready we are to sacrifice time and money to enjoy such convocations.

This is an important item of christian experience. We should be careful not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together "as the manner of some is" now, when we can see the day approaching—the day of Christ's appearing. We should not neglect to meet together, and be careful to do it "as the manner of some is;" for there will be different objects and ways of producing religious gatherings, and we should be careful to be governed by pure motives, as some are, and not like others, who meet for self-indulgence and sensational excitement.

These are days when there are very strong social currents in all the departments of human experience, sweeping men rapidly and almost irresistibly onward to some grand era—to some mighty revolution. Every body seems to be waiting for a fast train, for some captivating mania, for some new sensational wonder; any thing or any body that can start a current of excitement by a few senseless puffs from the press, or vain parade of worldly folly. These are not the influences which should call us together; but a desire to keep the commandments of God, to assembe with the friends of Jesus for earnest prayer, sacred song, and holy devotion.

Every thing connected with our meetings in these days should be solemn, serious and impressive, because they are the last in christian experience. The church is doing her last work, like the exhortations and instructions of a dying man. He minds nothing about ceremony, but makes everything practical, knowing it is his only opportunity to accomplish the object he desires. So may we conduct all of our meetings, great and small, until the Judge shall appear. Amen.

WINNING SOULS.

The most important work in which a christian can be engaged in this world is winning souls to Christ. No temporal interests can bear any comparison with those which are eternal; therefore, the most valuable information consists in knowing the best means of leading sinners to become christians. He who is an agent in leading one from the broad road to the narrow one that leads to life eternal, has done him the greatest possible good. Knowing this fact, one can well afford to bear the cross often connected with this work. It is a sad fact that many who for years have been the professed followers of Christ, have never once made an earnest, personal effort to win a soul to Christ. It is no wonder that so few are converted, when we consider how little is done to secure this glorious result. Professing christians live in familes, work in shops, stores, or on farms the year round, with the unconverted, without ever making a single direct effort to lead them to our loving Savior. Of what use in the Lord's vineyard are such professors? He says to all his disciples, Go work in my vineyard. Instead of doing this, they are only looking on to see others work, and excusing themselves by saying they have but one talent. Such should not forget the fate of the person who hid his one talent, and thereby lost everything.

There are many fathers and mothers, whose names are on the church list, that have never talked plainly with their children on the subject of salvation. They have given them much connsel about temporal things, but not a word about eternal. Their children come to the reasonable conclusion, that their parents do not think it is of much consequence whether they are christians or sceptics. The indifference is truly alarming. It is no wonder that a large proportion of the young people are among the unbelievers, pressing their way down to destruction, and daily becoming more hardened and careless. Their parents may plead with them to leave the bowl of intoxication, but they do not urge them to accept Christ as a sure remedy and defense against all sinful habits. He who would be successful in winning souls to Christ must love them. But in order to love them, he must have the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Spirit. The more one partakes of the divine nature, the more clearly he sees the perilous condition of the sinner; and the more anxious he feels to do something to lead him to the dear Savior, that he may be pardoned, and have joy and peace in believing. And in order to keep up his interest in saving people, he must put forth efforts to rescue them from the power of Satan. We are more and more satisfied that personal conversation and prayer are among the most efficient means to reach the hearts of the unconverted. Of late, we have seen this satisfactorily demonstrated. Those who have resisted all other means yield when we go to them in loving kindness, and tell them of Jesus, and his willingness to forgive them, and to adopt them as his children. While they may ward off the preaching from the pulpit, or stay away from it altogether, they are captured by the tender entreaties from the lips of the warm-hearted christian, who may have only but one talent.

Those who have not yet engaged in this personal work have but a faint idea of the benefit they will receive themselves. They will find that they are growing rapidly in divine life, and will be astonished at their freedom in conversation and prayer, after they have labored with a few. It is the sweetest part of christian experience. Dear Brn. and Srs., who are looking for the coming of Jesus, let us go to work with renewed energy to lead people to Christ as soon as possible. Let no effort be spared. Never mind the cross. Glory in it for the sake of Jesus.

SAN FRANCISCO REVIVED.

The revival in San Francisco, resulting from the meetings held by Bro. E. P. Hammond, is truly wonderful, and far surpasses anything we have ever witnessed, both as to interest and results. Those who gain their information from the reports in the daily papers of San Francisco, have but a faint idea of the work. Some of the papers are inclined to speak lighly about the subject, and to notice chiefly some little incidents, of minor importance, and put them in the foreground, as the main things. For instance, if some young people, from seven to eleven give their hearts to Jesus, they are spoken of as four-year old babies, giving the idea that Bro. Hammond's main work consists in frightening children, getting them excited, and then making them think they are converted. Nothing could be further from the truth. Instead of frightening the children and others, he dwells more on the loving character of Jesus, than any preacher we ever heard. The goodness of God is the principle motive presented by Bro. Hammond to lead men to repentance.

These revival meetings in San Francisco, conducted by Bro. Hammond, are sustained and approved by the most talented and devoted ministers in the city. And the longer they are continued, the more they are prized by the best people in all the churches. We think no live christian could attend them long without being thoroughly convinced that they are specially approved by the Lord. Many are being soundly converted, who were supposed to be past all hope. Such are numbered by scores. The whole city is stirred, and the effect is felt throughout the Pacific coast.

Next Tuesday (April 6th), all the ministers in the State are invited to meet in Union Hall, the largest in the city of San Francisco, to devise and execute plans to have union revival meetings held all over the State. Their motto is—"California for Christ." The people are astonished at what is already accomplished. It is the Lord's doings, and worthy of his great name. It looks like preparation for the coming of Christ. This great movement in Europe and America is noted for its unsectarian character. The denominational walls are as flat as were those of Jerico, when they fell in the time of Joshua. Every christian is now allowed to unite with every other christian in the glorious work of leading sinners to Christ. There is no sacrifice of any peculiar theological views, but a sweet, loving union of hearts. We thank the Lord it has been our privilege to unite for a little season in this heavenly labor.

HEALDSBURG.

This morning (Saturday, April 3d) we are to leave Healdsburg for San Francisco. The revival interest continued to increase daily up to the close of the meetings. The Presbyterian house has been crowded every night, several having to stand. When the meetings first commenced, it was said there was not a young man in the city who was known to be a christian. There were a number of intelligent men and women, who were openly opposed to the Bible, and had no confidence in the plan of salvation as taught therein. Those persons intended to lead moral lives, and be good citizens, but were willing to be known as unbelievers in the inspiration of the Bible. Their sentiments seemed to have been adopted by a large class of the young people, as well as the middle-aged. It was a common remark, that there was more infidelity in Healdsburg than in any other place of the same size. When we came to converse with the unbelieving, we found that one prominent cause of the infidelity was the poor living of professors of religion.

But there is a wonderful change. The presentation of the prophetic Scriptures illustrated by the charts, arrested the attention of the thinking, candid men, who had come to the conclusion that those were weak-minded who accepted the Bible as a divinely inspired book. Now some of them have decided to be the followers of Jesus. Between forty and fifty have professed faith in Christ, accepted him as their Savior, and decided to follow him the remainder of their lives. A large number are under conviction, who are almost persuaded to be christians. Last evening many requested prayers. We have very rarely enjoyed such a precious season of revival meetings as these in Healdsburg. Men and women from the different churches worked nobly, in connection with their pastors, in the inquiry meetings, and in visiting from house to house. This was a great help. The union spirit was so complete, before the close of the meetings, that we might have easily concluded that we all belonged to one church. Presbyterian women talked just like Methodist women, and as freely. Not a jarring note arose in the meetings, but all seemed anxious to lead sinners to Christ. Backsliders have been reclaimed, and the strong current of infidelity that was flowing through the city has been very much reduced. Now every body seems to respect christianity. Those who talked so boldly against it a few days since are anxiously inquiring what they must do to be saved. It is said every body is talking on the subject. A general religious feeling pervades the city.

This state of interest was not gained without much prayer and earnest effort. We visited from house to house, conversing and praying with them, entreating them to accept Christ as their Savior. All but two families were willing we should pray with them. During our first visits, we were often shocked at the boldness of the infidelity of the heads of families. Some believed in no God, and many in no Savior; now there is a happy change. The power of the Holy Spirit has been most signally manifested, in convicting and converting the people. We have never seen a more genuine work.

A permanent union meeting has been established, to be held every Sunday afternoon. It is also proposed on rainy Sundays to have union meetings all day, alternating with the different churches. For instance, if next Sabbath should be a rainy day, all go to the Presbyterian church; the next rainy day, all go to the Northern Methodist; the next to the Southern Methodist, and so on during the year. In this way, the very best and most interesting meetings may be held on the rainy days; and we are inclined to think the people would long for the rainy day meetings. This was carried out practically last Sabbath, in Healdsburg with happy results.

We left many dear christian friends at H., whom we expect to meet soon in the kingdom of heaven.

OUR HEALTH.

Through the abundant mercy of God and the effectual prayers of some of the faithful in Christ our health is much improved. Our sickness has not been very distressing or alarming, but it has given us a longer confinement than any we have suffered for twenty-five years. We have not been able to preach or labor much in meetings for five weeks. The bronchial difficulty still troubles us, and we do not expect to be able to preach as much as formerly for a number of weeks to come. Some of our Office business has necessarily been delayed on account of our sickness; we therefore hope our friends will excuse us. We sincerely desire that all the faithful in Christ will pray for us, that God may give us physical and spiritual strength to do all the will of Christ during this grand transition period, until Satan's work shall end and Christ's kingdom shall be established.

THE CAUSE IN HAVERHILL.

A. ROSS.

Recently I enjoyed the privilege of meeting with and speaking to, in the name of the Lord Jesus, the people of Bro. D. M. Leavitt's charge, in Haverhill, Mass. The congregation was large and very attentive, and the people appeared to be well united in faith, hope and labor. I thought, truly, in all the years of struggle through which they have passed since the great disappointment, I had never seen so favorable an outlook for them as at the present.

May the blessing of the Lord rest upon pastor and people, and make them mighty in the Word of truth and power of the gospel.

FROM BRO. J. A. ANDREWS.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—It has been a long time since I have had thoughts of writing an article for our valuable paper, the Crisis, and I feel my weakness very much in saying what I purpose to at this time. But as all of us have more or less influence, I feel encouraged to write, as I may drop some words that may profit some who read them.

We are living in the most perilous times this world has ever experienced, there can be no doubt; and it behooves us as disciples of the Lord Jesus and searchers after divine truth to have on the whole armor for the final conflict. We are responsible creatures in the sight of God, and more especially Advent people, because of the light which they have seen shining upon the Sacred page. The more light we have, the more we are held responsible. How it pains my heart when I see Advent people fall so much below the standard of true piety, when they should be living epistles, known and read of all men. Dearly beloved friends, these things ought not so to be. It is lamentable to see so many of those who are looking for the speedy coming of the Bridegroom, so engrossed in worldly things. We must examine ourselves and see if we are right before God. Let not our faith and the truths we advocate be trampled under foot by our misconduct. We should not return to the things we came out from; for he that once has put his hand to the plow and looks back is not fit for the kingdom of heaven. We must not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God. Unless we have the Spirit of Christ we are none of his.

Though young in experience I have deeply felt these things for the past year, and it leads me to examine myself closely, and to keep my thoughts stayed on God, and from the allurements of the ungodly world. It seems sometimes as though human nature would gain the ascendancy; but He is faithful who has promised—"My grace shall be sufficient," and we shall be without excuse in the day of judgment. That day is just before us; do we really believe it? If we do, we shall be a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

When God says his people shall be a peculiar people, he means more than a great many are aware of. The world may sneer at us if we strive to follow the meek and lowly Jesus; but he says—"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." This is a blessed promise to me, and I will strive to endure and bear reproach for Jesus and his truth. If it were not for this reproach, how many ministers there are who would be preaching the second coming of our Lord. We must forsake all if we would be Christ's disciples. I see by the Crisis some are willing to make the sacrifice and come out boldly for the truth, though they lose reputation and all. How it rejoices my heart when I see from time to time such glorious manifestations of growth in the knowledge of the truth. But all this in the head will never save us unless it reaches down to the depths of the heart. It will only be worse for us unless we adorn our profession with a well-ordered life and a godly conversation. The christian is the world's Bible, and the only one that it reads. I feel for one that I will be among the redeemed in the day when they shall return and come to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. Let us gird up our loins, and be sober, and hope to the end for the grace which shall be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

To the Saints who are looking for Jesus soon to come:—I am now laboring in the lumbering country, where the trees stand as thick as cornstalks. Some of them are from ten to fifteen feet through, and three hundred feet tall. The woods are dark, and the grizzly, cinnamon and black bear, and deer, roam these dense forests.

This timber is called redwood, and makes excellent lumber. In the midst of this forest is quite a village, some steam saw-mills, hotel, etc., etc. The lumber is carted some twenty miles to the railroad, where it finds a good market. Here is where the Lord has sent me to preach the great Advent truths which have never been heard in this wilderness before. My first sermon was—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son," etc.

I told them there was only one class that would have eternal life;—that all the wicked God would destroy. No immortality out of Christ. Bro. Carey, who was with me, told me at the close he thought I had driven them all away, and they would not come again. He said it made him cringe. I told him to keep praying; that God was in the place and going to work with power. The next night the whole town came out to hear more of this strange doctrine. Deep conviction was all through the congregation. Truth was working mightily, as I have not seen for years. As the congregation dispersed, a lady stepped up to the desk and gave me her hand, and exclaimed with tears, "I am going to be a christian; will you baptize me?" A number of stout-hearted men made a hearty confession before that large congregation of their sins, believed on Jesus Christ, and desired baptism.

Next Lord's day we shall attend to that ordinance. The great work is going well. A saloon-keeper came out, got under conviction, closed up his shop on Sunday, and attends meeting every night. He has not been to church before for ten years. Others told me they had not been before for fifteen years; said they had never heard the Bible preached before. They could now understand it.

I showed them the character of God, and that there was no burning hell in existence; that men were not judged until the great judgment day; then all the wicked would be destroyed. They could see that God was love, and did not want any to perish. The Spirit carried conviction to their hearts, and brought forth confession of their sins. God has committed these great unpopular truths to us, and we cannot be justified and keep them in the background. And it is these very truths that the people are starving for; the only thing that deeply moves men. All the rest is surface work. "Seeing we look for such things, what manner of persons ought we to be." In the first place, set the motive before the people to induce them to be holy. The Lord is soon coming. Let us see to it that we are all ready.

Forestville, Cal.

From Sr. A. Dinsmore.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—God has seemed to give me a work that I never expected—this of writing for the paper. I do not expect it will be food for all, but if God leads me to write, I will, and leave the event with him. I know I receive a great blessing in so doing; and the more I write the more I love to.

How blessed it is to work for the Master! Some seem to think that unless they can preach they cannot do anything; but I feel that I am as a little child, and expect to do a child's work. When I get older and stronger he will give me something more to do. How many there are who ought to be doing great things for the Master, who have been in the school long enough to be able to teach others, but who can be taught by those who have not been in the school half as long. A scholar may have the best advantages for learning, and yet it will avail him nothing if he lacks the energy to apply them. So in the school of Christ; our brethren and sisters may try to encourage and help us along, and God may say, Come up higher; yet we never shall, unless we make an effort ourselves.

I am real glad we are free moral agents, for that gives me a chance to come to Christ if I will. How blessed it is to feel that God is our heavenly Father, and hears us when we pray. I love him better than all the world. He takes care of me every day. How little did I know of the blessed enjoyment there is in Christ, until I made the full consecration and received the evidence that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. More than a year and a half ago I received it, and the way grows brighter and brighter, and I expect it will unto the perfect day, which is not far in the distance.

O what a blessed thought, that we shall soon see Jesus face to face. It seems sometimes that I cannot wait; and ofttimes I get glimpses of him by an eye of faith. I am not going to sit down and mourn because he does not come, but I mean to do the Master's will, and try to bring precious souls into his fold. I mean to be something in the building, if it is only a pin. That is the smallest, but it holds the building together. "I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate me from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus my Lord." "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

East Bowdoinham, Me.

From Sr. C. D. Simmons.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Though fearing to take up valuable space in our dear paper, I want to say a few words to those of our precious faith scattered abroad.

First, I will tell you how grieved I was last week, on receiving the Crisis, to find no editorial from "J. C."; but instead, a note saying that he was sick. O, how I wished I could make myself heard through all our ranks, and beg that prayer might ascend to our God, that the power of disease might be stayed, and he enabled to stand on the outer wall and watch the fast converging rays of light that portend the glorious consummation near. The night has been so long and dark, that some descry but faint glimmerings; but my heart (and I doubt not many others) responds joyfully to the bold clarion notes of bright morning dawning just beyond, that greet us from week to week, from our dear Editor. Long has he stood on the ramparts. Chill and heavy the night dews have fallen, till his shrinking form is nearly sinking with cold and weariness. And no wonder. But gird thyself, O man of God, yet a little longer. Watch well one hour, the last hour, and tell us, scattered flock as we are, what you descry.

Many of us have no preaching but our paper. O how dearly we prize it. We know "He is able to keep that which we have committed unto him," but 'tis very dreary living where there are none to sympathize with our hope,—that hope which "we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast." I look over the appointments from week to week, hoping by some possible chance there may be some within reach.

And now I am so pained to see the subject of a general campmeeting in N. Y. disposed of as it is by the Conference at Springwater. I have never been able to attend one of those gatherings; they are far away, and none of my family entertaining my views, it would be deemed imprudent. I hoped that somewhere in Central N. Y. we might have one "feast of tabernacles." There is a large region here that seems to be left unwarned. Are there not some "waiting ones"? Am I all alone? No; for Jesus is with me. "He will not leave me comfortless." But are there none who wish an effort made, while mercy lingers, to compel some from the highways and hedges of C——, N. Y., to come in? Let us, by united humiliation, fasting and prayer, see if there cannot be something done to get the truth before the people. We have friends convinced of the truth, but that is all. They will perish there, unless an effort can be made. Is it not the very last time? Let us then awake, and not be found idlers in the vineyard, but "receive every one their penny."

From Bro. G. W. Truell.

Dear Brn.:—When Bro. Couch was in Taunton, we little thought that in so short a time we should leave that place and people so dear to us, and come to Lawrence; yet I believe the dear Lord was in it. The door seemed so thoroughly closed there against the preaching of the speedy pre-millennial coming of Jesus, the Christ, to earth again, that we often prayed for wisdom and patience, and asked in the language of Saul of Tarsus—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" when all at once we were called to this city, and here found a place to work with the dear people of God for the salvation of the perishing.

This is the second week in succession we have had the labors of Eld. W. J. Halse, of Cambridgeport; and truly God has verified his promise to this people, in bringing strong men and women to feel their need of a Savior. Many backsliders have confessed their wanderings and come back to Father's house, and every night some one or more make a start for glory, for the first time; and oh, how we praise God that he has given praying fathers and mothers their children anew to them, in the everlasting covenant of grace. Young husbands and wives are starting together for heaven, through the blood of Jesus and the Word of their testimony. One dear young sister was engaged to take part in what many think innocent—tableaux; but, bless God, when she gave her heart to Jesus she told them she could not fulfill that engagement; but now expects to follow the dear Savior in the ordinance of baptism.

Still the glorious work goes on. The dear brethren and sisters, who have long borne the burdens, are rejoicing in the Lord, and are mightily strengthened by the tokens of God's pardoning love. Bro. C. Cunningham was here last Lord's day, and drank at once into the pervading spirit, and was in full sympathy with the church and Bro. Halse. He gave the blessed gospel trumpet a certain sound, which I shall long remember.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us, that God may continue his blessed work until every stumbling-block shall be removed. O, how short time is; and what an awful responsibility rests on us as a people. Let us lay aside every weight, all side issues, and preach this last great message to the dying world.

Lawrence, Mass., April 16th, 1875.

From Sr. M. E. Huntley.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have felt it my duty for a long time to let you know through the columns of the Crisis that God has a few dear children here in this Hals Harbor Mountain. Bless his holy name! the truth is spreading, and may it still work its way through conflicts and trials, till the Savior comes.

I feel to praise the name of my blessed Master that ever the truth reached my poor heart. It is about four years since I gave myself to the Lord, and in October last was buried with Christ in baptism, and since that time I have lived in the full enjoyment of religion. All praise to my blessed Savior for his great love to me.

There are eight of God's dear children here who believe in the soon coming of Jesus, with its kindred truths. We have a prayer meeting every Lord's day, though there are but few of us. There are quite a number of Adventists at Scot's Bay, some seventeen miles from here, and a few at Chipman Brook, four miles away. Some times I have the privilege of meeting with the church at Scot's Bay, and I feel to rejoice in God my Savior. At times God puts it in the heart of some of his servants to make us a short visit, and encourage us with the blessed news of the soon coming of deliverance.

Last fall Bro. Haliday and Fitch preached here for a short time, and baptized three; some backsliders were reclaimed, and others were encouraged to press their way onward.

Dear Crisis friends, pray for us, that we may prove faithful, live for Jesus, and meet all God's dear children when he comes. There will be no more sorrow there, and we shall be free from the trials and troubles of this wicked world, and rest in the arms of our dear Redeemer.

Cornwallis, Hals Harbor Mountain, N. S.

From Bro. J. J. Smith.

Dear Brn. of the World's Crisis:—I drop you a line to inform you that we have had the greatest freshets on the Tennessee River and its tributaries this season ever known to the oldest inhabitants. We have had three overflows since the 1st of January. Hundreds of thousands of bushels of corn have been swept away or submerged, until it was ruined. This will produce a great scarcity of breadstuffs, which is now greatly advancing in price. The fences are nearly all gone, and many think it impossible to re-fence in time to plant crops. The wheat crops on the lowlands are killed out. The inevitable result will be suffering, to the poorer class at least. Besides the damage from the overflow, the uplands are washed and torn up by the heavy falls of rain, as never known before. Much of it is gone as deep as it had ever been plowed.

Truly these are "perilous times." God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." Yet the people do not seem to realize that there is a God revealing himself in these judgments. When will they learn righteousness?

From Sr. B. L. Clark.

Dear Brn.:—I wish to correct a mistake. I wrote an article for the Crisis of March 17th, which was headed "My experience," forgetting to sign myself sister, which I ought to have done. Why I correct this is because I have received a package of papers and tracts directed to Bro. B. L. Clark, and another package to esq., and also a letter in the same way.

I thank the donors for their kindness in sending the papers and tracts. I am always happy to peruse them, whether they correspond with my views or not. I hope to receive more for free distribution. I am an old pilgrim, who started many years ago for the promised land, and I am not discouraged yet, although I have had many enemies to encounter. If the lions roar, or the serpent shows his forked tongue, they will not hurt me while I am in the way, for they are beside the way. If my eye is on Jesus, they cannot harm me; so I will try by God's help to keep my feet in the way which leads to the promised inheritance. I am determined to run the race that I may obtain the prize at the end.

I have seen many who started long after I did, who run well for a little season, but they fell out by the way, and have walked no more with us. Satan is doing his last work; he is diligent in the church and out; he knows his time is short, and he is setting his snares and throwing his influences around the christian, if possible to draw them away from Christ. If christians were as faithful as the agents of the adversary are, we should see a greater work than we now do.

We are truly living in the Laodecean age, —lukewarm. It is written, "Because thou art neither cold nor hot I will spew thee out of my mouth."

O may God help us to wake up, and cry aloud, and spare not. Soon the Master will come. Let us be ready so that we may say—"Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him!"

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa.

From Bro. L. V. Dexter.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I have long felt it duty to tell you what the Lord has done for me. I am sweetly resting in Jesus. He is my best friend; dearer than all earthly friends. I am living in the midst of wicked people, surrounded by temptations on every hand; but I thank God that his grace is sufficient for me, to keep me at all times and under all circumstances. When my trust is in Christ, I am like the oak of the forest, against which the winds and storms beat in vain.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us take courage, for the day will soon dawn; the glorious day of deliverance is nigh, when all the redeemed of earth will meet in Christ's kingdom. God has called me into his vineyard, to preach the gospel of the kingdom; but I have neglected to obey the call, and have therefore lost a large portion of my enjoyment; but I wish to speak through these lines, hoping that some poor wanderer from the fold of Christ may be profited thereby.

My heart's desire and prayer to God is that I may be kept and guarded by his almighty arm, that when Christ shall come in the clouds of heaven, I, with all the saints, may hear it said unto me, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." I ask an interest in the prayers of all God's dear children, that I may prove faithful unto Christ.

Orford, N. H.

From Mrs. J. Taft.

Editors of Crisis:—Though a stranger to you I trust that God, the Father of us all, owns us as his. I have learned by hearing the Scriptures explained, to look for and love the appearing of our Lord and Savior, and have been hoping that the "precious faith" might be preached in our midst again. Bro. H. Pratt gave five lectures near us, and I saw the light of Bible truth brighter than before. It is nearly six years since he was with us, but I trust the light will be held up for us again soon.

From childhood I have loved the Bible, yet the precious truths did not seem to take hold of my whole life as now. All I desire in this life, is to be subject to the will of God. A few years ago I attended a revival in the M. E. church, and heard several of the brethren and sisters say they were trying to serve the Lord in "their weak way." A preacher being present that was noted for preaching the popular doctrine that all, at death, went directly to heaven or hell, arose and rather sternly rebuked the people for thus expressing their feelings, saying that any one that trusted in the Lord enough to cling to him through life, was strong, and the word weakness should never be used to express the way they were serving the Lord. We cannot help feeling our weakness as we look around and see the need of true workers, but we are strong when we feel the arm of God is sustaining us. I would like to write a long letter. I enjoy listening to instruction, and hope that myself and family may soon be numbered among your people. I have counted the cost, and shall look to Jesus for help.

East Rush.

From Bro. D. C. Clifford.

Dear Brethren:—The church in this place was once united and worshipped together; but new and strange doctrines have come among us, which some have endorsed, while others think they conflict with Bible truth, and they have caused divisions among us, which makes us feel sad. It seems to me it was never more important to give strict heed to the Word of the Lord than at the present time. By it we can prove all things, whether they are of God or man. If they are of God, they will agree with his Word.

My dear brethren, who are looking for speedy redemption, let us not embrace any doctrine which compels us to set aside plain Bible teachings to make room for it. Let us not wrest the Scriptures from their true meaning to suit our theories. We know what we read about adding to or taking from the Word of the Lord. I love his Word, and want to do everything he commands us to do. The doctrine of holiness I love, because He says, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." I believe the day of redemption is just at hand. I believe the nations are preparing for the final conflict. May we watch and keep our garments.

Searsport, Me., April 6th, 1875.

Sr. S. E. Smith writes from Kansas:—"My husband, J. C. Smith, is very sick with pneumonia, and desires the prayers of God's children in his behalf, that he may be raised to health to labor till Jesus comes."

TENT MEETINGS.

Our brethren and sisters respond nobly to our call for help to carry on tent meetings this season. Bro. Frank Blaisdell, and Asa Blaisdell with his wife, go with one, Bro. E. O. Dinsmore and wife go with another, and Bro. S. G. Low goes with another. We shall have efficient help, we trust. Several preaching brethren have volunteered already to give help. There will be a man with his wife in each tent. Others wishing to go can write to Asa Blaisdell, Alfred, Me., or S. G. Low, Highlandville, Mass., or to myself. I expect to make two tents, fifty feet in diameter, for use this summer, if the Lord will. H. B. Sevey.

Obituaries.

Kenney.—In Holden, Me., March 30th, 1875, Ithamar Kenney, aged 61 years.

Bro. Kenney, in 1843, heard and received the glorious message of the soon coming of the Lord, to give immortality to his people, and to establish his everlasting kingdom; and though living when the love of many has waxed cold, yet the good seed sown in his heart became firmly rooted, and the fruit thereof has been seen in the humble, christian life, the pilgrim-like demeanor, and the love which he bore and so often expressed for the Lord and his coming. He expressed, during his last sickness, great comfort from the hope he had of soon seeing Jesus, and being made like him, to die no more. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss; but they sorrow not as those that are without hope. May the Lord bless and sustain them in their affliction, and may they meet at last an unbroken family, in the kingdom of God.

Sermon by Bro. N. N. Wood. Text, Psalm 16: 11. Chas. C. Tuck.

Flagg. In Great Falls, N. H., March 2nd, 1875, Sr. Leila, wife of Lewis Flagg, and only daughter of J. R. and Hannah Nash.

The subject of this notice found Christ in belief of the truth some four years ago, but has not always been faithful; yet in her last hours she found peace, and rests in hope of a soon coming Christ. She leaves two little ones, and a poor crippled mother, who especially need our prayers. May this stroke of affliction be sanctified to the good of the dear husband and father, in whose heart death has made such a deep wound. O Lord, grant this may be an unbroken family in the kingdom of God! Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. C. S. Shattuck.

Loveland. In Rumney, N. H., March 14th, 1875, Mrs. Laura J. Loveland, wife of Lewis H. Loveland, aged 54 years.

Death has entered our family and taken our dear mother from us; but Jesus is soon coming to raise the dead. Her hope was in the coming of Christ and the resurrection to an immortal life. Mrs. D. D. Page.

Davis. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Hampton, N. H., Jan. 23d, 1875, of consumption, Marcia J., wife of Joseph R. Davis, and daughter of Bro. Oliver Page, aged 19 years.

Sister Marcia started to serve the Lord at the tent meeting in Hampton a few years since, but by neglect of duty lost her hope, and went back to the world. But before she died she renewed her covenant with God, died happy, and is now "sweetly resting in Jesus." God's grace supported her as she bid farewell to parents, brothers, sisters, husband, and dear little babe. May God sanctify this affliction to their eternal good. Enoch Morrill.

Davis. In Hampton, N. H., Feb. 13th, 1875, Marcia, daughter of Joseph and Marcia Davis, and grandchild of Bro. Oliver Page, of Hampton, aged 2 months and 8 days.

Little Marcia lived twenty-one days after her mother's death. Within a year Bro. and Sr. Page have buried two children, grown up, and two small grandchildren. God bless and comfort them in their affliction. Enoch Morrill.

Hutchins. In Massena, N. Y., Dec. 11th, 1874, Albert, son of John B. and Katie Hutchins, aged 13 months and eight days.

"Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border." Jer. 31: 16-17.

The enemy death may rob mothers of their tender offspring for a while, but Jesus has purchased the field where the victims lie, and will destroy death, and him who has the power of death, which is the devil, and will give to mothers again their little ones, robed in immortal beauty, to die no more. C. Pike.

Culbertson. In Concord, N. H., March 31st, 1875, Carrie F., daughter of N. A. and Emma K Culbertson, aged 12 years.

A constant attendant at Sunday school, naturally interested in good things, when disease fastened upon her, the change from nature to grace would hardly be expected to be very marked, yet it was so; and her experience was really mature. She entertained no apparent doubt of her salvation, and exhorted all to meet her in the kingdom. 'Even so it is not the will of your Father in heaven that one of those little ones should perish." E. O.

Berry. In Portsmouth, N. H., March 22d, 1875, Mrs. Judith A., wife of Bro. Joseph H. Berry, aged 62 years.

A devoted wife, a considerate, fond mother; a humble, unassuming christian, she sleeps in Jesus. God will bring her with him. Her husband and sons are truly deeply stricken. May God bless and sustain them. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." E. O.

Plummer. In Portsmouth, N. H., April 4th, 1875, Bro. Cyrus Plummer, aged 57 years.

Suddenly and unexpectedly a wife and six children are called to mourn. Bro. P. had for many years professed faith in Christ, and loved his appearing. During his brief illness, in his lucid moments, he spoke words of faith and resignation. At the funeral I spoke from 2 Cor. 1: 3, 4, 5. E. O.

Baldwin. In East Litchfield, Ct., April 2nd, 1875, of typhoid pneumonia, James A. Baldwin, aged 44 years.

A good man has fallen. Those who knew him best loved him most. He was a friend to every every one, therefore he had many friends. May his death make a deep and lasting impression upon the minds of the people of that place. J. E. S.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Madrid, April 8. The Government has decided to send 15,000 soldiers to Cuba.

London, April 8. Advices from China say that the widow of the late Emperor died on the 27th of March.

Cardinal Manning opened the Catholic College at Kensington yesterday with an address, in the course of which he said he regarded himself as intrusted with a commission of warfare, for he believed that the Church was approaching a crisis the most fiery for three hundred years.

Paris, April 6. The Rome correspondent of the Journal des Debats writes to that paper that the Pope will take up his residence in the United States if it should become impossible for him to remain in Rome, and says it was with a view to such a possible emergency that Archbishop McCloskey was elevated to the Cardinalate.

Havana, April 5. A terrible case of fanaticism, superinduced by spirit-rappings, is now undergoing investigation in Pinar del Rio. A mother, believing she was acting by the orders of the spirits, tore out the eyes of her son and afterward attempted to tear out her own. This she did openly as a solemn sacrifice in the presence of the other women of the family, who prayed in a loud voice while it was going on. All the parties have been arrested and are now on trial.

Berlin, April 14. In the Upper House of the Prussian Diet to-day the bill withdrawing State grants from Roman Catholic clergymen was under debate. Prince Bismarck made a speech, in which he declared that since the Vatican Council, Catholic Bishops were merely the Pope's prefects. He said that he was not an enemy of the Catholic Church. He warred only against papacy, which had adopted the principle of extermination of heretics, and which was in enmity with the gospel as well as with the Prussian State.

The agents of the French Government have made contracts in Bohemia for 10,000 horses, to be delivered next June.

The Famine in Asia Minor.

Instead of the famine in Asia Minor having ceased its ravages in any one district, it appears to have gained in intensity everywhere. In the city of Angora itself, though bread is now sold at a comparatively cheap rate, many of the poor have not the means of purchasing, even at the lowest prices. They sold everything they had last year, and being without work now, are as dependent on charity as they were in November. One of the reports read at the meeting of the Relief Committee at Constantinople on the 9th, stated that in the district of Boghazlian very great suffering prevailed, and some deaths from starvation had occurred. In a village of two hundred houses sixty-five persons had died of starvation in a few weeks. One of the inhabitants had taken his wife to a neighboring village and sold her for eight measures of wheat, but the buyer ultimately returned her. In another village, containing eighty houses, six persons had recently died of starvation, and the greatest destitution prevailed. There, as elsewhere, no cattle or sheep remained.—London Times.

The French Frontier.—The batteries erected for the defence of the German coast line are about to be armed with a new and special class of heavy ordnance of great power, made on a new pattern at Krupp's celebrated Essen works. The weight of projectile is 490 pounds, and the powder charge 85 pounds to 95 pounds. Forty-seven of these guns have been finished, and are subjected to a series of tests and experimental trials by a special commission of artillery officers at Duelmen.—London Times.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

San Francisco, April 7. A disastrous fire, accompanied by loss of life, occurred this afternoon at the corner of Spear and Harrison streets. It was caused by an explosion of giant powder in a frame building adjacent to Hathaway's bonded warehouse.

April 8. At the present writing four bodies have been recovered from the ruins of last night's fire.

Chicago, April 9. A fearful tornado swept through Edensburg, Ill., on Thursday afternoon. The Christian Church, in which some thirty or forty young ladies and gentlemen were rehearsing, was demolished. About fifteen of the party had been taken out at last accounts. Five dwellings were also blown down and an elevator badly damaged.

Severe tornadoes prevailed in Arkansas and Illinois on Thursday. Several persons were killed and wounded, and a number of buildings were demolished.

Godlove S. Orth has received his instructions as Minister to Austria. They are of a general character, except that there is a special instruction relative to his action in the event of a general European war. This instruction directs Orth in the case of war to follow the traditionary policy of this Government, and to maintain a perfect neutrality. This is the first recognition by the State Department of the supposed impending European war.

TO THE BRN. IN MASS.

The Mass. A. C. Conference at its last annual session raised money by pledges and collections to buy a tent and put in the field. A committee was chosen to superintend the buying and running of the tent, and this committee are responsible men, and have done the best they could. They bought the tent and run it until the cold weather set in, and there is a debt on them of over $100. This they are owing to Brn. Boutell and Leslie—the two principal workers with the tent. Some of those that pledged have not paid. We hope brethren will send in the amount of their pledges at once; and we invite others that have the means to contribute to pay these brethren their due, as there is not quite enough pledged to pay the debt.

Bro. Boutell is sick, and the prospect now is he will have to lay by for a while and mend up. He has had sickness in his family also for some months, and he needs what is due him. Now, brethren, will you heed this call, and send me the sum of one hundred and ten dollars at once, so that I can pay these brethren their honest due. Send to C. Goodrich, Boston, Mass., P. O. Drawer 5140.

Notice.—Alton Bay.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet on the camp-ground Tuesday, May 4th. J. Couch, President.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. Couch.

Notice.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. Downing, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. Swain, for Com.

Tent Meeting and Conference.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Oakville, Conn., Wednesday, May 12th, and remain over Sunday, May 16th.

We go to this new field by invitation of Bro. and Sr. Mills, the only family in the place of like precious faith, and who will accommodate as far as possible. Our brethren, however, had better take along blankets, and some of us can sleep under the tent, if necessary. It is proposed that all business pertaining to the Conn. A. C. Conference be disposed of Thursday, May 13th, and we hope the brethren will be prompt at the business session, that the remainder of the time be devoted to sounding the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. Pray that the Holy Spirit may attend in power.

Oakville lies three miles west of Waterbury, on Watertown Branch R. R. By present R. R. Time Table, trains leave Waterbury for Oakville at 11.50 A. M. and 6.45 P. M.

P. S. We trust the blessing of the Lord will attend, and some be converted who shall love the appearing of Jesus and his kingdom, near at hand and not afar off. The truths which have cost us, as a people, reputation, influence, and standing in the world, are too precious to sacrifice to dyspeptic ears, which will not endure sound doctrine, but love fables and pleasure—(more than God)—the rusty tools of a lukewarm church—fitting emblems of a generation whose god is mammon, whose pride is in imposing ceremonies, and whose end is destruction. Let us never shun to declare truths which belong to this generation, the crowning excellence of the gospel, even things which angels desired to look into. My brethren, keep the light shining.

Your Bro. in Christ, O. D. Woodruff.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Tent Meeting and Conference.—It is proposed to have a Tent Meeting in connection with the Conn. Conference. The Conference business to be promptly disposed of the first day of the meeting, and followed by a Tent Meeting of days, as the Lord may direct.

If any of the churches in Conn., or brethren in the highways and hedges isolated from churches, chapels, or religious meetings of any kind, would like to have the "Conn. Mission Tent" pitched in their vicinity about the middle or twentieth of May, please correspond promptly, giving particulars, with O. D. Woodruff, Secretary, Southington, Conn.

Notice.—The 5th day of May is appointed to work on the camp-ground at Coventry Centre, R. I. We hope that quite a number will volunteer to work; but those who come with teams, as last year, ought to come the day before and stop over one night. Bring your provision with you. Come right on to the camp-ground. Bro. Hazard's cottage will be open for accommodations, with a stove and beds that can be used.

E. Bellows.

To the Adv. Chris. Conf. of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y.—This is to notify all who may be interested in this Conference that an effort will be made, at our next annual session, to be held next September, to make some changes in our Conference Constitution. Let there be a full Conference. Done by order of vote of Conference. A. H. Briggs, Sec'y.

A. C. Times, please copy.

Notice.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. Smith, Chairman.

Wayne County Mission Tent.—The shareholders of the Wayne County Advent Mission Tent are requested to meet at the church in South Butler, Tuesday, April 27th, at one o'clock P. M., to make arrangements for the summer campaign, and transact other necessary business. The Lord has blessed the labors of this Tent in the past, and we hope to see it in the field early this season. Do not fail to be on hand promptly.

Robert C. Brown, for the Brn.

Quarterly Meeting.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the New Hampshire Conference will meet with the church at East Canaan, to commence Thursday evening, April 29th, and hold over the Sabbath, May 2nd. Ministers are desired to attend and make the meeting as interesting as possible. For Com., Levi Allen.

Ohio State Conference.—The Ohio State Conference will convene at Norwalk, Huron Co., on Friday evening, April 23d. Business session on Saturday, at 10.30 A. M. Let our brethren and sisters be present, as far as possible.

E. McCulloch, President.

Notice.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Little Marsh Church will be held at Little Marsh, Tioga Co., Penn., commencing May 7th, and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. For the Church,

E. H. Eggleston.

Speak Plain.—The brethren of this place wish it distinctly understood, that when preaching is wanted, they will take measures to procure it without the aid of voluntary appointments. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

South Ashburnham, Mass.

Notice.—If any one among the many readers of the Crisis have in their possession one of J. V. Himes' Prophetic Charts that they would like to sell, or can give me any information where I can procure one, it will be gladly received. Direct to F. E. Blaisdell, Belgrade Mills, Me.

Notice.—I would say to the preaching brethren, when they send their appointments to Richmond, please name the place, Reed meeting-house, Richmond Corner, or at the Village. F. Bates.

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."
BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. Ag't.

A NEW TRACT.
"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"
A Work upon the Materiality of Man.
HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.
BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. Ag't.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. Ag't.

RE-PRINTED
ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."
Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."
Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."
This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"
is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the "Slaying of the Witnesses."
10 cents. Ag't.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

We have this valuable work in its unabridged form of 330 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for sale. Price $1.00; postage, 16 cts.

"HE GOETH BEFORE THEM."

I should not, Savior, love
 The path prescribed for me,
Had not thy footsteps gone before;
 And I but follow thee.

Didst thou command my feet,
 And drive me with thy rod,
I could not walk the rugged way
 Through which I pass to God.

I know the pathway lies
 Through danger, toil and death;
That I a living sacrifice
 Must make my daily breath.

But when I view the love
 That faltered not for me,
I could not choose but follow on,
 Whate'er the blessings be.

Yet oft along the way
 I falter, faint, and fall;
But rise anew, revived to hear
 The music of thy call.

When o'er the chilling wave
 The path leads on to rest,
I shrink and shiver, but I lie
 Securely on thy breast.

Thus through the path of tears
 This precious faith I hold,
That I shall find, beyond my fears,
 The shelter of thy fold.

THE PROPHETIC OUTLOOK.

We have observed that for some years past there has, at last, been a great and just lamentation in the religious journals respecting the deadness in the churches; although not one of them has had, as far as we know, the courage to speak the whole truth on the subject. Were it not sad, it would be amusing, to hear the multiplicity of remedies proposed. Every imaginable kind of machinery has been perfected and brought into play; but still there is no breath of life. The churches and the editors do not see they have ignored and opposed, as the case might be, the grand truth which makes religion a present issue. They have departed from the primitive attitude, and yet wonder that religion, in the minds of most, has become theoretical merely. The simple explanation is, that there is no live present issue to inflame all hearts and stimulate to exertion; that is, they have put away the one which the Word of the Lord has given us.

That is what is the matter. No wonder there is no enthusiasm. No wonder men's minds are more exercised and absorbed by what happens to be the prominent question or topic of the hour, whether political, ecclesiastical, or social. That comes home to them. That they can understand. No wonder the lawfulness, or otherwise, of worldly amusements is considered debatable ground; and no wonder that the wealthy and fashionable members have practically settled for themselves the question of habitual attendance at balls, dances, theatres, etc., etc. No wonder the world is courted and coaxed into giving, by fairs, parties, and raffles, where the main object is to please the prevalent taste of the day, and especially to amuse the young people by pleasant allusions to the relations of the sexes. No wonder the passage of Scripture in James 2: 1–3 is set at defiance, or laid away on a dusty shelf, in company with many other New Testament sayings that are not "in good taste" in our day, or that set up an "ideal standard, impossible in our day." No wonder even good people smile incredulously at the idea of the inspiration of the Scriptures.

But oh, what a waking up there will be shortly! What a going forth to meet the Bridegroom! What a sharply-defined issue taken with the world! What a new recognition of that grand old truth—"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." And of this: "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." And of this: "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you." What godly sorrow! what carefulness! yea, what clearing! yea, what indignation! yea, what fear! yea, what vehement desire! yea, what zeal! yea, what revenge! (against those who were appointed to instruct?) will there be shortly, in the day when the Lord will make his bow quite naked, even his Word! Luke 12: 46. The wonder is, that in these Laodicean days when christians "enjoy both worlds" the church is not swamped altogether. In the present state of things ecclesiastical, there is mutual action and reaction. On the one hand, the churches are not instructed in the great truths of the Lord's coming; and on the other, an overwhelming pressure is brought to bear on ministers, to make them keep back in the pulpit whatever is not popular, and especially whatever is unpopular; but the burden of blame, in that day, will be laid on such ministers, and that justly.

In the political world we often see, during the excitement preceding a general election, all minor questions for a time left out of view, being overshadowed by some leading topic that agitates the public mind; in a similar manner the grand fact that the Lord is at hand, will, in that day, absorb all other considerations in the Christian church, when once the demonstration shall be seen, in the fact that the "eagle" saints will have been miraculously "taken." For, this divine interposition, though not exciting more than a passing wonder in men's minds, as the news of the day, will be fully understood by christians. And then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the Bridegroom.

Then, too, amid the blast of the terrible ones, involving all believers in a common danger, they will forget their minor differences, and the name of the sects will disappear, and to be a christian will be the only aim.

The leading visible feature of the past year, as bearing on prophecy, has been the foretastes God has sent of all the coming judgments of the day of the Lord. Even of the fire that shall devour the earth in that day (Rev. 8: 7; Isa. 66: 15), the world has had a remarkable premonition.

And hardly less remarkable has been the manner in which the predicted events of the day of the Lord have begun to take shape. We begin to perceive the forces marshalling, and the leading agents appearing in sight. Hitherto we have only been able to perceive the ultimate results, as plainly declared in the Scriptures of truth; now, it would seem, we can already distinguish some of the chief agencies by which they will be produced.

A dreadful blackness has, during the past year, overspread the political heavens. It has seemed to rise with the suddenness of the tempest gathering that grew out of Elijah's cloud no bigger than a man's hand. The most powerful monarchs of Europe regard it with apprehension.

The Internationale! How familiar the world has already become with the word! And yet at the beginning of last year it was almost unknown, and no one deemed it of much consequence. And yet the causes that have produced it have long been in operation. They originated in the forsaking of the living God, and will culminate in the idolatry of the intellect, and the embodiment of it in man-worship. In this man-worship, stimulated and shaped by demons, we behold an explanation of what used to be hard to be understood, viz., the divine declaration that at the close of this dispensation idolatry will be established in the earth. Rev. 9: 20; 13: 14, 15.

An interesting writer has said:—"We are continually mistaking in assigning great effects to small and inadequate causes. There is never any effect without an adequate cause; although the circumstance which brings the already existing causes into operation, and which is so often mistaken for the cause itself, may be of small or trifling importance, and only one of a hundred other circumstances which might equally have brought them into operation. The fuel is laid, and any thing that has fire in it will equally serve to kindle it up; whether it be a lighted candle, a match, a rag, a bit of paper, or a straw—it matters little."

It has spread, and is spreading, with the rapidity of a prairie fire, in materials ready to hand. Just as Luther accomplished what Huss failed to do, so now human society is ripe for what the first French revolution attempted, but failed to effect. A "reorganization" of society; which shall leave out what is "obsolete"; which shall raise mankind to the highest pitch of worldly prosperity (Dan. 8: 25—margin); and which shall ignore God and God's arrangements as but the superstition of the dark ages, and the infant condition of mankind; nothing in the prophetic page is more plainly predicted than just this.—Prophetic Times.

IS IT THE WORK OF DEVILS?

There has been, in these later times, a waning of the belief in devils and in spirits of darkness, and yet it might be claimed by some that they were never more active in manifesting themselves to the sons of men than at this present writing. We know that in the ancient times there was a general belief in their existence and their communications with those who sought after them. The Scriptures are full of testimony regarding them, of denunciation of their doings, and condemnation of those who have dealings with them. Are we not told of the powers of the medium at Endor, who evoked the spirit of Samuel at the request of Saul? Are not those condemned among the children of Israel who shall use "divination, or an observer of times, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer?" Did not the Savior exorcise many evil spirits from those possessed of them, and relieve one poor medium of a legion that thereafter played the devil with a herd of swine? And did he not warn us against "false prophets that shall arise and deceive many; shall show great signs and wonders?" Did not the great apostle say that "the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils?" And how about the damsel of Philippi who had a spirit of divination which was the source of much gain to her master? And then there were the oracles of the heathen world that said strange things and produced marvelous manifestations, according to the secular historian. Now it is the almost universal testimony of the older times that these things were done by devils and spirits of darkness.

There is a strange coincidence in the character of the supernatural demonstrations with which the records of human history are filled, and those which occur at this day, and are attributed by many to the agency of the departed spirits of respectable human beings. It is disheartening to many who would fain believe that the loved and lost may return to give their friends assurance of a happy immortality, and, possibly, minister comfort to the sorrowing and the heavily burdened, to find that the so-called manifestations of their presence are so trivial and absurd. Their love for darkness raises the suspicion that their deeds are evil, and there is little comfort in that. Their rappings upon tables, their fondness for banjoes, guitars and childish instruments of sound, is but an unsatisfactory testimony to their exalted character. The communications received from them are apt to be incoherent, if not unintelligible, and are oftentimes deceitful, according to the general admission of the believers.

The real substantial benefit or comfort that honest and sensible people have been able to derive from the seances is almost, if not quite, infinitessimal, and this is a reason sufficient with many honest and thoughtful people for wishing to have nothing to do with them. Devils and spirits of darkness might, indeed, indulge in the performances of which we hear so much for the gain of those who put themselves at their service, but is it not revolting to our highest sentiments to suppose that the departed souls of illustrious men, "the dead but sceptred sovereigns that still rule us from their urns," or our own lost friends whom we once held in the highest esteem, should so demean themselves as to take part in the antics of the dark circle or the mummeries of the trance or table-tipping exhibitions? And why should the class of people fitted to receive communications from the celestial sphere for us who are still stranded on this "bank and shoal of time," be in so large a measure those of a low order of intellect and obtuse moral perceptions, insomuch that it is generally admitted that a large portion of them mingle tricks and imposture with their genuine performances? Where is there a medium that can command the general confidence of thinking people who have no prejudices against the society of those of another, and, we trust a better world?

But after all, we do not profess to judge. "Behold, we know not anything," or at least not much, about this subject. The data that we have been able to obtain, even accepting the testimony of the great lights of the Spiritists faith, are most unsatisfactory. There is little in it to create a desire to hold communion with the invisible world, if that communion must be of the kind and subject to the conditions which are so common. But our present purpose was but to introduce the conclusions of a Philadelphia philosopher, who accepts all the alleged facts of Spiritism, but declares that they are the work of devils and powers of darkness, against which the Scriptures warn us. Whether he is right, we profess not to say, but his contribution to the controversy is interesting. It behooves us to consider, in seeking a solution of the popular mystery, whether or no there be devils seeking to do us a mischief, or to lead us astray from the paths of true belief. There is nothing like considering all aspects of the case, and this is one which will commend itself to some minds.—Boston Globe.

LOOK UP!

Church of the living God! the Master says "look up." Luke 21: 28. Do you ask me why? The soul-inspiring answer is, "because your redemption draweth nigh." Yes; eternal redemption at the putting on of immortality at Christ's glorious appearing.

Now the bowed head is the symbol of sorrow, but the uplifted head betokens joy. "Look up and lift up your heads" he commands. Or, as one renders it, "Raise yourselves, and lift up your heads." Or, as Wickliffe phrases it, "Behold ye, and raise ye your heads." Looking down begets weakness and savors of "the earth, earthy;" looking up inspires courage, hope, and might; indicates the watchful spirit, and tells the world that the heart is in heaven from whence you expect the Deliverer. You cannot fail to do this without proving disobedient to the Lord. "Raise yourselves, droop no longer, arise and be strong, have certain knowledge of the approach of the great day"! he cries. Will you do it? For centuries the bride of the Lamb has been a prey to death. Her foes have been countless, sleepless, and unrelenting; she walking her bloody, lonely path with bowed head and eyes cast down in sorrow. The grave has ever been before her, yawning to devour. But as if in expectation of a strong deliverer from the skies, she has buried her dead with their faces turned upward, and the eyes in the right direction,—up. These on opening at his bidding shall catch speedily the sight of the descending King. For the trumpet shall sound, and the good, translated skyward to meet him, shall then be like him forever. Now he is soon to arrive. We have witnessed the predicted signs. We know the proper and plainly revealed final position,—let us take it. It is the posture of expectant joy.

It is the glorious privilege as well as the sacred duty of the last generation of christians, to go about with their heads lifted up. It will be their happy privilege to stand at the bar of judgment with their heads lifted, for the shame of sin will be exchanged for the boldness of holiness. It will be theirs to march through the golden gates with their heads up. "Thou, O Lord, art a shield for me, my glory, and the lifter up of my head." Ps. 3: 3.

O christians, can we afford to become guilty by disregarding the express orders of our King, in refusing at the proper time to look towards the door of the heavenly tabernacle, about to swing back on its hinges and let forth the Bridegroom? The time has assuredly come. In the broad clear light of the breaking day there is no excuse for the recreant, the indifferent, the cold-hearted.

What an unfailing well of joy in trial; what a source of strength against the forces of sin and evil, what a weapon of warfare against Satan, this belief would everywhere prove to the dear church of God, if she would but open her eyes and perceive and embrace it. What an all-absorbing joy, what an unfailing hope as the conflict deepens, and the fierce, evil powers enhance its intensity. The great heart of Christendom would be stirred with a mighty gladness; an exultant shout would ring out through all the camp of the weary hosts; the enemy would hear the pean of victory sounded in advance, while the multitude of believers, united in the "one hope," would be engirded as with invincible strength from the everlasting arm of the Almighty.

Then lift the head, O weary watcher. Turn the eyes to behold the angel couriers of the returning Redeemer. With ears intent, wait to catch the first signal of the mighty trumpet's blast. Look up, behold it soundeth speedily, and the bell that marks the incoming of eternity is about to strike, One! To the last minute do as the Lord bids, and look up. Keep the head erect, and with it the heart clean, if at the end you would be "caught up to join the Lord in the air." Waiters, watchers, workers, Heads up!—The Christian.—D. T. Taylor.

WASHINGTON CO., KANSAS, CONFERENCE.

In response to the call of Bro. F. O. Cutler, there was a meeting of believers in the speedy coming of Christ at Peach Creek, Kan., commencing March 27th, 1875, at 2 o'clock P. M. Ministers present—F. O. Cutler, James W. Hayworth, R. F. and M. J. Clark, of Kan., and G. G. Godfrey of Nebraska; also a representation of brethren from six different A. C. churches, in said county. Bro. J. W. Hayworth was called to the chair, and C. D. Potter was chosen Secretary. A motion was made and carried to organize a Conference. The following constitution was adopted:—

CONSTITUTION.

ART. 1. The name of this religious body shall be "The Washington County Advent Christian Conference."

ART. 2. This Conference shall comprise all A. C. churches and ministers in Washington county and vicinity who are in sympathy with its objects.

ART. 3. The officers of this Conference shall be a President, Secretary and Treasurer, each to be elected annually.

ART. 4. This Conference shall hold four sessions each year, and the President, or a quorum of the Quarterly Conference, shall have authority to call a special meeting when deemed necessary.

ART. 5. This Conference shall have authority to examine into the christian character of its members, and admonish as occasion seems to require. And it shall grant to persons properly qualified, and recommended by the church of which the applicants are members, licenses to preach, and to renew licenses or credentials annually. No person shall be licensed to preach until he shall have been examined and recommended by a committee of three ministers or laymen; said committee to be chosen by the Quarterly Conference.

ART. 6. The objects of this Conference are, the promulgation of the glorious truths of the Bible, as interpreted by the Advent Church, the upbuilding of the cause of truth, and the salvation of men.

ART. 7. No article of this constitution shall be changed except by a vote of two-thirds of its members present at a regular meeting.

We, the undersigned, have subscribed our names this 27th day of March, 1875:—

J. Thompson, C. D. Potter, R. Day, J. J. Brownley, A S. Field, J. S. Lusvler, J. M. Elliott, W. W. Coder, N. N. Mathews, G. H. McAtee, J. Durham, W. H. Shriner, C. Durham, G. P. Boutwell.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. W. Hayworth, President; John Batterton, Secretary, and John Brownley, Treasurer.

Voted, To send a copy of the proceedings and Constitution to the World's Crisis and Advent Christian Times for publication.

Voted, To hold the next Quarterly Meeting at Sherman Centre.

The result of the meeting has been blessed. The Spirit of the Lord has been most graciously present, and many spoke of special good received. Sweet harmony in Jesus prevailed. Two were baptized, and the church was much quickened. Bro. Godfrey rendered valuable aid in the meeting. He is devotedly attached to Jesus, and ever ready to do all in his power to advance his cause. We have great reason for thanksgiving in view of what the Lord is doing in this part of the State. When we look back and see what has been accomplished during the last year by the power of the Spirit and Word, we have abundant cause to rejoice and go forward in the good work, with increased courage and renewed hopes of still greater success. The work is going forward. Hundreds are seeing the truth, but many are crying "Peace and safety." May God have mercy on such. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the end of the world. JOHN BATTERTON, Sec.

TRIFLES.

E. OWEN.

A very little light
In cloudy, moonless night,
May guide the steps aright
 Of weary traveller.
A very trifling act
Performed with proper tact,
May faith assure in fact,
 Of doubting caviller.

A seeming random word,
You may have deemed unheard,
Or trivial, or absurd;
 May leave impression,
Outliving moon, or star,
Felt, whether near or far,
To favor or debar
 Needful confession.

A very little care
Of what we speak, and where,
May lead to earnest prayer,
 And to salvation;
While needless, scornful slight,
May cast a withering blight,
And cause the soul to fight
 Its best relation.

Then let us watch and pray
That all we do or say
 May be inspired;
So husbands, children, wives,
Whoever us survives,
May recollect our lives
 Ever conspired

That grace to magnify,
Which led our Lord to die
Upon Mount Calvary;
 That we may share
His love, and grow in grace,
With patience run the race,
And gain that happy place
 Christ will prepare.

ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

While so many of our foreign prelates are assailing our common-school system, and claiming for their own Roman Catholic system an infinite superiority, it would be well for them to explain why it is that Roman Catholic education has everywhere ended in the perpetuation of ignorance and the decay of public morals. Not even Bishop M'QUAID, we suspect, or even DR. MANNING, who seems to have acquired the faculty of believing history only as it is taught by his Church, would deny that Roman Catholic countries are the worst educated of all; that Italy, France and Spain have left the larger part of their population in total ignorance, that most Irish Catholics can neither read nor write, and that Germany, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden are the best instructed countries in Europe, because they have long possessed a national system of education. Yet we are confidently required by our foreign prelates to abandon our unsectarian American mode of teaching, and adopt that which has wholly failed in France, Italy, and Spain. In France fifty per cent. of the population in the Western and Roman Catholic departments are, according to the latest statistics, unable to read and write; in Spain and Italy even a far larger proportion; and the Catholic teaching has proved so perfectly ineffective that the American system has already been introduced into Rome and projected at Madrid. No one, in fact, who looks into the condition of the papal countries can fail to reach the conclusion that the Roman Church has never really desired to educate its people; that it prefers to leave them in ignorance, and sees in knowledge its most resolute foe. And if this inference may seem to some of our more intelligent and patriotic Roman Catholic citizens an apparent injustice, yet they must admit, upon a more careful reflection, that it is true, and they may discover in the clamor of their prelates against our public schools only a dull echo of that dread of an educated people which they have learned in the papal seminaries of Europe.

The progress of knowledge, however, in all Protestant countries during the last three centuries, has forced the Papal Church to assume a different position among us in this matter from that which it has held in Italy and Spain, and to endeavor to propagate its faith by guiding the education of the young. It now claims to be willing to teach all its people, provided it can be allowed to teach them only what it thinks proper. And Bishop M'Quaid and his followers require that our republican and unsectarian system of teaching shall be abandoned, and a throng of Roman Catholic schools be maintained at the public expense. Thus, in fact, this foreign Church, having neglected the education of the people in its own native countries almost entirely, having left Italy, France and Spain centres of excessive ignorance, now that its political power has increased among us, begins to assail our common schools with foul words and pestilent accusations, and even kindly offers to instruct us in the best methods of education, and to provide a sufficient number of priests, nuns, or Christian Brothers to oversee as many schools as we may desire. Large numbers of them have, in fact, been already imported from Europe for the improvement of the manners of our city children, and have left the fair fields of Rome or Madrid, where their labors have been so remarkably unsuccessful, to assume the care of the education of young republicans. How hospitably they have been received in New York every one has seen.

Our native teachers have often been set aside to make way for the favored disciples of the Vatican. Christian brothers have been provided with the means, at the cost of the city, of opening a large number of those institutions among us, which have proved so injurious to the morals and political welfare of Spain and Italy. Had New York been dedicated effectually to the Sacred Heart, it could not have shown greater liberality to the Sisters of that mystical society, whose vision has become the guiding light of modern Romanism, and whose schools are spread among us by all the influence of papal politicians. One of them, which recently appeared before the courts of the city, having refused to pay taxes on its property, was shown to have been endowed with a regal munificence to which only our impoverished tax payers could object.

In 1867, the Sisters of the Sacred Heart became possessed of fifty acres of land for the use of their school. It might well have been supposed that one acre would have been sufficient to satisfy the rapacity of the most avaricious sisterhood, for one acre of land in the city of New York must in the course of time rise to a valuation equal to the dower of a queen. But the Sacred Heart required a richer dotation, and its foreign nuns were resolved to provide liberally for generations of future Sisters. Fifty acres of the land of a metropolis whose domain is already far too narrow for its crowded poor, were devoted to ecclesiastical purposes. The Sisters possess their domain in triumph. They promise to be the richest community of nuns ever known in the annals of celibacy. Their fifty acres are already worth millions. In no long period they will be worth fifty millions, and our opulent sisterhood will be among the wealthiest heiresses of a land of gold. But not content with their fair prospects, these avaricious Sisters are unwilling to pay any taxes. They claim that they require the whole of their fifty acres for educational or ecclesiastical purposes.

They have, it seems, four hundred resident pupils and five hundred day scholars. How much money they receive for their tuition they do not state. It is, no doubt, a large sum. But they still insist that they will pay no taxes for their land, although how fifty acres can be used for a school of nine hundred pupils—a number less than is taught in many of our public schools—does not appear. The Sisters of the Sacred Heart contend that their scholars require the whole of the land as a play-ground! On this pretext they seek to defraud the city of several thousand dollars. Many similar schools and institutions are spreading over our State and country, all equally unscrupulous, engrossing large pieces of land, refusing to pay taxes, seeking to control the education of the people, and diligent opponents of the public schools.

These Roman Catholic schools and seminaries, which Bishop M'Quaid and Bishop Ryan are so anxious to substitute altogether for these "godless and corrupt" common schools which we have long supposed were the chief sources of our prosperity, have been for three centuries the only means of education for France, Italy, and Spain. They are all founded upon the model of the Jesuit colleges, and reflect the peculiar traits of that secretive society. The Jesuits, in the first vigor of their early enthusiasm, made successful if not useful teachers; they soon gained the control of the colleges of Italy and Spain, filled the universities of Pavia and Bologna with their pupils, taught emperors or governed princes. But as the society became rapidly corrupt, its schools soon fell with it into decay. From contemporary writers we are told that Italy in the close of the seventeenth century was chiefly educated by the Jesuits, and that their seminaries had become centres of disorder and corruption. Their course of study was confined only to those branches permitted by the papal court; their discipline was wholly lost; the pupils contemned their teachers, and often drove them from their lecture-rooms. The young men of the universities were so disorderly and riotous that it was thought dangerous to walk at night through the streets of Pavia or Bologna. The Jesuit teachers thought only of winning pupils by indulgence, and even neglect; knowledge perished in all the Italian cities, and the results of Roman Catholic education may be seen in that total decay that has fallen upon the Italian intellect.

Superficial accomplishments, a faint knowledge of Latin, and a taste for useless show and idle dissipation are the usual results of the teaching of priests and nuns. In the recent debate in the French Assembly it was shown that the Catholic colleges of Belgium were infinitely inferior to those maintained by the State. And even ultramontane France hesitates to permit them to be established in its midst. But the most conclusive argument against the introduction of the papal system of teaching among us may still be found in the national traits of the lands for which they have formed the only means of education for three hundred years. If we wish our people to resemble the people of Rome and Paris, Mexico or Vienna, we need only intrust our public schools to the care of priests and nuns.

Upon the rules of public policy an equally fatal objection exists to the pretensions of the foreign prelates. The declaration of infallibility has made a total change in the relation of the Papal church to all civil governments. It now plainly assures them that wherever it gains the power, it will suppress freedom of conscience and of the press, all free government and national independence, will insist upon the punishment of heresy, and a perfect submission to the Papal See. "Toleration," Pius IX. assures us, "is a fatal error." These doctrines will in future be taught in every Roman Catholic school, under pain of excommunication. Every Roman Catholic will be urged to assail covertly or openly our free institutions. He can no longer be a good citizen of a free state.

Germany has met this new danger by establishing a strict supervision over its public schools; Switzerland and Brazil banish their papal bishops and their Jesuits. Even England has shown traces of alarm at the papal pretensions. At such a moment we are asked by Bishop Ryan and Bishop M'Quaid to yield up to them the control of a large part of our public schools, and to encourage the spread of principles that in the end must be fatal to republicanism and freedom. Rather it would seem, should we labor to check the growth of these dangerous assumptions among us. Political Romanism is the chief peril that now hangs over our future progress. The immense increase by immigration of our Roman Catholic population must force upon us that unhappy strife which is raging in most European countries between ultramontanism and progress, between ignorance and knowledge, and the only sure weapon of defence against the spread of European barbarism is our system of common schools. To preserve, to perfect, and adorn that sure support of republicanism may well occupy the chief attention of our government and people.—Eugene Lawrence, in Harper's Weekly of Feb. 6th.

"LO, I'M WITH YOU ALWAY."

ZORA BRIGGS.

"Always with me," blessed Savior,
 Is this promise true for me?
Wilt thou ne'er in sorrow leave me?
 May I ever be with thee?

"Always with me" when the darkness
 Hovers o'er me on my way;
Sweetest words—"I ne'er will leave thee"—
 Bids my heart rejoice to-day.

"Always with me" when I'm sinking
 Down like Peter 'neath the wave;
There thine arm is stretched to hold me,
 There to cheer me and to save.

"Always with me" when I'm tempted,
 Thou'st been tempted e'en as me;
And thou knowest all my weakness;
 I shall find my strength in thee.

"Always with me"; sweet the promise,
 Till the world's sad end shall be;
Then among the saints, rejoicing,
 I may ever be with thee.

THE COMING JUDGMENT.

WM. D. TUCKER.

Whenever the Lord has brought a judgment upon the inhabitants of the earth, to punish them for their wickedness, he has always in some manner made known to them beforehand what was coming to pass, in order that they might have an opportunity to repent of their evil doings, and turn to him for help; and by thus doing, escape the punishment and wrath of the Lord.

When wickedness was rampant in the antedeluvian age, God repented that he had ever formed man, because he had dishonored him so greatly. Therefore to punish men for their sins, he determined to bring a flood of water upon them, as a just and righteous judgment.

For one hundred and twenty years before he brought that great calamity upon them, he ceased not to warn them of the approaching danger, by his faithful servant, Noah. But they heeded not the warnings, and were lost, in consequence of their unbelief and disobedience.

Before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities of the plain, the Lord sent two angels to warn the inhabitants of the approaching judgment, and took Lot and his family away from the fiery calamity which befel those ancient cities, for their unbelief and disregard of God's teachings and admonitions.

Through the warnings of the prophet Jonah, the inhabitants of Nineveh repented, and by thus doing, escaped a terrible judgment. Before the destruction of the wicked inhabitants of Jerusalem, Christ warned them of the "visitation" which must come upon them, because they would not repent of the evil which they were daily committing. There were a few in the city who were righteous, and they heeded the warning, and escaped.

And to-day, and for years past, God has not ceased to warn the inhabitants of the earth of a final judgment, which is yet in the future. "God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man (Christ) whom he hath raised from the dead;" and he has continually admonished us, by signs, and by the "sure word of prophecy," that we are very near the coming judgment, when the Lord will reward every man "according as his work shall be." The righteous will escape, but the wicked will be destroyed like those of olden times, when the wrath of God was poured out upon them.

Oh, then, while we are being warned of the coming judgment, let us take heed to the warnings, and escape the wrath of the Lord.

HOW TO LOOK AT THINGS.—Two Rabbis approaching Jerusalem observed a fox running upon the hill of Zion, and Rabbi Joshua wept, but Rabbi Eliezer laughed. "Wherefore dost thou laugh?" said he who wept. "Nay, wherefore dost thou weep?" demanded Eliezer. "I weep," replied the Rabbi Joshua, "because I see what was written in Lamentations fulfilled: "Because of the Mount Zion which is desolate the foxes walk upon it." "And therefore do I laugh," said Rabbi Eliezer, "for when I see with my own eyes that God has fulfilled his threatening to the very letter, I have thereby a pledge that not one of his promises shall fail, for he is ever more ready to show mercy than judgment."—Sel.

THE WIT IN PRISON.—In an old account of Bedford, there is a good anecdote to the effect that a Quaker called upon Bunyan in jail, one day, with what he professed to be a message from the Lord. "After searching for thee," said he, "in half the jails in England, I am glad to have found thee at last." "If the Lord sent thee," said Bunyan, sarcastically, "you would not have needed to take so much trouble to find me out, for he knows I have been in Bedford jail these seven years past."

HE that can appreciate and consider vice with all her baits and seeming pleasures, and yet abstain, and yet distinguish, and yet prefer that which is truly better, he is a true warfaring christian. I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and seeks her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for not without dust and heat.—Milton.

A WORD IN SEASON.—A profane coachman pointing to one of his horses, said to a pious traveler, "That horse, sir, knows when I swear at him." "Yes," replied the traveler, "and so does One above." The coachman seemed to feel the reproof, and immediately became silent.

HOME AND HEALTH.

CORRUPT LITERATURE.

It may be surprising to some to learn that an extensive business is carried on, in our large cities, in the publication of obscene books and periodicals. Of necessity, it is a secret traffic; yet is no less thriving on that account. The detection and arrest of a number of such publishers and dealers in New York, lately, created quite a stir. Tons of plates and books were destroyed; yet what was thus discovered and destroyed was but a tithe of what still remains. The business flourishes, and, in most instances, the venders escape detection, while their vile stuff makes its way throughout the whole country. It finds its chief patrons among the young. That household is fortunate that escapes its damning influence. Vigilance is the price of safety.

In view of these facts the question arises, "How is it that such publications find a market? What causes the demand for them? We think every reflecting mind will admit that much is due to the corrupt literature of the day. It leans very largely in that direction—at least in its influence, if not in its character. The young are beginning to dislike everything but light literature. History, biography, travels, and science are deemed intolerable. Stories, romance, novels—these are the palatable dishes for youthful intellects to feast upon—anything and everything that runs in the direction of easy reading, requiring no effort of thought and memory. As a result, there is no invigoration of the mental powers, but rather an enervation. The mind becomes diseased for want of activity, and an unnatural craving for fiction and excitement follows. Step by step the habit grows, until even the high-toned story loses its power to please, and the way is opened for those foul leaves of the devil to supply the place.

It is well enough to suppress the traffic by law whenever detected, but the only real remedy is to nip the desire for such literature in the bud. Parents cannot be too careful in guarding their children against the pernicious effects of promiscuous novel-reading. Some of the noblest of the world's authors come in this garb. The attempt should rather be directed against an exclusive reading of stories by the young who have advanced far enough in years to be able to appreciate something different. The father and that mother act unwisely who, in selecting reading matter, considers the chief and the only qualification to be the department of stories. Exclusively story magazines and papers will bear their fruits in a vitiated taste, a depraved appetite, an unbalanced judgment, a false view of life, a false standard of conduct, and a weakened moral sense. Given these things, and one can readily see why large publishing houses can coin money by the publication and circulation of literature which is hawked by night in the streets by wary boys and girls, men and women, and smuggled into households that little dream of the existence of such literature in their midst.—Banner of Holiness.

MIND AND HEALTH.—The mental condition has far more influence upon the bodily health than is generally supposed. It is no doubt true that ailments of the body cause depressing and morbid conditions of the mind; but it is no less true that sorrowful and disagreeable emotions produce disease in persons who, uninfluenced by them, would be in sound health; or, if disease is not produced, the functions are disordered. Not even physicians always consider the importance of this fact. Agreeable emotions set in motion nervous currents which stimulate blood, brain, and every part of the system into healthful activity; while grief, disappointment of feeling, and brooding over present sorrows or past mistakes depress all the vital forces. To be physically well one must, in general be happy. The reverse is not always true; one may be happy and cheerful, and yet be a constant sufferer in body.—London Times.

OATMEAL AS A DIET.—Americans are gradually waking up to the fact that oatmeal is by no means an unimportant article of diet. As a food, the merits of which have stood the test of centuries, and which is designed to promote the sanitary condition of the nation by laying the foundation for more ready and vigorous framers for the coming generation, let us regard its general adoption as an article of diet as nothing short of a national good. Its phosphorescent qualities act as a general and healthful impulse to the brain, and on no other food can one endure so great or so prolonged mental labor as on oatmeal porridge. Properly cooked, it is not only a most healthful and nutritious food, but it is fully attested by its wonderfully rapid adoption as a popular diet by the very fastidious palates of our American people.—American Working People.

MOTHERS of America, if you wish to rid your own and your children's households of the destroying locusts which infest your houses and eat your substance, take a pride in educating your daughters to be perfect mistresses of every home duty; then, even if you leave them without a dollar, be assured they will never lack a warm garment, a bounteous meal, or a cosy roof, nor fail of the respect of any who know them.—Home Guardian.

The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

FOREBODINGS.

Earth! what a sorrow lies before thee,
None like it in the shadowy past;
The sharpest woe that ever tore thee,
Even though the briefest and the last.

We see the fair moon veil her lustre,
We see the sackcloth of the sun;
The shrouding of each starry cluster,
The three fold woe of earth begun.

We see the shadows of its sunset,
And wrapt in them the avenger's form;
We see the Armageddon onset,—
But we shall be above the storm.

There comes the moaning and the sighing,
There comes the hot tear's heavy fall,
The thousand agonies of dying,—
But we shall be beyond them all.

—The Restitution.

THE PRESENT STATE OF THE WORLD INDICATIVE OF THE LORD'S SPEEDY RETURN.

By Rev. Edward Hoare, Vicar of Tunbridge Wells, and Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

Just before the second advent of Christ, there shall be an increase of science and traveling. Daniel 12: 4—"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." These words plainly refer to the latter days; to "the time of the end;" the last period of this dispensation.

Now, of this period there are two things predicted to the Prophet; the one religious, the other social; the religious change is the unsealing of the vision, or the opening of the eyes of believers to truths hitherto concealed in prophecy; the social change is the rapid progress of traveling and science throughout the world. It is the latter of these with which we are now concerned. At the time of the end, therefore, there is to be an increase of knowledge, and of men running to and fro on the earth. Now, ask any common observer of mankind, one who looks on life without reference to prophecy or religion; ask him what he thinks the most remarkable feature in the present aspect of society, and he will tell you the rapid advance of science and increased facility of communication.

Just contrast the world at large, in respect of traveling, with what it was fifty years ago. Most truly may it be said, "Men are running to and fro on the earth." The leading commercial feature of the day is railway enterprise; the habits of society are becoming materially changed through the ease and rapidity with which we travel. Thousands and tens of thousands have now become travelers, who, a few years since, had scarcely quitted the immediate neighborhood of their native town. Nor is this confined to England. It is the same with America, Russia, India, and the whole continent of Europe.

Look again at science, at the vast improvements in machinery, at the curious discoveries in every department of useful art, at the rapid increase of knowledge throughout the world. Look again at the connection between the two. The increase of traveling is foretold by the prophet in connection with the advance of science. "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Now this connection is the remarkable feature of modern society. The two changes are acting and reacting upon each other. In every period the increase of traveling has led to the increase of knowledge; but now the increase of knowledge is no less effective in leading men to run to and fro in the earth.

The result is, that increased knowledge and increased traveling are going hand in hand throughout the world. There has already been sufficient change in these two respects to satisfy the prophecy; so that, if the advent were to be to-morrow, there is enough to convince the most hardened infidel, that Daniel's words have received a literal, complete, and most remarkable fulfillment. In this respect, therefore, the world is ripe for the Lord's second advent.

There is reason to believe from the prophetic Scriptures that the nations of Europe will be the first nations of the world at the time of our Lord's return.

It is curious to observe in history the rise and fall of the various nations which have successively occupied the foremost position in society. Like the gleam of sunshine on the landscape, civilization and power have beamed for awhile upon successive kingdoms; and then left them to be obscured and darkened by a cloud. Thus Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, have successively swayed the sceptre of the world. This sceptre is now held by the European nations generally, and with a power perhaps greater than in any former age; but there is this remarkable difference between the present and any other period, that now it is possessed by no nation singly, being divided amongst several.

In former days the Roman republic was itself sovereign and supreme; there was no other which could pretend to rivalry. It is not so now; the European nations have all the advantage of unquestionable superiority over the uncivilized nations of Africa and the East; but amongst themselves there is none to which pre-eminence would be conceded by the rest. Such changes are inexplicable on merely worldly principles. The student of history may endeavor to trace the causes of a nation's gradual decline; but, why those causes themselves appeared is a question which no natural intellect can solve.

The student of prophecy, however, is not left in darkness. He sees in all these changes the exact completion of God's prophetic Scriptures, and at once solves the mystery by referring the whole to the revealed purpose of an all-wise and all-controlling God. In two separate visions these changes were all foretold by Daniel. What history says there has been, prophecy foretold there should be, viz., four ruling kingdoms in the world. We are taught this by the vision of the image and its explanation in Daniel 2: 31–15; and by the vision of the four wild beasts in Daniel 7.

From both we gather the same leading facts. (1.) That Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, should, in turn, succeed to the supremacy of empires held by Babylon at the time of Daniel. (2.) That the fourth, or Roman empire, should appear under a two-fold aspect, at first being united like the foot, but afterwards divided like the toes. (3.) That this fourth empire should be the last; that there should be no fifth arising to supersede it; for that in the time of the ten kings (its second, or divided period), there should arise the kingdom of the Son of man. Dan. 2: 44—"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

Now, as to the two first facts, there is an exact correspondence between history and prophecy. As was foretold, Persia succeeded Babylon, Greece Persia, and Rome Greece. The Roman power again has appeared under a two-fold form, first being united under the republic and the empire, and then breaking up into the kingdoms of modern Europe. The prophecy, therefore, by its two first facts, brings the history of the world's kingdoms down to our own exact position, and at the same time it teaches, by the third, that there can be no further change before the Advent. "In the days of these kings," i. e., the European nations, "shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom," i. e., the kingdom of the saints, of the Son of man in glory. With reference, therefore, to the political changes of the world, we are living under the last period of the last empire. There is to be no further shifting of the seat of power; but strength and civilization will be found resting with Europe when the Son of man appears.

According to the Scriptures, there shall be a general indifference to the subject of Christ's personal return just before it takes place.

Of course, amongst the people of God, there will be many whose hearts God will have led to the patient waiting for Christ, in the calm sobriety of a scriptural faith, like Simeon and Anna. But such cases wlll be the exception. The great mass of men will be altogether indifferent. They will care no more for our preaching than the men before the flood did for Noah's; they will think it an idle and enthusiastic tale, and utterly disregard the whole matter.

Some, indeed, will scoff at it. They will challenge believers to the proof of it; they will point to the world's unbroken course, and say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" They will be ready to raise the sneer against the church's hopes, and only notice the blessed tidings just to scoff at them as idle speculation. "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation;" 2 Pet. 3: 3, 4.

But the scoffing spirit is not described as the general feature of society. It requires some attention even to scoff at God's promises. But the general character of the world with reference to this great subject will be apathy; downright, dogged indifference to the whole concern. Now this is the description which our Lord gives of the world before his coming. He says, men shall be found sleeping, a few blessed servants watching, but the mass sleeping, unconscious of his approach, unconcerned at his promises, unawakened even by the judgments that hurry on as the forerunners of his wrath.

The messsge, then, for our day is, "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." It is impossible for any man of common observation to be blind to the fact that the great mass of men are still slumbering in reference to the speedy coming of Christ. Quick and energetic in their business, keen in their speculations, alive and alert as to the money market, they are profoundly insensible to that coming. They are content to leave the great point unsettled. They are hurrying toward the judgment-seat, and have not yet bowed before the cross. They are shortly to stand before the Judge, and for aught they know, the whole weight of God's curse still hangs over their unforgiven sin.

They have no fellowship with a Savior, no walking with God, no cleansing of guilt in the Lamb's most precious blood, no eager wrestling with God that they may have a full assurance of their name written in the book of life. A free, full, complete salvation is now offered to them; justification and restoration are promised graciously through the name of Jesus. They are warned of their danger, and invited to the Lord for safety. Yet they sleep, they slumber on; and if, perchance, they for a while raise their head to listen, it is either to scoff at the message, or to sink back into a slumber more fatal, more profound. Oh! that the Holy Ghost may condescend in mercy to awake those slumberers to activity and life! Oh! that the Spirit of the living God may himself break the spell of that fatal apathy! Oh! that in our beloved church we may see the fulfilment of the apostle's prayer:—"The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ!"—Signs of Our Times.

THE SEVENTH VIAL.—Rev. 16: 17-19.

S. S. BREWER.

The importance of the book of Revelation that God gave unto his Son Jesus Christ is most certainly implied by the blessing pronounced upon them that read, hear and keep those things that are written therein. See chap. 1, ver. 3, and also the benison vouchsafed in chap. 22, ver. 7. The symbol that I have selected, and design to offer some remarks upon, is one, it seems to me, of great interest at this time. It is the last of a consecutive chain; and its effects are distinctly to be seen at this time.

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." Therefore they are called "the seven last plagues." If the events that were predicted to transpire under the effects of the seventh vial can now be distinctly seen, there is no necessity of entering into a detail concerning the preceding ones. "The great city," under this vial, will be divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations are to fall. If these events have transpired, we are certainly under this vial; if they have not taken place, then it is yet to be fulfilled.

The first point to be decided is this: What is "the great city"?

Will the reader please turn to the 17th of Rev., and read from the first to the seventh verse. There you will find the Romish Church under the symbol of a woman, drunk with blood; and in the 18th verse it is declared that "the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

Rome, and that alone, has filled that prophetic mould; and furthermore, it has been their unceasing and exulting boast that the Protestants were all divided among themselves, but "the holy Roman Catholic Church was a unit." Yes, when inquisitions, dungeons, faggots, swords and crusades, with all their horrid concomitants, were invoked in the name of Christ, and kings and nations were drunk with blood and "the wine of her fornication," she was then united mind, might, and strength; but she is not a unit now.

Under the sixth vial, that dried up the great river Euphrates, three unclean spirits are seen to go forth unto the kings of the earth, and the whole world. Their mission, among other pre-designed purposes, culminates in the division of the great city into three parts.

In the memorable revolutions of the year 1848, the city of Rome—the great winepress, where all her wine of fornication, namely her corrupt, debasing doctrines, are concocted—fell into the hands of the revolutionists; and it has been subdivided into three political parties; viz., Monarchists, Papists, and Republicans. Once it was the Pope's paradise, and he was its de facto sovereign; but in 1848 he fled therefrom, to save his life.

But there is another division, and it is so in harmony with prophecy that it seems to me none can fail to see it. The annexed article corroborates the prophetic testimony of the Revelator; and if it is not what he predicted, it has in all its features a most decided similarity, to say the least. To my mind, dear friends, this is that which was spoken by the Revelator—"And the great city was divided into three parts."

I recollect that it was said, some few years before the late Ecumenical Council, the Pope declared he would yet astonish the world. Concerning what did transpire then and there, the editor of the London Telegraph says:—"With respect to the dogma of Papal Infallibility, the Latin Church is divided into three parties. One of these, that being true, the doctrine ought to be promulgated by the Ecumenical Council. The second, although it is true, the promulgation of the truth at such a time as the present would be highly inexpedient for the interests of the church; while the third declares it to be a monstrous fiction, unknown to the early church, and born of gross and detected forgeries."

The bitterness and hatred of these three ecclesiastical belligerents against each other is reported to be intense. I have not space to recite instances. Rome is no longer a boastful, united church, but now a decrepit relic of barbarous superstition, and detested and hated as predicted in Rev. 17: 16, and "divided into three parts." It is now settled in the most definite manner that we are now and have been for some time under the effects of the "seventh vial," or the above facts could not exist.

In the next place we invite the reader's attention to the following prediction: "And the cities of the nations fell."

There are two wicked powers set forth in the visions of the Revelator, under the figurative expression of a "city"; the one above described called Babylon the great, and the other in chap. 11, ver. 8. This is described as "the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified." As Rome is called Babylon, this must be descriptive of another power; and this, for certain reasons, we believe to be France; which nation at and from the days of Charlemagne was the great political protectorate power of Rome. See an account of his coronation in Gibbon, vol. 5, pp. 40–43. The historian says that after Pope Leo placed a precious crown on the head of the Emperor, the dome of St. Peter at Rome, where the coronation took place, resounded with acclamations of the people: "Long life and victory to Charles, the most pious Augustus, crowned by God the great and pacific Emperor of the Romans. The head and body of Charlemagne were consecrated by the royal unction, after the example of the Cæsars. He was saluted or adored by the Pontiff. His coronated oath represents a promise to maintain the faith, and the privileges of the church."

Let me say that the kings of France pursued faithfully the footsteps of their Carlovingian predecessor, and no other nation can produce such a race of cruel monsters as France. Paris, to the nations in a political sense, during the medieval age, was similar to Rome in the ecclesiastical. The testimony of Lamartine on this point is pertinent. He says:—"The royal family in France, who considered royalty as their inalienable apanage, and sovereign power as the legitimate right of their blood, were allied by marriages to all the kings of Europe; and to attack the rights of royalty in France, was to attack or threaten them all over Europe. The royal families were but one family, and the crowns dependent on them to suppress the title and rights of kings in all the capitals. Moreover it was to break off all external connection of France with the European States."—Lamartine, vol. 2, page 177. On pages 177, 178, he remarks:—"The king was the visible God of the nation, and it was religion to obey him. Moreover, an alliance as old as the monarchy, united religion to royalty; and to destroy the one was to destroy the other. France had two secular habits—Royalty and Catholicism; opinion and conscience were alike on their side, and it was impossible to root up the one without disturbing the other. Did royalty fall, Catholicism, as a sovereign and civil institution, fell with it, and, instead of one ruin, caused two."

The amazing power of France can in a measure be conceived, when we take into consideration its unparalleled prowess in the wars of the first Napoleon. Even after the bloody revolution of 1791 to '95, it required the allied powers to combine against her in order to suppress the fearful dread she had created among the nations of Europe. Rome and France were the two great powers—a religious and political proxyship in very deed.

I will now suggest some reasons why the following figurative expressions—"Sodom and Egypt"—may be applied to France; and in order to do this in the most vivid manner, please notice first the sins charged against Sodom, by the prophet Ezekiel (16: 49, 50)—"Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me.'"

1. The "pride" of France, in her abominable fashions, has corrupted all professed christian nations. Parisian fashions is the model for its devotees.

2. "Fulness of bread." Her immense revenues, and the prolific nature of her soil, enables her to riot in luxury. Her nobles are a class of epicures, and it has been said by tourists that they could live cheaper and better in France than anywhere else; consequently another predicted feature is developed, which is—

3. "Abundance of idleness." France has been the head centre of idlers from all civilized nations.

4. Among other sins of Sodomites, "they were haughty and committed abominations before me." I feel safe in stating that no other nation has developed a haughtier spirit and committed greater abominations than France. The application seems to fit France thus far in every particular.

I will now invite your attention to "Egypt." The name is introduced in a figurative sense, and may be applied in the following manner: (1) Egypt rejected God and his Word; so has France. (2) Egypt persecuted and oppressed the children of God; so has France. (3) Egypt was noted for licentiousness; so France has been. Both terms, Sodom and Egypt, seem very applicable to France.

We are now led to inquire, In what sense are we to understand this sentence—"Where, also, our Lord was crucified"?

We read of those who "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh." That the term in both instances—in Heb. 6: 6, and in the one above—are designed to be taken figuratively, we can not doubt. And as France has slain more of the saints for the harlot Rome than any other power, in the language of our Lord we may apply it to France—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." In this sense, "also," our Lord was crucified. I will cite you to the "Bartholomew Massacre," when the streets of Paris were reeking with the blood of the innocent Protestants. This latter one cruel instance would fix it on France, if there were no others. It has been estimated that from sixty to seventy thousand were savagely butchered in the kingdom of France during that horrid event set on foot by the Queen Catharine and her son King Charles. Then and there, also, was our Lord crucified.

With the above evidences we think that France is the power indicated in the prophecy as "the great city, spiritually called Sodom and Egypt, where, also, our Lord was crucified."

The next event predicted to transpire is—"And the cities of the nations fell." There seems sufficient evidence presented to show that France and Rome were the two powers indicated by the Revelator; for they conjointly have reigned over the nations. They both lost their prestige, as a proxyship, in the reign of terror—1791 to 1795—and since the late "Franco Prussian war" Rome is occupied by Victor Emmanuel, the Pope's subject of excommunication; and France has been conquered by a Protestant power—Prussia—which dictated the terms of capitulation—"one thousand millions of dollars." Royalty has had to succumb to Republicanism.

Prepare for the next great and final event predicted—"And great Babylon came into remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath; and every island fled away, and the mountains were not found." Then all the dread calamities predicted to transpire in the day (or year) of God's wrath will overtake all that are not prepared for translation. Read Rev. 16: 19–21; Job 38: 22, 23; Zeph. 1: 14 to the end. Then will be realized all that is expressed in Rev. 6: 15, 16.

Dear reader, mark the exclamations of kings, rich men, chief captains, and mighty men. "The great day of his wrath is come." All acknowledge the reality. Now, yea, now there is an opportunity to escape the fate of all that are not prepared to stand. Mark this fact. The next event is the great day of God's wrath. Not an age of probation, nor an "age to come" of probation; but the destruction of all "that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." The next event, to all that are ready, is translation; and to all out of Christ is "everlasting destruction."

PREACHING CHRIST CRUCIFIED, ONLY.

G. W. STETSON.

Those only who are preaching the Second Advent of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the judgment, and the reign in glory, know how often and for what purpose it is said, "Christ and him crucified is all that should be preached; that is sufficient; for Paul said that he was determined not to know or preach anything else; and what was enough for Paul to preach is enough for us and all others." Of course this statement is intended for reproof, but utterly fails of its object; for those reprimanded generally know very well that the sentiment is as fallacious in theory as it is untrue in fact, and betrays incompetency of judgment or inexcusable ignorance in the would-be reprovers, relating to the facts in the case as they existed at Corinth, and are set forth by Paul in the Record.

The declaration is false in theory, because the death of Jesus constitutes but one elemental point out of several constituting the gospel of salvation; and Christ's command was—"Go ye, therefore, into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. . . . He that believeth shall be saved." He that believeth what? Why, "the gospel," of course; that which Jesus commanded us to preach. Not simply that one simple fact, out of it, as these grumbling, fault-finding, reproving tyros of the gospel of Jesus Christ would have us believe, is enough; but the whole of it; for the gospel, without any qualifying prefix or suffix, means, always, all of it. But the statement annexed to the declaration is untrue in fact; for Paul says, in his letter to the Corinthians, that he preached more than that. He also says that, on account of their carnality, he could not preach to them as he was in the habit of doing to spiritual men in Christ, but must confine himself to first principles, and preach to them just as he would to unbelieving, unrepentant, unregenerate men,—Christ crucified, comprehending the doctrines of faith, repentance, and obedience. But among the perfect he spoke "God's wisdom in a mystery," revealing to us, by the Spirit, "things which God hath prepared for those who love him."

In consequence of their divisions, contentions, strifes, debates, schisms, and litigations, he had determined to confine himself on that occasion, and under those circumstances, exclusively to the subject of Christ crucified for our sins, in order to bring them to repentance. But in another part of his letter he goes beyond this, and brings out not only the faith, but also the resurrection and translation of the saints, as the hope of the church. To them he said that he preached what was essential to salvation, the least that could be given and received, in order to be saved,—the death, burial and resurrection of Christ; but to the Thessalonians, in addition to what he had preached to the Corinthians (though he afterwards wrote it to them), that "if we believe" in his death and resurrection, we "must also believe," in his coming again, and the resurrection of the dead; and he then proceeds to give the manner of the one and the order of the other, with the results which, according to "the Word of the Lord," would follow.

His usual custom was (as to Felix, and at Athens,) to cover the ground, and embrace the whole, from the cross to the crown, from the shame and humiliation to the judgment, from the sorrow to the rejoicing and reign in glory; and to dwell largely on "the day of his appearing"—of his coming again." Hence every chapter in his first letter to the church at Thessalonica terminates with a reference to Christ's second advent, and in the second letter the first and second chapters are almost exclusively devoted to it.

The men having entered upon the ministry of the Word, are to be pitied if they have "so learned Christ" that they can only preach him as the crucified. Paul says, "If we were reconciled by his death, how much more shall we be saved by his life;" i. e., by his living to appear the second time, not to make of himself a "sin-offering," as at the first advent, in his crucifixion, but coming in the second, unto our salvation.

My prayer to God is, that it may never be given to me to be pastor of any professedly christian church, so carnal, that I cannot, or ought not "to preach anything but Christ crucified." To say the least, it would not be very much to their commendation as—"beloved in the Lord;" and I cannot but think that the Lord regards all church "ministers," as "the very poorest sticks that could be selected upon which to engraft the sacerdotal functions." Why, one might just as well try to span a river, with only one abutment on the hither side, and none in the center, and none on the other side to support his bridge, as to think of getting men into glory and the kingdom, on the gospel plan, with one "coming of Christ." He had, after death, to live again, by rising from the dead, and he ascendeded on high, to act as a mediator between God and men, for the "middle structure;" and he must, according to promise, come again the second time unto salvation," i. e., his work of redeeming man does not reach salvation without or until you have his second coming. That gives to us the abutment on the other side, and spans the river of death, completes the bridge of eternal life, and as a result, men (resurrected out of death), will pass over, dry shod.

But, blessed be the Lord for his faithfulness, mercy and truth. There are a few names, even in Sardis, who do try to preach a full gospel, and who keep assiduously to the work, who do "meditate on these things," and "give themselves wholly to them;" and not only does their "profiting appear unto all men," but they behold most wondrous things out of God's holy law, and "nothing doth offend them." But the days are few, and the times full of evil; therefore, brethren in the field, keep to the work! "Lift up the standard" a little higher; fling it's broad folds, unsullied, more freely to the breeze! Let it float out on the breath of heaven, free as the winds, until in victory it shall wave, and most gloriously triumph! Make your hearts a little bolder, your arms a little stronger, your swords a little sharper, your aim a little more center! Press the enemy a little closer! Deal your blows a little harder! Strike more at the heart, and oftener! Blow your trumpets a little louder, and give a more distinctive blast! Drive the plowshare of God's eternal truth into the sub-soil of the fables of error and human traditions a great deal deeper! "There is work to do for Jesus!" We will rest, at home in glory in the kingdom when he comes!

THE TWO DARKNESSES.

"And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour And the sun was darkened, and the vail of the temple was rent in the midst." Luke 23: 44, 45.

Was this a real darkness? "Oh yes," say all believers in the Bible. Was it a natural darkness, one produced by natural causes? "Oh no," respond the same voices. Was this darkness supernatural? "Certainly; it must have been supernatural," say each and all.

But why believe this darkness supernatural, when there can be nothing supernatural in nature? Do you who believe that this darkness was in consequence of the crucifixion and death of Christ—do you, I say, not know that in affirming this you subject yourselves to criticism and the charge of not being "happy in the ability" to "find out the causes of things?"

You seem to forget, you simple minded ones, that you are living in a day when everything in heaven and earth can be accounted for, or explained on philosophical principles. You seem to be as much in the dark as those who witnessed that darkness eighteen hundred years ago, and they, too, who wrote the account we have of it. They did not know how to explain it, and so thought and stated that "the sun was darkened!"

Do you suppose if the Lord Jesus Christ had lived in this age and been crucified amid such darkness as it is said there was then, that it would have been said, "the sun was darkened?" or that the darkness was supernatural? Would not our "eminent scientists" have explained the phenomenon in a "very satisfactory manner to the most scientific mind?" Would not the darkness have been attributed to the dense clouds of smoke and vapor, caused by the burning, somewhere, of extensive forests, which were being felled and cleared up? and the evaporation of large bodies of water by the heat of the sun? And all this in the spring, during the month of April and the first part of May! Would not such an explanation of that darkness have been most reasonable and satisfactory?

But cannot our scientific men now explain or tell the cause of that darkness eighteen centuries ago? Why not? They have the fact that near Jerusalem, in the valley of Hinnom, there were kept fires continually burning, to consume the filth and refuse of the city; and that often there must have been large volumes of smoke arising from this burning mass of pitch and combustible matter which had to be used in the burning of the dead bodies of men and beasts which were there consumed? Might it not be reasonable to say, that this smoke, mingled with that of burning stubble and a dense vapor, coming up from the sea of Galilee and the valleys throughout Palestine, caused the darkness, which Luke and two other evangelists speak of? Certain it is, there must have been some natural cause for that darkness; for who can believe it was supernatural? "Scientific minds" cannot admit this. If they admit that the sun was unnaturally darkened eighteen hundred years ago, then it may have been so darkened ninety-five years ago; and this will not do; for then they would be strengthening the opinion of some, that the dark day of 1780 was a fulfillment of the prediction of Christ: Matt. 24th chapter; and that, consequently, his second coming was at hand. Scientists cannot do this.

But if we are to take science and scientists to explain either of these dark days, we must, to be reasonable, let them explain them both; for one was as seemingly unnatural or supernatural as the other. The one of three hours was no more unnatural and wonderful than the one of nine hours, not to speak of the dark night that followed, in which a full moon had no effect to render objects visible. The darkness of three hours over Jerusalem or throughout Palestine, was certainly no more remarkable than that of nearly a whole day and a whole night over three or four times the amount of territory in another part of the world. Both were emphatically the effect of a power unexplainable by man; and he who attempts to show his wisdom by trying to give the causes of this darkness, will be thought less wise by the wiser, and perhaps displease God.

FEAR.

A. RICHARDSON.

The Word says—"Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord, that walketh in his ways." "Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling." "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil." "Be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day."

Some people wonder why we are commanded to love the Lord and to fear him at the same time. We love the Lord because he first loved us, and provided a way for our salvation. We fear him because the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

We fear to displease our dear heavenly Father, who has been so good and merciful to us. As unworthy and disobedient as we may have lived in the past, still his eye was upon us. He loved us all the time; and oh, how we ought to love and serve him for his great love to us. How little we know as we ought to know, until we learn to love and serve the Lord. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; and yet how many seek the wisdom, honors, riches and pleasures of this world, at their loss of eternal life.

Lord, give me the wisdom and knowledge that comes from above—that teaches me the way to be saved. I will count all things as loss and dross here if I may but secure eternal life. I will lay aside every weight that would hinder me from running the race with patience. The Lord helping us, we can rise above the trials and perplexities of this life, and place our affections upon things above. We can look forward to that glorious day when Jesus will come and give reward to his saints.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be faithful. We believe that the Lord is soon coming; let us show our faith by our works. Let us not faint right here in sight of the promised land. Let us not be overcharged with the cares of this life, and that day come upon us unawares. Let us watch and pray, and keep on the lookout for the snares and temptations of the enemy. Satan does not care how near ready we are, if we are not quite ready. We must be all ready if we would go into the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Sugar Hill, N. H.

CLOSE QUESTIONS.

Your tempers. How are they? Do you become impatient under trial; fretful, when chided or crossed; angry, revengeful, when injured; vain, when flattered; proud, when prospered; complaining, when chastened; unbelieving, when neglected? Are you subject to discontent, to ambition, to selfishness? Are you worldly? Covetous of riches, of vain pomp and parade, of indulgences, of honor, of ease? Are you unfeeling, contemptuous of others, seeking your own, boasters, proud lovers of your own selves?

Beware! These are the sediments of the old nature. Nay, if they exist in you, in however small a degree, they are demonstrative that the old man of sin is not dead. It will be a sad mistake if you detect these evils within and yet close your eyes to them and continue to make professsions of holiness. These are not infirmities; they are indications of want of grace.—Banner of Holiness.

"REMEMBER THEM THAT ARE IN BONDS."

H. LAPHAM.

Why is it that prisoners are so seldom visited, thought of, or prayed for? Is it because they are so great sinners that we pass by on the other side? Not so did the good Samaritan. Not so would our blessed Master have us do. He died for such. Some that are as innocent of crime as we, have been unjustly imprisoned for months, in this christian land, yet no one was found to pay them a friendly visit, or to tell them of that Savior who caused Paul and Silas to sing his praises even in bonds.

May the Lord help us to do as we would wish to be done by. May none of us ever hear it said—"I was sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not." "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these, ye did it not to me."

You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good.

IMPORTANCE OF THE HOUR.

If we should see a number of people thrown into the water, where there was a strong current, and a few moments must carry them beyond all hope of rescue, the important question, to those beholding their perils, would be, What can be done to save them from perishing? All would say, that the best possible means which is available should be employed with the least possible hindrance or delay.

So it is with the church at the present time. The day of judgment is approaching, and uncounted millions of our race are sweeping down in the terrible currents of infidelity and unparalleled wickedness, to the gulf of eternal ruin. All is uproar and excitement; some crying Lo here, and others Lo there. The old foundations of society seem to be removed, and all appear to be seeking for some covert from the approaching storm,—some safe resting place in the unfolding future.

It is a time when every body and thing, belonging to Christ, should be employed, as life-boats and pilots, to save as many of the struggling, perishing millions as can be rescued through gospel means. Every hand, heart and tongue should be employed, to the best possible advantage, to bring as many as possible into the haven of safety. All our garments, bread and money, claimed by Jesus, should be wisely and immediately appropriated in accomplishing this infinitely important work.

Think, oh christian, that this is your last period of labor, your last opportunity to sacrifice for Christ, to warn your friends and the world of approaching danger. Consider the vast importance and untold interests crowded into this brief hour. The last accents of intercession in heaven are doubtless solemnly sounding in the most holy place. The last agonizing prayers of the church for friends and foes are ascending from the closet, the house of prayer, the dying mother and the friendless orphan. The true watchman sweeps his glass over a disturbed world, and sees a multitude of deadly foes arming for bloody conflict, impatient to pour forth a flood of pent-up revenge; fortifying old thrones and organizing new warring factions, while the earth and heavens groan, and manifest death-like throes, under the last combined forces of the curse.

Let every heart be stirred and every hand renew its hold on the instruments and means God has given his church, at this grand period of earthly experience, to finish this gospel work in a manly, noble, Christ-like manner. J. C.

QUERY.

In our article entitled "Human Destiny," published March 10th, it is said: "Some wicked men are also men of destiny, because God has work to be done in the execution of his purposes, which is not in harmony with the spirit of good men to do, and so he raises up or gives power and position to those whose heart and spirit would suffer them to do it.'"

Bro. A. J. H. writes us that he does not see the correctness of the proposition, and wishes additional explanation. He says; "I fail to see the justice of holding mankind responsible, and pronouncing the penalty of eternal death on a part of the human family, when this class are persons of destiny and have been doing a part of God's work." We designed to express the idea that there is a certain class of wicked men who are men of destiny in the sense that God throws around them circumstances, elevating them to positions of power, as kings and generals, and so controlling their acts as to accomplish certain purposes of the divine government; it may be to chastise his people for their sins, or humble some proud, haughty nation, or break down some persecuting people, and thus prevent them from oppressing his faithful servants.

There was a time when Israel had grieved the Lord with their sins, and the Lord raised up the king of Assyria to chastise his people for their sins. He says: "O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, and the staff in their hand is my indignation. I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets." Isa. 10: 5-6.

The Assyrian king was a very wicked man, who delighted in oppression and bloodshed, and had a very powerful army, which made him an appropriate instrument—a suitable "rod"—in God's hand to execute his "indignation" upon his rebellious people. The prophet proceeds to show that after the Lord had opened the way for the king to obtain these victories and secure vast treasures, he refused to give God the glory for giving him these spoils, and said—"My hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people; and as one gathereth eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth; and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped." But God rebuked him sharply for thinking that he had done this special work without special assistance, as men gather eggs, and chop and saw wood. He says to him—"Shall the ax boast itself against him that heweth therewith? or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it? as if the rod should shake itself against them that lift it up, or as if the staff should lift up itself, as if it were no wood."

God made that wicked nation like a rod in a father's hand, with which to chastise a disobedient son. God did not make them wicked and oppressive, to punish nations that they conquered; but they made themselves wicked by rebellion against God, and being in that condition, he could use them to do such a work.

Paul quotes Moses upon this question in his declaration to Pharaoh, and says: "Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth. Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth." Rom. 9: 17.

God purposed that in leading his people out of the land of bondage into an Eden home, and delivering them from cruel oppression, the movement should become typical of a more glorious deliverance of his people at the final end of their oppressions. Therefore there must be formidable opposition to their proposed departure, and certain foreshadowing plagues must fall upon those who manifested that resistance to their exodus. It was, therefore, necessary that the Egyptians have a hard-hearted, vacillating, cruel leader, to produce such a result.

Pharaoh was just such a man as would be inclined, as a leader, to produce such results; therefore, God overruled to have him "set up," that is, made king at that time, so as to accomplish his design. He illustrates this principle by which God puts men in certain positions, by the potter and clay, declaring that he had power to use a "lump" to make a vessel "unto honor," to do a righteous, holy work; or "unto dishonor," to do a bloody, oppressive work. That Paul did not intend to express the idea that God exercises resistless power over men to control and form their moral character as the potter controls the clay, but their political and social position and work, is evident from his explanation of this figure. He says: "But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honor, and some to dishonor. If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work." 2 Tim. 2: 20, 21.

He shows that a man can change his moral position from "dishonor," sin and rebellion, to "honor," righteousness and obedience, if he will "purge himself from these"—the filthiness of his wicked acts. He can then become an honorable vessel, "sanctified and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work"; that is, fitted by this cleansing, to be used in the pure and holy work of the gospel. The passive and resistless condition of the clay does not therefore represent men morally, but politically and socially. God did not make Judas wicked, irrespective of his volition; but as it was necessary to have among the disciples, to perfect the divine arrangement, one to carry the bag and to wickedly sell his Lord for thirty pieces of silver; and Jesus, knowing that Judas was covetous, a wicked sinner, chose him to become the predicted man of an awful destiny.

There is human destiny that relates to men in this world, and another quite distinct which relates to the future world. In the article under consideration, we were not discussing the destiny of the coming world, but that of the present. In both cases it is fixed, as to its moral character—contingent upon the voluntary spiritual condition of all involved. God designs no man for a holy position, to do a heavenly work, only on condition that he first voluntarily submit to him, to be cleansed from sin, sanctified—set apart—to do any holy work God may appoint him to do. So it is with the wicked. God never designs them to do a cruel, bloody work, only on condition that they first, of their own will, make themselves wicked by rebellion against him.

We cannot believe that God is the author of sin, directly or indirectly. Every sin is an act of transgression, which might have been left undone. God will punish men for doing that which they might have refrained from doing. He will also reward his people for doing that which they might have neglected to do.

Let us carefully consider, then, that we have the power in ourselves to fix the status of our own destiny in time, and also for eternity. God will give all sufficient grace to enable them to obtain a divine appointment to occupy some high and holy place here—to be entrusted with some sacred and responsible work in Christ's vineyard. But if we despise that grace, he will throw us into degrading and woeful positions, where we shall do the vile work of a vile race, and land in perdition.

Glory and immortality are placed within our reach; we may grasp them if we will, or we may slight the offer and be forced to drink from the cup of God's indignation. O the folly of choosing the bitter and refusing the sweet—of losing the kingdom of God and gaining everlasting death!

Sinner, hear the voice of wisdom, and without delay secure the greatest gift of God—eternal life. Christian, fulfill your present destiny; stand firmly at your appointed post; for by this your eternal destiny of peerage with angels and heavenly glory is secured. J. C.

A SPECIAL CASE OF NEED.

We have received several letters from Western New York, setting forth the condition of Bro. W. S. Woodbury; and, although we do not usually publish such requests, we think this case demands notice. He is a blind brother, and has a wife with one hand disabled, and is sick unto death with a cancer. He has a little home for his family, but it is under a mortgage of three hundred dollars, which must immediately be discharged, or his family will be left homeless. He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, who will give great interest. Let all cheerfully do their duty in this and all other cases of sickness and poverty. Send to W. S. GERMAN LIBERALS.

Recent German papers bring to us a report of a long speech delivered in the German Parliament, in defense of Prince Bismarck's policy against the Roman Church, by one of the most advanced Liberals of that body, and by a gentleman favorably known in this country as a historical scholar, Mr. Frederick Kapp. The speech, in harmony with Mr. Kapp's well-known direction of thought, is an elaborate historical argument, showing from the records of three centuries past that the effort of the Roman Church as been directed unceasingly toward obtaining political power over Germany. Mr. Kapp proves conclusively how skillfully the Roman curia has made use of its influence over the House of Austria, and over the smaller German kingdoms, to influence political affairs. He does not regard the Jesuits, at least in modern times, as a religious brotherhood, but rather as a political society. He does not consider the Romish Church, in its position toward Germany, as a religious body, but rather as an outside political power, seeking to control German politics. The great modern struggle on German soil, between Romish bigotry and free thought he considers to have been the war of Austria with Prussia, and that the great defeat of the Romish priestcraft was at Koniggratz. This struggle of the Catholic powers of Europe he believes was begun again in the war of Napoleon with Germany, and that it was the Catholic Church as a political power which was especially prostrated at Sedan and Metz.

It is well known that Mr. Kapp, and most of the Radical leaders of the German Parliament are free-thinking scholars, with no more sympathy for one form of religion than another per se. All that they aim at is the triumph of liberal political principles. They oppose the Jesuits because they are in the interest of arbitrary power. They oppose the Roman Curia, because it is a political despotism. They object to State grants to the Catholic Church, because that church is in hostility to a free and united Germany. They hold that the creed of the consistent Catholic is that the Pope is infallible and has authority even over the political relations of the citizen. They, in consequence, regard the whole Romish Church as opposed to the progress of free thought and free institutions. Their aim is entirely to separate the German Empire from any relation to the Roman priesthood. They would cut off grants to the clergy and all public support from the schools, leaving them entirely secular, and the Church, as a private sectarian body, to take care of itself.

In these great objects they have the sympathy of the religious and Protestant population of Germany, who for centuries have been struggling with the Roman power. They have, besides, the good will of all that large and indifferent class who do not care for religious beliefs, but who aim at uniting Germany under one great combined and parliamentary Government. They are in entire harmony with Bismarck, who cares not for creed or church, but whose sole and absorbing object is to weld Germany into one united whole, with Prussia at its head.

Germany is in a very different condition from this country. The ashes of old fires smolder under its whole soil. The German race itself is just passing through a vast historical revolution. Societies, which in ordinary times might be purely religious, become now political. When war is threatening on every hand, from foreign powers, the strong hand may be necessary at home to destroy even the germs of political opposition. Drastic measures may be indispensable now in Germany. And when the pietist and the free thinker, the Republican and the Imperialist, Von Bismarck and the Radicals, all agree in one policy, there is some ground for assuming that this is the only safe and reasonable policy under the circumstances.—N. Y. Times.

The Apprehended Franco-Russian Alliance.—The San Francisco Daily Chronicle says; "Since the beginning of the new year statesmen and politicians have viewed with undisguised alarm the tremendous military preparations of the leading European Powers. They have seen France devoting all her available resources to the single purpose of creating an immense army, equipped and furnished with all the most efficient implements of modern warfare. Such preparations, they argue, cannot be made for merely defensive purposes, inasmuch as it is certain that in the present position of European affairs France is perfecty safe from aggression unless she chooses to provoke it.

"The immense warlike preparations of Germany are made, it is said, in anticipation of a deep-laid plan on the part of the Ultramontanes to foment a great religious war. The programme of this war is declared to be to bring about a difficulty between Russia and Germany as a preliminary to a Franco-Russian Alliance. In case of the success of such a scheme, Germany and Italy would be arrayed against Erance and Russia. What part, if any, Austria would take in the struggle can scarcely be a matter of doubt.—Signs of Our Times.

REPORT
OF THE
MASS. SECOND ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

This Conference held its annual session for 1875 with the church in Chelsea, commencing Wednesday, April 7th, and continuing five days. This meeting was of more than ordinary interest, being largely attended by brethren and sisters out of the State as well as by those within the bounds of the Conference. There was much harmony, and few questions discussed which tended to lessen the spirit of devotion, that seemed to prevail in all hearts present.

Wednesday, April 7th. The Conference was called to order at 9.30 by the President, Bro. S. G. Mathewson. Prayer by Bro. J. Couch.

The Report of the last Conference was read by the Secretary, C. E. Barnes.

On motion, a committee on credentials was appointed by the Chair, consisting of C. Goodrich, G. L. Teeple, W. G. Ruggles. The following preachers and delegates were reported by the committee:—

Preachers—G. L. Teeple, C. E. Barnes, S. S. Brewer, J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, J. Hemenway, L. Boutell, R. D. Grant, C. Goodrich, B. Finney, J. S. White, T. M. Preble, I. I. Leslie, H. H. Tucker, B. Woodside, S. G. Lowe, A. M. Higgins, S. S Mooney, H. F. Carpenter, E. A. Stockman, E. Burnham, G. A. Streeter, M. R. Phetteplace, H. Munger, A. W. Sibley, A. Ross, L. T. Cunningham, J. W. Britton, Z. Boody, W. C. Stewart, B. Spaulding, C. W. Rathburn, W. H. Crockett, J. H. Clothey, M. Batchelor.

Letters were read from Brn. H. Davis, P. S. Butler, E. Morrill.

Delegates—C. P. Whitten, Lowell; H. Mann, Athol; E. Gordon, Chelsea; E. G. Higgins, Worcester; B. Irish, New Bedford; E. G. Kingsbury, Brimfield; P. N. White, Jr., New Bedford; A. M. Barnes, Clinton; E. E. Church, New Bedford; H. W. Balcom, Salem; E. A. Eggleston, Westfield; T. S. Pepper, Salem; D. Woodside, East Boston; J. N. Shattuck, Natick; A. Noble, Westfield; M. Batchelor, Mattapoisett.

A committee to arrange for business was appointed by the Chair, consisting of J. Couch, J. Hemenway, S. S. Brewer. This committee reported the following business:

1. To hear the report of the Treasurer of the Conference.
2. To elect officers for the ensuing year.
3. To hear report of Delegates.
4. To transact all miscellaneous business that may come before the Conference.

The Report of the Treasurer being called for, it was presented:

C. Goodrich in Acct. with the Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference, from April 1, 1874, to April 1, 1875.

The report of the Treasurer was accepted.

On motion, a committee of three was appointed by the Chair, to nominate officers for the ensuing year. This committee consisted of S. S. Brewer, G. L. Teeple, I. I. Leslie. The committee reported the following names:—

President, ... S. G. Mathewson.
Vice President, . . . J. Hemenway.
Secretary, ... C. E. Barnes.
Treasurer, ... C. Goodrich.

Ministerial Committee: J. Couch, J. S. White, C. Goodrich, T. M. Preble, J. Hemenway.

Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee: B. Young, L. Boutell, C. E. Barnes, I. I. Leslie.

These were duly elected as Officers of the Conference for the ensuing year. C. E. Barnes declining to serve longer as Secretary of the Conference, I. I. Leslie was chosen Secretary. Adjourned to 2 P. M.

Afternoon Session. The Ministerial Committee for the last year being called upon to report, presented the following REPORT.

The Ministerial Committee beg leave to submit their report for the last Conference year.

The following brethren have been set apart to the work of the ministry, by the laying on of hands and prayer: J. H. Clothey, W. H. Crockett, H. H. Tucker, R. D. Grant.

No charges have been preferred against any ministerial member of this Conference. We have no knowledge of any strife among our fellow-laborers within the bounds of the Conference. We earnestly pray that, as members of this christian body, we may enjoy all that sacred fellowship and holy communion which the gospel requires among the faithful in Christ. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ministerial Committee: J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, T. M. Preble, J. S. White, M. Batchelor.

The Report of the Ministerial Committee was accepted. The Chairman of the Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee then read the Report of that committee for the last year. The following statements are taken from the Report:

Report of the Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee. At the Annual Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Conference, held in Worcester, in April, 1874, it was voted that this Conference put a Tent into the mission field at once. A committee was chosen to take charge of the work, and subscriptions and pledges were taken for the purchase of a Tent and sending it into the field. This committee acted immediately, but it was not until the first of July that the Tent could be completed and ready for service, with laborers to go with it.

The Tent was kept in the field until late in Oct. It was pitched in six different places during the summer and autumn, and with the blessing of God attending the preaching and meetings in each place. It is with gratitude to God that we can report that a goodly number found the Lord under the Tent, and the evidences of his soon coming were heard by many for the first time. God has truly blessed this Tent as a means of salvation to many who have been prejudiced against us as a people; and we have great reason for thankfulness for what has been done by this instrumentality.

The Tent is now stored and ready for use the coming season; and it is hoped that there will be means with which to send it out into new fields with good and faithful laborers. All of which is submitted to the Conference.

L. Boutell.
J. Hemenway.
B. Young.
B. Woodside.

The Report was accepted.

It was moved that the Constitution of this Conference be revised, and that a committee of five be chosen to take this subject into consideration and report a revision of each article needing alteration or amendment.

The following brethren were appointed by the Chair a committee to revise the Constitution: J. Couch, J. Hemenway, J. S. White, T. M. Preble, C. E. Barnes.

The following were presented to the Conference for membership: E. Gordon, M. M. Young, H. H. Tucker, R. D. Grant, S. Julia Buswell, Abigail M. Barnes. Voted to receive them as members of this Conference.

The following motion was then offered: Moved, that as Brn. W. C. Thurman and C. H. Leverton have ceased to co-operate with us, and do not regard this body as one to which they should be amenable, that they, therefore, be suspended; and the Secretary of this Conference notify them of the same.

Moved, that as to-morrow is the State Fast, the day be spent by us in devotional exercises, and all business be adjourned until Friday the 9th of April. Carried.

Adjourned business meeting to Friday, 9 A. M.

During to-day, while the committees were out deliberating, reports were made by Preachers and Delegates from the churches. Many of these reports were most cheering, and showed that both ministers and churches throughout the Conference are awake to the importance of faithful labor in the cause of the soon coming King. In a number of localities there have been genuine conversions during the past year, and a revival of the churches to a better condition with regard to union in the great work of preparation to meet the Lord. While it was to be lamented that some had been led aside into doctrines and practices contrary to the Word of God, there was also cause for thanksgiving that so few of our churches had been disturbed by those whose work alone it seems to be to divide and draw away the faithful servants of Christ from their true work, the salvation of men.

Letters from a number of churches and absent members were received, sending greeting, and praying for the blessing of God upon the Conference and meeting. These would appear in this report if there were space for their publication.

Thursday, April 8. A full house all day. Prayer and conference meeting in the morning and at 6 P. M. Preaching by Elds. E. A. Stockman, S. G. Mathewson, H. F. Carpenter. The Spirit rested upon both preachers and hearers.

Friday, 9 A. M. Meeting called to order by the Chair. Prayer by Bro. J. Hemenway. The committee appointed to revise the Constitution reported. The report was accepted. Voted to consider and adopt each article separately.

Upon the reading of Art. 1, it was moved as an additional amendment, that the word "Second" be inserted, so that the article read—Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference. Adopted.

The remaining Articles as amended and revised were, after some discussion, severally adopted. The following were presented as By-Laws for the Conference:—

Art. 1. All preachers, now members of this Conference, shall receive from the Ministerial Committee a Certificate of Ordination or License.

Art. 2. The Ministerial Committee are authorized to give Certificates of License to such as apply; the applicants having suitable recommendations from the churches where they may have labored.

Art. 3. The churches of this Conference are requested not to recognize as preachers those who refuse to apply for ordination or license.

Adjourned business meeting until to-morrow, 9 A. M. Afternoon, sermon by Eld. A. Ross. Evening, Eld. J. Hemenway.

Saturday, April 10. Conference called to order by the Chair at 9 A. M. Prayer by Eld. Stockman. After further debate in regard to the By-Laws proposed yesterday, they were adopted.

It was now moved that this Conference be divided into four districts, according to Art. 12 of the Constitution; and a committee be now chosen to do this. Carried. The following were the committee to district the Conference: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, J. Couch, M. Batchelor.

Moved, that we proceed to choose a Quarterly Conference Committee of four, one from each Conference District, according to Art. 5 of the Constitution. Agreed to. The following brethren were chosen: J. Hemenway, S. G. Mathewson, J. Couch, M. Batchelor.

Moved, that all members of this Conference who have not now Certificates of Membership, be requested to apply for the same to the President and Secretary of the Conference Carried.

Moved, that the Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee be instructed to hold a Tent Meeting in Greenwich, Mass., during the coming summer; and request as many of our preachers, brethren and sisters, as can attend, to come with tents, etc., prepared to work in that place for the Lord. Carried.

Adjourned business meetings of the Conference sine die.

Afternoon. Preaching by Eld. Geo. A. Streeter; evening, by Eld. J. Hemenway.

Sunday, April 10. Through the day today there has been a large attendance, the house being crowded. The Social meetings were indeed feasts to all the dear saints of God present. Many cheering testimonies were given by the "scattered ones," who hope soon to be united to separate no more. Preaching by Elds. Stockman and Hemenway.

Thus closed one of the best State Conferences held by us for many years. The church in Chelsea have the thanks of the Conference and all who attended this meeting for the generous provisions made by them for the comfort of their brethren and sisters from abroad. I. I. Leslie, Sec.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MISSION WORK.

To the A. A. Mission Board, Greeting.

As it is some time since I have written to the Board, I thought I would try to write once more, so as to let the dear ones know that I am still in the field, working for the Lord. I closed a protracted meeting, in company with Bro. Moss, at Rock Creek, Mitchel Co., where we organized a church. Bro. Wm. E. Moss was called to take the pastoral care of it. We had a sweet time, though opposition was strong. One M. E., who had not sinned for four years, left the church and went home, for fear that he would sin if he stayed to hear an Adventist preach; but the Spirit of Jesus was with us, and it was called the best meeting that was ever held in that house. To the Lord be all the glory!

I have lately been to Osborn Co., which is a new field, holding meetings, where great good has been done. I cut the ice, March 5th, and baptized.

On the 6th of March I started for Wilson station, on the K. P. R. R., to get the two barrels sent me by Bro. Adams. I had to drive my ponies two days to get there, and I had to camp out on the wild prairie, with only my ponies for company. I started on again in the morning, and arrived at Bro. Conklin's, where I left some of the things. I then returned to Coon Creek in Osborn Co., to fill my appointment, and to get my mail which had been forwarded to me. I received a money order from Bro. Adams, for the poor. I sent it by Bro. Conklin, to Cawker City; but there was no money in the office, and he traded it for groceries, which I have already given a part of to poor families; and I expect to load up my wagon in the morning, and go twenty miles to see another of the household of faith, and distribute the remainder.

The Lord has blessed my labors the past winter, and I have enjoyed much of the sweet peace of Jesus in my heart.

Still the work is going on in Northwestern Kansas. The field is large, and no money in it; and what is done here for the Lord must be by help of or from the dear brethren and sisters of the East.

I do believe this year will show us that the great day of God is close at hand. I remain your brother in the mission work.

TOO NEAR THE WORLD.

Are not many professing christians living very near to the world? It does seem so, from the signs of the times. "Be not conformed to this world," says St. Paul. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world," says St. John; and he goes on: "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." From this it is manifest that a professing christian who lives near to the world cannot do the will of God, and therefore cannot abide forever, in the sense of this passage.

It is truly sad to think how near we come to the world in great numbers of our doings. In amusements there are thousands in all the christian churches who live as the world does. They go to operas, and circuses, and theatres, and to dancing parties; and no one can tell which is the worldling, or which is the christian in such places. In their social entertainments, a great many professedly christian people are just like the people of the world. If one should step out of the house where the church member gives his party, and into the place where the worldly man gives his, what difference could he see? Very little, if any at all.

Wine-drinking, dancing, jewels and gold, overloaded tables, costing a great deal of money that should be better used in feeding the hungry and clothing the naked, and all the accompaniments of a gay and frivolous worldly scene, would he behold.

In the plans used to raise money for benevolent purposes, christian people come very near to the world; indeed, they sometimes follow its example fully. We often hear of juvenile operas; and at fairs, lotteries, and other arrangements for a genteel work of gambling are indulged in, by which money is to be realized for God's work. Quaint and ridiculous costumes, and manners to match, are often assumed by professedly christian young men and women, while the elder members look on with approving smiles and words, glad to hear that a vast amount of money has been taken in by these silly shows; but never thinking, alas! of the number of souls taken in the meshes of sin in the midst of such scenes, or of the lowering of the standard of purity and faith in those who are trained to regard these methods as legitimate in helping forward christian work.—Golden Censer.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. H. Evans.

Dear Brn.:—I feel it duty to write a few lines to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are looking for the speedy coming of our Lord. We have fallen among the last day perils, and we need to be on our watch every hour. Satan will try to make us go too fast or too slow, by making us believe we must take an advance step, or by keeping us back from duty.

"He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved." The question is, How shall we be baptized? I want to confess that I have been deceived on this subject. After having been convinced, by the Spirit, as I thought, that trine immersion was wrong, then finding it was practiced in the past, I thought it was right; and being willing to accept of anything that was right, I went forward, thinking that the early fathers must have been correct. After reading Bro. Sheldon's article on "Trine Baptism," showing that the trinity doctrine was brought along with it, I felt that I could not believe in the trinity.

There is one God, and one mediator between God and man. I do not believe it takes three to make one; so I cannot believe in trine baptism, because that was to show the trinity. I do not know why good men in the past were not just as liable to believe some things that were wrong, as now. They believed in the baptism of infants, which the Bible does not teach. If they had some errors, might there not be more? After I was baptized I felt badly to think that the baptism I had administered was vain. Then again, I thought, who called me to preach? and why did he not make known the right way? I gave myself to him, and received a baptism of the Holy Spirit, and felt the same power when I was called to preach the gospel. I have baptized many, and God set his seal to it. I dare not deny it; but I have not seen anything convincing when people have been baptized by trine immersion. Let others take warning by these lines, and not step into darkness, for it seems to be darkness rather than light.

Now, dear brethren, you that have believed this error with me, if you can see that it is wrong, acknowledge the error, and we will let the Bible be our only guide. Many honestly believe it, and are trying to live it, but when we make it the door into the church, we have to throw away all of our previous christian experience, which we think it very dangerous to do.

Keep a good spirit, brethren, and if others go a little wrong, be careful that you do not go too far on the other side. And may God bless and save his people from anything that is wrong, and guide us into all truth, is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

From Bro. William D. Tucker.

Dear friends of Jesus:—I can truly say I love the Lord with all my heart, and I am striving to do that which will please him and be for his glory and honor. I am striving to do some good in his vineyard. I do not rest in any works of mine, but I do trust in Jesus Christ, my Savior, for he is "the way, the truth, and the life." Praise his holy name! It was he who shed his precious blood on Calvary to wash my guilt away. O how much I ought to thank and praise him for his loving-kindness and tender mercies!

Dear friends, he has cleansed me through his precious blood, and forgiven all my sins; and to-day I stand free in Christ Jesus, and I am looking forward with joyful anticipation when Christ shall complete his glorious plan of redemption at his coming and kingdom.

He has promised to raise from the dead those loved ones that lie sleeping. Death is to me a terrible enemy. I cannot look upon it as a friend, or "the gate to endless joy." It is "the last enemy, and is to be destroyed at the coming of Christ.

Signs are thickening fast about us, showing that the day of God is approaching, and the realization of the christian's hope. Never before was there a time when people delighted so much in the vanities of the world as at the present day. The professed followers of Christ at the present day are becoming "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." It makes my heart ache when I see people who profess to love the Lord destitute of that love. It is only "through patient continuance in well doing" that we shall ever enter into the kingdom. The way to life is a way of holiness. These words of the apostle—"Be ye holy, for I am holy," and "without holiness no man shall see the Lord," are constantly ringing in my ears from the Word of God, exhorting me to live a holy, consistent, christian life before the Lord and the world. It seems to me that this is the last warning call from God to prepare a people for the coming of Christ. By his divine help I am striving to be just as the Lord would have me—"without spot and blameless." Pray for me, dear friends of Jesus.

Dear sinner, I ask you to come to Jesus, now, before the door of mercy is forever closed. Jesus is soon coming. Make your peace with him, that you may dwell with him in his blessed, eternal kingdom.

Haydenville, Mass.

From Bro. C. Pike.

Dear Brn.:—Thinking that you would be glad to know how the work of the Lord is prospering in Massena, I would say: Our congregation is increasing in numbers and interest; sinners are feeling the force of our Savior's command, "Be ye also ready." "Last Sunday we baptized three, who gave good evidence of their acceptance in Christ. Five united with the church. We remain another year with this dear flock, which is our fourth year among them.

Pray for me, dear brethren, that the Lord may help me in the future as he has in the past. I never felt more given up to Christ and his work than now. It seems to me that I never needed his divine help as much as now. I used to think when I first commenced preaching the gospel, that this trembling, and weak feeling which would come over me just before I arose to deliver God's message would in time wear away; but, on the contrary, it increases; and I know by this what Paul meant when he said, "When I am weak then am I strong." I believe we are almost through, and I do feel to thank the Lord for the evidences of his soon coming. Oh what a glorious prospect is before us! We are almost ready to bid farewell to mortality, and then Jesus himself will introduce us into the city of the great King.

I have never seen this church in so good a condition as now. The brethren seem to be taking deep root. They appreciate their new chapel. There is no jarring note of discord among us; we may be called a harmonious people. It is truly cheering to see christians dwell together in love, and, having one motive, strengthen each other by their prayers and exhortations. It appears to be the desire of all to be ready to meet Jesus when he comes.

We are about building a parsonage on the lot by the church.

Massena, N. Y.

From Bro. Wm. Sheldon.

Dear Brn.:—During the past winter I have held meetings in several localities with cheering results. Have seen sinners coming to Christ, and error-beclouded saints struggling into the light of the truth. As the summer is nearing, let us put forth vigorous efforts to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom in new fields. We must rise above hindrances of every kind, and enter the work unitedly. While some stop to speculate, let us work for God.

Brodhead, Wis.

A VINDICATTION OF A BIBLE PHENOMENON.

In the New Testament account of the crucifixion of Christ, the earth is spoken of as—in consequence of that awful act—incurring the malediction of God, and being enveloped by an eclipse of the sun in total darkness for the period of two hours. The truth of this statement is strenuously disputed by Gibbon, the skeptic author of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. At the close of his memorable fifteenth chapter, every sentence of which contains a covert thrust and sneer at the authority of the Bible, he says that Pliny, the great Roman astronomer, lived at the period of the crucifixion; that he, (Pliny) recorded in his journal and diary the most unimportant atmospherical phenomena that he witnessed in the heavens, but that he entirely, strange to say, omitted to notice this wonderful eclipse that marked the bloody termination of the earthly pilgrimage of the Son of God. Nothing in Gibbon is calculated to make a worse impression upon minds that are not already firmly convinced of the truth of the Scriptures.

It is, therefore, most important that the sneer of Gibbon, resting upon the silence of Pliny, should be refuted, and a distinguished scholar, Herr Kalb, has devoted himself to the task with, it is said—for we have not perused his work—the most complete success.

He has calculated the Jewish calendar to A. D. 31, and the result of his researches confirms the fact recorded by the Evangelist of the wonderful physical events that accompanied the crucifixion. His astronomical calculations also show that on the 6th of April, A. D. 31, there was a total eclipse of the sun, accompanied, in all probability, by the earthquake spoken of in St. Matthew.

This mode of reckoning is verified by another calculation made by calculating backward from the great total eclipse of April, 1818, which also gives April 6 as the date of the new moon, A. D. 31. As the vernal equinox of the year fell on March 25, and the Jews held their Feast of the Passover on the following new moon, it is clear April 6 was identified with Nisan 14 of the Jewish Calendar, which, moreover, was on Friday, the day of preparation for the Sabbath, and this agrees with the Hebrew Talmud, so that astronomy, archæology, traditional and Biblical history seem to unite in fixing the date of the crucifixion at April 6, A. D. 31.—Ex.

McClarey. Died, by taking his own life by hanging, in Compton, P. Q., Dec. 16th, 1874, Harley McClarey, aged 56.

Bro. McClarey was well known to many of the readers of the Crisis, and was esteemed as an honest christian man. Peculiar, in some respects, he seemed to some, but he loved the truth and conscienciously devoted himself to promote its interests. He had some tendencies to insanity, and for the last few months suffered much from nervous disease, which wasted his energies and led him into a despairing state of mind. At times he would be better and would attend meetings, and, as had always been his practice, bear testimony for Jesus; although it was marked by a sad and self-depreciating feeling. On the day of his death he was much worse, and although he attempted to work he could not. He went to the barn in the afternoon, where he was found by the boys on their return from school, hanging from a beam, and life extinct. A coroner's jury decided that he was insane at the time, and not responsible for his act. We endeavored to comfort the friends from Rom. 8: 22, 23. May God's blessing richly rest upon the wife and children.

L. C. McKinstry.

Merrill. In Compton, P. Q., of dropsy of the heart, Timothy Merrill, aged 69 years.

Only a few months before his death he was present at one of our meetings, and bore a humble testimony for Jesus, perhaps his last. He had loved the truths of the Bible for years, although not always professing to enjoy as much as at some times. Yet he left a good evidence that all was well. A brother who visited and prayed with him, in his last sickness, and who had known him for years, said to us, "No doubt he sleeps in Jesus." Sermon by the writer, from Job 14: 14, "If a man die, shall he live again."

Wisawell. In Clarksville, N. H., March 6th, 1875, Lucy M. Wisawell, wife of Norman Wisawell, aged 35 years.

She was stricken down suddenly, after a few hours sickness. She loved the doctrine of the advent of Christ and the resurrection, and we trust she will come forth in the resurrection morning to die no more. Sermon by M. McKinstry, from Rev. 21: 4. L. C. McKinstry.

Wilcomb. In Weirs Bridge, Feb. 17th, 1875, James Wilcomb, aged 79 years.

After many years patient waiting for the Savior's appearing, our aged father has fallen asleep, with the blessed assurance that a most glorious awakening will be his on the resurrection morn. His life has been a long example of christian patience and fortitude; his only regret was that he must sleep in the grave for a season ere the appearing of the Lord. W.

Nichols. In Albany, N. Y., March 29th, 1875, our beloved brother, Wm. Nichols.

He had suffered from a distressing malady for a long time, and longed to be at rest. He was a burden bearer, and was a modest, unassuming christian, remarkably genial, and his hospitality was ungrudgingly bestowed. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. Rufus Wendell.

Bean. In Haverhill, Mass., after a short illness of fever and pneumonia, Daniel R., son of Bro. Rufus P. Bean, of West Deerfield, N. H., aged 32 years.

Bro. B. was converted, baptized, and united with the Freewill Baptist Church when but a youth. By industry and frugality he obtained a competency and means which gave him a position in the world that very few young men of his age ever attain. By his prepossessing manner he won the favor and admiration of the society in which he moved, and formed a large circle of acquaintances, among whom were many warm hearted and strongly attached friends.

He was buried from the residence of his father, where parents and seven brothers and sisters mourn for him.

We have laid our son and brother down to rest;
We hope and trust he is numbered with the blest.
Sleep, Daniel, sleep, life's industry and toil is done,
Rest, sweetly rest, until the resurrection morn.

May God bless and sanctify this affliction to the bereaved family, and the large circle of mourning friends, to their eternal good. Funeral service conducted by the writer and Eld. Lothrop, Free Baptist. Enoch Morrill.

Perkins. In Kennebunkport, Me., Feb. 13th, 1875, John B. Perkins, aged 32 years.

He was a firm believer in the Advent faith up to the last hour. His last words were—"Mother, have no fear; it is well." We sincerely believe he rests in peace. It was hard to part with friends, yet, amid all our affliction we can say, It is well. He leaves one lovely child, and we would ask the prayers of our brethren and sisters in this trying hour. In the short space of eleven months we have laid away three lovely children; yet how sweet and comforting these blessed lines:

"They shall sleep, but not forever;
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

Bacon. In Bingham, Pa., March 16th, 1875, Mrs. Naomi Bacon, aged 68 years.

Sister Bacon died of cancer, and her sufferings were great, but she bore them with christian fortitude. She said, "not my will, but thine, be done." She has been engaged in the service of the Lord for many years. She cherished a lively hope, and exhibited her faith by a well ordered life and a godly conversation. See leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn. May God sanctify this dispensation of his providence to their salvation. Sermon by the writer, from St. John 11: 25. A. H. Briggs.

Henegar. In Chattanooga, Penn., April 8th, 1875, of consumption, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Henegar, aged 40 years.

Sister H. embraced the views of our people about a year ago, having been brought to the light by Eld. J. A. Cargile, who visited her about that time. Prior to Bro. Cargile's visit she had been regardless of the great salvation. The writer visited her the day before her death, and she said she had confessed all her sins to Jesus, and had repented of them, and that she believed he pardoned her. She leaves a husband and two little girls. God bless them. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. J. A. Cargile, assisted by the writer.

A. M. B. Graham.

Clark. At Kittery Point, Me., March 17th, 1875, Abbot Lester, infant son of Capt. Melvin J. and Etta L. Clark, aged 3 months and 7 days.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Madrid, April 16. It is reported that the Carlists have seized a number of women and children in the province of Soria, and threatened to shoot them unless ransomed.

Paris, April 16. A party of three persons ascended in the balloon Zenith to-day for the purpose of making scientific observations. The balloon attained the extraordinary height of 8000 metres, over 26,000 feet. Two of the aeronauts were suffocatated to death, and when the balloon reached the ground the third was almost insensible and has since been so ill that his recovery is doubtful.

London, April 21. The Daily News correspondent at St. Petersburg reports that a plot was discovered in Khiva for the massacre of all Russians in the Khanate.

The Russian papers accuse the Emir of Afghanistan of complicity. It is thought that military operations are already ordered by Russia.

Paris, April 12. L'Union says the Pope has made representations through the Patriarch of Venice to the Emperor of Austria that the position of the church is becoming more and more intolerable, and that if the unreasonable demands of Prussia are not resisted by the Catholic powers, the latter will lose all their influence and become subject to the German Government, which is endeavoring to bring the whole German nationality under one sceptre. The Emperor, replying to this through the Austrian Embassador at Rome, deplores the struggle between the Church and State and advises prudence.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, March 15th, and Shanghae, 17th. Particulars have been received of the fight in Formosa between the savages and Chinese troops. Two Chinese officers ventured, in January last, to enter the region of Batan, inhabited wholly by the Aborigines, and were immediately killed. On the 13th of February two hundred troops were sent to negotiate. They burned one village and put the inhabitants to death, including old men and children. On their return they were surrounded and routed, with a loss of ninety killed, among whom was the China leader. The loss of the savages is estimated at thirty. The affair causes much excitement in China, and there are rumors that large forces are to be dispatched to the scene.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Springfield, Mass., April 12. A boiler explosion in the gingham mills at South Adams, this morning, killed William Whittle and Andrew McKenna, fatally injured Richard Ryan and Patsy Kelley was badly hurt.

The publication of the bill of expenses occasioned by the Sumner obsequies has furnished occasion for some comment. The cost to Massachusetts for the State services was nearly$ 30,000. Of this amount, $1,000 was tendered to Mr. Curtis for his eulogy before the Governor and Legislature, and declined. Another $1,000 was paid to a lucky civil engineer of this city for editing the volume in which the exercises were printed. Plenty of civil engineers hereabouts, and other people, too, who would be glad to do that sort of editing for that sort of price. Prof. Churchill got $200 for reading Whittier's poem, and Miss Kellogg and Miss Phillips $1,000 for singing. The poor chaplain, for his prayer, seems to have got nothing. Altogether this is what the tax-payers have a right to call "steep." But then, it cost $6,000 to board King Kalakaua and party at the Windsor Hotel, New York, for a week, and the expense of the burial of the Duke of Wellington was, if we remember right, £12,000.—Congregationalist.

While our thermometers were recording all the way from ten to forty degrees below zero, the opposite extreme was experienced in Australia, the weather in the vicinity of Victoria having been hotter than for a dozen years. The mercury reached 111 degrees in the shade and 150 degrees in the sun in January. The heat was so great that the country was burned over for hundreds of miles, destroying grass, fences, and in many cases buildings. One man lost a thousand sheep from this cause.

Supposed Outrage by the Miners.—A few days ago a car laden with iron was started down the track to meet a passenger train coming the other way with some fifty passengers on board, but the telegraph operator saw it and telegraphed just in season to catch the passenger car, which was switched off. The Reading road now sends pilot engines ahead of all trains, and several piles of lumber and iron rails have been removed from the tracks. No one can ever be found who knows the culprits.

In Brief.

— The mill agents at Lowell and Lawrence are firm in refusing to accede to the demands of the discontented mill hands.

— Sixty-five lives and six vessels engaged in the Gloucester fisheries have been lost thus far this year.

— The steamship Ocean has been sunk at Shanghae by collision. Many lives were lost.

— The first official communication of Cardinal McCloskey is to call for more money from the faithful.

— Two men were killed and one fatally injured by a boiler explosion in a mill at South Adams yesterday.

Notices

Notice.—Alton Bay.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are notified to meet on the camp-ground Tuesday, May 4th. J. Couch, President.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. Couch.

Notice.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. Downing, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. Swain, for Com.

Tent Meeting and Conference.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Oakville, Conn., Wednesday, May 12th, and remain over Sunday, May 16th.

We go to this new field by invitation of Bro. and Sr. Mills, the only family in the place of like precious faith, and who will accommodate as far as possible. Our brethren, however, had better take along blankets, and some of us can sleep under the tent, if necessary. It is proposed that all business pertaining to the Conn. A. C. Conference be disposed of Thursday, May 13th, and we hope the brethren will be prompt at the business session, that the remainder of the time be devoted to sounding the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. Pray that the Holy Spirit may attend in power.

Oakville lies three miles west of Waterbury, on Watertown Branch R. R. By present R. R. Time Table, trains leave Waterbury for Oakville at 11.50 A. M. and 6.45 P. M. O. D. Woodruff.

Protracted Meeting.—There will be a Protracted Meeting in Worcester, commencing Wednesday evening, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Meetings afternoons and evenings. Bro. E. A. Stockman will be in attendance to preach the gospel. S. G. Mathewson.

Notice.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Monday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 5th.

Wm. H. Mitchell, for the Com.

Notice.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 8th of April (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary. Let there be a large attendance, as there is business of unusual importance to come before the Conference.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. Smith, Chairman.
R. F. Clark, Secretary.

Tent Meetings.—The Iowa Advent Christian Mission Tent will be pitched (the Lord willing) in Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Thursday, May 27th, to continue over Sunday, June 6th, and longer if duty demands. Let there be a general rally by the brethren and sisters from the surrounding country to this meeting. Let us come to labor and pray for the promulgation of the truth and the salvation of sinners. As this will be the first tent meeting of the season, let us endeavor to strike the right key-note. J. Ridley.
P. W. Hough.

Notice.—We expect to start for New England, if the Lord will, about the 15th of May. We shall stop at Chicago about thirty days. We shall be at liberty to engage for meetings after the above date, as far as possible, at any place east of the Missouri River. Our address will be Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas, until May 15th, after which, Chicago, Ill., until further notice.

R. F. & M. J. Clark.

Notice.—There will be a general meeting of all Adventists who are looking for speedy redemption, and are searching the prophetic Scriptures and taking heed thereto, to be held at Rochester, N. Y., commencing Saturday evening, May 1st, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters in Christ, let us all attend this meeting with the whole armor on. Business of importance to come before us.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Tent Meeting and Conference.—It is proposed to have a Tent Meeting in connection with the Conn. Conference. The Conference business to be promptly disposed of the first day of the meeting, and followed by a Tent Meeting of days, as the Lord may direct.

If any of the churches in Conn., or brethren in the highways and hedges isolated from churches, chapels, or religious meetings of any kind, would like to have the "Conn. Mission Tent" pitched in their vicinity about the middle or twentieth of May, please correspond promptly, giving particulars, with O. D. Woodruff, Secretary, Southington, Conn.

Notice.—The 5th day of May is appointed to work on the camp-ground at Coventry Centre, R. I. We hope that quite a number will volunteer to work; but those who come with teams, as last year, ought to come the day before and stop over one night. Bring your provision with you. Come right on to the camp-ground. Bro. Hazard's cottage will be open for accommodations, with a stove and beds that can be used.

P. S. If rainy on the 5th, the next fair day.
E. Bellows.

To the Adv. Chris. Conf. of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y.—This is to notify all who may be interested in this Conference that an effort will be made, at our next annual session, to be held next September, to make some changes in our Conference Constitution. Let there be a full Conference. Done by order of vote of Conference. A. H. Briggs, Sec'y.

A. C. Times, please copy.

Quarterly Meeting.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the New Hampshire Conference will meet with the church at East Canaan, to commence Thursday evening, April 29th, and hold over the Sabbath, May 2nd. Ministers are desired to attend and make the meeting as interesting as possible. For Com., Levi Allen.

Notice.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Little Marsh Church will be held at Little Marsh, Tioga Co., Penn., commencing May 7th, and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. For the Church,

E. H. Eggleston.

Notice.—The Second Advent Society of Lawrence, Mass., met April 19th, and elected Eld. W. J. Halse Pastor for the remainder of the year 1875. Preaching brethren can govern themselves accordingly. J. S. Johnson, Clerk of Society.

Notice.—Having closed my labors with the Advent Church at Lower Cabot, I am at liberty to engage elsewhere as the way may open to labor in his vineyard, for the salvation of the perishing around us, and the strengthening of those things that remain. Brethren and friends will please correspond with me at North Montpelier Vt. E. N. Morse.

P. S.—I would prefer to take the pastoral care of some church. E. N. M.

Speak Plain.—The brethren of this place wish it distinctly understood, that when preaching is wanted, they will take measures to procure it without the aid of voluntary appointments. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

South Ashburnham, Mass.

A NEW BOOK.
THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. Ag't.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

A NEW TRACT.
"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"
A Work upon the Materiality of Man.
HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.
BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. Ag't.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

SOME OF THE LAST DAY SIGNS.

D. FRENCH.

The last day's signs are among us,
We see them at home and abroad;
Men are lovers of pleasure and self
Much more than lovers of God.

Gain now is the engine by which
This old world is moving to-day;
Men are trying hard to get rich—
Many in an unlawful way.

Some, of their good times are telling;
We fear they will see their mistake;
War clouds are already swelling,
And some mighty men are awake.

Some think that things awful and strange
May come on the earth, they say;
Some think it political change,
And some the millennium day.

But this world will ne'er be better
While under the Adamic curse;
For see, as declareth the Letter,
The wicked do wax worse and worse.

Some are crying peace and safety,
And will until it's too late;
Till sw ft destruction o'ertakes them,
From which they will not escape.

Where's the promise of his coming?
Cry scoffers; who boldly declare
That since the death of the Fathers
Things continue just as they were.

Some men's hearts are now failing
For what they think soon may be here;
Others are fearlessly telling
That the Master will shortly appear.

That I may be ready to meet him
When he comes, is my daily prayer;
With all the dear saints to greet him,
And be caught up with him in the air.

I'm neither scholar nor poet;
So excuse my blunders, I pray,
And I'll give room for the younger;
For I'm eighty years old to-day.

MISSION WORK.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—I do praise him for what he has done for us all. Truly we ought to be mindful of his mercies and blessings so bountifully bestowed upon us, and praise him with our whole hearts, and live so as to show forth his praise in our daily walk and conversation. If ever there was a time in the world's history that called for living epistles, it is now; —now while scepticism and infidelity fill the world with darkness; while crimes of all descriptions are abroad in the land, and when the professed church in her "lukewarm" state crieth "My Lord delayeth his coming." O what great need there is of a consistent life.

Truly we are living amid the perils of the last days, and when men's hearts fail them for fear, looking for those things that are coming on the earth. Never have I seen such an intent rush after gain, worldly honor and pleasure of all kinds. Never have I seen such manifest hatred against the pure gospel as now. The powers of darkness are alarming. Satan has truly come down in great wrath, knowing that he has but a short time to do his deadly work. O that christians of every name might arise and shine in the strength of Israel's God.

Brethren and sisters, shall we not buckle on the whole armor, and stand against the wiles of the devil? How is it? Is the warfare ended? Have you done all you can? or are your weapons of warfare laid down, and you quietly waiting to see the result? Have you lost all courage amid this wild commotion, and fear to bear the cross in the face of the mocking, scoffing, vain world, and a cold formal church?

Brethren and sisters, are your lamps brightly burning, waiting for the day star? If so, joyful will be that day to you; no shudder of dread or fear of final results; if you have "done all," you will surely "stand." Then, the warfare being ended and the victory won, in Jesus' all prevailing name, we may spend a long eternity in glory and happiness, with all the faithful and good. This is what we are endeavoring to labor for, that at Christ's appearing and kingdom we may be made like him, and stand in him complete.

Our labors thus far have been crowned with success, and we believe the great day will reveal fruits unto eternal life.

When we last wrote we were at Ward, Wilson, Co., where an effectual door of utterance was opened to us, and where we were greatly blest of the Lord. Notwithstanding the hardness of heart existing against the truth, yet the Lord raised up a little company to defend his cause. We were with them over two Sundays. Ten came together in church order, and four were buried with Christ in baptism. Seed has been sown in this county that we think will never be rooted up. The pastor of the Christian church has commenced to labor against the truth. We have received a letter from there for us to go back, if possible, and hold more meetings. The people are anxious to hear, and I trust the Lord will raise up more laborers.

Wednesday, March 4th, we came to Bro. Beman's, near Humbolt, distance twenty-five miles or more, through the snow and mud. Had meeting one evening; then came on toward Marrington, Bourbon Co. Two days hard driving through the mud, brought us to Bro. Clark's home. Bro. C. had notice sent out for meeting on Lord's day. Quite a company came out for so short a notice. We kept up meetings through the week and over another Lord's day. Sixteen manifested a determination to serve the Lord. The school teacher, an able young man, with his companion, took a bold stand.

This is a new field of labor. They have had no preaching there of our faith previous to Bro. Hunt's preaching there last winter. He was with them and spoke eleven times to full houses, and very interesting congregations. He left a good impression, and a desire among the people for him to come again.

The last Lord's day night we had a blessed season. The "broken bread" and "shed blood" were administered to the dear ones, in remembrance of our Lord till he comes. Ten or eleven came together in church order. We left them, feeling that the candle of the Lord had commenced to burn in that Co., and we trust the good work will continue until the day of Jesus Christ.

Monday morning, March 16th, we came in to Fort Scott. Did not tarry only to bait the ponies and scatter a few tracts and papers. Then came to Bro. Crowell's home, Pleasanton, Linn Co., We arrived late in the evening, after riding thirty-five miles during the cold day. We were glad to get to this point, I can assure you. Here we found a happy, quiet home, and a brother and sister who love the truth from the beginning to the end, and are doing all they can to help it forward. The Lord ever bless them for their kindness shown towards the servants as they pass along. We remained with them over two Sundays; and we trust our labor was not in vain in the Lord. We saw some fruits, and trust a goodly number will be added to the church, such as will be saved. We found a live little church, that are waiting for the Lord to come.

Monday, March 29th, we started for Arvonia, distance eighty miles. Arrived Tuesday night, the 30th. Found all well, and glad to see us. Time up to this date, April 9th, has been occupied in going to depot after goods for the needy, writing, reading, and attending our quarterly meeting at Plymouth, held April 3rd, and over Lord's day. Truth at this point, from the very first has been progressing and gaining ground over all opposition. Praise to the Lord on high!

Now that our annual meeting is coming on, we do hope that all will make arrangements to be there. Let each one feel that they have a duty to do for the Lord and his cause. Let each one come filled with the Spirit of Jesus, and to work for the perishing multitude that throng the downward road to ruin. Come, brethren and sisters, let us work together in the name of the Lord; and may we see much more good done the coming year than ever before.

The Lord has blest thus far, praise his name! He has given the increase in many places in this large State, and we ought to be thankful. Notwithstanding the hard times, the cause has prospered, and shall it fail now, amid the perils of these last days? No; it cannot fail if the Lord be for us. Let us lean upon his mighty arm, to save amid the dangers that surround us. Let us move forward with fear and trembling in his all prevailing name.

We hope to see a goodly number from all parts of the State at this meeting, and should be glad to see others from other States. More laborers are needed to help sound the alarm in this great Western field. May every heart be uplifted in earnest prayer to God for direction in all that may be done. I do pray that his Holy Spirit may do its office work upon the hearts of all, and that a goodly number may be constrained by love divine to follow in the narrow way and reap life eternal when Jesus comes. Pray for us. From your brother and sister in the Lord.

J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

Arvonia, Orange Co. Kan., April 9th.

THE END NEAR.

C. MENDENHALL.

That we are living in a time when all things earthly and temporal are drawing to a close must be cognizant to every Bible student. All our surroundings indicate their transient nature. We see mighty changes wrought in earth, in air, and sky. Nature seems to be disturbed; a preternatural power is evidently at work, as is seen by the mighty upheavals of the universe, the miraculous phenomena existing in the heavens, and the unsettled state of society.

Everything of a worldly nature rests upon an unsound and tottering basis. Men's hearts are sinking within them for looking after those things which are coming upon this sin-cursed earth. Its load of guilt and oppression is becoming burdensome. The cup of wrath is almost full; probation is near its close.

Reader, are you saved? Surely the end is nigh. Warning notes, clear and unmistakable in their import, are heard on every hand. God is long-suffering, will you not make yourself safe while the opportunity is open, the way is clear, and the redemptive plan still in operation?

Fellow pilgrims, our course is almost run, our warfare nearly ended; our Redeemer is coming with rest, relief, and reward. And while we feel our hearts pulsate with joyful emotions, let us never cease our vigilance, nor lay our armor down, but be up and doing. The whole world lieth in wickedness. Many, aye, very many are unpardoned, unsaved, unprepared. Oh, then work for Jesus, work for the perishing, and may the cry "Behold he cometh" resound on every hand.

"Our life to toil is given,
And he improves it best
Who seeks by patient labor
To enter into rest."

No time now for "doubtful disputations," for quarreling, or for "hobby riding;" but let all our powers, our energies, our talents, and our lives be devoted to the work of saving the perishing.

Finally, brethren, assist one another, pray in unison, work in harmony, bear each others burdens, be loving, be courteous, and be Christ-like, and may God keep us blameless and uncondemned unto that day is our prayer. Amen.

A SABBATH ARGUMENT.

W. W. CATE.

Happening to be in Nevada City, on Mar. 15th, and learning that Eld. Wood, of the the Seventh day Adventist order was to speak that night at the Court House on the Sabbath, I resolved to stop and hear, as I had never heard a sermon on that subject.

The elders text was Ex. 31: 16, 17: "Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever.

The burden of the brother's argument was to show that the generations of the children of Israel had never ceased; that they would continue throughout the gospel age, and even into the world to come. Therefore the Jewish Sabbath must continue, in full force and effect, throughout this age. And as they usually teach that there is no salvation without observing the Seventh day Sabbath, it becomes a matter of great importance to know the truth. And I could but think if the arguments were conclusive, then other important results would follow. For instance, in Ex. 30, we find instructions for making an altar on which the priests should burn incense; and in the 8th verse it is called a perpetual incense throughout your generations. And in Ex. 40: 15, the Jewish priesthood is called an everlasting priesthood throughout your generations. In Numbers 10, we have directions for the priests to blow on silver trumpets; and in verse 8th, we read they shall be to you for an ordinance forever, throughout your generations. In Lev. 23: 9–14, concerning the feast of the first fruits, the offering of a he lamb for a burnt offering, also an offering of fine flour, oil and wine; this, we read in verse 14 shall be a "statute forever, throughout your generations, in all your dwellings." Also from the 15th to 21st verses, we find directions for the feast of Pentacost; on which occasion they were to offer seven lambs, one young bullock, and two rams for a burnt offering; one kid, for a sin offering, and two lambs, for a peace offering, etc. This, we are told in verse 21st, shall be a statute forever, in all your dwellings, throughout your generations.

Then it follows if Bro. Wood's arguments are valid, we have the Jewish Sabbath; but the same brings with it the burning of incense, the Jewish priesthood, the blowing of trumpets, sacrifices, burnt offerings, sin offerings, peace offerings, meat offerings, of flour, oil, wine, bullocks, rams, kids and lambs, with the feasts of Pentacost, trumpets, tabernacles, harvest, etc. Are we prepared to endorse the validity of their arguments, and go back to the law? Paul says (Gal. 2: 16), "By the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." And again, "If righteousness come by the law, then is Christ dead in vain." In Gal. 6: 4, he says—"Christ is become of no effect unto you. Whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye are fallen from grace." If the new covenant is a sufficient guide to salvation, and I believe it is, Paul is right, and Bro. Wood is wrong.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

E. OWEN.

A vessel was lying disabled, at sea;
A signal was raised of distress;
A hope entertained that some voyager might be Passing near, to relieve and to bless.

The signal for help was discovered at last,
A vessel bore down to relieve;
But the current and winds were adverse, and she passed
Just as if she designed to deceive.

The signal was heightened, the pain was intense;
The captain the situation espied,
And seizing his trumpet, relieved the suspense,
"Don't fear, I won't leave you," he cried.

Then he steered to the leeward, and shifted around,
His vessel put on the "right tack,"
"Bore down," and secured the lost crew, safe and sound,
Then gladly resumed the old track.

* * * * * * *

There are christians disabled, becalmed and distressed,
In poverty, sickness, and doubt;
Who wonder while others are frequently blest,
Why it is that themselves are left out.

Then almost invariably they compare
Their condition of heart and of mind
With others, which hurries them on to despair,
Which was just what the devil designed.

A signal is hoisted, assistance invoked,
But something suggests—'Tis "too late";
The orders to aid have all been revoked;
'Tis worse than in vain that you wait.

The vessel you signalled and hoped would relieve,
Has passed you, no more to return;
She only manœuvred awhile to deceive,
'Tis now you begin to discern.

But hark! 'mid the thickening omens of doom,
When the basis of hope seems to shake,
A tender voice whispers—'tis heard in the gloom—
"I will never leave you, nor forsake."

'Tis the voice of our Captain, made perfect, we read,
Through suffering, sorrow, and pain;
Think you he one private deserts in his need?
No, never! till he come again.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. B. SEVEY.

Our Quarterly Conference at Rome, the 11th of March, was well attended, and we trust was very profitable. Brethren came to labor for the furtherance of each other in the divine life, and warn the ungodly to flee from the wrath to come. Some were confirmed in their faith that we are correct. Union prevailed through our meeting. Fifty spoke Sunday morning before preaching; and some fifty gathered around the table of the Lord in the evening. It was a blessed season. We parted with the hope of soon meeting one another in the kingdom of God.

We next visited Lewiston. Found the church hungry to hear preaching on the Lord's coming. I find there is a tendency among many of our preaching brethren to keep back the part of the message due this age. I visited the brethren in Alfred, and held meetings in the Town Hall. A few came to hear on the evidence of Jesus' soon coming. Next went to Springvale. Found much prejudice. Fear the false reports about the discussion from various sources did much harm.

Held meetings Friday and Saturday evenings in their Hall. On Sunday went to the Town Hall, as arrangements were made to ordain Bro. Lewis Green, a man that lives in the place, and is said to have a good report. Brn. Jesse Gay and Wm. Mitchell were present. Bro. Mitchell made the prayer, I gave the charge, and Bro. Gay the right hand of fellowship.

Our congregation was quite large in the afternoon and evening, and the interest seemed very good. We think our meeting had a good influence upon the people. Hope some seed may fall on good ground, and bring forth fruit to perfection.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us work with all our strength, as time is so short. The nations are angry; by this we may know Jesus is soon coming, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and the saints to have their reward. What a blessed day is just before us. When we shall meet the loved ones of earth, that have fallen by death—the last enemy that is to be destroyod. Oh may the kingdom come.

I KNOW that some people are fond of talking about "death bed evidences." They will rest on words spoken in the hour of fear and pain, and weakness, as if they might take comfort in them about the friends they lose. But I am afraid in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, such evidences are not to be depended on. I suspect men generally die just as they have lived. The only safe evidence that you are one with Christ, and Christ in you, is a holy life. They that live unto the Lord are generally the only people who die in the Lord. If we would die the death of the righteous, let us not rest in slothful desires only, let us seek to live his life.—Ryle.

A SHIP may be over-laden with silver even into sinking, and yet have compass and bulk enough to hold ten times more. So it is with a covetous man. Even though he have enough to sink him, yet never hath he enough to satisfy him; but with his soul bent upon the attainment of one object, loses his interest in everything that would tend to bring him under all true and holy influences.

WISDOM does not show itself so much in precept as in life—in firmness of mind and mastery of appetite. It teaches us to do as well as to talk, and to make our words and actions all of a color.

A LEAF FROM RICHARD BAXTER'S "HEAVENLY CONTEMPLATIONS."

"Look over the mercies of thy youth and riper years, of thy prosperity and adversity, of thy several places and relations; are they not excellent and innumerable, rich and engaging? How sweet was it to thee, when God resolved thy doubts, scattered thy fears, prevented the inconveniences into which thy own counsels would have cast thee, eased thy pains, healed thy sickness, and raised thee up, as from death and the grave! Think, then; are all these so sweet and precious that without them my life would have been a perpetual misery? Hath his providence on earth lifted me so high, and his gentleness made me great? How sweet then will his glorious presence be! How high will his eternal love exalt me, and how great shall I be made in communion with his greatness!

If my pilgrimage and warfare have such mercies, what shall I find in my home, and in my triumph? If God communicates so much to me while I remain a sinner, what will he bestow when I am a perfected saint? If I have had so much at such a distance from him, what shall I have in his immediate presence, where I shall ever stand before his throne?

Compare the joys above, with the comforts thou hast here received in ordinances. Hath not the Bible been to thee as an open fountain, flowing with comforts day and night? What suitable promises have come into thy mind; so that, with David, thou mayest say, 'Unless thy law had been my delight, I should have perished in mine affliction?' Think then, if his word be so full of consolations, what overflowing springs shall we find in God himself! If his letters are so comfortable, what will be our possession of the kingdom itself!

Think farther; what delight have I also found in the word preached! When I have sat under a heavenly, heart-searching teacher, how hath my heart been warmed! Methinks I have felt myself almost in heaven. How often have I gone doubting, and God hath sent me home persuaded of his love in Christ! What cordials have I met with to animate me in every conflict! If but the face of Moses shone so gloriously, what glory is there in the face of God! If "the feet of them that publish peace, that bring good tidings of salvation,' be beautiful, how beautiful is the face of the 'Prince of Peace.' If 'this treasure' be so precious in 'earthen vessels,' what is that treasure laid up in heaven! 'Blessed are the eyes that see' what is seen there, 'and the ears that hear the things' that are heard there. There shall I hear Elijah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, John, Peter, Paul; not preaching to gainsayers in imprisonment, persecution, and reproach; but triumphing in the praises of Him that hath raised them to honor and glory.

Think also, what joy is it to have access and acceptance in prayer; that I may always go to God, and open my case, and unbosom my soul to him, as to my most faithful friend. But it will be a more unspeakable joy, when I shall receive all blessings without asking, and all my necessities and miseries will be removed, and when God himself will be the portion of my soul. As for the Lord's supper, what a privilege it is to be admitted to sit at his table, to have his covenant sealed to me there!

But all the life and comfort there, is to assure me of the comforts hereafter. Oh the difference between the last supper of Christ on earth, and the marriage supper of the Lamb at the great day. Then his room will be the glorious heavens; his attendants, all the hosts of angels and saints; no Judas, no unfurnished guest, comes there; but the humble believers must sit down by him and their feast will be their mutual loving and rejoicing.

Concerning the communion of saints, think with thyself, what a pleasure is it to live with intelligent and heavenly christians. David says of such, 'they were all his delight.' Oh then what a delightful society shall I have above! Had I but seen Job on the dunghill, what a mirror of patience! and what will it be to see him in glory? How delightful to have heard Paul and Silas singing in the stocks! How much more to hear them sing praises in heaven! What melody did David make on his harp! But how much more melodious to hear that sweet singer in the heavenly choir!

What would I have given for an hour's free converse with Paul, when he was just come down from the third heaven. But I must shortly see those things myself, and possess what I see.

Once more, think of praising God in concert with his saints. What if I had been in the place of those shepherds, who saw and heard the heavenly host singing, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill towards men?" But I shall see and hear more glorious things. How blessed should I have thought myself, had I heard Christ in his 'thanksgiving to his father!' How much more, when I shall hear him pronounce me blessed! If there was such joy at 'bringing back the ark,' or at 'rebuilding the temple,' what will there be in the New Jerusalem!

If the 'earth rent,' when the people rejoiced at Solomon's coronation, what a joyful shout will there be at the appearing of the King of the church. If 'when the foundations of the earth were laid the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy,' what a joyful song will there be, when the world of joy is both founded and finished, when the top-stone is laid, and when 'the holy city is adorned as the bride, the Lamb's wife.' Compare the joy thou shalt have in heaven, with what the saints have found in the way to it, and in the foretastes of it.

When did God ever reveal the least of himself to any of his saints, but the joy of their hearts was answerable to the revelation. In what an ecstasy was Peter on the mount of transfiguration. 'Master,' says he, it 'is good for us to be here: let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.' As if he said, Oh let us not go down again to yonder persecuting rabble; let us not return to our mean and suffering state. Is it not better to stay here now we are here? Is not here better company and sweeter pleasure? How was Paul lifted up with what he saw! How did the face of Moses shine, when he had been talking with God! These were all extraordinary foretastes; but little to the beautiful vision."—Sel. by L. A. WHEELER.

NEARING HOME.

G. L. TRACY.

There is something endearing about the word home. As the sick and wounded soldier, while being borne toward his distant home, raised his head feebly and inquired of those around him—"Are we almost home?" so the weary pilgrim, as he wends his way along life's rugged maze, with feet torn and bleeding, and with many a scar, inquires of his leader, Are we almost there? and as he catches the sound—"nearing home"—his drooping spirits revive, and his heart beats quick; he takes courage, and presses on.

Weary ones, we are nearing home. A few more battles, and the victory will be won. A few more persecutions, a few more tears, and all will be past. How cheering the thought! Here we have no continuing city—no abiding place. Old earth has grown drear; it has lost its charms. We weep over blighted hopes and ruined homes. We must be nearing the shore, for the breakers are all around us. The christian, taking a Bible stand-point, and gazing out upon the scene, can say, in the words of the poet,

"Then let the hurricane roar,
It will the sooner be o'er;
We'll weather the blast, and land at last
Safe on the evergreen shore."

But another thought comes. None but the pure in heart can see God. No vile person will be permitted to enter.

Dear reader, how is it with you? Have you a refuge from the storm, a covert from the tempest? Fierce angry clouds are gathering above your head; the lightning's flash can be seen as it gleams along the angry sky. The muttering thunders of the judgment day can be heard in the distance. Oh where is your place of safety? You have none out of Christ; but in him we are safe. You have no time to squander. Grasp the fleeting moments. Behold now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation. Now you may find a home where no wave of wrath will ever sweep it away.

Reader, may you and I be permitted to enter into that kingdom prepared for those who overcome, and sit down with the redeemed of every age and clime, and be forever at home.

Correspondence.

From Sr. I. Loveland.

Dear Editors:—I have been thinking that perhaps the readers of the Crisis would like to hear how the cause they love so well, is prospering in East Glastonburg, Ct. I am here alone, battling for the truth as I understand it. All the Advent preaching we have here, is the Bible, the Crisis, the Bible Banner and the Christian. I lend my papers, tracts, and books to all who will read them. I tell the people that Christ within is our only hope of glory, honor, immortality and eternal life. I tell them that the prophecies and the signs of the times all show that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and the time when the dead shall be raised, and every man judged according to his works. This has stirred up a spirit of persecution.

Mr. Oldham, the Methodist preacher, has just finished a series of sermons on their doctrines, including the immortality of the soul. I heard one of his sermons, and that was enough for me. He took for his text John 14: 10; but he soon left it, and began to smite his fellow-servants, the Adventists, calling them "infidels," "sadducees," "annihilationists," "hypocrites," "liars;" declaring that they were wilfully perverting the Word of God, and he had no confidence in them.

A few days after he had closed his sermons I asked one of his members if his preacher had proved the immortality of the soul, and the Adventists to be infidels. He said he proved nothing, only that he was a slanderer; and that he had said a few Sabbaths before a slanderer was a murderer. Poor man, may the Lord forgive him, and fill all our hearts with love and charity, for without the spirit of Christ we are none of his.

We all like to be treated kindly, but the hope we have in Jesus is worth more to us than all the honors of this world. Oh, let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; for he is faithful that hath promised. In Jesus we behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. The words that he has spoken, they are spirit and they are life. They are meat and drink to our souls, through which we sup with him, and he with us. They are a well of water in us, springing up into everlasting life. It is through faith in his Word that we are born of incorruptible seed, and made partakers of the divine nature, and become sons and daughters of God; because he has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, Abba Father.

Jesus, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, that he might make us free from sin, and become servants of God; that our fruits might be unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. If we abide in Christ, and he in us, when the last trump shall sound, we shall wake in the likeness of Jesus, clothed with glory, honor, immortality and eternal life.

Brethren and sisters, is not this a blessed hope? Let us hold fast that which we have, that no man take our crown, for Jesus has said, Behold, I come quickly.

From Bro. W. H. Kaharl.

Dear Editors:—Allow me space in our much loved paper, to give the brethren and sisters scattered abroad the knowledge of my whereabouts, and more especially of the dealings of God in the hearts of the children of men in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

The town of Foxboro, where my lot has been cast for the last three years, is some twenty-five miles from Boston, and where those of like faith are scarce, and the blessed truth of a soon coming Christ is very unpopular.

I have been asssciated for some time with a union Sabbath School, which has been gathered in the south school district, some two or three miles from any church, and where christian influence was set at nought in a great measure. The people were willing their children should attend the Sabbath School to be relieved of their presence for an hour. Very little interest, if any, manifested on the part of a large portion of the parents.

While this dark cloud has hung over our heads, God has kept in the hearts of a few faithful ones to labor and wait for the precious fruits, until the early and latter rain should moisten the dry and barren ground. This has been done in answer to prayer, and fruit is now being gathered to the glory of the Lord. Praise his holy name forever!

Many fathers who had no regard for the Sabbath, but spent it in hunting, fishing, and dissipation of every kind, are now first on their feet in the prayer-meeting to tell what the Lord has done for them and theirs. Whiskey bottles have been banished from the side-board; altars have been erected, and morning and evening sacrifice is offered in broken words, but heart-felt prayer to Him whose ear is ever open to the pleadings of the humble. Mothers rejoice and are glad; children are lisping forth praises to Him who hath redeemed them by his blood; careless ones are saying, Surely, this is of the Lord: and in some cases have expressed desires to be better.

Pray for us, that our faith fail not, and our strength be equal to our day, and the labor that God has enjoined upon us. The Macedonian cry is—"Come over and help us." Silver and gold have we none; but such as we have give we. Food and shelter will be freely given to God's faithful teachers. None others need come.

Meetings are holden every Sabbath at the school house, at one o'clock, P. M. If any of the preaching brethren or sisters happen this way, they will find a pilgrim home with Bro. W. H. Kaharl, South Foxboro, Mass.

From Bro. A. P. Moulton.

Dear friends of the Crisis:—I improve a few moments this afternoon, in writing a line or two, to let you all know that I am still striving to be an overcomer, and still love the doctrine of the soon coming kingdom. I see no reason why we should not be looking for the sign of the Son of man, which to my mind is the very next thing to look for, and the last one before the coming of Christ. There are no more to be given to this wicked and unbelieving world, which will soon be destroyed by the spirit of his mouth and brightness of his coming. What a dreadful day to the wicked!

Dear brethren and sisters, let us do all we can to persuade some to come to Christ and live. May God help us all to be ready and waiting when the Master comes, that he can say "Well done." What a glorious hope is ours!

Brethren in Haverhill have been blessed and strengthened of late through the labors of dear Bro. Potter, from Connecticut. His words were like cold water to the thirsty soul. Truly it was meat in due season. A number were converted. Thank the good Lord.

Bro. S. S. Brewer has been with us a few days also. God bless our aged brother, who, with Paul, can say, he has fought a good fight, and truly he has kept the faith; and when Bro. Paul gets his crown, we believe Bro. Brewer will get his.

The brethren in Haverhill are making ready for the coming of Christ. Brotherly love seems to prevail. Pray for us. God bless the dear ones scattered abroad, and may we all soon meet in the kingdom of our Lord.

Haverhill, Mass.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

To many of the human family, the spring of the year is fraught with ills, in the form of colds, fevers, neuralgic aches and pains, rheumatisms, loss of appetite, billiousness, sensations of "goneness" about the stomach, and of weariness, deblility and exhaustion, throughout the whole system. Many of these bodily evils might be averted, or at least mitigated, by intelligent forethought and care.

If, as warm weather approaches, the appetite fails somewhat, do not take it as a sign that you are going into a decline. Ten chances to one it is Nature's way of telling you that your system does not require the same amount of fuel in mid-spring when thawy south winds blow, and April showers and sunshine impart moisture and heat to earth and air, as through the long four or five months of cold, keen, bracing wintry weather.

Very probably too a change in diet is sorely needed, especially if fine flour bread and biscuit, butter, syrup, sugar, fat meats and rich pastry have been among your staples. Give place in their stead to light, fresh, crisp graham gems, rolls or crackers; graham, crushed wheat, or oatmeal puddings, and porridges; milk or cream in moderation; fresh, dried or canned fruits in abundance; vegetables, seasoned if possible with cream and a little salt, instead of lard or butter; occasionally soft-boiled eggs, and, if animal food is desired, fresh fish and lean beef or mutton, instead of fat meats and gravies. Having planned intelligently for the furnishing of your table, from day to day, with a wholesome and agreeable variety of food,—eat moderately and regularly, and think no more about it.

Look to the drains and cellars, stables, barn-yards and out-houses, including henneries and piggeries, where seeds of pestilential fevers and distempers may be lying in wait, ready to sprout at the first warm breath of spring. Search them closely, and follow up the search persistently with shovels, brooms, and reliable disinfectants, (among which are none more easy to obtain or more effectual than dry earth, copperas dissolved in water, or carbolic powder), to the utter abolishment of all impurities. Allow no decaying fruit or vegetables to remain in your cellar. A coat or two of whitewash, in which is stirred a little carbolic acid, applied to the ceiling and walls will help on the work of purification. Do not forget to inspect your cistern, spring or well. See that the cows which yield your daily supply of milk are furnished with pure running water, as well as good food.

Let the sunshine and fresh air freely into your living and sleeping rooms, taking care, of course, not to sit directly in a strong draught, and to have your apartments so well warmed, or to be yourself so protected by clothing or wraps as to avoid all sense of chilliness.

Give mattrasses, blankets and comfortables frequent airings. Do not sleep in under garments which have been worn through the day. Hang these when taken off over the back of a chair, in an adjoining room if convenient,—instead of letting them lie in a heap by your bed all night. Insure abundant sleep and rest by working each day within the limits of that day's strength, and without worry or fret; by shunning excitements and evening dissipations, and by retiring at an early and regular hour at night. A nap at mid-day, or, if that is out of the question, a horizontal position on an easy lounge or a stretcher in a quiet room, or on the veranda, for fifteen or twenty minutes, if no more can be spared, will prove a means of refreshment. We can control our circumstances in little things by conscientious and systematic trial, more readily than we sometimes imagine.

Bathe often enough to keep the pores of the skin open, and the exhalant vessels active, being particularly careful to keep the feet clean. Take your baths in a warm room, use mild soft water, and wipe dry, rubbing the body briskly with the hands after each ablution.

Dress the feet and limbs warmly, and have your garments, (especially if you are a woman,) so thoroughly supported from the shoulders, so entirely escaping the ground, and so loose and easy about the waist, that you can move your arms freely, walk with comfort, and fill your lungs to their fullest capacity. Then spend all the time possible out of doors, even though you have to take it in ten minute snatches. Make the most of whatever sunshine the freakish spring skies will bestow. Put on stout easy shoes, and walk over the hills, and through the valleys and woodlands. There is no other open air exercise which can compare with walking. If your feet and limbs are weary from active work in-doors, then let the out-door condition be one of repose. Ride, or better yet, drive the country over, or sit on your snnny piazza, porch or door step, and, well wrapped, watch the blue birds and robins, and swelling buds. Take in the sweet earthy odors, which rise only in the spring-time and fill the air as with a prophecy of bloom and fruitage.

In every way practicable, get into sympathy with, and cultivate the recreative, renewing, growing, aspiring spirit which fills and thrills and possesses nature in this her up-springing time. For the spirit of a man hath much to do with his bodily infirmity, and he that doth magnify his ills, and doth complain, and grumble and pity himself continually, will find the winter of his discontent loth to leave the "lap of spring."

Whether riding, walking or sitting in the open air, do not forget to breathe. There is no better blood-purifier than deep draughts of fresh air taken into the lungs. Shut the mouth, expand the nostrils, and take full, regular inspirations. Make this a practice until it becomes a habit of your life, and you will realize the benefit in better conditions of blood, improved circulation, brighter heads and lighter hearts.—Selected from the Laws of Life by F. P. Dingley.

EATING.

Two results are sure to flow from a careful habit of eating: one that we will not eat too much, and the other that we will gradually acquire an instinctive aversion to unhealthy food. When a man "bolts" his food, giving it only a momentary opportunity to gratify the palate, and then sending it headlong to the stomach, he is liable to take a great deal more than he can readily digest, because the sense of taste, only rapidly and slightly exerting itself, is not sated until long after the amount has been exceeded of which the stomach can properly dispose; and, on the other hand, in this rapid process the taste has no opportunity to assert its real power of choice. It is placed at the entrance of the digestive system, not only as one of the most important members of it, but as a guard and sentinel to protect the other members. But what can be expected of it when we crowd upon, and past it, a mass of matter which it has no time to examine. Treat it fairly, and the sense of taste will demonstrate its power to do ample justice to its duties; and to this end nothing is necessary but an adequate reduction of the food by the combined working of the teeth and the salivary secretions. And it may be added that adhesion to the very simple rule suggested would not only be of the greatest benefit to health, but would indefinitely increase the pleasure of the table. Those who follow it will steadily develop their capacity to tell good from bad, or indifferent food, and will, moreover, increase their natural and delicate enjoyment of the former.—Health Reformer.

A HINT OR TWO.—It is the penny saved more than the penny earned that enriches; it is the sheet turned when the first threads break that wears the longest; it is the damper closed when the cooking is done that stops the dollars dropping into the coal-bin; it is the lamp or gas turned low when not in use that gives you pin-money for the month; it is the care in making the coffee that makes three spoonsful go as far as a teacupful ordinarily; it is the walking one or six blocks instead of taking a car or omnibus, that adds strength to your body and money to your purse; it is the careful mending of each week's wash that gives ease to your conscience and length of days to your garments; and last of all, it is the constant care exercised over every part of your household, and constant endeavor to improve and apply your best powers to your work that alone give peace and prosperity to the family.—Ex.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

HE DID THIS FOR ME.

On the cross he died for me;
In the grave he lay;
And he rose that I might rise
In a coming day.

'Twas for me he suffered pain;
'Twas for me he prayed;
'Tis for me he'll come again—
Promise which he made.

He has promised me a life
That shall never end;
He is coming, it to give;—
He's my dearest friend.

I shall see Him then, and be
Where he is forever;
Near his side I there shall stand,
And will leave him never.

THE SOLEMN WARNING.

Church of the living God! hast thou heard the voice which spoke from heaven, "Surely I come quickly?" And hast thou responded to it gladly, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus?" Does his absence now lay heavily upon thy spirit. Does the promise of his return cheer thee? And is the thought of his speedy coming a most welcome hope in these days when men's hearts are failing them for fear? Then how is the prospect operating? Is it full of quickening, animating, stimulating power? Is it kindling up your love into greater warmth? Is it increasing the intensity of your earnestness? Is it making the separation between you and the world a more decided thing? Is it imparting a deeper solemnity to your deportment, and attaching an unutterable importance to every word and action? Is it rebuking idleness, and sloth, and vanity, and frivolity, and levity, and selfishness? Has it uprooted and destroyed in you covetousness and worldliness, those two master sins of the evil age? And has it made you liberal and generous, enlarging your heart to give,—to give with no sparing hand so long as the time remaineth?

Ah, brethren in Christ, we are surely far behind! Our religion is a poor, second-rate, ineffective thing! We are dreaming when we should be working; we are pleasing self and indulging the flesh when we should be serving the Lord. We are indolent and yielding when we should be energetic and indomitable. We are shrinking and fastidious when we should be resolute and hardy. We sit idly in our tents, with weapons sheathed and banners folded, when we should be in the thickest of the fight; for the world's last conflict is begun, and the armies are mustering for the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

And you, ye men of the earth, whose portion is not among the things unseen, have you heard the voice that speaks to you from heaven,—"Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come?" Has the warning pierced your ears and broken your mad security? How long do you count it safe to remain unreconciled? And what, short of reconciliation with God, will avail you in the day when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth? And when is he to arise? Have you ascertained the time, that you sit so easy and unalarmed? The long pent-up winds are beginning to break loose; and the sudden bursts of tempest that have over-swept the earth these few years past, are precursors of the world's last desolating storm. At present there is a lull, but it will be brief; and behind that lull there is the more terrible tempest; and behind that tempest there is the Judge of the quick and dead; and behind the Judge there are the everlasting burnings? Has this prospect no terrors for you, and have these terrors no urgency to compel you to consider the overwhelming necessity of betaking yourself to the provided shelter, ere another day, with all its gloomy uncertainties, shall have dawned upon you?

Are you ready? Are you hidden in the clefts of that rock to which no weapon, no storm, no fire can reach? He alone is safe who has reached the hiding-place; and that hiding-place stands with its unfolding gates ready to receive you now. Will you enter? Or will you remain without? Remain without, and perish in the fiery storm!—"For every battle of the warrior is with confused noise and garments rolled in blood, but this shall be with burning and fuel of fire." It is now, in these last days, as in the days of Noah. God's purpose of vengeance has been declared, the warning has come, and the judgment is making haste to follow. But the ark is still open, and the preacher of righteousness beckons you in. For one hundred and twenty years Noah preached, but the unheeding world heard him not. Then he entered the ark, and for seven days he remained there before the deluge came, and standing at the open door of the ark he delivered God's last message of grace, entreating men to come in.

It seems as if we were now in the period corresponding to these seven last days,—proclaiming God's last loving message to long-resisting man! For what, then, are you waiting? Are you lingering in the hope that the millennial day will softly steal in upon the world, and then you will be converted with all the rest? Alas for you! Do you not know that between you and that glory there lies a region as dark as midnight and strewed with terrors such as earth has not yet witnessed? Why, then, do you wait without? There is room enough within, and will you not go in and occupy it? There is love enough, and will you not go in and enjoy it? It will cost you nothing; and you are welcome! The Father bids you welcome; and the Son bids you welcome; and angels bid you welcome; and every saved one bids you welcome; and with so many welcomes will you still hesitate or delay?—Horatius Bonar, in the Restitution.

THE VINE OF THE EARTH RIPENING.

1. There is the appalling growth of wickedness. For mournful and overwhelming proof of this we refer to the public press. At our police courts and assizes things are disclosed which make the blood run cold. Witnesses depose to deeds of atrocity the mention of which a few years ago would have been rejected with loathing as the invention of a corrupt imagination. English judges, proverbially the least impassioned of men, as their responsible office requires perfect self-control, have been filled with astonishment, or moved with righteous indignation, at the worse than savage recitals which they have been obliged to hear. Of course we speak in the most general terms, as it is impossible to stain these pages with details; and the truthfulness of these general terms will not be questioned by any man who is at all aware of what is going on around him, notwithstanding the boasted civilization and enlightenment of the age. The distressing fact is,—and it can no longer be denied,—there are among us persons, despite all our ecclesiastical, educational, and legislative efforts, who can only be described in the terrible words of Peter, "as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed." In a few fearful touches Paul describes the state of the heathen:—"And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant breakers, without natural affection, unmerciful." Rom. 1.)

But surely all this is past, a woeful historical picture of the world without God, and it cannot be predicated of any of the inhabitants of a country where education, the gospel, and social science are exercising their combined influences. Those who tell us that the world is getting better, and who speak scornfully of men who believe that a supernatural intervention is essential to the accomplishment of the Divine purposes, may raise an objection of this kind. Well, if they admit that Paul was a true artist in his historical painting of heathen morals, which they readily do, why not give the same man credit for equal fidelity in his picture of the morals of the last days? Is Paul the historian more accurate than Paul the prophet? In his second letter to Timothy he reproduces the dismal delineation:—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, traitors, heady, high-minded [beclouded with pride], lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." (2 Tim. 3.) Thus the darkest features of paganism are to mark the closing days of Christendom. Instead of a world converted to God, it will be a world ripe for the destroying angel's sharp sickle. It should be noticed too, that the canvas is of enormous breadth, embracing a vast number of persons; for all these characteristics do not meet in the same individuals. All are bad; the loathsome features of the heathen world will appear again; but as each epithet seems to be the prominent description of a class, the aggregate of wickedness will be awful, calling for the swift judgment of God.

2. There is an undisguised rejection of Scripture by some of our leading philosophers. We are very reluctant to call these men atheists. This word means that which is so repugnant to reason and common sense, so utterly subversive of all the foundations of intelligent thought, so loudly protested against by the magnificent creation around us, and so cruelly destructive of all possible hope for the future of humanity, that we shrink from applying it to those who, as gentlemen and scholars, enjoy the respect of their fellow citizens. And yet, what are we to say? If our leaders in the high schools of science can account for the existence of the universe by a fortuitous concourse of atoms, and for the being of man—with all his moral and mental powers for good or evil—by the doctrine of development from a mollusk—itself the production of "nature," that is to say, matter—"without the meddling of the gods"—what room is left for a Supreme Being, an all-wise personal God? To admit, in so many words, the possible existence of such a Being, whilst the philosophical theories of matter and mind suggest that he has done nothing in the past, is doing nothing now, and will never do anything in the limitless future, is "atheism," if the word has any meaning. To believe that God is, without the slightest evidence of the fact, either from matter or mind, may shield the class of professors under notice from the unwelcome name of atheists, but this is a kind and degree of faith which the believer in the Scriptures of truth has not and cannot have. He believes on evidence, which is rational; the philosopher under notice believes, or says he believes, without evidence, which is irrational. It follows, therefore that the rejection of revelation issues in practical atheism, whatever the glorifier of nature's powers may say to the contrary.

But these remarks have a meaning which stretches far beyond the individual teachers to whose doctrines they allude. What about the followers of these learned leaders, the disciples of these accomplished savans? Here is the terrible danger! Here is the hot-bed that ripens the vine of the earth! We do not say that philosophers who profess to account for the existence of the world, and all the marvellous phenomena of matter and life without the "theory" of an intelligent Creator, wish to make their countrymen atheists, but they are doing it to an extent of which christians in general have no conception. Infidelity, or disbelief in Divine revelation, with its fearful logical climax, atheism, is greatly on the increase. Every depreciative allusion to Biblical cosmogony, or Biblical facts, in public scientific lectures, is greeted with applause by the audience, and the warmth of the reception is in proportion to the boldness of the scepticism. This is a terrible thing to say in reference to many of the people of a nation that, in relation to gospel light and christian privileges, confessedly stands at the head of Christendom; but it is true, and must be accepted as one of the foreseen characteristics of the great apostasy.—Rainbow.

THE RESURRECTION MORNING.

R. P. ELDRIDGE.

How beautiful, how glorious will that morning appear to those who are ready to meet the Savior,—to those who have their lamps trimmed and burning, prepared to meet the Bridegroom, when his true disciples will enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb.

When the Savior told his disciples that he was going away, they were sorrowful; and to cheer their hearts he said to them—"I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." Precious promise! How has that sweet promise cheered the hearts of his children from that day to the present. Glory be to God! it cheers the writer's heart to-day while watching and waiting for that glorious morning to dawn. Though the ungodly world may say—"The Lord delayeth his coming" yet the saints lift up their heads and rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh.

He is coming again, for the pledges he has left us and the frequent tokens of his love assure us that he forgets not his promises nor his children. He is coming again, but not as the babe of Bethlehem, to suffer and die for a guilty world; for his second coming will be "in power and great glory." He is coming to raise the dead and to change the righteous living. He is coming to destroy the wicked with an everlasting destruction, and to establish his everlasting kingdom upon the new earth. Then all the followers of Jesus, who have been despised and persecuted here, shall hear him say—"Come, ye blessed."

Then, dear afflicted ones, you and I, who have endured pain and suffering for so many long and weary years, shall find rest, sweet rest, in that country where none shall say—"I am sick."

O the blessed hope of soon beholding the King in his beauty, and of dwelling with him in his everlasting kingdom, where he is to reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Then, faithful laborers, you who have gone forth weeping, bearing precious seed, will return rejoicing, bringing your sheaves with you; sheaves which have been gathered from the highways and hedges. Be encouraged to toil on a little longer in your Master's service, for soon you will hear the "Well done," and enter into the joy of your Lord. That we all may be ready to meet the Savior at his appearing, and enter through the gates into the city, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

Chatham, Mass.

LUTHER ON THE ADVENT.

The great Reformer was obviously in possession of that "perfect love" which "casteth out fear;" and having made Christ his friend, his strong faith enabled him to speak of the day of judgment as one for which he waited "with yearnings and sighs of heart."

A recent writer, in speaking of him, says that "his relations with his children were singularly beautiful. He was especially gentle with them, and their fancies and imaginations delighted him. 'Children,' said he, 'imagine heaven a place where rivers run with cream, and trees are hung with cakes and plums. Do not blame them. They are but showing their natural, unquestioning, all-believing faith.' One day, after dinner, when the fruit was on the table, the children were watching it with longing eyes. 'That is the way,' said he, 'in which we grown christians ought to look for the judgment day.'"

That he was wont to thus look lovingly toward the Master's return, and to draw consolation from the prospect of the promised glory, appears from many passages in his writings. Take the following, from one of his sermons, as a sample:

"We are to feel for the miserable christians; both those who are alive, and are so afflicted and oppressed, and those also who are dead and asleep in their graves, and waiting to come forth into their glory, like corn buried during the winter in the earth, or like sap concealed in the trees which, being hindered by the cold, cannot break forth into new leaves and buds, but thirstingly waits for the summer, that it might at length burst forth in buds, and grow and flourish. In the same way, we ought also to rejoice because that day is coming, and ought to say, The rigor of winter has continued for a long time, but at length the fruitful summer will come, and that summer which never shall cease. At the coming of which, not all the saints only, but also all the angels shall exult and rejoice; nay, which the whole creation expects and anxiously awaits. For the heavens, the earth, the sun, the stars, the air, and all creatures, can no longer endure the iniquity of the world; which iniquity they are compelled to witness, but with the greatest grief, because they must be abused by the indulgers in sin, and be a help to every kind of ungodliness, both to the world and to the devil; and they would fain be delivered from all this iniquity together with us, and become that new heavens or new earth, of which Peter and Isaiah speak, in which righteousness alone shall dwell."

In another place he says, "If thou be not filled with a desire after the coming of this day, thou canst never pray the Lord's prayer, nor canst thou repeat from thy heart the creed of faith. For with what conscience canst thou say, 'I believe in the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting,' if thou dost not in thy heart desire the same? If thou didst believe it, thou must of necessity desire it from thy heart, and long for that day to come; which, if thou dost not desire, thou art not yet a christian, nor canst thou boast of thy faith."—Sermon of consolation. pp. 22, 23.

The application of such a rule as this to the churches of Christendom would unchristianize many in our day. Actuated more by the spirit of the world than the spirit which led the seer of Patmos to say, "Come, Lord Jesus," and the reformer to remark, "I see no other prayer that is fitting, but only this, 'Thy kingdom come.'" Multitudes are at ease in Zion. Luther's longings for his Lord's return, and pleasureable anticipations of the predicted glory, are too little known among even real christians. Such desires did not unfit him for service, neither would they injure us. On the contrary they are just what we need. Oh, for more of that "simple, natural, unquestioning, all-believing faith" of which he was accustomed to speak!—Prophetic Times.

LIFE IN CHRIST.

M. M. PARKER.

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men." JOHN 1:4.

It is claimed by some that, as life and immortality were brought to light through the gospel, by Christ; therefore man already possessed immortality, inherently, and independent of Christ or the gospel, and that Christ's mission was to reveal to him that fact. We think however that upon a little careful study and investigation of the subject, it will appear incorrect, and entirely unfounded in the Word of God.

We find it stated in the text, that in Christ was life, not in man; and we conclude that a life different in nature from the life which man possessed was intimated; for we find that man was at that time a living, thinking being, and one capable of receiving instruction.

In John 5:26 we read: "For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." So we find that he holds this life in the same sense as the Father, and has the same power to impart it to whomsoever he sees fit to promise it, that the Father had when he bestowed it upon him.

The nature of this life is given in John 3:14, 15: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." We see that it was necessary for Christ to be lifted up upon the cross, that all who would look and believe in him might receive an immortal life as a free gift. John, 5th chap., gives the facts concerning the miracle which Christ performed upon the impotent man. As Christ had healed him, the people very naturally wondered at such an exhibition of power; but in the 20th and 21st verses of the same chapter he says; "For the Father loveth the Son and showeth him all things that himself doeth; and greater works than these will he show him, that ye may marvel. For as the Father raised up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." Furthermore, he says—"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

That this life which is promised at the resurrection is to be eternal, is evident from the language of Jesus, which is recorded in Luke 20th: 35, 36, which reads thus; "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." And that it is the life which we receive in and through Christ is proven by 1 Cor. 15:22:—"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

We think these passages are sufficient to convince us that, instead of man being at the present time an immortal being, he is dependent upon Christ—the great Life-giver—for a future existence; and that he comes into possession of immortality and eternal life at the resurrection of the dead, which will take place at the second coming of Christ.

MARANATHA.

BY E. P. M.

Do believers need a motive to personal holiness of heart and life? Let them cherish the "blessed hope" of the instant appearing and personal fellowship of the holy Jesus. Looking constantly for Christ and the coming glory will subdue the carnal, and exalt the spiritual mind.

"When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth," etc. "I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is; and every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself. And if we need a motive to brotherly love, what can be more influential than the thought of the imminent coming of Him who has loved us all and given himself for us, and who has so often and earnestly entreated us to love one another. "And this I pray, that your love may abound more; ... that ye may be sincere, and without offense till the day of Christ."

Are believers "conformed to this world"—conformed to the system of maxims, customs and things that most commonly prevail in this age, among worldlings, who are all more or less under the dominion of the wicked one? Then they are surely unmindful of their heavenly citizenship and inheritance, to be revealed at his coming. They have forgotten their pilgrim state and their eternal home.

The church is not triumphant and regnant now, but militant, and waiting for her king and her kingdom. The true bride fasts and mourns her absent bridegroom. Purple and fine linen are a mockery to her now. When the church ceases to be the expectant bride of Christ, she becomes the harlot of the world.

"Our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." Paul speaks of the crown awaiting "all those who love his appearing," and then says, "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." He speaks of "turning from idols to serve the living God and to wait for his Son from heaven." When Peter said, "Behold we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" Jesus replied, "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses," etc.

Nothing can break the fatal spell of the world and make us "non-conformists" like this blessed hope. Nothing can cast out the idols of the heart like the expulsive power of this new and holy affection. Nothing can pale the glory of earth like a bright and steady vision of this coming glory of heaven. Nothing like this can enable us to say and sing from the heart,

"Perishing splendors pass away,
Vanishing glories that decay,
Thither I haste and cannot stay,
Mine is the rest to come.
Not for me are these earthly toys,
Not for me are these fading joys;
Mine be the glory when He comes,
Mine the eternal home."

We are warned against hasty and unjust judgments, quarrels, and litigations by the unerring judgment to be meted out when the great Judge comes, who is represented as "standing at the door." "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come," etc.

We may advise those who wrong us that now is the best time to settle, and we may admonish them that they will be compelled to a settlement "on that day." We are exhorted to sobriety and sincerity by the same motive. "The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer." "Let your moderation be known unto all men, the Lord is at hand." "That ye may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ."

If we seek words to awaken and warn a deluded and slumbering world, let us open our Bibles and read, "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." "Behold! he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him; and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." "The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night, For when they shall say, peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance" etc. "God now commandeth men everywhere to repent, because he hath appointed a day," etc. "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema maranatha." Enoch, who walked with God among antedeluvian sinners, warned the wicked that the Lord was coming with ten thousand of his saints, to judge and punish the ungodly.

PAUL'S PARADISE.

J. R. SMITH.

I have a letter before me that I received a few days ago from a brother who is trying to substantiate the theory of the immortality of the soul, and heaven as the home of the saints; and among other things which he brings forward to sustain his theory was Paul's paradise, found in the 12th chapter of 2nd Corinthians. After quoting the 2nd, 3d and 4th verses, he says: "After reading this, can we possibly understand the apostle as believing the soul, or spirit, could in no case be separated from the body?"

Paul was speaking of "visions and revelations of the Lord." He did not say that his soul, or his spirit, was caught up, as he is made by the brother to say; but distinctly says that "he was caught up into paradise." Paul was caught up in a vision, as in the case of the beloved disciple upon the island of Patmos; the only difference is that Paul did not reveal unto us what he saw in the vision, while John has. Paul says that he "heard unspeakable words, that it was not lawful [or possible] for a man to utter"; but John has told us all about it; and in speaking of the beauties and the glories of the saints' future and everlasting home, he says—"I saw a new heaven, and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, .. and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new." Is this true? It is, glory to God!

Hark! listen to the voice of the recording angel—"And he said unto me, Write; for these words are true and faithful." "No more death" signifies there has been death where God and his people are to dwell. Has there ever been any death in heaven? Has there ever been any pain, or sorrow, or crying there?

We read again—"There shall be no more curse; for the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it." Has there ever been any curse in heaven? "No more curse" signifies there has been curse where the throne of God and the Lamb is to be; therefore heaven is not the home of the saints. "The heaven, even the heaven of heavens is the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." "Evil doers shall be cut off; but those who wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever."

In referring to the future home of the saints, Peter says—"By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth, standing out of the water and in the water; whereby the world that then was [at the time of the flood], being overflowed with water, perished; but the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Then "violence shall no more be heard in the land, neither wasting nor destruction within her borders; thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever."

That long-deferred prayer of the universal church shall then be answered, and the kingdom of God shall then indeed come, and his will be done in earth as it is done in heaven.

When Jesus was here upon earth, he promised his disciples that he would come again. He had previously told them he was going away, and that where he was they could not come. They were sorrowful and troubled about it, and to comfort their hearts Jesus said unto them—"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Glory be to God! In a little from this we "shall see the King in his beauty," and behold the land which was then afar off.

This very planet upon which we live will then be purified, beautified, glorified, and adorned in everlasting splendor, as the home of the saints, and the crucified King of eternal glory. "His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the rivers to the ends of the earth."

It was with bright anticipation that Paul looked forward to that heavenly mansion which Jesus had gone to prepare. "For here," says the apostle, "we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come." This was not a spiritual city, for Paul "looked for a city which hath FOUNDATIONS; whose builder and maker is God." When the home of the saints—that New Jerusalem which John saw, and which is being prepared, shall descend "from God out of heaven," as most assuredly it will, then Paul will come into full possession of the glorified mansion which Jesus promised should come down, and for which he so earnestly groaned, desiring to be clothed upon with the house from heaven. Paul did not desire to be unclothed, but clothed upon; that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

O, how sweet it will be when our weary feet press the shining strand, far beyond the dark river of death, to pluck fruit from Life's fair tree "which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Here we love to sing and pray together and talk of our blessed hope; but in the New Earth our hope will be changed to fruition; and "every creature which is in heaven, and all that are on earth, and all that are under the earth, and all that are in the sea, will be heard singing, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign ON THE EARTH."

New Bedford, Mass.

THE END OF ALL THINGS.

It is not strange that natural philosophers should be constantly tempted to the endeavor to pierce through the darkness of futurity and divine the fate which lies before our globe. Modern researches, and the careful collation and comparison of all ascertained facts or probable conclusions in reference to the conditions of life on this planet, have added much to the sum of our knowledge, although the great problems of the origin and destiny of the human race are as far as ever from solution. Man may still ask of himself: "Whence? and Whither?" and science can only supply him with conjectures. There are, indeed, scientific men who profess to answer these questions to an absolute certainty; but when we remember that their conclusions of ten years ago differ widely from their conclusions of to-day, it is impossible to doubt that they are still groping in the dark. Yet much has been revealed. . . .

The latest writer on the question is Prof. Clifford, who contributes an interesting article to the April number of the Fortnightly Review. He shows, what has often been shown before, that all life on this planet depends upon the sun for its continuance. The sun itself is cooling gradually—its sources of light and heat are wasting away, and its bulk is diminishing. Prof. Clifford is inclined to accept the belief that the earth, "instead of being attracted to the sun's centre, is attracted to a point behind the centre," and consequently that it will eventually be deprived of all heat and light, and sink into a frozen mass. Mr. Proctor, as our readers will remember, inclines to the opposite theory, and thinks it probable that the earth will fall into the sun, which orb he regards as the future abode of some race, the very germs of which at present only exist scattered through space. But all inquirers agree that the seeds of decay are in the sun itself, and that in the course of ages it, too, must cease to exist, at least in its present form. . . .

There have been stars which shone steadily in "this brave o'erhanging firmament" for unknown cycles of time, and then have disappeared altogether. There have been others which suddenly blazed out into startling radiance, and then were eclipsed into everlasting night. It is the destiny which the sacred prophet of old foretold for our earth—"the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old, as a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner."

It is when science attempts to descry what is beyond all this that she departs from her proper province. And Prof. Clifford, like so many other philosophers of the present day, does not hesitate to express the belief that with the destruction of the earth will come the destruction of "all organized beings upon the earth," and of "the consciousness that goes with them." Man's existence and hopes perish with him. He is but a part of matter, and when he dies he returns to nothingness. Such is the dark and melancholy view of a large and constantly increasing circle of scientific men. "We," says Prof. Clifford, at the end of his article, "who hold that belief, must just face the fact and make the best of it." To our minds, there is no "best" about such a theory, and since science cannot possibly find out anything upon the subject, it is much to be deplored that its spokesmen labor so hard to destroy the belief which affords to mankind the only possible consolation and support under the endless sorrows of life.

It is this unsettling of faith which is doing so much injury to the Protestant church, and driving so many powerful minds to the Catholic church by the sheer force of reaction from one extreme to another. For there, at least, no doubts or misgivings are permitted. It rejects all the conclusions of science which are at variance with any part of its creeds, and says to all within its fold, "I alone tell you the truth, for I speak the word of God. He that doubts that word, even in the smallest particular, is lost to all eternity. He that believes it shall never die." And it is not difficult to imagine how this firm and immovable attitude in the midst of all that is changing, has irresistible attractions for men, even of the rarest intellect and acquirements. Tossed long in the sea of doubt and bewilderment, they cease to use their reasoning powers in reference to the vast problems of life, death, and the future, and find a quiet and secure haven in the Catholic church.

Those of our readers who recall the process which Dr. Newman decribes himself as having undergone will have no difficulty in understanding how and why it is that Romanism has of late years recovered so much of the ground which it had lost. It will not admit of doubt, and it laughs science to scorn. There is no good reason why Protestants should not hold with equal tenacity to the foundations of the christian religion—but the fact is plain that a large proportion of them do not. It is, however, toward belief, and not toward scepticism, that the higher feelings of man's nature will forever turn. As Clough has so well written:

"When all is thought and said,
The heart still overrules the head;
Still what we hope we must believe,
And what is given us, receive.
Must still believe, for still we hope,
That in a world of larger scope,
What here is faithfully begun
Will be completed, not undone."

THE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE WORLD A SIGN OF THE END.

God in his prophetic Word has given a very clear and explcit history of the specific phases and incidents of this world, in all its departments—physical, political, ecclesiastical, social and financial, which shall exist when the end of the gospel age shall come. These foretold events, when they transpire, become signs indicating the approach of that event.

Christ applied this principle when he said—"So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it ('the end of the world') is near, even at the doors." Matt. 24: 33. The "things" were the predicted events described as taking place just prior to and in connection with his second coming. Consequently, when they are seen, the people of God are invited to lift up their heads, knowing that their redemption is nigh.

God has made these signs very definite, having presented many peculiar circumstances, not always existing, and giving many of that class as happening in the different departments at the same time. If but one class of events were given, and those in one department, there would be more liability to mistake them· But at one period all the specialities in all the departments must take place, to prove that any of them are signs.

What has God taught us will be the financial condition of the world when the end shall come. The Psalmist saw this condition would be the result of certain positions at the day of retribution, and said:

"The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor: let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined. For the wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth. He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages; in the secret places doth he murder the innocent; his eyes are privily set against the poor. He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor; he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net. He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones. He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten; he hideth his face; he will never see it. Arise, O Lord; O God, lift up thine hand; forget not the humble." Ps. 10.

Here the rich and the poor are represented as being in conflict, and the Lord lifting up himself against the rich, and this is the final judgment, for he says—"Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man; seek out his wickedness till thou find none." The passage does not show that the wickedness of the rich will cease because they shall be converted, but because they shall be "broken,"—destroyed; for he explains, and says:

"Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it. I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not; yea, I sought him, but he could not be found." Ps. 37: 34–36.

Again he says: "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish, it is that they shall be destroyed forever." Ps. 92: 7. These divine predictions prove conclusively that when the final judgment comes, the rich will be rapidly increasing their wealth at the expense and grinding oppression of the poor. That these oppressors will hold the "land" and compel the laborers to till it, according to their extortionary dictation.

The prophet Zephaniah evidently saw through his prophetic glass the same events, and their results; for he says, "Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord God; for the day of the Lord is at hand; for the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice; he hath bid his guests. And it shall come to pass in the day of the Lord's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel." Zeph. 1: 8. Their garments will be strangely ornamented, richly adorned, distinguishing this aristocratic class from their servants. He then, as the Psalmist did, presents the poor or laboring class as antagonistic to their "masters," saying, "In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, which fill their master's houses with violence and deceit." Vs. 9.

This language shows that the controversy between the rich and poor will eventuate in open hostilities, the laborers leaping on the threshold of their master's houses, and filling them with violence. He then proceeds to describe more minutely the fearful contest between the warring parties, and repeats, to make it more emphatic, the grand truth that when these events come to pass, "The great day of the Lord is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly." He says:

"Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, for all the merchant people are cut down; all they that bear silver are cut off. And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are settled on their lees; that say in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil. Therefore their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation; they shall also build houses, but not inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but not drink the wine thereof. The great day of the Lord is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the Lord; the mighty man shall cry there bitterly. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers. And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord; and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; but the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy; for he shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land." Vs. 11–17.

These terrible scenes of destructive conflict, to take place at the day of the Lord, are typified, illustrated, by the merchants of Maktesh and a rebellious church worshiping at Jerusalem. The class who will "howl" when their servants come upon them with violence are those who handle "silver" and are possessed of "goods," "houses," "vineyards," etc., and these will become a booty not to be enjoyed by those who take them, but in their "wrath" they will waste them; for it is to be "a day of wasteness and desolation." It will result finally in real war; for the "trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers" will be sounded. Then shall the blood of the rich be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung.

He then shows that the capitalists will seek to avert this terrible result by the use and influence of their silver and gold; but that this movement would fail them in the final struggle, and they would be ground under the awful stone of pent-up revenge. Some may very confidently interpret these predictions as applying to events long ago recorded, but we feel confident that a divine interpretation is given them in the New Testament, where their chronological application is made to the time when Christ will come a second time.

James evidently quotes from Zephaniah, and applies the predictions under consideration to a period future from his time; clearly interpreting the prophet's day of the Lord to be that of Christ's future coming. The prophet represents the people as howling because of distress that should come upon the merchants and capitalists; the apostle represents the same class as howling because of the depreciation and threatened destruction of their treasures. The prophet speaks of the garments, silver, houses and lands of the rich; the apostle speaks of the garments, silver and fields (lands) of the rich. The prophet presents the wealthy in connection with their servants, and the apostle does the same. Zephaniah shows that the two classes would have strife, as employers and employed; James states the same thing. The prophet speaks of a day of wrath and distress; the apostle says—"Howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." The prophet says—"The day of the Lord is at hand"; the apostle says—"The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." The prophet presents the church, figuratively, by Jerusalem, as sharing in the experiences of that time, and represents it as passing through testing trials, and the punishment of its unfaithful members as impending; the apostle presents the same facts, saying—"Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold the Judge standeth before the door." We think there is but little chance to doubt that the predictions of both relate to the same events. Those of the apostle must therefore be taken as a divine interpretation and an enlarged explanation of the prophets.

Let us now carefully examine the apostle's prophetic history of these classes and events, as signs of the approach of "the day of the Lord."

The "rich men" are represented as being distressed by circumstances thrown around them indicating adversity—"miseries that shall come upon them; therefore, Christ can not come until the rich capitalists are disturbed and threatened, as a class, on account of their wealth and the use they make of it.

These distressing circumstances will threaten to diminish the value of their wealth or to destroy it, like goods "corrupted," "garments moth eaten," and "gold and silver cankered." The threatened depreciation or destruction of their wealth will come on account of its being stored away, where it will not be used as it aught to be, for the happiness and comfort of all who were instruments in producing it, as garments, not used, become "moth eaten," and gold, not circulating, becomes "cankered."

The fact that this wealth has accumulated in the hands of one class in large quantities more than they can employ, the surplus not being used for the benefit of those who need it, is a sufficient "witness" that the rich are in the wrong in this controversy, as far as these facts are concerned.

The wealth will be concentrated in larger quantities than usual, either in the hands of very rich individuals or wealthy corporations; for the apostle says "Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

The great question of dispute, which shall threaten the property and peace of the rich, will be between them and their "laborers who have reaped down their fields," or have been instrumental in increasing their great treasures by their labor. The question will turn on the amount of "wages" or just share of the profits which they should receive for their labor.

The capitalists will "keep back by fraud"; i. e., will not pay their laborers what justice and equality demand; thus making themselves superabundantly rich at the expense and poverty of the laboring class.

These circumstances will cause the laboring class to "cry"—express distress, want, oppression—and petition for relief, an increase of wages, and for a distribution of the unemployed and wasting wealth which by justice and equity should be shared by them. These plaintive "cries" of hungry men, their wives and helpless children, will enter "into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth," and should attract the attention and draw the sympathy of his servants upon the earth.

The capitalists will feel and act, as they draw near the end, like a conquering, "wanton," "slaughtering" army, who by brute force and authority of government carry away the goods that rightfully belonged to others, driving them from their homes and taking the bread out of the mouths of innocent and defenceless ones.

Such heart-rending scenes will cause the hearts of christianized, sympathetic humanity to bleed, and earnestly desire a correction of these grievous evils; but they are exhorted to "be patient,"—not attempt to correct them by human combination or efforts, but wait until the Judge shall appear; for his coming "draweth nigh."

In our next we shall attempt to show that these wonderful predictions are being rapidly and signally fulfilled. May God illuminate us, so that we may understand the signs of our times, and prepare for an eventful future.

BRO. BOUTELL.

Bro. L. Boutell is very sick, doubtless unto death. He has had one or two shocks of paralysis, which have completely broken his nervous system, and every organ of the body seems to have lost its vitality. He is mentally and physically sinking into death. He is very rapidly failing, and if the Lord does not interpose his power to stay the curse, he must very soon sleep the dreamless sleep.

When he is conscious he is very happy, and praises God heartily and constantly. There seems to be a hallowed, sacred influence in his presence. It is sad to see one of our most faithful and beloved brethren in the ministry, who has so nobly and successfully defended the great and important truths of the gospel, sinking down at his post; but his armor is all on, and the last glances of his eye watching the strategetical movements of the enemies of Christ.

But there is a silver lining to this dark cloud; for he exhibits the heavenly characteristics of sanctified, christianized humanity. He manifests no interest in conversing upon common subjects; but when the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the signs of the times, and the blessedness of the coming kingdom are referred to, he invariably arouses, like an old soldier at the sound of martial music, and calls into action all the sinking, vital forces, in expressions of joyful praise and triumphant expectation.

We said to him—"The trees are putting forth. We know that summer is nigh." His eye brightened, and with emphatic and measured sentences he said: "Yes—that is so. So likewise ye—when ye shall see—all these things—know that it is near—even at the doors." He then, with a very broken voice, rapturously sung—

"Roll swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

Again he broke out, with an energy which was beyond his own, and sung—

"In that bright world no tears will flow; Death"—

and stopped, as if he had come to a gulf which had not been passed, and then with a falling cadence said very impressively—"Blessed—rest—thrice blessed rest." So sink good men down into death's undisturbed "rest."

VALLEJO.

At the present time (April 13th) we are engaged in very interesting union meetings in Vallejo. They are being held at Farragut hall, which has been densely crowded with about one thousand people. The Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterians and Adventists are united in the work, and the interest is daily increasing. The meetings began the 8th inst., under the direction of Bro. Hammond, who remained only two days, and then returned to San Francisco.

By the way, we saw it stated in one of the eastern papers that Bro. Hammond frightens the children, by giving them shocking representations of hell. We wish to say this is not true. We have heard no preacher talk to children in a sweeter manner; attracting them to Jesus by showing them how he loved them. His tender way of presenting the dear Savior to them melts their young hearts, and causes them to submit readily to be his happy disciples. A few weeks since we stated that we had not heard Bro. Hammond preach about hell fire, but since then, he has spoken to adults on that subject.

The union meetings in this city have a promising prospect. Several have given their hearts to the Lord, and quite a number are under conviction. Strong men are becoming deeply interested, and have commenced to pray. We have three meetings a day in the hall, and an open air meeting on the street every evening before we begin at the hall. We have spoken on the street, in company with other preachers, every day, to large and attentive audiences. The people seem to be more willing to hear the good news of salvation through Christ, than at any former period. The Spirit of God is working upon their hearts. Men, who a few days ago, said they did not believe the Bible, are now attending the meetings every night, and are praying for pardon. A large number remain in the inquiry meetings to converse on the subject of salvation through Christ. These inquiry meetings are specially interesting and profitable, as they afford an opportunity for every christian to work, and to find out the state of mind of all present. We are quite surprised to see the willingness of the unconverted to converse on the subject of christianity, and equally astonished at the backwardness of many of the professed disciples of Jesus to engage in the work of trying to lead men to the Savior. Some seem to be much more anxious to proselyte them to their theology, than to persuade them to be christians. Such are often the most bitter opposers of union meetings.

If a person was drowning, what should we think of one who would not help get him out, because some of other denominations were there also to help? Sinners are going to perdition. Shall we refuse to unite with every other christian in a noble and earnest effort to save them? We trust those who are looking for the speedy coming of Jesus will be the first to unite, heart and hand, with every one who will labor to save men from the approaching destruction.

We sometimes hear the objection, "I do not believe in compromising the truth, for the sake of a union." We say, Amen. When a man is found sick, or wounded by the way side, and a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist and Adventist, unite to carry him into the house, and each gives him a piece of money, do those men compromise their christianity, or sacrifice any truth? How would it look, if one of those five men should refuse to help save the afflicted man, because the other four held some doctrinal points of theology, differing from his own, and about which christian men honestly differ, while at the same time they truly love Jesus. Such a refusal would be a disgrace to common humanity. But how much greater the importance of uniting with every one who will assist in leading sinners to Christ. The one exceeds the other as much as eternal surpasses temporal salvation. We are too near the judgment to be building up sectarian walls, or to hold up those which never should have had any existence. Perfect love for God is a happy remedy for all these evils. The evidence is bright which shows that Jesus is coming soon. Let us do all in our power to save men. Let this be the one grand aim of all our efforts. It is the most noble work in which we can be engaged. For this object Jesus suffered and died.

This morning (Monday, April 19th) we are to take our final departure from Vallejo. In looking over the last eleven days, we find great reason to thank God for what we have seen, heard and felt. We leave this morning with a joyful heart, and happy remembrances connected with this visit. The meetings commenced by Bro. Hammond, and continued by the united efforts of all the pastors in the city, excepting the Episcopal and Catholic, have already resulted in great good. Men with grey hairs, temperate men, young men and women, and many children, have given themselves to the Lord, and are rejoicing in his love. They are truly new creatures. Many are under conviction. Among these are some of the leading men in the city. The common testimony of the people says there has never before been so good religious interest in Vallejo. One special reason for this is the fact that the Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Adventists, united together to save sinners. The more they worked together the more they loved each other, and the richer the blessings from the Lord.

We had meetings at 9.30 A. M., open air meetings on the streets at 7 P. M., and in Farragut Hall at 7.30. The open air meetings reached some that would not otherwise have become interested. Good order prevailed continnally. Men who had lost all interest in religious matters, now attend every evening, and are inquiring, What must we do to be saved? The revival tide is still rising, and the people are becoming more and more anxious about being ready for the coming kingdom. It was a charming sight yesterday to see the five congregations all in one large hall, so intermingled that denominational walls were not in sight. The singers from the several churches also united their voices in the stirring revival songs, that produced a charming effect upon the audience. It was the finest sight we have ever witnessed in Vallejo. Everybody seemed to be delighted with what they saw and heard. In the morning Bro. Baker, a Baptist preacher and Sabbath school missionary, preached an excellent sermon. At 2.30 P. M. a mass children's meeting was held, conducted by Bro. Trefren (Methodist), from Sacramento. He has also had the general management of the meetings for several days. He is a skillful laborer in revival meetings. At half-past six o'clock a large open-air meeting was held. At half-past seven o'clock we preached in Farragut Hall, which was crowded by some seven hundred. An inquiry meeting followed, when many remained for religious conversation. Several gave their hearts to the Lord last night, and many more are almost persuaded. The spirit of union manifested has disarmed many sceptics, and convinced them there is a reality in the christian religion, more than any thing else they have witnessed. They say if we had always seen this, we should not have been sceptics. It is certain that the blessing of the Lord is specially on real union meetings. The union was for the purpose of saving sinners. It is not a union of creeds, but of hearts in Christ. The meetings are to be continued; and glorious results are expected.

A SPECIAL CASE OF NEED.

We have received several letters from Western New York, setting forth the condition of Bro. W. S. Woodbury; and, although we do not usually publish such requests, we think this case demands notice. He is a blind brother, and has a wife with one hand disabled, and is sick unto death with a cancer. He has a little home for his family, but it is under a mortgage of three hundred dollars, which must immediately be discharged, or his family will be left homeless. He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, who will give great interest. Let all cheerfully do their duty in this and all other cases of sickness and poverty. Send to W. S. Woodbury, East Rush, Monroe Co., N. Y.

J. C.

BRO. H. S. MCLEOD, Healdsburg, Cal., writes:—"We have just closed a series of union meetings, continuing through nearly two weeks. Through them all those who already knew and loved the Lord have been refreshed and strengthened. I think I might say our souls have been feasted. We have had one among us as our leader of most christian-like spirit and mien. He has often made us think of the dear Lord himself, as he walked among the people, so meek, so earnest, so disinterested, and with habits so simple and pleasing. He also sometimes seemed as Paul must have seemed to the christians who felt the power of his eloquence and warm zeal in the Master's work. How he roused us all up to work! Every one not acquainted with Christ must be urged and entreated to give their hearts to the blessed Savior; so we all worked as never before, and God gave us richly of his Spirit, and many yielded to its blessed power and became happy children of the loving Father. Many are rejoicing who never knew this best of all joys before.

We had several children's meetings, which were well conducted and very delightful, both in their spirit and power. Many children feel that they are truly the Lord's dear children, and it is only a pleasure to them to sign the covenant card, the same as that used in Mr. Hammond's meetings, in San Francisco. One hundred of these cards have been taken here, and more are needed. A kind christian lady is to meet these young disciples once a week, to help them to grow in grace and in strong christian character.

Just before these blessed meetings began we had started a Chinese school. As is usual they are very docile, and quick to learn. There is much satisfaction in teaching them; perhaps as much as there would be in their own country for the same purpose. Our aim is to lead them to the dear Savior. We invite them to church, and every Sabbath evening they come all together, and take seats in a corner, near the pulpit, giving quite a foreign look to our audience. We long to see their minds enlightened and their hearts given to Jesus. Our trust is in God and the power of the Holy Spirit.

Our meetings closed on the evening of April 2nd. We had the last of a goodly number of practical, analytical sermons, most clearly showing how we may test our own christian character. This was followed by an excellent inquiry meeting, nearly the whole audience remaining. Now how eager were all the christian workers in the work! When could so many be brought into this state of mind and heart again,—this willingness to give up all for Jesus? How great was our joy when one and another, through the crowd, testified with beaming face that they had found him precious! One of the most thrilling events of our meetings was, when our truly consecrated leader arose from prayer, singing, "I am trusting, Lord, in thee." After this meeting, came the parting, for he was to leave in the early morning train to return to San Francisco. Our hearts were truly grateful for this precious bit of the great revival, which God had sent us by the hand of this good man. I think we might easily have understood the scene in Acts 20: 36–38."

MINUTES
Of the Second Quarterly Session of the Kansas Central A. C. Conference.

April 3rd the Conference was called to order by the Pres., N. S. Bryan. Preaching brethren present: Brn. V. F. Hunt, J. C. Smith, D. Webster and N. S. Bryan. On motion Bro. Levi S. Smith was elected Sec. pro tem. Conference adjourned till five o'clock, P. M. April 4th Conference convened pursuant to adjournment. Called to order by the President. A selection of Scripture was read from 23rd Psalm, and an appropriate hymn sung, after which prayer was offered by Bro. Bryan. On motion Bro. V. F. Hunt was received into this Conference. Bro. Hunt was also chosen Evangelist for this district.

On motion the Conference recommends to the State Conference, a division of the State into two Conferences. It was determined to hold the third Quarterly Conference for this district with the church at Key West, Coffey Co., Kansas, the first Saturday in July next, and over Sunday. Bro. Daniel Webster was chosen to deliver an address at the next Quarterly session.

A motion was made and carried that this Conference give to Bro. N. S. Bryan and A. Preston, letters of recommendation to the Annual Conference for license and ordination. The Conference then listened to a very able and earnest address delivered by Bro. Hunt, which was meat in due season; showing us the necessity of being earnest and active in the cause of the Lord; for the time has come when the judgment message must be preached.

A general and cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of Jesus to attend the next Quarterly meeting of this Conference.

The preaching during the session was good and earnest, and we believe that a good impression was left with those that came to hear.

There being no further business before the Conference, a motion was made and carried, to adjourn, to meet with the church at Key West, Saturday, July 1st, 1875, at two o'clock, P. M. LEVI S. SMITH, Sec.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TRUTH AND HER CHAMPIONS OFTEN DISOWNED.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brethren:—The Lord has been gracious to me another month. I have tried to put in good time in the cause. The prospect in this field is very encouraging indeed. The churches seem to be coming to the Bible standard of piety.

At Bethel we had a pleasant season, considering the small congregation on account of the heavy rains. Bro. Silas Smith is still living, who has been at the point of death for eight weeks, with soft cancer on the left gland of the neck. He has been resigned to the will of God, and apparently perfectly happy during all his illness; and I learn recently that he is better. It may be that his labor is not yet done; and if not, the Lord will raise him.

On Friday, April 9th, I was called by telegram to the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., to attend the funeral of a Sister Henegan, who was led to embrace Jesus six months ago, through my humble efforts. For the first time, I gave those people the Bible hope of a resurrection to eternal life when Jesus comes.

Bro. A. M. B. Graham, who had been with me at my own place on the Sunday before, was also here, and took part in the funeral services. He preaches as he travels in business, and thus does much good in helping to scatter truth.

At night took the A. & C. train for Trenton, Ga. Saturday morning went to Shilo Church, where I met the little band of pilgrims, all buoyant with hope. Satan had been doing his best to sow seeds of trouble here, and divide the flock; but praise the Lord, some of the sisters, through faithful effort and earnest prayer, overcame the enemy, and now all is harmony.

Sunday we had a blessed season around the Lord's table. Bro. D. B. Waldrop was with me, and preached the gospel with much earnestness. Last Thursday night I spoke here in my own town. Friday A. M., went to Scottsboro. Met Bro. J. M. Stewart, and went with him out to his church at Goose Pond. Found the church under his care doing as well as could be expected for a young vine. Spoke Friday night and twice Saturday.

Met Sunday A. M., at 9 o'clock, to witness the organization of a Sabbath School, and assisted, gave ten minutes intermission, and spoke an hour and fifteen minutes to an attentive audience, then ten minutes intermission and came around the table to commemorate the sufferings of Jesus. Twenty-five minutes intermission, and spoke again one hour, and then it seemed (judging from their patient attention) that the people were not half so wearied as I felt.

After taking some refreshment, Bro. Stewart and I went on mules five miles into Scottsboro, where I tried to give a reason of our faith. After I closed a young Bro. Weaver, who is preparing for the ministry in the Orthodox ranks, asked me several questions, some of which had no bearing on any thing in my discourse. He convinced me that he was looking through popular theological spectacles, and did not wish to use the naked eye to look at the literal Word. Last night we had a meeting here again in my own community, with Bro. Crawford, and we told the people that God said—"Watch, for ye know not when the time is."

Brethren and sisters, I believe that to preach definite time brings reproach on the cause we love so well. Bro. Thurman, like those brethren who proclaimed '73 time, is now disappointed, and perhaps lost more or less influence in winning souls to our Redeemer. If we know what hour the thief is coming we will wait till that hour before we begin to watch; but if we know not the hour, we will be watching all night. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not when the time is."

At Goose Pond we received into the church Bro. John A. Bryan, a very promising young minister from the Cumberland Presbyterian church. Bro. Bryan is another one who has been excluded for preaching truth, and has sought a home among the despised pilgrims who are looking for Jesus to give them eternal life. The following is a copy of his exclusion:—

"Whereas, Bro. John A. Bryan, a Licentiate under the care of the Jackson Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, as appears both from examination in open Presbytery and his own confession, holds to the doctrines commonly known among us as Second Adventism; and

Whereas, Said Bro. Bryan refuses to refrain from preaching said doctrines; and

Whereas, We believe that the propagation of these doctrines is and would be detrimental to the cause of Christ; therefore

Resolved, That said John A. Bryan be dismissed from the care of this Presbytery and his license revoked." (Copy test.) Signed R. D. Shook, Moderator; and T. Boyd Foster, Clerk.

Thus Bro. Bryan is dismissed from a Presbytery because he will not refrain from preaching truth; but instead of stopping his mouth they have set him free. Jesus holds a claim on him, and he is to-day the Lord's free man, and will preach his Word, and I pray that success may attend him. He is in deep earnest, and wants some tracts. His address is Henryville, Marshall Co., Ala.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me and mine, that we may be faithful. The Lord has opened the way for me to go more into the field, and I do not mean to be idle till he comes. My wife's health is improving, and I expect to spend more of my time out in new fields. Two years ago Bro. Smith and I struggled alone; now we have five churches and six preachers. Praise the Lord for his goodness. Let us be ready for his coming. JOHN A. CARGILE.

SALT WATER CAMPMEETING.

I would like to say a few words through our paper to correct a wrong impression, and to state a few facts in regard to distances, etc., of the grove, in Seabrook, from the sea-shore.

Bro. Munger says—"The grove is within seventy-five rods, and in plain view of 'Old Ocean.'" In the Crisis of April 14th he says: "It is within seventy-five rods of salt water." This is true at high water. From this point the ocean can be seen, at least at full tide. From here it is one and a half miles to the sea-shore, through or across the marsh, and cannot be reached except by boats; and these are dependent upon wind and tide. The distance to the sea-shore, except as above stated, is, to Salisbury Beach, six and one half miles, or, to Hampton Beach, seven miles.

If a meeting is wanted in this section, let it be located in some better place than this, where the sea-shore can be reached without the aid of boats. That is what the people want; and I think such a place can be found.

Seabrook, N. H. H. G. PRESCOTT.

Correspondence

From Sr. Sarah Philbrick.

To the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad:—It is with emotions of gratitude that I attempt to write a few lines for the Crisis. I live in a remote corner of the city of Bangor, Me., where we have had prayer meetings every Tuesday afternoon for fifteen years. Brn. Lemuel Smith and John Clifford first started them. Many have fallen, but more have come in. If but two comes we can claim the promise. My dear son, twenty-four years of age, found Jesus in one of these little meetings; and, oh, what a consolation it was to us all. He stood out as long as he could, till he saw he must come or be lost; and the first time he bent the knee he found Jesus. Bless his holy name. He died in about four weeks after, with consumption.

I am now sixty-nine years of age. I was brought up to believe in a hell, prepared to burn souls in forever, and I was slow to believe what the Scriptnres say on the subject; but God opened my eyes, and I praise and thank him for it. The sleep of the dead also, is all plain to me now. I am rejoicing in the truth as it is in Jesus. I feel that my race is almost run. I may sleep, "but not forever;" for all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and come forth. I am almost home—Jesus is coming. I can see the everlasting summer time is near, very near at hand; but of that day and hour I do not pretend to know; still, if we are the children of the light, we do know that that day will not overtake us as thief.

I am expecting that when Abraham gets the land promised him, it will be under the whole heavens. All will be there who have sought for immortality and eternal life through Christ. I expect to be there. I have never suffered for Jesus as some have, but have had all I could bear. My children are all dead—two sons and two daughters. I think sometimes if I could have had one child spared to take care of me in my old age, how nice it would have been, but I asked the Lord for submission, and can say—All is well. They will come again from the land of the enemy. I do not know what to compare myself to but a bed of live coals. One would think there was no fire there, but when the Crisis comes it is like a heavenly breeze; it revives the coals, and gives me a new spring of joy. It is a blessed paper. Give me the Crisis and my Bible, then I can stand the storm. The paper comes to me by the hand of a good sister every Thursday. The Lord bless and reward her. I feel to praise him that he has some faithful watchmen giving meat in due season. I pray that God will keep them right under his wing from all harm and danger.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Dear Editors:—I left the reader March the 22nd. When the sociable was over, we occupied the church again, unmolested, until April 1st. On the last Lord's day of March I immersed seven in Wolf Creek, and on Tuesday three more, making ten in all. Many of the people turned out to witness the ordinance.

This going into the water in early spring disturbed the enemies of the truth, and they sought to disgrace us by slander and threats, and to intimidate me, and stop the people from going to hear. This continued till April 2nd, when we stopped one night to let the church dry, as we had cleaned it that day. Then the bankers and trustees of the M. E. church, and their preacher, Eld. Moor, put in their hands with the trustees of the Congregational church or three of them, who were chosen out of the world to hold that office, and they took the key away from the sexton, who was a church member, and who wished me to continue the meeting. He told me if the leading members were willing, he would have the door opened if he had to take an axe to it; but as we are on the peace side we preferred to go back to the school house. We propped up the floor and began again, and preached five times.

The last night we raised $250 toward building a free house of worship. I do not lay this [unchristian conduct to the church members, but it is quite amusing to see how things work—just as they did in the days of the apostles. They sent off for a new preacher on the last Sunday, and in the evening the M. E. preacher went over to the other church and invited the Congregational preacher to fill his pulpit, and join congregations, as he said both would be small. So they put out the lights and went over. I did not lack for hearers, as many had to leave, because they could not get in.

Twenty-four united with the church, and we still hope for more. Fifteen are yet to be baptized. There must have been nearly fifty that made a start to serve the Lord during that month's work. If an average of one a day holds out, it will be a good investment against the time to come.

I left home when the snow drifts were very deep. A brother cut a tunnel through one drift that he drove through, it being the best way to get along. While absent the snow all went off, so I was on bare ground. The friends did not forget my necessity. They brought me a buggy, and in other ways ministered to my wants.

If such united effort would be made at every place, good might be done, and many be brought from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God.

We propose to put up the Iowa Mission Tent there in May or June, and in our own meeting house we can freely preach Christ. I did not preach the truth for contention. I wanted peace and union, and they would not have it.

But to close up I posted Fly Leaf No. 1 that Bro. A. N. Seymore once published in the Crisis. I think that this last will make them come in with a flag of truce and sue for peace. For over fifteen years I was the war horse, the battle axe, and the braking plow of this state; for a few years past the team refused to pull, yet I was ready to hold the plow.

Brethren, give us the means to navigate. Old times will return to our borders, and souls be saved.

Obituaries.

GOODHUE. In Andover, N. H., March 19th, 1875, my mother, Mary A. Goodhue, aged 72 years.

Mother professed faith in Christ more than forty years ago, was baptized, and united with the Methodist church, of which she was a member until her death. She believed in the old-fashioned Methodist purity, and had a hope that took hold on the resurrection of the dead. During her sickness she said—"I feel the uncertainty of life, but the Word says that there remaineth a rest to the people of God, and, bless the Lord God, I believe it. I am not afraid to die. The grace of God is sufficient yet, and his mercy endureth forever. I may be cast off, but I do not believe it. My blessed Jesus will not cast off any who trust in him, and I believe in trusting in him." She requested me to get an old-fashioned Methodist minister, if I could, to preach her funeral sermon. We hope to meet her, with all the friends of Jesus, on the new earth, when the ransomed of the Lord will come to Zion, with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads, when sorrow and sighing will flee away. Funeral sermon by Geo. N. Bryant, from Ps. 103: 13. SETH GOODHUE.

BOSWELL. In Haverhill, Mass., April 12th, 1875, Bro. Benjamin P. Boswell, aged 72 years.

For many years he has led a devoted christian life. He died as he lived, safely reclining on the bosom of Christ. At almost the last he was heard to join with his daughter in singing the hymn—"Sweetly I'm resting in Jesus." It affords great comfort and consolation to his bereaved family that he fell asleep trusting in Him who will, at the early dawning of the eternal day, awaken him from his slumber, and robe him with immortality. The Advent Church of which he was a member will sadly miss him. Words on a subject dear to him were spoken at his funeral by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, from Rev. 2: 7.

"Our home is where love's star sets not,
But shines through the long sweet years,
Where the pangs of parting are all forgot,
All vanished life's bitterest tears.
Where our soul's best hope shall know no blight,
Where its chords shall feel no pain,
And the thought of ill in that world so bright,
Will never return again." M. V. S.

MORRISON. In Plymouth, Mass., March 17th, 1875, of rheumatic fever, Sister Janette E., wife of Bro. John Morrison, aged 61 years.

Sister Morrison was sick only five days. Her sufferings were beyond physical endurance, yet the last hour of life was breathed out without any apparent distress. Many of our preaching brethren and laity will look back upon her little bethel home, "down by the water side," with a pleasant remembrance, where Monday night prayer meetings were held regularly for years. Sister Janette is gone; her place can never be filled by another. The archangel's trump will disturb her dreamless repose, with the shout—"Come, ye blessed of my Father," then we shall once more greet our sister. May God bless her weeping husband and children with peace on earth and eternal salvation in the coming kingdom. Amen. Funeral services by the writer. J. K. BOYNTON.

GLASS. At Hinesburgh, Vt., Jan. 29th, 1875, Eleazer H. Glass, aged 69 years. His excellent companion, Roselle Glass, followed him in death April 14th, 1875, aged 66 years.

Our brother toiled ardently to complete the chapel recently dedicated at H. He never entered it after its dedication, but speedily sunk into the tomb. His work was well done. A pillar in the church, the brethren sadly miss him. Sister Glass attended his funeral, became ill, went to an Institute at Saratoga, died there, and now sleeps by her husband's side in Hinesburgh. They were respected, worthy, and true; lovely and pleasant in life, and now in death undivided. I buried these precious saints amid the tears of kindred and the sorrows of the church. Subjects for improvement, "The groaning creation," Rom. 8; and "The king of terrors," Job 18. Elder A. A. Hoyt assisted at the funeral of Sr. G. D. T. T.

ALLEN. Fell asleep in Jesus at Baraboo, Wis., April 17th, 1875, Sister Eliza Allen, aged 62 yrs.

Sister A. leaves a weeping companion and a number of children to mourn her absence; besides, her house was the home of God's people, especially his ministers, who have long been welcome there. We mourn, but not without hope. She breathed her life out sweetly in the arms of her Redeemer. Her dust will be guarded by angel watchers, and soon among the elect she will stand on the hills of immortality. Services by the writer. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

LOMBARD. My husband, Anson Lombard, of Carthage, Me., fell asleep in Jesus Sept. 15th, 1874, aged 36 years, after a severe illness of seven months.

He died in the triumphs of faith, looking for a glorious reunion on the new earth when Christ comes to make up his jewels.
MRS. LYDIA D. LOMBARD.

SHEPARDSON. In Gerry, N. Y., April 8th, 1875, Sr. Shepardson, wife of R. Shepardson, aged 80 years.

She had been a professor of religion fifty-five years, and an Advent believer for thirty-two years. She and her husband, who is 84 years old, had lived together sixty years, lacking six months and one day. She was strong and intelligent in the faith of the Lord's coming. No one knew her but to love her, and to mourn her loss from their midst. C. W. LOW.

PLACE. In North Greenwich, N. Y., March 31st, 1875, Flora May, youngest daughter of Andrew and Jennie Place, aged one year and five months.

Where, oh where is our darling?
We have laid her away to rest
Until the sound of the trumpet
Shall bring her forth with the blest.
ANDREW PLACE.

JENNESS. At Rye, N. H., April 19th, 1875, Martha, wife of Joseph J. Jenness, aged 51 years.

A good woman has fallen. Her willing hands were ever ready to minister to the wants of the sick. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of the lonely companion and weeping children. Funeral sermon by E. B. WELLS.

BURNETT. At Chicopee, Mass., April 8th, 1875, Charles A. Burnett, only child of Henry A. and Ada J. Burnett, aged 13 months and 14 days.

Pray for us, that we may be prepared to meet our darling boy and our God. H. A. BURNETT.

ARLIN. In Colebrook, N. H., March 15th, 1875, of scarlet fever, Bertha, daughter of Alvin and Jane Arlin, aged one year.

FOREIGN NEWS.

GREECE.

London, April 24. A dispatch from Athens says considerable excitement prevails over the approaching elections. A state of siege is reported to be impending. Government is concentrating 5000 soldiers in Athens, and it is supposed intends to raise the army to a war footing.

London, May 1. A terrible explosion occurred yesterday afternoon in Bunker Hill Colliery, North Staffordshire, while the miners were at work. At midnight twelve bodies had been taken out. Twenty-three men are yet in the mine. There is no hope that any of them will be recovered alive.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, April 28. Private advices state that over $25,000,000 worth of sugar estates have been burned recently in Cuba by the patriots. Affairs on the island are growing every day more serious and rapidly approaching a crisis.

The volunteers that have gone into the field are mostly laboring men and have been obliged to leave their families destitute. The money they receive while in active service is not sufficient for their wants. The misery and suffering in Havana, and indeed all over the island is heartrending. Planters and estate owners are in despair, for the work of destruction goes on, and every day brings new accounts of burning estates. The number burned during the past few months already amounts to seventy.

The policy of the rebels is by burning indiscriminately all estates belonging to Cubans and Spaniards, to lay waste the country, and deprive the Government of resources for carrying on the war. When the war is over, Cuba will be in ruins, and it will take many years of hard and patient labor to restore it to its prosperous condition. It is feared a revolution may break out in Havana any day, as dissatisfaction is general among all classes. Taxes grow heavier and more numerous every day, while the means of satisfying them are diminishing.

Memphis, Tenn., April 28. Complaints are pouring in from all the surrounding counties of the fearful destruction of horses and mules by buffalo gnats. Many small planters, especially colored ones, are ruined by having their only horses and mules killed and being unable to replace them at the time when they are so badly needed. The Ledger publishes a letter from a planter near Macon, Fayette county, which says: Not less than two hundred horses and mules have died during the past three days within ten miles of this place. I went down to my farm yesterday, distant six miles, and counted thirty-seven dead on the way. I have lost four on my farm and Dr. Hunter five on his, while some planters have lost as high as thirty head. It looks like starvation to a people without money. Some of the farmers will be compelled to turn out part of the crop planted, as they have no money to replace the stock.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The mail from the River Platte, arrived at Southampton on Friday, and brings intelligence of a terrible affair which had occurred at a Jesuit College. A telegram from Buenos Ayres states that the most appalling tragedy for the last fifteen years occurred on Sunday at the Jesuit College, at Buenos Ayres, which was assailed by a mob estimated to number from 10,000 to 30,000. The building was set on fire with petroleum, while some of the priests were killed and others badly wounded. The mob also sacked the Archbishop's palace, having taken offence at a pastoral published a few days before. The Government sent troops to protect the Government House and the convents, and several arrests were made. The National Government, in view of the critical position of affairs, has declared the province to be in a state of siege for thirty days, and proposes to take immediate steps for the prosecution of all parties implicated in Sunday's outrage.

FIRES.—A very destructive fire at Oshkosh, Wis., has nearly ruined the city, leaving a blackened, desolated district of a mile and a half in length and half a mile wide. It is estimated that the loss is $750,000. Three lives were lost, and it was said, "The city is in the hands of a mob, and extra police are on duty."

Three steamers were burned at New Orleans April 23d, and it was feared that many lives were lost.

Corey, Pa., loss $50,000; Elizabeth, N. J., loss $100,000; St. Louis, loss $100,000; Moos Head, Pa., loss $20,000; Zanesville, Ohio, loss $25,000; Jersey City, loss $130,000; Detroit, Mich., loss $150,000; San Jose, Cal., loss $50,000; Hermon, N. Y., loss $150,000.

Tent Meeting and Conference.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Oakville, Conn., Wednesday, May 12th, and remain over Sunday, May 16th.

We go to this new field by invitation of Bro. and Sr. Mills, the only family in the place of like precious faith, and who will accommodate as far as possible. Our brethren, however, had better take along blankets, and some of us can sleep under the tent, if necessary. It is proposed that all business pertaining to the Conn. A. C. Conference be disposed of Thursday, May 13th, and we hope the brethren will be prompt at the business session, that the remainder of the time be devoted to sounding the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. Pray that the Holy Spirit may attend in power.

Oakville lies three miles west of Waterbury, on Watertown Branch R. R. By present R. R. Time Table, trains leave Waterbury for Oakville at 11.50 A. M. and 6.45 P. M. O. D. WOODRUFF.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 8th of April (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary. Let there be a large attendance, as there is business of unusual importance to come before the Conference.

Let all come to this meeting who possibly can. Remember the cause is the Lord's. Let all come with hearts full of love and good will toward men, with the full determination that they will work out their salvation with fear and trembling before the Lord. Now is the time to work for Jesus. The interests of the cause of Christ in this State demand effort, self-sacrifice, and whole heartedness. O that each may come filled with the Spirit of God. Homes will be provided for all. Let each one take this meeting to the Lord, praying that all may be done to his glory.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman. R. F. CLARK, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The York Co. A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session in the chapel at West Parsonsfield, Me., commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 2 P. M. We desire to see a large attendance. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

AN APPEAL.

The season has now arrived when the special work of holding Tent Meetings should be begun. The Mass. Conference has a good Tent ready again for service in the harvest field of the Lord; and the question is: Shall it be sent forth once more with good and faithful laborers to gather in sheaves for Christ, and give the warning of the coming day of God? In order that this may be done, there must be a sacrifice made by the friends of Jesus, and means given to sustain in this way his precious cause.

It is proposed that the Tent this year be taken into new fields, and where our precious faith has not as yet been heard. If this is done, there will be a special necessity for contributions on the part of our churches and people in general, to defray the expenses of these meetings in these new places.

As the Committee, chosen at the late Conference to have the charge of the Tent and make arrangements for the work in connection with it, we invite all who have the means and the heart to give in sustaining this mode of reaching the people, to do so as soon as they can, that we may know how far to go in promising the Tent where it is already requested.

Contributions and pledges can be sent to the Treasurer, ELD. C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

B. YOUNG, L. BOUTELL, C. E. BARNES, I. I. LESLIE, } Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee.

☞ Notice.

The members of the Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference are requested to send to the Secretary their names and address, that each may receive a certificate of membership, according to a vote of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Sec., Box 5140 Boston, Mass.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 19th, and continue to the 28th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board and lodging. All who can are requested to bring Tents.

Brethren in the Lord, do make arrangements to attend this meeting, especially all who reside in the southerly part of this State. Come at the commencement, if possible. We intend to secure good profitable laborers, those who are prepared to bring out an exposition of those prophecies especially applicable to these times, and now in process of fulfillment, when the church will be delivered. This may be the last annual gathering we shall be permitted to enjoy before the Lord will gather his own to himself. Let us do what we can to save the perishing before it is too late. Bro. Munger will have charge of the meeting.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—There will be a Protracted Meeting in Worcester, commencing Wednesday evening, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath. Meetings afternoons and evenings. Bro. E. A. Stockman will be in attendance to preach the gospel. S. G. MATHEWSON.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the lowest market price. Address J. H. DOWNING, Alton Bay, N. H. J. D. SWAIN, for Com.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Monday, August 30th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 5th.

WM. H. MITCHELL, for the Com.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will hold its next session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, on the old camp-ground, commencing June 10th. There will be a boarding house and grocery store, so that all who wish to board or buy can be accommodated. There will be plenty of straw free to all. Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates, also wood.

Come one, come all. Come feeling an interest to save and be saved. This may be our last meeting before Jesus comes. We expect help from abroad. Eld. A. N. Seymour and others will be at the meeting. Our lease of the grounds run out this year. Let all interested be present to devise means and make arrangements for the future.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

TENT MEETINGS.—The Iowa Advent Christian Mission Tent will be pitched (the Lord willing) in Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Thursday, May 27th, to continue over Sunday, June 6th, and longer if duty demands. Let there be a general rally by the brethren and sisters from the surrounding country to this meeting. Let us come to labor and pray for the promulgation of the truth and the salvation of sinners. As this will be the first tent meeting of the season, let us endeavor to strike the right key-note. J. RIDLEY. P. W. HOUGH.

NOTICE.—We expect to start for New England, if the Lord will, about the 15th of May. We shall stop at Chicago about thirty days. We shall be at liberty to engage for meetings after the above date, as far as possible, at any place east of the Missouri River. Our address will be Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas, until May 15th, after which, Chicago, Ill., until further notice.

R. F. & M. J. CLARK.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.

I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

TENT MEETING AND CONFERENCE.—It is proposed to have a Tent Meeting in connection with the Conn. Conference. The Conference business to be promptly disposed of on the FIRST DAY of the meeting, and followed by a Tent Meeting of days, as the Lord may direct.

If any of the churches in Conn., or brethren in the highways and hedges isolated from churches, chapels, or religious meetings of any kind, would like to have the "Conn. Mission Tent" pitched in their vicinity about the middle or twentieth of May, please correspond promptly, giving particulars, with O. D. Woodruff, Secretary, Southington, Conn.

TO THE ADV. CHRIS. CONF. OF NORTHERN PA. AND SOUTHERN N. Y.—This is to notify all who may be interested in this Conference that an effort will be made, at our next annual session, to be held next September, to make some changes in our Conference Constitution. Let there be a full Conference. Done by order of vote of Conference. A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

A. C. Times, please copy.

NOTICE.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Little Marsh Church will be held at Little Marsh, Tioga Co., Penn., commencing May 7th, and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all. For the Church,

E. H. EGGLESTON.

NOTICE.—If any brethren or friends know of any place where a tent meeting will be productive of good, be the means of getting the truth before the people, and saving sinners, write to my address—South Killingly, Conn. Do not let any lack of means on your part hinder you from sending in your request. The Lord will provide in his time and in his own way. E. BELLOWS.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made to furnish lumber for building purposes on the campground at Seabrook, N. H., at the lowest market price, which will not exceed $15 per M. Address CHARLES C. DOW, Kensington, N. H.

N. H. ROBIE, for Com.

TENT MEETING.—There will be a Tent Meeting at Belgrade Mills, Me., the first of June. Particulars hereafter. H. B. SEVEY.

BRO. ROLAND D. GRANT having accepted the call extended to him by the Second Advent Church of Athol, Mass., his labors as Pastor beginning Jan. 1st, 1875, to continue at least one year, all matters of exchange and supply are submitted to him. O. F. BROOKS, Clerk.

NOTICE.—Bro. and Sr. McKinstry have received and accepted a call from the church in Danville, P. Q., to take the pastoral charge, and all arrangements for the supply of the pulpit must be made through them.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."
BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

A NEW TRACT.
"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"
A Work upon the Materiality of Man.
HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.
BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. AG'T.

NOW READY,

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

A NEW BOOK.
THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

THERE REMAINETH THEREFORE A REST.

A. M. MORSE.

Arouse thee to action! O do not delay!
The night swift approacheth; fast goeth the day.
Doff quickly the mantle of stupor so deep;
Enter life's great arena;—there's no time to sleep.

For wailings from voyagers on life's surging sea,
Who are dashed on its breakers, are wafted to thee;
Then out with the life boat! O haste them to save,
Ere they're lost 'mid the foamings of sorrow's dark wave!

Art weary with toiling? dost now for rest sigh?
O do not yet linger; hist! hear ye that cry?
'Tis the death dirge of victims who've been forced to yield
To foes who outnumbered on life's battle field.

Quick! gird on thine armor! there's no time to spare,
Stay not to ask Why, but for help breathe a prayer;
Heed thou the sad wail wrung from hearts that are sore,
And haste to their rescue, thou canst not do more.

Nor yet think of resting. Thy work's not yet done;
Lay not down thine armor till victory's won;
Till thou shalt rank fleetest in life's toilsome race,
O think not of rest, for earth's not its birthplace.

But rest will be thine when earth's dark night gives way
To the glorious light of an eternal day;
And it will not be long, for the dark brow of night
Is lightened by glimpses of morn's coming light.

And then O how blessed! 'tis gain what seemed loss;
Far brightest gems garnish the heaviest cross;
And thy battered armor, toilworn though it be,
Will give place to a glo y-gilt panoply.
And in that bright land where nought can molest,
Thou wilt find thine eternal and long sought for rest.

CONCESSIONS OF AN APOSTLE OF THE NEW FAITH.

T. L. WAUGH.

On the way from Albany to Niagara Falls I met with a German in a railroad car, with whose appearance I was struck. I fell into conversation with him, and was not a little surprised to find in him a man who travels around the country and delivers public lectures against Christianity. To my question whether he meant to be serviceable in alienating mankind from Christianity, he assured me with all earnestness such was the case. One word soon followed another, and I found that he, like Edward J. Hartmann, believed in a universal Spirit dwelling in the universe, and in man as self-consciousness; but he had quite Darwinian, i. e., material views in relation to the beginning of the world.

After I discovered this, I made the assertion that materialism depended on faith on this last ground, as much as Theism in regard to the Bible; for when the Bible commences with the grand sentence—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," it therewith declares something that lies entirely outside of the realm of our experience and scientific research; but when materialism says—"In the beginning there were in the mundane space rotary atoms, which united themselves together as easily as possible to form earthly bodies; wisely arranged themselves to form this beautiful system from kosmos, and finally brought forth organized beings, which again of themselves were unfolded to make more perfect organized beings," it cannot demonstrate it, but only receive it thus on faith; set it down as an unproved supposition of an earthly riddle. And my associate admitted that materialism was as much a matter of faith in this respect as the Bible view of the world.

I now declared to him that I found the passage, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," a thousand times more reasonable than the material dogma according to which chaotic matter must have proportionately arranged itself to form a regulated universe, to produce organic life from an inorganic dead mass, and from crude and waste material produced the thinking spirit. Yet here I had opportunity to remark that the faith of a man in no way depended upon the understanding or reasons for understanding, but is far more a matter of the heart and of the will. My companion powerfully resisted my second assertion, and barricaded himself behind so-called contradictions of the Bible, which I naturally disputed.

But I now presented to his mind the huge gaps admitted by Strauss as existing in the Darwinian theory of development. If then, said I, we men sprang from monkeys, why do we not to-day see a monkey by cultivation and civilization becoming a man? But, as we train, and cultivate, and chastise the monkey, he is still a beast, and remains a beast, and not a man,—not even the pale shadow—not even the memory of a man.

To my joy my companion again conceded this, but then said: "We men did not directly spring from monkeys, but from an intermediate species of beings existing between men and monkeys." "Aye, where are these intermediate beings found then?" I asked incredulously. "Well," was the answer, "they are indeed nowhere to be found longer; they have died out." "Really," I asked, "where, then, do they lie buried? Who, then, has seen them since they were dead? Is there altogether any certain knowledge of their death? Pardon me; at this account the death-message of Mephisto to Martha occurs to me—'Your husband is dead, and presents his compliments to you'; and it almost seems to me as it did once to the little humpbacked minister of the empire of Detmold, who, after he had listened to a long, silly speech of a Frankfort advocate, and was begged to give an answer and a decision, said: 'Surely if I had no hump now, I should make one.' Only confess honorably, dear sir, that the history of the extinct race of monkey-men is a myth, a hypothesis, nothing but a hypothesis, with which men help themselves over the difficulties of the Darwinian doctrine of the origin of man."

And my associate admitted to me that the history of an intermediate species of of beings was truly only a hypothesis, i. e., an unproved assumption. I was satisfied with the admission, but soon broke off the conversation, as I perceived that every concession failed the otherwise respectable and intelligent man who attacked Christianity, and that he did not hesitate to blaspheme the dear Redeemer, whom, thanks to God, I know as the good Shepherd; which went through my heart like thrusts of a knife. Then I said—"If you knew the Lord, you would love him"; and retired.

BE content to attend to duties as they arise; take them as they are sent by Providence. Every moment brings its own responsibilities; and man's wisdom, in this world of sin, of sorrow, and of death, consists in cheerfully using present comforts, and diligently attending to present duties. Let the crumbs, the fragments of time, be gathered up, that nothing be lost.

BY climbing too high on the bough of honor you may hang yourself on the tree of dishonor.

NIGH AT HAND.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

We read in Matt. 4:17 of Jesus preaching repentance, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand"; i. e., another dispensation was at hand, or about to be ushered in. The question is, How long a time did Jesus mean by "nigh at hand"? As near as we can ascertain, it could not have been more than about three and a half years, until "the day of pentecost was fully come," which ushered in "the times of the Gentiles," or "the kingdom of heaven." This indeed was a very short time.

I wish to notice the same term as used by our blessed Savior in Luke 21:31—"Know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." By what means are we to know that the kingdom of God is "nigh at hand"? By certain signs given by our Savior; namely, "signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them," etc. Are not all these things fulfilled? If not, what mean all these wonderful phenomena? what mean those spots on the sun, which astronomers tell us are larger than this earth? what means this wonderful perturbation of the sun, casting out her protuberances for millions of miles? The moon, also, has of late been greatly troubled. We clip the following from a Chicago paper: "It is alleged by astronomical observers that in some parts of it [the moon] the surface has recently become cracked, and large fissures radiate from a common centre as from a volcano. They are of vast extent, one of them being six hundred miles long, from one to three miles wide, and a depth so great that no telescope has yet been able to penetrate the abyss." These, together with the extreme variations, have had their effect on this earth.

In the stars already have appeared some wonderful signs. At a late meeting in the French Academy of Science, it was stated by the learned M. Tacchini that the planet Jupiter was in a state of unusual perturbation, exhibiting now, black stripes, and then, "immense spots," as well as shining girdles and a species of torches. The same report also intimates that Jupiter shows similar activity. Not long since it is said that a star in the northern crown, of the eighth magnitude, seemed to blaze all at once, until it looked like a star of the second magnitude; after a few hours it gradually diminished to its original size.

The earth also has been greatly agitated, as shown by the recent eruptions of Vesuvius and other volcanic mountains, earthquakes, etc.

"The sea and waves roaring." It has been noted by sailors and mariners that the sea has shown unusual commotions, besides the terrible tidal waves, such as have never been known before; not only destroying vessels, but rushing inland at a height of from thirty to fifty feet, carrying whole fleets with them. In one instance it left thirty ships dashed to pieces on the shore when it receded. At other times the tidal waves have submerged whole towns and villages, leaving but few or none to tell the sad tale. There have been more tidal waves in the last few years than have ever been known before. There have also been more storms and hurricanes, that have swept over all parts of the earth, carrying with them terror and devastation, causing "men's hearts to fail them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then [at that time] shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." Jesus says—"When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

We could not dispute the literal fulfillment of the above signs, even if we wished to; and the "distress of nations" is already fast culminating. The whole world seems to be preparing for the great and final conflict. Truly "the kingdom of God,"—that perfect state, when God's will "will be done in earth as it is in heaven,"—that most glorious home of God's dear people, paradise restored, is nigh at hand. According to the use of the term "nigh at hand," we are very near the promised possession. Soon we shall see our blessed Savior, and hear that sweet voice saying—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." O how I long for that glorious time to come when Jesus will remove sin, sickness, pain and death, and fit up this earth for the final abode of the saints. "So come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

THE GOODNESS OF GOD.

WM. D. TUCKER.

The goodness of God to me is indeed a theme worthy of contemplation. It was the exceeding great goodness of God that caused him, after men had sinned and perverted his truth and way of righteousness, to send his only begotten Son to be the Savior of the world. "By grace (divine favor to mankind—God's goodness) are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Eph. 2:8.

As the Lord "is no respecter of persons," therefore his grace is sufficient for all. He loved the whole race of mankind, and sent his only Son—Jesus, to save them from their sins. Oh, what heavenly love was his! And Jesus, too, like the Father, had that same love and great goodness for the human race. Sin was destroying and devastating mankind. Something must be done to save them from their sins and the penalty for sin, which is death. The law of Moses and the burnt offerings could not save the people from the penalty of sin. Jesus was offered as a sacrifice upon the cross, suffered and shed his precious life-blood to wash away the guilty stains of sin, and in the end to save from eternal death those who have been washed by the cleansing stream.

Oh, what exceeding great goodness was bestowed upon us, poor unworthy creatures. We cannot half realize or express in words the goodness of our heavenly Father. If we do not have faith in him who has been so kind to offer unto us this precious "gift," it profiteth us nothing, for if we do not believe in God, we doubt his truth and distrust his power to save us. To the "unbelieving" he never will impart this precious boon. To the believer—the one who has faith in him—he will give the precious "crown of life." Through God's goodness, by faith in him, we shall be saved.

Faith is a belief in the promises of God, which he in his infinite mercy and great goodness has placed before us to read and understand in his Holy Word. Faith in God's Word is believing that Christ died for us, to redeem us, that he rose from the dead the third day, that he ascended up to heaven, there to sit on the right hand of the Majesty on high, interceding for us. It is faith in the Lord to believe that where Christ went we cannot go, and that as he went away "so in like manner" will he also "come again" to raise the sleeping dead and translate the waiting saints, and give immortality—eternal life—unto all those who believe.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Second Quarterly Meeting for 1875 of the St. Paul District of Advent christians convened at Minneapolis at the Advent Chapel on Friday evening, April 2nd, at 7½ o'clock. Sr. Fassett preached to us a good stirring discourse on prayer. Saturday, A. M., met for social meeting. At 2½ P. M., met for business. The President, Bro. O. R. Fassett, being in the chair, the meeting was called to order. Ministers present: L. F. Cole, O. R. Fassett, Sister L. E. Fassett, L. R. Wood, and S. C. Wellcome.

But few delegates were present on account of bad roads. Bro. Styner, from Independence, and Bro. J. A. Churchill from Cottage Grove, Brn. Duncan and Switz from Minneapolis.

The minutes of last Quarterly Meeting were read.

REPORT OF CHURCHES.

Cottage Grove, by Bro. Churchill.—Have a good live church; but seven or eight members now, some having moved away. There were formerly thirteen. We have but little preaching, but have weekly prayer-meetings, and are strong in the faith, looking for the coming kingdom, and hoping for a home in it when it comes. Have preaching once in eight weeks, by Bro. and Sr. Fassett. We had much opposition when we first organized, but God has been with us.

Independence church, by Bro. Styner.—Have no bad report to bring: consider Bro. and Sr. Fassett's coming among us was one of the greatest blessings we could have had bestowed upon us at the present time. The preaching of the Word has been blessed to me, and I thank God that I ever gave my heart to him. We keep up our prayer meetings, and Bro. and Sr. Fassett preach to us and at Rockford, alternately, on Sundays. They have preached many plain truths to us which have been received.

Minneapolis church, by Bro. Duncan.—Have been through trials, but are rising above them. Our congregation is increasing. Are out of debt. Keep up our prayer meeting weekly, and Sunday school. Bro. Cole's labors have been blessed among us. Four have united with us the past fall and winter. Have thirty-five members at present.

Monticello church (by letter).—Present pastor, O. R. Fassett. Present number of members, sixty-three. Received since last report, none. Left by letter, nine. Prayer meeting (female), one. Preaching on Sabbath, half of the time. Sabbath school, one; officers, ten; members, fifty.

Since the last report, the labors of Bro. S. C. Wellcome have closed as pastor of the church. The labors of Bro. Wellcome have been very successful at the different places that have been connected with this church, and a growing interest has been sustained. At this place no special interest has been manifested. The prayer meeting almost wholly neglected; hardly a member of the church, living within five minutes' walk of the prayer-room, has visited it for six months. A state of coldness and want of interest like this tells the reason why the church has not been prospered like other parts of the field. Bro. Wellcome has been earnest in his labor to bring about a different feeling, but has received but little help and encouragement.

A church having been organized at Big Lake, a number have withdrawn to join there, and others will follow. We have secured Bro. Fassett as pastor, to labor with us half of the time. We think that had the members of the church worked together, sacrificing personal feelings and prejudices for the welfare of the church and the holding up of the truth, we might have sustained and supported preaching each Sabbath. We earnestly pray that through the labors of our present pastor a better state of feeling may be developed, and the cause go forward with new interest. The congregation on the Sabbath is good, and good feeling seems to prevail. Samuel Wilder, Clerk.

Otsego church (by letter).—Organized by Eld. S. C. Wellcome, Jan. 16th, 1874, with nine members. United with the church since organization, thirty-two. Withdrawn from the church to unite with a church in another county, two; and one name has been dropped. Number of members at the present time, thirty-eight. Several are to be baptized soon. We have weekly prayer meetings, and have great reason to be encouraged, as our efforts are being crowned with success. Nellie A. Parker, Clerk.

Big Lake church (by letter).—Our church was organized by Eld. S. C. Wellcome, Feb. 14th, 1875, with eighteen members. Seven have been added since, making twenty-five. Most of us were converts under Eld. Wellcome's labors. We have not had time to get into good working order, yet we are well united in brotherly love. Have weekly prayer meetings, and the Lord is blessing us with a revival in our neighborhood. Henry Snow, Clerk.

REPORT OF MINISTERS.

Bro. L. F. Cole, Minneapolis: Have not much to report. I am here to do my Master's will. Have good congregations, and a good interest manifested.

Sister L. E. Fassett: We are laboring at Independence, Monticello, and other places. Have an increasing interest. There are some to be baptized from across the lake, near Rockford, soon.

Bro. S. C. Wellcome: Have been laboring at Monticello (until March), Otsego, Lilly Pond, Bailey Station, and Big Lake. Have been preaching three times on Sunday through the winter, and since the coldest weather ceased have preached nearly every night. Have seen the work of the Lord revive on both sides of the Mississippi river, where I have labored, and many sinners brought to Christ. My brother was with me a few days to assist me.

Bro. L. R. Wood, Montevideo: I have been preaching to the church at this place. Bro. Miller organized a church of seven members in 1873. Three or four have been added since. Have preached once in two weeks there, once in two weeks at Big Bend, and once in four weeks at River Side. Have had large congregations and a deep interest; have seen hard times; have had to work through the week with my hands, and preach Sundays, and have received but little. My field was one hundred and thirty or one hundred and forty miles west of Minneapolis, on the frontier. I have quite a family, and have had to move to this city to live. Am striving to do my Master's will.

Bro. O. R. Fassett: Preaching at Rockford, Independence, Cottage Grove, West St. Paul, and Monticello. Have good congregations.

After hearing report of ministers, the following resolutions were passed:—

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with Bro. Charles Cranshaw of West St. Paul, in the loss by death of a loved companion. May God bless and comfort him and his little ones in this time of deep affliction. She was prepared to go, and they will meet her in the morning.

Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference hereby express its regrets that Elds. D. R. and M. S. Mansfield are not co-operating with us as a body; they having joined the M. E. Church and are laboring with that church at the present time.

The meeting then adjourned to meet at the call of the Chair. Preaching in the evening (after a social meeting) by S. C. Wellcome. Sunday morning had an interesting love-feast, then preaching, after which we had a Sunday School Concert, an interesting time, then a social meeting, and preaching in the evening again by Eld. O. R. Fassett. Then a large number sat down around the table of the Lord. We had a solemn time.

Our meeting, from the beginning to its close, was a success. The social meetings were good, and the preaching spirited and plain, backed by the Holy Spirit's power. The brethren and sisters did all in their power, we think, to make us comfortable, and our stay pleasant and agreeable. God bless them all is our fervent prayer.

S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

MY WORK.

EVELYN FRANK.

What can I do for Christ?
What is "my mission" here?
Are there no wounds to bind,
No saddened hearts to cheer?
Why should I longer wait
So idle all the day,
When of the living throng
Some go the downward way?

In this fair, glorious world,
They dwell in sin's dark night;
And, surely, even I
Could point them to the light;
Could tell them of the One
Who died to make them free;
O Savior, by thy help
I will do this for thee.
For thy dear sake I take
The life-work thou hast given;
I'll bear the burdens here,
And look for rest in heaven.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. W. Hough.

Dear Brn.:—I have been rejoiced and comforted in reading in the Crisis articles from "J. C." on the time of trouble and the two horned beast and image. I believe he has the truth on these questions, and I know that many of our ministers take the same view. We think that it is "meat in due season." I have no confidence in the cry now made on definite time, but I do believe we shall be united and know more about the time, as soon as the time of trouble comes. See Dan. 12:10.

Enclosed you will find a letter I received from a beloved sister, stating in her own language her experience. It seemed so full of practical truth and common sense, that I thought it would be well to publish it in this time of fanaticism and show.

"Worthington, Minn., Feb. 23d, 1875.

DEAR PASTOR:—I wonder if you have forgotten Sister Mattie Shell away off in Minnesota. I have heard by way of Brother Frank that you were in Mindoro, and so thought a letter might reach you there. We are all well in our little family, and sincerely hope this will find you and yours enjoying the same blessing. I am still trying in my weak way to be a child of God, and to serve my blessed Redeemer. I rejoice that he ever called after me, and cannot be thankful enough for what he has done for me in bringing me to see the truth as it is Jesus. Oh, this blessed hope is such a comfort to me, while away from home and friends. I feel sometimes just starved (so to speak) to hear a gospel sermon once more, which I have not heard in almost three years; except what I have read in my papers and my blessed Bible.

I go to church quite often, and try so hard to enjoy the meeting. The three churches, Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian, are holding revival meetings now. I thought I would go and get all the benefit I could, seeing I am so situated as to be deprived of assembling with my own church; but I always come home sad-hearted and discouraged. It is all like an idle tale to me. The idea of there being any need of saving immortal souls from death. There are many friends in the churches that I love dearly, but none of them know anything about that blessed hope—the glorious appearing of Christ. I have had several urgent invitations to unite with one of the churches, but I cannot; although I do meet with them in the Ladies' prayer meeting, and strive to be ready to give a reason for the hope that I have. I feel as though I was in the midst of opposition. Pray for me, that I may hold out faithful, yet a little while, till Jesus comes.

My husband is still unconverted, but I know he often feels that he ought to be a christian, and I am sure he is convinced in regard to the Advent truth; but I trust the Lord will yet hear prayer in his behalf.

From one that loves Jesus.

MRS. DANIEL SHELL."

From Sr. M. Groves.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have been reading the soul cheering letters in the Crisis, and my heart says, Praise the Lord for the blessed prospect of meeting on the evergreen shore, even if we never clasp the friendly hand here. You all seem so dear to me, I read and imagine myself talking with you, and I enjoy blessed refreshings from the Lord. I am trying to live so as to claim the precious promises made to Abraham's seed, when the earth has thrown off this old rusty dress and is robed in beauty; and I know by the signs that the day is not far distant when we shall see Christ as he is, and be made like him, if we are overcomers through the blood of the Lamb and our testimony.

Trust in God, dear ones, and work in the way that is most pleasing to our Father, not looking to ourselves to see how small we are, but look right to Jesus. "What is that to thee, follow thou me." "We see not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and base things of the world, and things which are despised hath God chosen; yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are, that no flesh should glory in his presence." Let us find contentment in doing little errands for Jesus, and he will exalt us in his own good time. I am so glad Jesus loves me. I am willing to sit at his feet and learn of him. He has lifted me from the horrible pit, and put a new song in my mouth. Oh, praise his name for his goodness and long-suffering toward me.

Come, poor sinner, come to Jesus,—come now. Soon the heavens will reveal him to your terrified eyes, then it will be too late.

Bath, Me.

From Bro. S. P. Howland.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I will endeavor to inform you of the state of things in Kansas. There are fourteen waiting ones in and near Olathe, who are all steadfast in the faith and working in the blessed cause in which most of them seven years since enlisted. We have meetings every Sunday and also communion. We are obliged to hold our meetings in our own private houses. The people are very much prejudiced against the truth, and will not investigate.

In our meetings we form an investigating class; select some subject, and then each brother and sister reads from the blessed Word whatever they find on the subject selected; also singing, prayer, select reading from the Bible, and of the "omens of the coming day;" also words of cheer from one another, etc. All feel interested in the work.

I am glad to hear of the work progressing elsewhere. Let us do our utmost to bring others to the light. We have but a short time to work to save our fellow-men. Let them scoff at us and persecute us, our crown will only be the brighter for it. Do not give up now; the race is almost run; we can almost touch our reward. Christ, our blessed Redeemer is even at the door. Soon we shall see him face to face. Can we stand idly by and see millions of our fellow-men going to the grave, and nearing the judgment day without warning them? Let us improve the talents given us, and work out our own salvation by showing others the way of salvation. Let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh. Signs indicate his speedy coming, to abolish sin and death, and to rule in righteousness. Glorious thought! What is there attractive in this world to the watcher? Nothing ahead but bloodshed and strife, sin and death. How can a true christian dread his coming? "If ye love Him ye will also love his appearing."

Then let us be up and doing. It is no time to sleep now. Our lamps should be trimmed and burning, and we ready to meet the Bridegroom. How could the christian's hope be brighter? An assurance that our blessed Redeemer is near, and soon coming to abolish sin and death, and give all his faithful ones immortality and everlasting life!"

Let all the hosts of Satan hurl their fiery darts at us; if we have with us "the shield of faith," we will be able to quench all of them. Let us put on the whole armor of God, the girdle of truth, the breast-plate of righteousness; having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; and, above all, the shield of faith. Take also the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and continue watchful and prayerful to the end. By so doing we shall gain for ourselves a crown of reward that fadeth not away. May we all hear the words addressed to us, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." Let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and continue faithful and earnest to the end.

Olathe, Johnson Co., Kansas.

From Bro. R. Kelsey.

Dear Brn.:—Having read the Crisis for nearly two years past, I have learned to love it very much indeed, but feel as though I would like to contribute my mite to its columns. The Penn. Mission Tent was here in the summer of '73,' and it was then that we heard for the first time the glorious doctrine of the soon coming of the Lord and kindred truths preached, and we (my wife and myself, and two others), embraced the faith at once, fully believing it is the faith once delivered to the saints. I can truly say, with David of old, "He brought me up out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock." I can testify of Jesus that he is a very present help in every time of need, and that he will deliver all who call upon him, from the cruel bondage of evil appetites, passions, and from all sin.

I indulged in the use of tobacco for twenty-five years, but tried repeatedly, in my own strength, to leave off the use of this noxious weed, but signally failed each time. At last, after so many failures, I became convinced of my utter inability to overcome the habit in my own strength, and went to the Lord with it, and asked help of him; since that day I have never wanted it. It was a perfect deliverance.

I love God, his cause, and his people; and am striving with might and main so to live in this present evil world, that I may gain an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

This doctrine meets with bitter opposition here as elsewhere. Truly "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Paul must surely have referred to this present time. These persecutions and afflictions only serve to make my faith grow stronger, convincing me more and more of the truth of Holy Writ, if it were possible.

I expect to watch and wait, to labor and pray till Jesus comes, or till life's fevered, fitful dream is over, and this poor, tired, aching body and beating heart lies cold and pulseless in the dark and silent grave, there to lie and calmly sleep the long, last sleep, that shall know no waking until aroused by the voice of the archangel and the trump of God. Then earth and sea will be robbed of their sleeping sainted millions, who will rise and greet their returning Lord with the words of the grand old prophet—"Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Unto him that hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and in his everlasting kingdom shall make us kings and priests unto God, to him be glory and dominion forever and ever, Amen.

Wellsboro, Penn.

From Sr. A. Dinsmore.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have for some months in the past not only felt to say—Lord, here am I, send me, but, Lord I must go and help gather in the purchase of thy blood. I knew it was no use to go until he lead me out, and I knew he would let me go just as soon as I was strong enough. Praise his holy name! It is blessed to wait for the Spirit. Do not be afraid to give up all for Christ, for fear he will give you something to do that you will not want to do. I mean to have it said unto me, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." How blessed! I do not expect to go to heaven on flowery beds of ease.

There is a cross for me, and "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." "It is a faithful saying, for if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him. Our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all." "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy; he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." How blessed! "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God, unto salvation, to every one that believeth." "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." Jesus "was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Then, and not till then, are we fitted to work for the Master.

I expect to travel this summer as God may direct. There is nothing that looks so blessed to me as winning precious souls to Christ; and when I think of leaving my little home, and going into the highways and hedges, God does so overshadow me, that I know he is willing I should go. I earnestly desire the prayers of God's children, that we may constantly be lead by the Spirit, and may be able, when Jesus comes, to say, We have done what we could.

EVERY SEVENTEENTH VERSE.

It seems certain that very little is taught, and still less is said, about the second advent. In sermons and meetings, a great deal is said about getting ready for death. and very little about the second coming of Christ. Christ and his apostles pursued a course precisely opposite to this; for while there are more than three hundred and twenty verses in the New Testament, which directly relate to the second advent or its scenes and events, there is not one verse which tells us to prepare for death.

There are 7,959 verses in the New Testament. Nearly five hundred, or about one in every seventeen, relate to the grace of faith. Over three hundred and twenty, or one in every twenty-five, relate to the second coming of Christ. If we can judge anything of the importance of a subject by the frequency of allusion to it, we must conclude that next in importance to belief in God and Christ is belief in the second personal coming of Christ.

The passages on this subject have been counted by Mr. Bickersteth, of England, and Mr. Brooks, of St. Louis; and they say there are many more verses that allude to the advent indirectly. Who can doubt that the second coming of Christ is one of the most important subjects in the Bible?—Herald of Life.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE CUP OF DEVILS.

POISONED TO DEATH.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

Yes, poisoned to death legally! We are horrified when we are told that in China 400,000 natives die every year of opium poisoning; that in India 20,000 die annually of serpent poisoning. But what of civilized Christian America, where over 100,000 die each year of alcoholic poisoning? Five times as many die by the snake in the glass as die by the snake in the grass! They die in their darkness and ignorance. We kill off our people lawfully, complacently, and scientifically in the broad clear light of advancing day. Liberty with a vengeance! When will the people repent, shake off apathy, awake to our danger, and strike down the enemy? It lies in their power to do it. Heaven asks when?

"A poison," says Noah Webster, is "any agent capable of producing a morbid, noxious, or dangerous effect upon anything endowed with life." It is "fatal to life"—it "kills" he tells us. Now alcohol does all this. Says Dr. Alden, of Massachusetts, "On every organ they touch ardent spirits operate as a poison. To a man in health there is no such thing as their temperate use. In any quantity they are an enemy to the human constitution. They produce weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life." Shall we drink it?

Dr. Willard Parker, of New York, of high medical authority, thus writes: "By physiological inquiries it is established that alcohol, however pure, is in itself a poison; and like arsenic, opium, belladonna, and prussic acid, should be employed only when scientifically prescribed. It has been proved that when used as a beverage it shortens human life by about forty per cent." Which being true, is it right to suffer from six to forty men in every town and village to deal it out indiscriminately to whom, in such doses, and as often as their reckless cupidity pleases?

Eilsha Harris, M. D., of New York city, thus defines inebriety: "Inebriety is clearly a special and dangerous condition of poisoning and physical perversion, extending its effects to the mind, morals, and physical conditions, and it becomes the obvious duty of society to define, treat, and repress the offence as a special kind of crime." Even so. And all society does so act save that portion which has become utterly demoralized by the liquor traffic. But why not arrest the supply and so kill off the insane demand? Hear what one of the ablest physicians in England, the celebrated Kavanagh, said: "I declare solemnly that to my mind it is the most extraordinary thing imaginable, that the State does not interfere as it does in infinitely smaller matters of sanitation, to put a check upon this wholesale destruction of the population." It is astonishing indeed." . . . .

Dear reader, beware of the poisonous cup! Shun the vile hand that offers it! Avoid the tempting bar! Help to arrest and strike down the imperial demon whose perpetual march over this fair land is as the breath of Gehenna. He is a veritable Abbaddon. Spell his name backwards and you have the cause of our woe,—Red rum. Spell it forwards and behold the dreadful effect,—Murder.—Plattsburg Sentinel.

DIET VS. WHIPPING.

We are not about to recommend the gift of a cake or a handful of candies to a refractory child instead of the application of the traditional "birch," or other suitable punishment. We have no sympathy with this plan of bribing children to do wrong. But we wish to make a plea for the cross and fretful little ones who are so often treated with great injustice in being punished. Mothers feed their children all sorts of irritating condiments and indigestible articles of food, and then wonder at the perversity of the little ones, because they cry without apparent cause, are restless and discontented, dissatisfied with their playthings, and generally unhappy. They forget that children, even small children, only five or six years of age, or younger, have stomachs as well as themselves. Yes, and nerves, too, as well as their mammas.

Indigestible food has the same effect upon small stomachs as upon larger and older ones. Too much food, or food taken too often, will just as surely give rise to indigestion and suffering in children as in adults. What wonder, then, that they should manifest the same traits as characterize older dyspeptics? They are cross, and peevish, and fretful, because they cannot help being so; just as an old dyspeptic is morose and gloomy and hypochondriac. Their delicate nerves are irritated, and everything jars upon them. They are wholly wretched, and give expression to their misery in cries. They are told to "hush;" but they don't know how to keep still. They cannot control their feelings. Then they must have their ears slapped or pulled, or they must be shut up in the closet or the cellar until good behavior is promised. Certainly it would not do to allow such a stubborn will to go unbroken! The child must be subdued!

Scenes like this are frequent enough. They are all wrong—terrible mistakes. The child feels the injustice done him, and he either resents it, or else his moral sense becomes confused. There is no more reason for punishing a child who is suffering from the moral effects of indigestion, than there would be for the execution of a lunatic who happened to commit some deed of violence in supposed defense of himself.

Parents are more than half responsible for the peevishness and ill temper of their children in the way they feed them. What a great wrong do they commit, then, when they punish the little ones for the consequences of their own fault. Aside from the moral influence which parents may exert, there is nothing which is so conducive to sweetness of disposition and evenness of temper as a simple, unstimulating, hygienic diet.—Health Reformer.

LONG LIFE AND GOOD LIFE.

The persuasion that good life must be long life, and that long life must be good life, was certainly very strong with ancient people. Among the Hebrews it was very strong indeed, as the whole literature of their nation shows. The conviction comes out in every Old Testament book. It was part of the cardinal faith of the Hebrews tha the chief reward of piety was length of days. "Sinners shall be cut off"—that is, shall die prematurely—is of perpetual recurrence in the religious writings of every epoch, down at least to the captivity, if not further. The immortal poem of Job is permeated by this belief; its most impressive chapters are made impressive by it. Of Wisdom, in the Book of Proverbs, it is said: "Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left hand are riches and honor." It seem to have been one of the axioms of Providence, with the Hebrew, a first principle with Jehovah, that spiritual holiness aud temporal wholeness went hand in hand through the world. By this rule character was judged, by this rule destiny was foreshadowed.—Herald of Health.

TYPHOID FEVER CONTAGION.—Dr. Alfred Carpenter, an eminent English practitioner, in an admirable letter to the London Times shows that typhoid disease is contagious only in a limited degree. The bed-side attendant of the typhoid patient, by scrupulous care, is seldom attacked. The rules to be followed are "not to eat and drink in the patient's room, not to eat with unwashed hands after attending the sick, and to drink only water that cannot have been contaminated by the result of execretal decompositions, by which the germs bearing the granules of mischief may have been brought into contact with it by the sewer gases." Where such precautions are observed, Dr. Carpenter states the contagious power of the typhoid poison is rendered comparatively harmless.—Herald of Health.

"JESUS LOVES ME."

S. M. H.

"Jesus loves me": precious motto,
Hung upon my chamber wall,
Whispering comfort and assurance,
As my eyes upon it fall.
"Jesus loves me": all unworthy
As I know myself to be,
Yet I know his love, so mighty,
Reaches even down to me.

Life for me hath wondrous beauty,
Since I've learned to trust his love;
On my path in daily blessing,
Falls the sunshine from above.
Yet sometimes there comes a sorrow
That no earthly friend may share;
Then I take my heavy heart-ache
To my Lord, and leave it there.

When a little child is weary,
Or hath fallen in his play,
Tenderly his mother soothes him,
Wiping all his tears away;
And he tells us, "As a mother
Comforteth her little one,
So will I, with loving kindness,
Comfort thee when troubles come."

Do we deem our wants too trifling
For the mighty King to heed?
Not as King his love reveals him,
But a Brother in our need;
And he feels a brother's pity
When our human hearts are sore,
For he once knew human weakness,
And our griefs and sorrows bore.

"Jesus loves me" May that knowledge
Keep our hearts amid earth's cares;
And his peace in us abiding,
Triumph over all our fears.
Precious motto: ever shining
With a glory from above;
Like a voice from heaven it whispers,
Thou art safe in Jesus' love."

East Boston Mass.

THE FIRST RESURRECTION.

M. R. STEELE.

To all appearance, the great strife in Europe will very soon break out, perhaps this year. Many students think that the resurrection of the just and the subsequent translation of those living christians who are ready, will precede the great war.

We find in the Apocalypse various companies of Jews and Gentiles translated at different times, having passed through more or less severe discipline, during the great time of trial. Last of all, "a great multitude, whom no man could number, are gathered out of all nations and tongues."

Will that descent of the Lord himself from heaven, with a shout, with the archangel's voice, and the trump of God, be visible? I think not. "Behold, I come as a thief," he says, when the demon spirits are going forth on their dread errand.

The animals heard God's call, and entered Noah's ark. Then the patriarch, with his family, heard the call, entered, and were shut in. The world saw the signs, but heard no voice. So now they will see that many christians have suddenly vanished, but they will hear no voice. A prophet says—"The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee." Then these saints must have been already raised. They have met the Lord in the air, in the "pavilion," the "secret of his tabernacle," the "closet," to "hide" with Christ "for a little season, until the indignation be overpast." The mighty angel, who stands with one foot on the sea and one on the land, and swears by the Eternal One that there shall be time no longer, says that the mystery of God shall be finished in the days of the seventh angel, when he shall begin "to sound." This language indicates a continuous sounding, and may be heard "by those who have ears to hear," in the fearful events of the day, and in the cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh."

The world in general will not bear the sounding, but will cry "Peace and safety," until they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven. Therefore, "the last trump," "the trump of God," is the last of the seven apocalyptic trumpets, heard in events, in the voice of God to those willing to hear, and the Lord's shout, and the archangel's voice will be heard only by the true friends of Christ, both living and dead.

Who among us are ready and desirous to hear that mighty voice—to see that glorious face? The time is at hand. Soon it will be said, "He that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still." Whether church members or not, do we really, like holy Paul, "love his appearing?"

Canandaigua, N. Y.

Confiding in God.—When a man maketh his complaint and openeth his need and grief unto his special friend, he feeleth a certain ease afterwards; so that his pain and grief, by the rehearsing thereof, is somewhat relieved, remedied, and taken away. Much more comfort and ease shall we receive by telling and opening our grief and complaint unto God. For man is soon weary and irk of our complaining; but if we should spend the whole day in praying, crying and complaining unto God, he would love, comfort and strengthen us the more.—Coverdale.

SCRIPTURE TRUTH EXPRESSIBLE IN SCRIPTURE TERMS.

D. K. BARRETT.

The existence of God as a being is expressly declared: "There is a God in heaven"; and his nature, attributes and character are clearly expressed. True, we cannot comprehend fully his greatness, nor find out God to perfection. All Scripture truth I believe to be expressed in clear terms; so clear that we can seldom find better terms to express any doctrine of essential importance than the Scripture uses.

If our views of any subject naturally lead us to express ourselves in unscriptural terms, we should go to searching the Word of truth, comparing our views with that, and see if they do not in fact vary as they do in expression. For example: some people's views of man's nature often lead them to use such expressions as—"immortal soul," "never-dying soul," "deathless spirit," etc. Now none of these terms, nor an equivalent, can be found any where in the Bible. On the contrary we read of souls dying (Ezek. 18: 4, 20, 27; James 5: 20; Rev. 16: 3); being cut off (Gen. 17: 14; 19: 20; Lev. 7: 25; 17: 15); and destroyed (Joshua 10: 28; Matt. 10: 28).

We hear people say of their christian friends who have died, that they have gone to heaven; but the Scriptures never once so speak of dead saints; they speak of them as "asleep," and their death as falling asleep. Deut. 31: 16; 1 Kings 2: 10; Job 14: 12; John 11: 11, 14; 1 Cor. 15: 16–19; Acts 7: 60. The expressions—"gone to the spirit land," or "world," are equally unscriptural; allusion nowhere being made to such a world. The dead are spoken of as in the "land of the enemy" (Jer. 31: 16); "land of forgetfulness" (Ps. 88: 12).

Many, holding such views, are led to depreciate, if not to deny the resurrection, which the Bible speaks of so much and so often, as well as the coming of Christ the second time, which the Rev. J. H. Brooks, D. D., says he finds directly enunciated in one verse out of thirty in the New Testament, and one out of twenty-five teaching it directly or by implication. A Baptist Bro., apparently a very devoted man, told me he saw no need whatever for the resurrection, and he should not believe it if some passages did not so plainly declare it. Many are in the position of this brother.

The expressions—"everlasting misery," "eternal torment," and the like, we would suppose, from hearing them so often, abound in Scripture; but no trace of them is to be found there. On the contrary the "everlasting punishment" of Scripture is expressly declared to be "everlasting destruction." 2 Thess. 1: 9. And the last named text is so often quoted banishment, instead of destruction, agreeing so much better with their view, that many think it reads so.

To make the doctrine of the destruction of the wicked appear untrue, it is usually designated as "annihilation," a term not found in the Bible, and not approved by those holding the doctrine; and because destruction does not mean a bringing to nothing, but only, as Webster says, "the putting an end to," or "annihilating that form of a thing which constitutes it what it is," the Bible does not teach annihilation. Rev. N. D. George, in a tract entitled "Materialism Antiscriptural," says—"They will have it that when the words perish, destroy, and death are used to designate the punishment of the wicked, they are to be understood literally, and not in an accommodating or figurative sense." Exactly so; these terms so often used must be taken in a very "accommodating sense" to suit some beliefs. Again he says—"Mr. Storrs quotes Grimshaw, to show that perish means 'to cease to have existence.' Page 17. On 2 Pet. 2: 1, 12, where the expressions 'swift destruction' and 'utterly perish' occur, he will have it that 'utter extermination' is taught. P. 51. The words 'die' and 'death' he defines to mean, 'to perish; to come to nothing; extinction of life.'"

Here Mr. George leaves the matter, without showing they can mean anything less or more. These definitions agree with those of the dictionaries, both Greek and English. "Destroy,—1, to pull down; 2, to put an end to." "Perish,—1, to be destroyed; 2, to die." "Death—extinction of life." Webster, Worcester, Robinson's Gr.

During a series of meetings, I overheard a conversation in substance as follows:—"Have you attended any of the meetings?" "No; have you?" "Yes; Mr. J—— has attended some; he does not like the preaching very well, because they teach the destruction of the wicked." "Why, does he think they will all be saved?" "No, but they teach that they will be utterly destroyed—cut off." "O! if that is the case, I don't blame him for not liking it." He did not, as is the case with many, seem to be aware that the Scriptures use these very terms. Ps. 37: 9, etc.

One believing in the conscious state of the dead and eternal misery of the wicked said to me a short time since—"There is one thing in which I cannot agree with you; that is, that death means death; I don't believe it."

A preacher who came to see me on purpose to convince me of error, told me we did not give the right import to the term "death"; that death meant a separation in every place in the Bible. I thought extinction of life would express the true idea. He thought death the opposite of life. A certain union constituted life, and the separation of the same, death. I remarked, "Then neither part in the separate state could properly be said to be alive, could it?" We agreed it could not properly,—thus unconsciously conceding the whole matter.

We have often noticed that error is not easily expressed in the same language as the truth. Let us, then, compare our ideas with the expressions of Scripture, and see that they are in harmony. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." First and above all, "let the peace of God rule in your hearts."

JOHN 8: 36.

L. ROBBINS.

"If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

God created man upright and free, but he fell, and hath sought out many inventions. He became enthralled in all evil, and became servant to sin and Satan. "For," says the Savior, "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." Men naturally loves what he calls freedom or liberty, that is, license to do their own will; which liberty is the worst kind of bondage. Such often suppose themselves to be free, and say with the Jews, We were never in bondage, but their bondage, being unperceived, greatly adds to their danger.

This bondage is so deep and strong, that none will ever be freed therefrom but by an Almighty Arm; but, blessed be God's holy name, the Son can make free indeed! Though the whole world lie in bondage, yet the christian may and should be free.

Is it so with all who profess to follow Christ? We see many who, instead of denying self and following Him, follow their own will. They have little time for God, for self demands the whole. They are seldom found at meetings for prayer and praise, and have no relish for spiritual worship. Such are in bondage. They know nothing of that blessed freedom which the Son of God giveth.

Many, also, are in bondage to their tongues, "which no man can tame." They do not consider that every idle word will pass in review at the last day. Others are in bondage to the "love of money," which "is the root of all evil." Therefore they are choked with worldly cares, and bring forth no fruit. Jesus will come upon such unawares.

Many are in bondage to their appetites. They indulge in food and drinks, which are injurious to body and mind. Some are servants to tea and coffee, and others to tobacco and intoxicating liquors. It is not so with those whom Christ has made free. They can truly say they are dead to all the appetites, except to fulfill the wise design of Him who implanted them. The Savior says—"Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." Again the apostle saith—"They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts."

Others are in bondage to their reputation and honor. Jesus made himself of no reputation, and says, "How can ye believe which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only." This also must be laid upon the divine altar, or we shall never know the full freedom of the gospel. Again, those persons who are impatient when things fall out differently from what they anticipated, are not free in Christ. He who is "free," recognizes the hand of God in all his providences; and such is his union with the divine will that he immediately acquiesces in all events, however afflictive.

Dear reader, are you free in Christ? or do you inquire, Can such a heart as mine be liberated from all these bonds with which Satan has bound me so many years? I answer, yes, as soon as you are willing to comply with the conditions laid down in God's Word, which are a full surrender of all we have and are, and simply believe he will do just as he has promised. This fully done, and you shall know "whom the Son makes free is free indeed."

THE EVERLASTING KINGDOM OF CHRIST.

WM. D. TUCKER.

"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven. . . . And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away; and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7: 13, 14.

The kingdoms of this earth which are governed by man, are transitory. Ever since the time there was a nation, each one has decreased in national power until it has fallen, and been followed by the uprising of a more powerful nation, which, in its turn, has become weakened, and succumbed to a stronger government. And thus it will ever continue to be—according to the prophetic Word of inspiration—until the coming of Christ to establish his everlasting kingdom upon the earth. His kingdom is to take the place of earthly kingdoms. It will be a universal, heavenly government, established "under the whole heavens," upon a new, regenerated, and purified earth.

Christ's eternal kingdom will be stronger than earthly kingdoms, for he is "to dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel"—break them, destroy them, grind them to powder, and scatter their ashes to the four winds of heaven. The government of Christ will be a glorious government. There will be no fear of coming wars, no sound of the clashing of steel, and no jealousy among its numerous subjects; for those who enter that kingdom will be pure and holy.

We have the promise that this blessed kingdom will soon be established "under the whole heavens." The earth is first to be purified by fire from the evil which now pollutes it. The curse which God pronounced upon it, which blights and destroys, must be wiped away, and in its place shall come forth a new heaven and a new earth, free from all evil.

The apostle Peter gives us a few hints upon this subject. We read from his writings these words: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." "Nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Peter 3: 10, 13.

When the earth has been purified and made new, then "shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these (earthly) kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2: 44. Then the wilderness will rejoice, and the desert blossom as the rose; the lame man leap as an hart, the eyes of the blind be opened, the deaf ears be unstopped, and all will rejoice to hear their Savior's voice as he speaks once more upon earth in tones of sweetness and love.

The earth, long hidden beneath the Adamic curse, will burst forth once more in all its Edenic beauty and luxuriousness. The enemy—death—will be destroyed, and "sorrow and sighing shall flee away;" and those who have proven themselves loyal to Christ here will live and dwell with him in his eternal kingdom. They will be made immortal, and therefore will never die.

Christ is soon coming; we believe that in a little while we shall see our King coming "in the clouds of heaven," and if faithful shall be "made like him." "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, behold thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation." He will soon appear, "and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."

Dear friends, let us all be ready to meet him, that when he comes he will say unto us, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

BAPTISM A TYPE OF BODILY RESURRECTION.

BY REV. A. J. GORDON.

That the hope of the resurrection of the body, may not die out of the church—as, alas! what hope may not when her heart has turned away from her Lord, and her eyes from watching for his appearing—the Spirit has not only reiterated it in scores of texts, but enshrined it in this rite as in "a statuary of truth which may endure though the picturing and writing of it should be effaced."

And let it be noted that of all the types that have been employed to bring this hope vividly to the christian mind, not one excepting baptism is adequate to the reality. Of a general resurrection which the Scriptures foretell, we see tokens and similitudes all about us in nature; in the flower, springing up from the seed which has fallen into the earth and died; in the morning, opening the vast grave of night, and summoning a sleeping world to rise and meet the sun "as he cometh forth as a bridegroom from his chamber;" in the spring-tide, calling the earth from the tomb of winter, loosing her shroud of snow, and clothing her with renewed life and beauty; in these there are joyful parables and pledges of a resurrection. But the flower fades and dies, the morning sinks again into the embrace of night, and the earth lies down once more in the sepulchre of winter; and so, alas! these symbols only mock the hope they have kindled in the soul.

But while we are asking sorrowfully, "Is there no resurrection that is exempt from death?" we turn to this ordinance of christianity. "Risen with Christ," it says; and then adding, "knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him," (Rom. 6: 9) bids us likewise reckon ourselves to be alive with Him in the same resurrection. Thus this symbol of the gospel carries a promise and a benediction which are committed to no symbol of nature. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power."—Messiah's Herald.

EXALT IT.

That is, exalt the Bible. It is worthy of all honor. A late writer says:

"We cannot too much honor the Bible, whether in the pulpit, or family, or in school. It is said that at the coronation of the boy King of England, Edward VI., three swords were brought, and laid before him as emblems of his power. "Bring another," said he, "I need most of all the sword of the Spirit." The Bible was brought, and has retained its place in subsequent coronations. It is the only symbol used at the inauguration of our Republican Presidents. Let us exalt the Bible always and everywhere, but especially in the schools and the church. "I have magnified my Word above all my name," saith our great Captain."

Lift it high, then. Let it have its throne in the heart's affections. Let it be lifted up in the home circle, so that every soul in the household bows in reverence. Lift it up in the schools of our land. Let no daring Papal or Infidel hand attempt to displace it there. And may our great nation be in fact, as in profession, a Christian land—magnifying the Word of God, and yielding to its beneficent sway.—Christian Standard.

Holy Culture.—When made entirely holy we are then prepared to grow. The obstructions are removed. The graces of the Spirit are brought to perfection, in kind at least. Now, under the genial rays of the Sun of Righteousness, and the refreshing dews of grace, there may be, and ought to be, rapid growth.

"I AM CHRIST'S."

J. R. SMITH.

I am Christ's, and he is mine. I have taken him as my Savior and my friend. He has won my heart and melted it by his Holy Spirit, and I have submitted myself unto him. I find his yoke is easy, and his burden is light. The rations are bountiful, and the fare is good. He feeds me with the finest of the wheat, and out of the rock has he satisfied me. He is the strength of my heart and my portion forever. I have proved his ways are ways of pleasantness and all his paths are peace. In his presence is fulness of joy, and at his right hand are pleasures forevermore. A day in his courts is better than a thousand in the pleasures of this world. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. The Lord God is my sun and my shield; he gives me grace and glory; and no good thing does he withhold from me whilst I walk uprightly.

Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord. It is not hard for me to turn away from the pleasures, honors and vain allurements of this world, to meet with those whom my Savior loves, and share with them his presence. I find sweet comfort and consolation in their fervent prayers, their songs of praise and encouraging words of exhortation. My faith is strengthened to press my way onward for the prize which is but a little in the distance. I love their places of solemn worship, and no worldly joy or festivity can ever be so dear to me as that peaceful hour of morning prayer, where God's children congregate on the first day of the week. The hallowed associations of God's dear people are held by me in blessed remembrance.

I love God's faithful children. I love them because they love my Savior. I love them because their conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Their interests are my interests; I am joined to them with a tie which is more hallowed and dearer than that of flesh and blood. I feel for those who are Christ's, a holy sympathy which the world knows not of. I do not love them because they are great, or wise, or rich, or honored; but I love them because they are the children of my heavenly Father.

There was a time when I did not love the company of God's dear children. I avoided their presence, and sought the company of others more congenial. But there has been a change. I have now chosen the people of God for my companions. Poor, despised and dishonored though they be, yet they are the people of my choice. Their sorrows are my sorrows, and their joys are my joys. I can weep with those who weep, and rejoice with those who rejoice. The reproach they bear for Christ I covet.

"The cross of Christ I'll cherish;
Its crucifixion bear;
All hail reproach or sorrow,
If Jesus leads me there."

I could not always sing those lines, but I can sing them to-day, Hallelujah! I once loved the honors and the riches of this world; but to-day I am Christ's. The power of the gospel has been applied to my heart, and I am so glad that we have got the blessed Bible. I love the dear old chart, and it is the guide of my life.

Until the power of this gospel has been applied to the heart, no man can say—"I am Christ's." Much that passes for religion in this day is only counterfeit. It is too much adulterated with the spirit of this world. There is no Christ in it, and will not stand the testing fires when the great and terrible day of the Lord shall come. I am not satisfied with a mere form of godliness. I want to feel the power of an endless life within my soul. I want to feel that power which regenerates and elevates, which purifies and sanctifies, and makes our bodies fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, and our hearts a peaceful home for Jesus. I want to feel the living witness in my soul, and know of a truth that I have passed from death unto life, and feel the blessed assurance that I have been adopted into the royal family with Christ; that I am a fellow citizen with the saints and of the household of God. Glory be to his dear name! I have got the victory in my soul this morning. And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. I want none of this world's glory. I am not seeking for the honors and the riches of this world; but for the unsearchable riches of Christ, and for that honor which cometh from God only. I thank God that I have lost all relish for the leeks and onions of Egypt; that I have no desire to become the son of Pharaoh's daughter. I choose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; I esteem the reproach of Christ far greater riches than all the treasures of Egypt. Glory be to God! I see a crown of glory awaiting God's dear saints of far more dazzling beauty than ever adorned the head of any Egyptian monarch.

With me, old things have passed away, and all things have become new. "I am Christ's." I am a new creature. I am a different being from what I once was. I cannot doubt it, or deny it. I have been changed from nature to grace; transformed from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; and by the power of the gospel I have been enabled to turn from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus. My faith assures me that in a little while I shall see the King in his beauty, and with God's blood-washed, ransomed hosts I shall come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels.

God bless you, dear brethren, and may you be kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, with your loins girt about, and your lights trimmed and burning, with the wedding garment on, all ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

CHRISTIAN ADORNING.

EMMA I. CROUSE.

Bro. I. I. Leslie expressed my views on this subject a few weeks since, under the head of "Ornaments." I wish that every christian in the land could read it and profit by it. And then in the Crisis of April 14th there was another article that cheered and encouraged me. "Sinful Dressing," written by an "Old-fashioned correspondent" in the Banner of Holiness.

Like her, "I am becoming more and more puzzled—so many professing christians dressing themselves up in all the newest fashions." And the few who "dare to be singular," are called "self-righteous," "Pharisees," etc. But if we are taking the Word for our guide, and have the witness in ourselves that we "please God," surely we need not mind the taunts of those who love the world and its follies.

"In the last days perilous times shall come." Truly there is great need of "coming out from the world," and being separate—peculiar—not conforming to the world. O how plain the Bible teachings are on this subject, and yet how many pass them by as something non-essential!

Has the religion of Christ changed? and has the "narrow path" widened in these last days? I cannot believe it. All through the teachings of Jesus and the apostles it is plainly seen that the followers of Christ are required to "deny themselves." Can we say that it is too much for us to deny ourselves of these needless things, when we consider how much the Lord has done for us? O if we could only realize fully that "We are not our own," that all we have belongs to the Lord, and is only lent us to improve upon, surely we could not squander the Lord's money on the "gold, pearls, and costly array" that Peter and Paul have both cautioned us against.

I would not set myself up as a teacher of those who are older and wiser than I am; but if I can encourage any weak or faltering one to take a decided stand on the side of Jesus, even if it takes the dearest idol, I shall feel that I am well repaid.

May the Lord help us all to have the "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit," which in the sight of God is of greater price than all the finery with which we can adorn ourselves.

Sisters in Christ, if you have not already taken this step, I beg of you, as one that loves you, to candidly consider it, and ask for the help and guidance of the blessed Master. And when he comes may we be found "without spot ond blameless."

East Washburn, Me.

CHARACTER AND WRITINGS OF DANIEL.

Daniel was, in the early part of his life, subjected to a great many difficulties. He was carried among strangers when he was only twelve years of age. His early education must have been thoroughly pious, and it was most probable that he had a godly mother. Just think of a youth who, when twelve years of age, was exposed and urged to sin, and who dares to say he will not outrage conscience or principle for any consideration. Daniel had a "purpose firm," and he was not afraid to "make it known." In our day, what a noble leader he would be of a Band of Hope! A boy who can dare to say "No" when solicited to wrong-doing, must be a great character. A young man who takes his heavenly Father for the light and guide of his youth must always be exemplary. Daniel was pre-eminently a man of God. That was the underlying stratum in his life. It showed itself in the midst of the den of lions. That was the great and sustaining power that upheld him during all his vicissitudes and trials. Faith may be as small as a grain of mustard seed, but if it allies us to God and lifts us out of our difficulties and littleness, it makes us great and strong.

Daniel was also a prayerful man. That principle pervaded his whole life—under all the cares of State he had fixed hours for prayer. Nothing would deter or prevent him from the practice of secret prayer and devotion. He maintained fellowship with God. Any man who says he has not time for prayer, let him look through that Babylonish window of Daniel's chamber, that was opened toward Jerusalem three times a day. He knew the worth and the power of prayer. Prayer "moves the hand that moves the world." While we live we should pray; for while we pray we live. Artisans have no right to say they are the only workers. Brain workers have much harder work to do. Daniel was a brain worker of no ordinary type. God intended us all to be workers; and however mistaken some men may be in the idea of degradation attaching to work, such an idea is nowhere countenanced in the Bible. Jesus himself said—"My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." May the God of Daniel be our God, so that at last, like him, we may all "stand in our lot at the end of the days."—Signs of Our Times.

To-morrow may never come to us. We do not live in to-morrow. We cannot find it in any title deeds. The man who owns whole blocks of real estate, and great ships over all the ocean, does not and cannot own a single minute of to-morrow! To-morrow! It is a mysterious possibility, not yet born. It lies under the seal of midnight, behind the vail of glittering constellations. Therefore, improve every moment while it is yours,—to-morrow may be too late.

HOW TO HAVE A REFORMATION.

H. S. MITCHELL.

The first thing, is to feel the need of it. However dangerous a man's condition may be, if he thinks himself in good health, he does not apply to the physician. A professed christian may be satisfied with himself, and seek no improvement, when all the while he may be in a most deplorable state.

God said to Ephraim—"Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not; yea, grey hairs are here and there upon him, yet he knoweth it not." You know what the Lord wrote to the angel of the Laodicean church,—"Because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve that thou mayest see."

If you fancy you need no reformation, you will not seek any. The same may be said of a church. If it is content to live at a dying rate, and thinks all the while that it is very spiritual, very earnest, very active, all that it need be and that God would have it be, then it will sink into a deeper slumber than ever, and its condition will grow worse and worse.

We must feel the need of a reformation. That is the first step toward obtaining a reformation. And may God help us to feel it is my prayer.

IF HE COME NOT AGAIN.

BY REV. GEO. F. PENTECOST.

One of the saddest features in the faith and life of the modern church of Christ is the almost utter ignorance of, indifference and, in some cases, active opposition to the second personal advent of our blessed Lord. That "evil men and seducers" and the latter day "scoffers" should hate and despise the doctrine is not to be wondered at, but it is an amazing wonder that christians should not only allow "that blessed hope" to fall into darkness and disrepute, but should array themselves against it, as though it were a strange doctrine and fraught with evil.

When we consider how the consummation of the whole purposes of God in our redemption hinges on the second advent; when we remember that no "crown of righteousness" can be given to his faithful servants (2 Tim. 2: 8); that there can be no resurrection of "the dead in Christ," no glorification of living saints (1 Thess. 4: 13–18); no millennium (Rev, 20: 4); and indeed none of the glorious things of the future concerning which our Lord speaks, what must be the folly of shutting our eyes to and opposing "the promise of his coming." For if the second personal coming of the Lord is not sure, the first coming, the manger, the garden, the cross, the sepulchre, the resurrection, and the ascension are all vain. Indeed, the second coming of the Lord is the dome of the whole structure of Christianity. When He comes who is our life, then shall we appear with him in glory, and then will his great prayer in John 17th be answered. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." —Messiah's Herald.

INTEGRITY.

It becomes the christian never to enter upon any course of conduct, however trivial, while a doubt of its propriety continues on his mind—never to tamper, under any circumstances, with a conscientious doubt. "He that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Aim, therefore, in all things to act as "one that feareth always." Walk circumspebtly and cautiously through the world, seeking purity in the midst of its pollutions. Always in a questionable matter adopt that course which is more likely to tend to the glory of God, than to the gratiffcation of the propensities of your own deceitful heart.

Let your motives be the love of God—your aim the glory of God—and the result foı which you are in search, God's blessing and favor. Let it be your endeavor, as far as possible, to give to earth, in your society, your pursuits, your affections, and unearthly characters—to breathe in it something of the holy atmosphere of heaven; to spread the sacred influence of scriptural principle over the sphere in which you move; to win others round you to join in the same blessed course; and endeavor daily to attain a nearer resemblance to Him whom you adore, and a more intimate fellowship with him whom you love. This is to keep yourself "unspotted from the world."—Rev. E. Craig.

A Foot Lamp.—One of the most interesting things in the Holy Land is the fact that one meets everywhere, in daily life, the things that illustrate the Word of the Lord. The streets of Jerusalem are very narrow, and no one is allowed to go out at night without a light. Throw open your lattice in the evening and look out, you will see what seem to be little stars twinkling on the pavement. You will hear the clatter of sandals, as the late traveler rattles along. As the party approaches, you will see that he has a little lamp fastened to his foot, to make his step a safe one. In an instant the verse comes to your memory, written in that same city three thousand years ago—"Thy Word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."—Ex.

We may judge of the state of our hearts by the earnestness of our prayers. You cannot make a rich man beg like a poor man; you cannot make a man that is full cry for food like one that is hungry.

THE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE WORLD A SIGN OF THE END.

If we have come to the period when the fulfillment of these terrible predictions are due, we may confidently expect to find events transpiring exactly agreeing with the divine annunciations. We may expect to find the same classes discussing the same questions, feeling the same antagonisms, and the difficulties increasing, tending to open war and a fearful destruction of property and life.

1. Are the rich being drawn into a disturbed position, where they "howl"—cry out—in perplexity, fearing the opposition of their laborers, and the experience their present financial condition may result in? It is a fact, patent to all the world, that the rich are becoming more and more distinguished as a political and social class on account of antagonisms which are increasing between them and the poorer and laboring class. All legislative bodies are put to their wits' end to enact laws and execute them, so as to reconcile these contending parties. All the periodicals—political and religious—are discussing the vexed question of the prolonged and exciting controversy.

It is true that, in all time, the nature of the circumstances existing between masters and servants have distinguished them as classes subject to strife, on account of opposite interests; but never has that controversy taken on such forms and become so threatening as at the present time. The subject is now exciting all the world, and is making one of the most emphatic and interesting chapters in the history of the present century. These events certainly answer the demands of the first announcement of the prophecy.

2. The wealth of the rich, by this strife, will be thrown into a precarious condition, exposed to depreciation and destruction; like garments eaten by moths, and gold cankered by rust. It is a fact that this controversy has become so threatening to the profits of business and to the safety of capital invested in it by the rich, that they, for their protection, are combining and consolidating into vast united bodies so as to produce such crushing weight when they resist the opposing parties, that they can defeat them with a stroke. All kinds of business is being thus concentrated, and wealth heaped up, controlled by strong corporate bodies, backed by the states, so as not only to secure unjust profits, but to resist threatened opposition.

The prophet shows that the masters—rich—will be led by civil rulers; that is, aided and protected in their schemes of robbing laborers and heaping up wealth. He says—"I will punish the princes, and the kings children, and such as are clothed in strange apparel. In the same day will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, which fill their master's houses with violence and deceit." Zeph. 1: 8, 9. Is it not a fact known to all, that nearly every civil government on the earth is aiding and defending the monied aristocrats and corporations with grants of power and bayonets to defend them in exercising that power? They are ready to send armed men to protect the legalized extortioners, when their business and property are threatened, but never to increase the wages, or compel the masters to feed the starving wives and children of the down-trodden laborers. It is just as the prophet saw that it would be when "the day of the Lord" should come. The rulers and rich men are confederated against the toiling millions.

But is the guilt in this strife all on one side? Are the laborers altogether righteous in their acts and purposes? No; for the prophet says—"In the same day" (when he punishes the "kings children," "and all such as are clothed with strange apparel") "will I punish all those that leap on the threshold (violently enter), which fill their master's houses with violence and deceit." We are clearly taught by these sacred testimonies that, as far as equity is connected in the distribution of profits from labor, the servants would be justified in claiming a larger proportion; but that the principles and efforts they would use to obtain their rights would be wicked, revolutionizing, wasteful, and ruinous, so that both classes will be guilty before God in laboring to injure each other, and will both be condemned to suffer the indignation of his last judgment. The masters "kept back by fraud" the wages—"hire"—of the "laborers," and the servants attempt to forcibly enter the store houses of the master, and obtain it by "violence and deceit."

Do just such circumstances as these prophets describe now exist? Are the laboring classes, generally, in the enlightened parts of the world, dissatisfied with their wages, because they do not receive an equitable proportion of the profits of labor, so as to share with the masters the blessings and luxuries of this life, given by the Father of all for the benefit of all? Such a state of feeling does exist, and is more extensively diffused and more warlike in its development than ever before. Do the masters contend that the servants are receiving as much or more wages than equity demands? and is this the question which now threatens a general financial war, that is, a war growing out of financial strife? This is a plain fact with which all are acquainted.

The Internationalists, or Communists, are the leading representative class of the laborers. We must therefore expect their acts to especially correspond with the predictions relating to the servants in this strife.

We will now give a few historic facts which show that the Communists have made arrangements to leap on the threshold of their masters houses, and make their garments moth-eaten, and their gold cankered—worthless to them—by confiscation and conflagration. Edward Beecher, D. D. in the Christian Union, says:

"If you consult the English Quarterly Review, and the Edinburgh, and the authentic documents in which they trust, the case is clear. So, too, if we may trust the editor of the Nation, and the history of the association by M. Villetard, on which he relies, there can be no doubt. Of the Internationals, the Nation says: 'We are dealing with barbarians, compared to whom the Goths of Alaric were peaceable and reclaimable.' The Quarterly terms them 'a new sect, claiming to number millions in its ranks, powerful enough to hunt out a government and to set its heel on a great city for two months (referring to the recent siege of Paris), wielding for the time a force of 150,000, and which schemes to eradicate from among human institutions at once, marriage, property, and religion.' The Edinburgh Review regards the Internationals as more dangerous to society than ever the order of Jesuits was, and more important to be understood than any organization that has been formed since the origin of civilization. Mr. Willis Nevins, a writer in the Engish Record, takes the same view. All these base their views on authentic documents and history. In the English Parliament the Hon. Mr. Cochrane says that he can prove 'that it is a society that threatens with destruction every European State.' A number of European governments take this view, and have suppressed it by law. . . . Still further, Mr. Gracey tells us that Castellar, the eminent Republican, defends it in a four hours' speech before the Spanish Cortez. Moreover, Mr. Hoar, in the House of Representatives, presented approvingly the Constitution and By-laws of the International as the work of the leading minds of the order; and Wendell Phillips, defends both the International and the Commune."—Coming Reign of Terror. P. 71.

Mr. Beecher says of their proposed revolution—"Of course such a movement cannot go far without attracting to itself many violent and visionary persons, who would attack the laws which are indispensable to all profitable industry, and to human society itself." Mr. Phillips, in a lecture in N. Y., on Communism, said:

"I have often spoken in New York when the situation was grave and the subject momentous, but I feel seriously the vast importance—I might say the terrible significance—of the cause which you invite me to present to you to-night. No event of disappointed hope, no momentary defeat, makes me despond on looking at the present demands of the laboring classes. My only feeling is one of the greatest anxiety over the startling, sudden growth of this great social force. My fear is that the easy classes of civilization itself are not ready to meet this volcanic eruption of all the sub-tier of civilized life. I have no fear about its limitations, its inadequate strength, or its ultimate success. My anxiety is on the other side. My fear, as I stand in its presence, is that the leaders of society, the owners of wealth, party organizations, and all the the other appliances of civilized life, are not ready yet to meet and recognize the popular claim, and try to guide this gigantic interference in the nineteenth century."—Ibid. Page 19.

Karl Marx, the man who is said to have originated Commmunism, and consequently is good authority for what they purpose to do, said—"The Communists invariably support every revolutionary movement against the existing order of things, social and political. . . . The Communists labor for the union and association of the revolutionary parties of all countries. The Communists disdain to conceal their opinions and ends. They openly declare that these ends can be attained only by the overthrow of all hitherto existing social arrangements. Let the ruling classes tremble at a Communist revolution. The Proletarians have nothing to lose in it save their claims. They will gain a world. Let the Proletarians of all countries unite!"—Ibid, p. 20.

These statements from these men looking at the subject from very different standpoints, all agree that the two classes—masters and servants—now occupy antagonistic positions; the servants threatening to "leap upon" the "masters' houses" with bloody violence." As we have said, the governments all take the part of the "masters"—the "rich"—and therefore the Internationals design to overthrow and destroy their power to defend the rich; thus revolutionizing all law and social order.

The recent Spanish Minister of State, Senor De Blas, addressed a circular to the Spanish representatives in foreign countries upon this subject, and said:

"A grave debate occurred in the Spanish Congress during the last Legislature, which was one of the most important ever sustained in any legislative assembly. Its object was to define, from the political, and consequently eminently practical, point of view, the real condition of the International Association of Workingmen. The powerful and formidable organization and the rapid development it has attained in a few years, invite the attention of all who are interested in preserving social order. The latter is menaced in its very foundations by the International, which breaks up all the traditions of humanity, erases from thought the very name of God, of the life of the family, and of inheritance; which also erases that of nations from the civilized world, and aspires only to increase the prosperity of the working classes on the basis of universal equality. . . . It will not suffice that one Government alone shall take respecting it separately the most severe dispositions, neither will it suffice that its sections should be made to disappear from one single nation by means of its laws. . . . . To put down the evil, it is necessary that all Governments labor at once to the same end."—Ibid, pp. 21–22.

"At a meeting of the Sovereigns of Industry, held in Harmony Hall, Boston, speeches were delivered by the Rev. W. R. Alger and Mr. John Orvis. The general subject of discussion was labor reform, or the problem of securing to each man his just and equal share of this world's goods, and preventing anybody from getting more than his share. Mr. Orvis made the first speech, in which he endeavored to point out the inhumanity of the present system of trade and commerce, which, he said, was a fierce competition, based on the principle of unlimited profit, in which the weakest were trodden to death while the most selfish and unscrupulous often reaped enormous profits out of the necesssties of the poor. Of course there were individual exceptions, but the present system might be generally described as a selfish organization of capitalists for purely selfish ends."

"Mr. Alger said the spirit of love, however was not sufficient of itself, to transform the world; there must be a method, and that method was justice. Could the products of labor and skill be distributed at cost, and every man do his proper share towards the work of the world, that would go far towards making this earth a heaven."—Boston Globe.

COMMUNISTS IN CHICAGO.

"The Communists of Chicago have for some time assumed a threatening attitude. On the 24th they became more violent than usual, and every precaution was taken by the authorities to prevent their obtaining the public arms, and to guard against an uprising."

"Chicago, Feb. 25. A mob of about 2000 people, composed chiefly of Communists, have assembled at the corner of Randolph and La Salle Sts., in the vicinity of the offices of the Relief and Aid Society. The most intense excitement prevails among the crowd. With the exception of a few stones thrown, no violence has been attempted on the part of the mob. The element is a dangerous one, and by no means confined to Chicago."—S. F. Chronicle.

The London Times says—"A St. Petersburg correspondent gives some interesting particulars of the Socialist conspiracy which has lately been discovered in Russia. The Procurator of the Court at Saratof got possession of certain letters which in his judgment proved that a branch of the International was at work in the neighborhood, the immediate machinery employed being the circulation of proclamations inciting the peasantry to rise against the tyranny of the nobles and capitalists. He reported his discovery to the Government, and a very large number of arrests and domiciliary visits have been made in consequence. Among those suspected are many officials, especially in the police and judical departments. Unless the Russian Government has allowed itself to be led away by a false or much exaggerated alarm, this news is of considerable importance. It has long been suspected that Socialist doctrines of the most extreme kind have taken firmer hold in Russia than in any other country, and if it be true that officials have been associated with workingmen's associations in disseminating these appeals to the peasantry, this suspicion is abundantly justified. Conspiracies of this mixed kind belong to a different order of things to the mere petulant outbursts of students at the universities which are often represented to be the only active opposition which the Russian Government has to fear. The mixture of political theory with practical recklessness, of a class which has reasoned itself into desiring revolution with a class which is led by its physical sufferings to think that any change must be for the better, is precisely the combination which renders Socialism generally dangerous.

An English writer treats largely upon this subject. In the London Times he said:—

"I notice that newspapers which specially represent the opinions and interests of the richer classes are alarmed at some striking indications that the poorer classes, including large numbers of artisans, have little confidence in, or respect for, the upper ranks. It seems as if this very obvious fact is usually overlooked by the titled and the wealthy, and at intervals, when they are reminded of it, they are at once frightened and puzzled."

Speaking of the rich, he said—"The English aristocracy contributes next to nothing to intelligent thought and opinion. It is not a guide to progress, but a dead weight difficult to shove along. It owns land on a bad system, hunts foxes and hares, shoots pheasants in its covers and pigeons at Hurlingham, dawdles at the clubs, drives in Rotten Row, visits the opera (paying little attention to the best music), and votes in the Lords or Commons without hearing the debates.

Is it unnatural that the workingman should ask of these people, 'What do you do for your £50,000 or £300,000 a year, your vast landed property, your streets and squares of town houses, and all the other good things society gives you?' Thirty shillings or fifteen shillings a week got by hard work are things so different from prodigious incomes obtained by the unmeritorious and irresponsible act of being born, that the workingmen of a nation are not very likely to look with favor on the privileged classes when those classes do not render any visible service at all commensurate with their receipts. . . . It is also noticed, as I have often pointed out, that the capitalists and the aristocrats pull together to keep the law so that it may be no terror to evil doers of rank and station, provided their delinquencies conform to certain conventional rules.

The general tone of feeling being that of distrust, any particular case of harshness or injustice produces a widespread and painful effect. . . . . I have never been one of those who lay all the blame on the rich. I see, and have never scrupled to expose, the faults of the working class; but I know that society is a great unit, and that the condition of one part determines the state of another part. I see a plain connection between the faults and vices of the rich and those of the poor; and I believe that if we want a better state of things, we must carry on the mending process at both ends, and in the middle too."

It is plain to all that the social system now controlling these classes demands a "mending process," and men are attempting to mend it; but Inspiration teaches us to wait until the Judge shall come, who will thoroughly reconstruct and establish an eternal and perfected system of human association.

We think, in view of all these testimonies and many more which we cannot now quote, with the startling facts all around us of strikes and demonstrations of irrepressible conflict between the capitalists and laborers, and that this strife is becoming more warlike every month, and that the parties are composed of exactly the classes foretold, and those classes occupying exactly the positions described, and threatening to do just what was predicted that they would do, proves conclusively that this financial conflict is a clearly defined sign that Christ will soon appear the second time, to judge the quick and dead. Let us mark the breaking up of imperfect and sinful associations, which indicates the dawning of a day of heavenly unity and eternal harmony. J. C.

PETALUMA.

We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings in the city of Petaluma, California. We held them in the Baptist, Southern Methodist, and Congregationalist churches. We found the religious interest rather low. We commenced our meetings in the Baptist church, Tuesday evening, April 20th, and closed them in the Congregationalist church Lord's day evening, April 25th. We had three open-air meetings on the street, which were well attended, and noted for good order. We also held two children's meetings, with happy results. We trust several of them gave their hearts to Christ. We are becoming fully convinced that more effort should be made to bring the children to Jesus, before bad habits become fixed upon them. They are easily reached in their youthful days, by religious influences. It is a great mistake to let them come like weeds in the service of Satan. Parents are taught to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The children are taught to remember their Creator in the days of their youth. As soon as they know good from evil, they should be pointed to the Savior. They are often converted when only five or six years of age, and some even younger.

A good work began among the adults. backsliders were reclaimed, several were converted, and many more were under conviction. The last meeting, Lord's day evening, was one of special interest. About one hundred remained to the inquiry meeting, and several decided to begin a christian life. Bro. Hutchins, the pastor of the Congregational church, was happily disappointed in witnessing such a revival interest. We were much pleased with his kind spirit. He was anxious to have us remain longer, but we had promised to return to Vallejo, to assist in the union meetings in that city. We have seldom seen richer fruits in so short a time than those at Petaluma. To the Lord be all the glory. It was accomplished by the special power of the Holy Spirit. Several were particularly interested to hear about the gift of the Spirit, and decided to present their bodies a living sacrifice to Jesus, to be entirely his for ever.

We had a pleasant visit on the cars and boat with Bro. Clifford, the Presiding Elder of the M. E. church, who said he thought there had never before been so much religious interest in California as at present. At no other time has there been so much union between ministers as at present. In this respect, there is cause for hearty thanksgiving. Although Bro. Hammond has left San Francisco, arrangements have been made to hold union meetings for months, every Sunday evening, in the great Union Hall. The ministers have entered into the work of leading sinners to Christ, with an earnest zeal that has seldom been witnessed on this coast, and which has already resulted in great good.

As we watch this movement, we are more and more convinced that it is the last gleaning before the great harvest. It is to be feared that those who now refuse to come to Jesus will soon find it too late—too late!

PROBATION AFTER RESURRECTION.

It is claimed by some, that those who have not had the gospel preached to them, will be raised from the dead, and then have a chance to accept the gospel of the kingdom. Can any believe that a man who has been raised by Christ from the dead will need much urging, in order to persuade him to accept the offer of salvation. Should the Lord do this, we think he would be showing them a special partiality. We can find no proof in the Bible, that any person who dies in his sins will have another time of probation in the world to come. As we understand the Scriptures, when Jesus comes, and the dead are raised, every man's destiny is forever settled. If not ready before death, he will never be ready. We believe this is the only life and world in which to fit for the next. All are invited. A portion of the Spirit is given to every man. Their conscience accusing or condemning. They are a law unto themselves. Where there is no law there is no transgression. They that "have sinned without law shall all also perish without law." But if all that are dead, who have not heard the law, are to be raised and hear it, then none will "perish without law;" and the apostle was mistaken. We are not prepared to take such a position.

It is said God will be respecting persons, if he does not raise those who have never heard the gospel, and give them a chance to hear. Let us listen to what Paul says on this subject: "There is no respect of persons with God." Rom. 2: 11. How does that appear?

"For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law; for not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another; in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel. Rom. 2: 12–16.

Where no law is, there is no transgression." Rom. 4: 15. "Whosoever commiteth sin transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law." 1 John 3: 4. Here we have it plainly stated, "where no law is, there is no transgression." This looks reasonable, and commends itself to the common sense of all candid people. But we have found Paul speaking of those who "have sinned without law," who "shall also perish without law." What does he here mean by "law?" He cannot mean "no law," for if he does, he contradicts himself, and declares punishment when there is no transgression.

When he refers to those who "have sinned without law," he must mean without the law as written in the Scriptures. Is there any other law? Certainly. Hence he says: "When the Gentiles [heathen], which have not the law [written in the Bible], do by nature the things contained in the law [in the Bible], having not the law, are a law unto themselves, which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness." Thus we see every man is under law, and justly condemned, if he does not obey. He who lives up to his best light, is free from condemnation. It is not the amount of light and knowledge possessed, that makes a righteous man, but receiving and using what comes within his grasp. Salvation is placed within the reach of every man in this world, so that all the lost will be without excuse. For this reason we believe no further probation will be offered to any one in the world to come. When Christ appears to judge, it will be too late for the sinner to seek pardon. If not ready when the Savior comes, we see no scripture to show that he will have any opportunity after the second advent of Jesus shall have taken place.

WAR CLOUDS.

The war clouds in Europe continue to become more and more threatening. A special to the New York Herald, from Paris, April 12th, says a war may be expected, "involving Russia, Italy, Austria, Germany, and France. Bismarck is the promoter of this war, and the Papacy is the pretext." The Paris Union says the Pope has sent word to the Emperor of Austria that "the position of the church is becoming more and more intolerable."

The Union says something must be done soon, or "the Catholic Powers will lose their influence." It is stated that at least eighty Catholic ecclesiastics are now imprisoned in Posen (Germany) alone. The government has decided to withhold the support of the Catholic ecclesiastics until they fully submit to the civil power. The Bishops have been holding a secret conference to decide what course to pursue.

A crisis is evidently at hand of no ordinary magnitude. When the storm bursts forth, terrible results may be expected. Let every christian gird on his holy armor, and be ready for the coming of the great King.

M. G.

"A SIGN OF THE TIMES."

In the New York weekly Herald, for April 3d, when speaking of the religious interest in Europe and America, the editor says:

"We have watched the movement which is exciting the interest of tens of thousands in Europe and America with some degree of curiosity, and regard it as a sign of the times not to be ignored by any thoughtful student."

Speaking of the remarkable work in Scotland, Ireland and England, the editor says:

"We have remarked it is much easier to rouse the masses of London to overwhelming excitment than to stir up the people of New York. Moody and Sankey are doing in England a very important work. We wish Mr. Varley or any other evangelist could accomplish the same in this city. But we fear the days of eloquence are over in this country, or, at any rate, the days when an American audience can completely forget itself in the fervor of a speaker."

The editor of the Herald seems to have pretty clear views of the true state of things. O that thousands of earnest, unselfish men might be raised up to sound the alarm, and lead the people to Christ, instead of dogmatic creeds. Honest men, who love Jesus, cannot all be made to see alike on all points of doctrine; but they are agreed that sinners must come to Christ or be lost. Let them unite to assist in this all-important work. The results will be blessed. M. G.

A GRAVE QUESTION.

The German empire and the Papacy are decidedly hostile to each other. One or the other must bow and submit, or a fierce conflict must take place, that will result in the complete destruction of one or the other. Middle or conservative measures, are not in the programme. It is victory or death. There has recently been a very stirring time in the Prussian Parliament. Prince Bismarck made one of his characteristic speeches against the Papal power. He was earnestly applauded. The basis of his remarks appeared to be founded on the following proposition: "You shall obey the Pope rather than man." He then went on to say: 'I believe I am obeying God when I serve my King." He showed that they could not obey both the Pope and the King," and then inquired: "Shall you obey the Pope rather than the King?" [Roars of applause.] Prince Bismarck's speech produced a deep sensation.

It was evident that the Pope could expect no assistance from the German Empire, and that the Pope's priests must yield or come to an open conflict with the govenment. It will soon be decided which shall rule. The death struggle is rapidly approaching, but there is no doubt as to the results, for the Lord hath spoken. The avenger of blood is on the track of the Papacy, and there is no escape. The scenes of the judgment day are at our doors. The last call of mercy will soon be hushed forever. O sinner, do not linger, but fly at once to Jesus for salvation. Do it NOW. Do not wait another moment. Eternal life is the object to be gained or lost. Look at its value, and seek it through Christ. M. G.

THE GRANGERS have become a power in the land. It is claimed that they number over one and a half millions of members. It is stated that by means of this association its members saved five million dollars in 1873, twelve millions in 1874, and they expect to save at least twenty millions this year. It is said one hundred thousand women have united with the Grangers.

M. G.

GARIBALDI proposes to deepen the channel of the Tiber, and make a good harbor at Rome for large ships. It is but eighteen miles from the sea; while in London it is forty. The best engineers say that an excellent and commodious harbor can be constructed at that city. The cost is estimated not above twelve million dollars. M. G.

CORRECTION.—In Bro. Stetson's article in Crisis of April 28th, in place of "church ministers," read such ministers.

IN MEMORIAM.

Bro. William Nichols, of Albany, N. Y., died March 29th, 1875, aged 65 years.

He was born in Fairfield county, Conn., March 13th, 1810, and was united in marriage to Hannah M. Sperry, Sept. 15th, 1830. He was converted at a Methodist campmeeting in South Adams, Mass., in 1833. He identified himself with the Second Advent movement at its very commencement, and remained heart and soul an Adventist, being closely allied in church relations and christian labor with the people bearing that name, until he fell asleep in Jesus. His funeral was very largely attended, and it was the privilege of the writer to bear testimony to the noble character of the dear departed one, and to present the "blessed hope" which for so many years had been, through cloud and sunshine, the comfort and anchorage of his pilgrim heart.

Bro. Nichols was one of the best men that ever lived. The one great aim of his life was to walk in the footsteps of the blessed Savior, and he consequently possessed a strong and symmetrical christian character. He gave with a generous hand to the support of the gospel, and the poor and the needy ever found in him a willing helper. That he was "given to hospitality" will be the testimony of many of the Advent ministers of the land.

Bro. Nichols' knowledge of the Divine Word was extensive and profound. He never wearied in his endeavors to know the truth as it is in Jesus; and if ever a man delighted in the Scriptures—Old Testament not less than the New—because they testify of Christ, our beloved brother was such a man.

Diligence in business and fervency of spirit were happily blended in Bro. N.'s way of serving the Lord. His heart was set on the heavenly inheritance—the better country—the incorruptible crown—the city which hath foundations—the kingdom which cannot be moved—the fulness of joy in God's presence, the pleasures forevermore at his right hand.

Our brother's consistent life and transparent integrity of character won for him the respect and confidence of the community at large; and by his brethren and sisters of "like precious faith" he was very greatly beloved. He held forth the Word of life effectively, and the saints were glad to listen to his fervid and instructive utterances. They unite with the bereaved widow and children in mourning his loss, but they sorrow not as those which have no hope. They are patiently waiting the coming of the day of God which will bring to their eternal home the whole family of the redeemed. They look for the absent Bridegroom, at whose glorious appearing they expect to be forever with the Lord. May we all have part in that everlasting rest. Amen.

RUFUS WENDELL.

AN APPEAL.

TO THE CHURCHES!—ADVENTISTS!—STEWARDS OF THE LORD.

Brn. and Srs. of New Hampshire:—Have we done all we can, or that God requires us to do, in giving to the people of this State the last judgment warning—the gospel of the kingdom? Who can say that we have if a little more time is given us to labor? Again, how can our labors and the means God has entrusted us with as stewards, and will hold us responsible for, be best expended? We think that the success that has crowned judicious labors under Mission Tents, in this and other States, in a measure answers these questions. The command is "Go," and in thus going we carry our meeting-house with us. We think it a conceded point that many who would not under other circumstances attend our meetings, are induced to come to tent meetings.

And now, dear brethren, as the N. H. Advent Christian Conference has chosen us to hold protracted meetings, and have entrusted us with the N. H. Mission Tent, will you help us by prayers and means to save some through this instrumentality? We feel a great responsibility in this matter; will you share it with us, and then in the great harvest reap the blessing? We want to see how much can be raised and pledged, between this and the time to hold tent meetings, to carry the tent into new places. A strict account of all receipts, and how paid out, will be kept. Now, will you make one effort, and sacrifice of this world's goods, for this great and noble cause before the fires of the last day shall consume them? Let God direct. Send in your monies and pledges to the Treasurer, J. G. Smith, Farmington, N. H. Also, brethren, we want you to interest yourselves in finding places where tent-meetings are needed, and see if land to set it upon and lumber to seat it with can be obtained, and let us know as soon as you can, so that we can make our arrangements to the best advantage, and not travel over the ground more than is necessary. We intend to secure as good help as we can to go with the tent. Remember, "God loveth a cheerful giver." And as this is to give the gospel to the poor, you can thus claim the promise in Prov. 19: 17.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Brethren:—I find some are inquiring what has become of old Bro. Spaulding. Let me inform such that I am alive and enjoy good health, yet quite infirm with age; although with all my infirmities I have traveled, visited and given lectures all the past cold winter, and God has preserved me from harm. I have been blest with kind, hospitable friends, who have cared for my bodily wants, as though they remembered my age and infirmities. God bless them, is my prayer.

I have visited and lectured in eight different towns. I had been silent five years, thinking I had done my work, and never should speak in public again; but I have found the subject clear as ever to my mind, and I could quote proof texts as well as ever, and even give the chapter and verse. I am somewhat run down by overwork, yet I am firm in the faith. I never have been so confident in the time question as many, yet I do believe the coming of Jesus is nigh; yes, very nigh. The signs of the times prove it clear enough for me. It does not discourage me at all that certain times, looked to with so much confidence, have passed by. God's Word has not failed, nor will it fail. Every jot and tittle of it will be fulfilled.

Let me say to my beloved brethren, read the prophecies, believe that whatsoever was written aforetime was written for our learning, and no prophecy is of any private interpretation. It may be understood. Let us live, expecting the fulfillment, looking for it, waiting for it, and prepared to meet it and our coming Lord, with lamps trimmed and hearts in order.

From Bro. W. H. Deverell.

Dear Friends in Christ:—As I am blest, week after week, reading so many blessed experiences in the Crisis, it prompts me to accept the cross, and try to tell you how I am longing to see our dear Savior. I often think what a blessed joy and privilege we as believers in Christ have; that of knowing that the Lord is so near. I am satisfied that the glad day is just at hand, and I try to tell some poor souls of it, and find some willing to talk upon the subject; but, oh, what darkness I find! I live in a beautiful part of God's vineyard, but there is much wickedness, as we read there shall be just before Christ comes. How often I think of the words of Jesus—"As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man."

Let us try this present year, if time lasts, to bring some poor souls to Christ. Dear friends, I live where I do not hear a sermon on the Lord's coming once in six months. I had one good brother call on me, and we found opposition so strong against us that we could not get any church to speak in. I even asked for the school-house, and was denied; but, thank God, they could not shut up my own house, and I had him speak three times in it, on the second one there this truth was spoken. By the help of God I will try and live a christian, so that when Christ comes he will say—"Well done, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

I wish that; this coming summer, some of the brethren who have tents would come over this way; for I see they all seem to be trying to do their duty where they can.

My brother traveling, who can call this way, will find one that trusts in Christ to welcome him,—I mean any one who preaches Christ and the gospel as it is written in the blessed Word.

Queensville, Canada.

From Bro. M. J. Hughes.

Dear Brn.:—The Lord is blessing us. I have been visiting different sections of the State, and have had more opportunities than ever before to find out the true condition of the freedmen, both spiritually and temporally. They differ so widely in knowledge, religion, manners and customs, that one could hardly believe or think that so wide a difference could exist in the state of N. Carolina. I found some of God's children, also some of the servants of Satan in every town. I found a class of people in the western part of the State, near the Tennessee line, in the mountains, who live and love his appearing; and to a great extent understand the Scriptures as we do in regard to the inheritance and nature of man, but believe the eternal torment doctrine. They have no hobbies or definite time questions, and they seem wholly absorbed in love and this hope. All rest in the promise that Christ will come again.

It seemed so heavenly to see and hear these children of color, in the mountains, where I supposed this compelling message that belongs to this generation, was never heard. Thanks be to God, that his truth, his love, his salvation, has found its way into the hearts of these mountaineers in N. Carolina!

I will write you more soon. The clothes came safely. Pray for me, and also for these people.

PHILBRICK. In Rye, N. H., April 8th, 1875, Bro. Moses C. Philbrick, aged 62 years.

Bro. P. was converted at the age of fourteen, and was baptized by his father, Eld. Ephraim Philbrick, then a member of the Christian Church at Rye; but subsequently both father and son embraced the doctrine of the soon coming of the Lord, and lived and died in the faith. Bro. Moses was well known as an earnest, working christian; one that lived his religion every day, and at whose house the servant of the Lord found a hearty welcome. His work is well done, and he rests in hope, and awaits the promised crown. While his companion and loved ones mourn their sad bereavement, they rejoice in hope of a speedy reunion in the city of God. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Wells. HUNTER. In Atkinson, Feb. 27th, 1875, of scarlet fever, Inez Maud, only child of George F. and Frances A. Hunter, aged two years and eight months.

It seemed very hard for the mother to part with sweet little Inez just as life was opening before her with such bright promises of earthly happiness, while the husband and father, far away on the broad ocean, knows nothing of his darling's sickness and death. Only two days before she died, her sweet voice was heard singing the hymns her quick ear had caught, with wonderful precision for one so young. Although her voice is hushed in death, and we see no more her smiling face, the promise, "They shall come again from the land of the enemy," affords comfort and consolation to the heart of the lone mother.

Our sister had been a constant care on her parents from a child, being an invalid; but she sleeps, and her parents "sorrow not as those which have no hope." We endeavored to give words of comfort from these words.—"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. 15: 26.

LINES

Composed on the death of Louis E. Hubbard, youngest son of Dr. S. P. and Harriet A. Hubbard, who fell asleep Jesus Feb. 5th, 1875, aged 13 years and 3 months.

We've laid him in his casket,
And covered him with flowers;
We shed our tears of sorrow
Through many weary hours.

And when night gathers over
Our quiet, lonely room,
We miss our darling Louis,
Now lying in the tomb.

Stern death—the cruel monster—
Laid claim unto our boy,
But Jesus soon will raise him,
And then he'll die no more.

When his young life was ebbing,
And his conscious moments few,
He raised his little prayer to heaven,
And bade us all adieu.

We do not mourn, complaining
That God has been unjust;
We leave it all with Jesus;
In him we put our trust.

Farewell, sweet darling Louis,
Sleep on and take your rest,
Till Jesus bids you welcome Come,
And be his honored guest.

FOREIGN NEWS.

AUSTRIA.

For the last few days reports have been current at Vienna of arrests and persecutions of the Christians in Bosina and the Herzegovina. It is even said that a massacre has taken place in the neighborhood of Solonica, in Roumelia.

A contract for the purchase of 10,000 horses, to be delivered at the end of June, has been concluded on behalf of France at the horse fair at Netoltz, in Bohemia.

The village of Blindenmarkt, in Lower Austria, was burnt to the ground last week. The fire broke out in a cottage, and the flames were fanned by a high wind, so that they became quite beyond control. The church, priest's residence, and school were destroyed, and not a single dwelling saved. The inhabitants have lost all they possessed.

London, May 6. A Paris correspondent of the Times telegraphs that uneasiness prevails in well-informed circles in Paris.

The most serious minds believe there is danger impending. Politicians from abroad, as well as those claiming to be well informed at home assert that peace or war depends on the approaching meeting of the Czar and the German Emperor.

No one denies that the powerful party in Germany, comprising the entire military element, feels that the late treaty was too lenient; that the indemnity paid has already returned to French coffers; that the possession of Belfort by France is dangerous to Germany; that France is reorganizing rapidly enough and will soon be able to furnish a formidable army to any alliance with other nations; that Germany is no richer than before the war, and her finances and social organization cannot long support the expense of the present armaments and she cannot disarm in the face of France. The military party in Germany are convinced that never was there a moment more propitious than the present to secure for their country a long era of prosperity and peace. War ought to be promptly undertaken. It is necessary to march on Paris and take up a position where a new peace can be signed which takes Belfort from France, limits her active army and exacts ten millards in twenty years. Paris could be attacked if France refused to sign. All the powers have confined themselves to timid friendly representations with regard to the Belgian notes, which only shows that to finish with France now is a duty to Germany and humanity. Europe will never be tranquil while the blunder of a treaty which leaves France ready to revive and re-enter the struggle, is unrectified.

What may be promptly executed at an insignificant sacrifice, would two years hence cost oceans of blood. Russia must be convinced of this necessity.

The Times correspondent adds: It would be untrue to say that these arguments are accepted, even if Germany was outside of a particular party. It would be equally untrue to say that these menaces are destined to be realized. The diplomatic world, even in Germany, declare she cannot fight against an enemy who declares for peace. Honest Germans scout the suppositions. The Emperor has scruples, but the party of immediate action urge it as a duty to sink all considerations in order to save the country. They insist that France will be made to accept a reassuring treaty, if she will not fight. Germany, in order to have the right to reproach France as the cause of uneasiness, must solemnly disclaim the above theories. The Times, in its editorial columns, scouts the apprehensions raised by the alarmists and the alarmed in Paris.—Boston Journal.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 5, via Havana. A revolution broke out in Port au Prince Sunday. Gen. Brice was dragged from church and shot. Forty foreigners have been killed. Among the victims is a servant of the British Consul General. Buildings were fired, and every species of disorder prevailed. A state of siege has been proclaimed. A British gunboat is there, and another will be sent there to-morrow. The steamers were not permitted to enter the port, and have landed their cargoes here.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

MONTPELIER, Vt., has been visited by another disastrous fire, this time the work of an incendiary, unless the people are greatly mistaken. It was discovered Friday at midnight, and soon thirty-two stores and dwellings were destroyed, involving a loss of about $114,000.

Pottsville, Pa., May 5. Last night a colliery at the Ben Franklin Colliery at Tonyville, near Shamokin, was destroyed by fire. It was owned and worked by Dorrity & Bromgardner. As this colliery has been working through the strike, the fire is supposed to have been incendiary. The loss is $100,000. Two hundred men and boys are thrown out of employment, which will be severly felt by them, as it was one of the few collieries in the region giving employment, and no work is to be had elsewhere. This is the first instance of a colliery being burnt during the strike.

At Girardnette a special engine with the superintendent of the Mahoning Branch railroad on board was stoned. The engineer had a narrow escape.

These scenes are the premonitory symptoms of that burning spirit of revenge in the hearts of laborers, which will make the rich "howl" when it shall be let loose to destroy their "heaped up treasures."

Vermont Conference.

The next session will be held with the church at Hinesburgh, Vt., according to vote of last Conference, and will commence Wednesday evening, June 9th. Meetings will be held over the Lord's day, although the Conference will close Friday night.

Those coming on the Central Vermont R. R. (Eastern division) will stop at Richmond. Those coming on the Rutland and Burlington division will stop at Charlotte. Teams will meet passengers at those stations on Wednesday. Those wishing to be met at the depot on Wednesday, or on any other day, should write to Bro. A. H. Post, Hinesburgh, some days beforehand, that they may know how extensive team arrangement to make. A stage leaves Burlington daily for Hinesburgh, at about two o'clock P. M. We hope that there will be a general gathering at this meeting, for the furtherance of the gospel. Help in preaching the Word has been engaged from abroad.

H. F. CARPENTER, for Com.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—A four days meeting will be held at East Bethel, Vt., commencing June 2nd, and continuing over the Sabbath, June 6th. Bro. H. H. Tucker, of Palmer, Mass., and others who can, will assist Bro. Hoyt at this meeting. Come, all ye valiant soldiers, lift up the ensign for the people.

Tent Meeting and Conference.

The Lord willing, the Connecticut Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Oakville, Conn., Wednesday, May 12th, and remain over Sunday, May 16th.

We go to this new field by invitation of Bro. and Sr. Mills, the only family in the place of like precious faith, and who will accommodate as far as possible. Our brethren, however, had better take along blankets, and some of us can sleep under the tent, if necessary. It is proposed that all business pertaining to the Conn. A. C. Conference be disposed of Thursday, May 13th, and we hope the brethren will be prompt at the business session, that the remainder of the time be devoted to sounding the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. Pray that the Holy Spirit may attend in power.

Oakville lies three miles west of Waterbury, on Watertown Branch R. R. By present R. R. Time Table, trains leave Waterbury for Oakville at 11.50 A. M. and 6.45 P. M.

O. D. WOODRUFF.

NOTICE.—I will meet those who have written to me concerning ground to build wooden tents upon, on the camp-ground at Springfield, May 21st, from 9 A. M. till 3 P. M. Hope all will be there. You can get lumber, and all other building material and help, near by. If there are any who selected a lot last year, and are not sure of building this year, please notify me soon. You should not hold a lot from others who want to build.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

The Advent Christian State Campmeeting for Minnesota, is to be held at the Utica camp-ground, known as the Chatham Grove, two miles south of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, twenty-three miles west of the city of Winona, commencing Saturday, June 12th, at 2.30 P. M., and hold over two Sundays.

We shall provide a boarding tent and board for such as may want it, just as cheap as possible, and those that wish to board themselves can have the use of the tent stove to cook on. A pasture lot will be furnished near the camp-ground, also stabling for horses; as many as can will please bring grain to feed.

We hope that the churches and the scattered ones as many as can will come with their tents, bedding, etc., as may be necessary for a week or ten days tenting on the camp-ground. One and all think of all the things necessary for your own comfort while at the meeting, and bring them with you, and we will try to make you all comfortable. We wish all to come full of the life, power, and spirit of the Master, that God's people may be comforted, and strengthened in the faith, backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted to God, and many souls made happy in the Lord.

Preaching Brethren and Sisters expected:—Brn. C. C. Ramsay and Wm. Chapman from Iowa, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Sr. Ruth M. Rowell, and Bro. J. W. Bursell; and we extend a cordial invitation to preaching brethren and sisters in general. We hope also that Bro. M. Grant (the Lord willing) may be with us to preach the Word. Those coming by the R. R. down the river will change cars at Minnesota City, and those coming by the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. will change cars at Owatonna for Utica.

The State Advent Christian Conference was adjourned to meet in connection with this Campmeeting. The State tent will be pitched on the camp-ground.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference of Advent Christians of the State of Minnesota will convene at Utica, on the old camp-ground in Chatham's Grove, on Tuesday, June 15th, at 10.30 A. M. This Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting. We expect the following preachers:—Bro. and Sr. Barnes, Sister Rowell, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Brn. Bursell, Mitson, Brown, Ramer, Chapman, Lombard, Cole, Wellcome (of Garden City), Wood, Smith, and Dewing. Let there be a general rally of our Minnesota preachers. Come to work for God and the salvation of sinners. Those who cannot come, write a report of your labors and send it in season. We want a general rally. Let every church in the Conference report either by delegate or by letter.

Come, brethren, with your tents. Lay by your work for a few days and come to this feast of tabernacles. Remember those little mission boxes. Send every dime you can for the trust fund from them. Come in the spirit of your Master—not to hear big preaching, but to work for the upbuilding of the cause. Jesus is soon coming, and we want to be ready to meet him, having our work done and well done. All reports sent after June 1st, should be directed to me at Utica, Winona Co., Minn., care of J. Cheatham.

S. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

WISCONSIN CAMPMEETING—This meeting will be held at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., beginning on Saturday, June 5th, and hold over two Sundays. Bro. Grant intends to be with us. There are daily stages running to Prairie du Sac from Lodi and Baraboo, on the Northwestern R. R., and a steamer from Merrimack; also a stage from Mazomanie, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R.—ten miles. Let us put up the most of our tents at the beginning of the meeting. Other particulars in time.

WISCONSIN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—This Conference will convene in connection with the State Campmeeting at Prairie du Sac, and hold its first session on the morning of the 10th of June. Let the churches be represented by delegates or letters, and let every minister either be present in person, or report by letter.

WM. SHELDON, Sec.

TENT MEETING.—There will be a Tent Meeting at Belgrade Mills, Me., the first of June. Particulars hereafter.

H. B. SEVEY.

AN APPEAL.

The season has now arrived when the special work of holding Tent Meetings should be begun. The Mass. Conference has a good Tent ready again for service in the harvest field of the Lord; and the question is: Shall it be sent forth once more with good and faithful laborers to gather in sheaves for Christ, and give the warning of the coming day of God? In order that this may be done, there must be a sacrifice made by the friends of Jesus, and means given to sustain in this way his precious cause.

It is proposed that the Tent this year be taken into new fields, and where our precious faith has not as yet been heard. If this is done, there will be a special necessity for contributions on the part of our churches and people in general, to defray the expenses of these meetings in these new places.

As the Committee, chosen at the late Conference to have the charge of the Tent and make arrangements for the work in connection with it, we invite all who have the means and the heart to give in sustaining this mode of reaching the people, to do so as soon as they can, that we may know how far to go in promising the Tent where it is already requested.

Contributions and pledges can be sent to the Treasurer, ELD. C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 19th, and continue to the 28th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board and lodging. All who can are requested to bring Tents.

Brethren in the Lord, do make arrangements to attend this meeting, especially all who reside in the southerly part of this State. Come at the commencement, if possible. We intend to secure good profitable laborers, those who are prepared to bring out an exposition of those prophecies especially applicable to these times, and now in process of fulfillment, when the church will be delivered. This may be the last annual gathering we shall be permitted to enjoy before the Lord will gather his own to himself. Let us do what we can to save the perishing before it is too late. Bro. Munger will have charge of the meeting.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths.

J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Monday, August 30th, and hold over Sept. 5th.

WM. H. MITCHELL, for the Com.

CAMPMEETING.—The Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Sunday, Sept. 5th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 12th.

JER. CARR, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the following prices: Hemlock, $15 00 per M.; Pine, planed and matched, $25,00 per M. All who want lumber for frames must write immediately to J. H. Downing, Alton Bay, N. H. Mr. Downing will furnish nails, windows, doors, butts, screws, etc., at Boston prices.

Seaside Campmeeting.

The undersigned having been appointed a committee to arrange for a General Campmeeting of Second Adventists at Seabrook, N. H., have accepted the position; and in compliance with urgent requests and our own convictions of duty, have leased "Beckman's Grove"; and if the Lord will, the meeting will commence August 14th, and continue over two Sabbaths.

The grove is pleasantly located within sixty rods of the depot, and about the same distance from salt water landing. There are excellent facilities for sailing and fishing. A large and commodious bath house will be erected, and the committee will spare no pains to procure accommodations for all who desire to build houses, or pitch tents on the ground, or to lease rooms in the neighborhood. The boarding house will be in charge of the committee. Fares will be reduced on the Eastern and other railroads. Particulars hereafter.

Committee of Arrangements: N. H. Robie, A. N. Dow, N. L. Robie, David Beckman, Robert Dow, Wm. Beckman, Charles C. Dow, John B. Adams, Charles A. Barton.

Meeting at Sugar Hill.

There will be a meeting at Sugar Hill, N. H. (D.V.) commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday, the 6th. Bro. E. A. Stockman will be present to preach the Word. It is hoped that Bro. Daniel Churchill will be able to attend also.

The object of this meeting is to glorify God, to cheer and strengthen his dear scattered saints, to awaken backsliders, and convert sinners to an experimental knowledge of the truth. For this let all the dear saints pray.

N. WHEELER.

N. B. As Sugar Hill is seven miles from Lisbon Depot, and no regular line of daily conveyance, it will be necessary for those who come over the R. R. to inform me when they will arrive at Lisbon, and conveyance will be provided at reasonable rates. Trains going North, arrive at Lisbon at 11 o'clock A. M. and half past 4 P. M.; going South, at half past 9 A. M. and 3 P. M. Come to the feast.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will hold its next session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, on the old camp-ground, commencing June 10th. There will be a boarding house and grocery store, so that all who wish to board or buy can be accommodated. There will be plenty of straw free to all. Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates, also wood.

Come one, come all. Come feeling an interest to save and be saved. This may be our last meeting before Jesus comes. We expect help from abroad. Eld. A. N. Seymour and others will be at the meeting. Our lease of the grounds run out this year. Let all interested be present to devise means and make arrangements for the future.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

EDINBORO, PA.—Our next Church Conference is appointed for May 29th and 30th. Services on Saturday, at 2 and 7.30 P. M. On Sunday, at 9.30 and 10.30 A. M., and 7.30 P. M. Administration of ordinances follow morning service. Brn., do you want preaching here and in adjacent places this year? If so, govern yourselves accordingly. Come up to this Conference and make arrangements therefor.

G. W. STETSON.

TENT MEETINGS.—The Iowa Advent Christian Mission Tent will be pitched (the Lord willing) in Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Thursday, May 27th, to continue over Sunday, June 6th, and longer if duty demands. Let there be a general rally by the brethren and sisters from the surrounding country to this meeting. Let us come to labor and pray for the promulgation of the truth and the salvation of sinners. As this will be the first tent meeting of the season, let us endeavor to strike the right key-note.

J. RIDLEY.
P. W. HOUGH.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 8th of April (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary. Let there be a large attendance, as there is business of unusual importance to come before the Conference.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell.

J. C. SMITH, Chairman.
R. F. CLARK, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The York Co. A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session in the chapel at West Parsonsfield, Me., commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 2 P. M. We desire to see a large attendance.

C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Seabrook, N. H., at the lowest market price, which will not exceed $15 per M. Address CHARLES C. DOW, Kensington, N. H.

THE FUTURE OF OUR PLANET

AS VIEWED FROM A

BIBLICAL STANDPOINT.

BY A. W. SIBLEY.

This is the title of a new Tract of 16 pages, issued by the A. C. P. Society. Just the thing to circulate widely. Price, 3 cents per copy; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.40 per hundred, by mail. AG'T.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

BY J. H. WHITMORE.

The former pamphlet edition of this valuable work having long since been exhausted, another edition has just been published, and we are now ready to supply orders for this book of 310 pages, for wide and general circulation, at the following very low rates: Single copy, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50 by mail; $17.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

A NEW BOOK.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked;—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express. AG'T.

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

A NEW TRACT.

"WHAT TO BELIEVE:"

A Work upon the Materiality of Man.

HIS CONDITION IN THIS AND THE FUTURE WORLD.

BY S. GUTHRIE.

This is an interesting and valuable tract of 48 pages, just issued by the A. C. P. Society. Price 10 cents per copy; 90 cents per dozen, by mail. AG'T.

NOW READY.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the reduced price of $15.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED

ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts.

And the "Slaying of the Witnesses." 10 cents. AG'T

THE HAPPY FUTURE.

S. SHRINER.

O happy day so long foretold
By prophet, priest and king,
When will thy glories all unfold,
And earth with rapture sing?

The wilderness and lonely place
With gladdened song rejoice,
The desert blossom as the rose;
All shout with heart and voice?

The parched ground become a pool,
And springs of water flow,
And grass and herbs and fruit and grain
In rich abundance grow?

No thorns nor poisonous plant shall then
Earth's beauteous covering mar;
No clouds disturb the sky serene,
But such as lovely are.

No scorching heat to smite by day,
No chilling winds at night,
No blinding storms to check our way,
Or hide the glorious sight.

No ravenous beast our path shall range
To fill our hearts with fear;
No reptile with his deadly fangs
His stealthy head shall rear.

The deaf shall hear, the blind shall see,
Strength given to the weak,
The lame shall walk, from lameness free,
The tongue, once dumb, shall speak.

The ransomed of the Lord shall come
To Zion's holy hill;
Joy everlasting on their heads
Their willing vows fulfill.

Yes, the redeemed in raiment white
Shall walk, and praise, and sing;
Sorrow and sighing flee away
At sight of Israel's King.

Surely that day is near at hand,
O let it quickly come,
When all the saints who waiting stand,
Shall hear the "Welcome home!"

THE MODERN HUMBUG.

Spiritual Manifestation Exposed in Joliet.

O. A. LADD.

For some little time past, quite a little ripple of excitement has been caused in spiritualistic circles by the advent of the "Celebrated Materialization Medium," Miss Jennie Shollenberges, of Chicago. Among the more noticeable seances given by her, was at the residence of Mr. Isaac Millspaugh, where her wonderful mediumistic and materialization powers convinced all who beheld them that there was something in it beyond their powers of understanding. The "shadow faces" of departed friends appeared and re-appeared to the astonished beholders, and as everything had been arranged to detect, if possible, any deception which might be practiced, all who saw were convinced. It was inexplicable, wonderful, supernatural, beyond the reach of earthly power to explain.

On Monday evening, the medium, who was accompanied by the mother and brother, gave a seance, at the residence of Joseph Whittier, Esq. Mr. Whittier is very well known as one of our oldest and most respectable citizens, and as a liberal sceptic in matters not according to the known laws of nature. Neighbors and friends, to the number of about twenty-five, were present, and everything being arranged under orders of the medium, the company were seated, the old gentleman being directly in front of the cabinet, which was made for the occasion by O. Johnson, in such a manner as to prevent fraud if any should be attempted. The medium was then examined carefully by a committee appointed for the purpose, made to put on other clothes than her own, and conducted to the cabinet by them, thus preventing all smuggling in of masks, whiskers, etc.

Of course the manifestations were of the most meagre description; only one face appearing at the aperture, and that strangely like the medium's, so much so that all present, with scarcely an exception, declared it a fraud, and confusion and disgust was the result. Mr. Whittier was so thoroughly convinced, that he declared that nothing but a human face had been shown or could be, and retired more a sceptic than before. Mr. Johnson, who made the cabinet, stepped in to see if it had been tampered with, and the appearance of his face at the aperture, attracted the attention of Mrs. Whittier Buffum, President of the United States Church, and editress of News From Spirit World, who was struck with the peculiar ghostly look it wore, precisely like that of "spirit faces." Orrin was not a "spiritual" physiognomy—and she resolved to experiment with the cabinet after the company had retired.

When the lights were turned up the medium started for the bedroom to get her clothes, but some one stopped her, telling her the old gentleman was in there going to bed. "Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, "what shall I do?" Shortly after, the Shollenbergers were shown to their rooms, and the company dispersed. Then commenced the investigation in earnest. Everything being arranged exactly as at the seance, the lamp dimly burning, being placed at one side, exactly in a line with the front of the cabinet. The editress of the U. S. Church entered the cabinet and presented her face at the aperture, when all exclaimed that the light upon her face was exactly like that purporting to be "spiritual light." As this remark was made she turned her eyes toward the lamp, and noticed that it was exactly in a line with her face; and they soon discovered that the shadowy, supernatural appearance was caused by simply advancing into or receding from the line of light. All by turns took positions in the cabinet, and upon all the effect was the same; and so elated were they with their new-found gift, that they spent the remainder of the night in experimenting and enjoying the heretofore unknown luxury of becoming "materialized spirits." They now know how it was done, but there was something they could not understand; as, for instance, the various faces which had been shown at previous seances, and particularly at Mr. Millspaugh's. How could the fraud be fully exposed without the secret of the bearded face, moustaches, nightcaps, etc., which had been shown on previous occasions, convincing sensible citizens of the reality of the so-called spiritual faces? Though fully satisfied of the fraud, no material proofs had been found by which to explain these various personifications.

One of the family, passing through Mr. Whittier's room the next morning, noticed something lying on the floor, and picking it up it proved to be the polonaise of the medium, Miss Shollenberger, and out of it dropped a small roll, which, on investigation proved to be a pocket handkerchief, concealed in which were a couple of pairs of moustaches, and a fine set of whiskers, most ingeniously arranged to be held on the face by the teeth. The mystery was fully solved, but the family wished also to convince their sadly duped friends, and proposed to the Shollenberger's that they give another seance the following evening. This they would not consent to do. They had been too closely watched the night before, at least they were told of the discoveries of the night before, and shown the beard and moustaches, when they both burst into tears and insisted on returning to Chicago at once. They did not fail however to speedily reclaim the moustaches and whiskers, and, procuring a conveyance, got out, cabinet and all, as soon as possible. The next morning another secret of the supernatural came to light in the shape of a fine silk mask, done up in a compact bunch.

The above facts were obtained directly from the parties above mentioned.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference held its second Quarterly session with the church at Rutland, Vt., commencing Wednesday, April 14th, 1875, and continuing over the following Sunday.

The first service was preaching Wednesday evening by Eld. C. W. Baker. Subject, Faith. On account of a funeral service Thursday, outside the village, at which Eld. H. K. Flagg officiated, there was no service at the chapel until evening, at which time Eld. Wm. J. Blanchard delivered an able discourse, from Rev. 3 : 18.

Met for business Friday morning at ten o'clock. President, Eld. A W. Sibley, in the chair. Prayer by Eld. H. K. Flagg.

The committee on credentials reported as follows: Preachers—C. W. Baker, Shushan, N. Y; A. W. Sibley, Sandy Hill, N. Y; W. J. Blanchard, Pownal, Vt.; W. O. Higley, Bennington, Vt.; Sister M. L. Tower, North Adams, Mass.; A. A. Waite, and H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt. Delegates—W. P. Lincoln, Hebron, N. Y.; S. D. Hutchins, E. D. Grandy, E. Young, Gideon Reed, Thos. A. Cheney.

Ministerial Com. reported that there was harmony throughout the Conference, and a very marked change for the better was plainly to be seen since the organization of the Conference, and that the great fundamental truths concerning the coming of Jesus and the establishment of his kingdom were never so thoroughly believed by the preachers and people as they are now.

Protracted Meeting Com.—A. W. Sibley had held two protracted meetings at Hoosick. God worked powerfully. H. K. Flagg had labored with H. F. Carpenter at Clarendon, Vt., and quite an interest was awakened among some of the most influential men in the place; but on account of severe storms the meetings were interrupted.

Reports from preachers and delegates were cheering. The preachers were determined, by the grace of God assisting them, to boldly unfurl the blood-stained banner of Prince Immanuel, and in the strength of Israel's God go forward. Among the more important items of interest that might be mentioned, we notice the following: The church at Rutland has prospered under the labors of Bro. Flagg during the past year; and although they have passed through severe trials on account of the anti-scriptural doctrines, advocated by Jacob Blain, creeping into the church, yet they were never more united than now, and have, by the unanimous voice of the church, invited Bro. Flagg to remain with them another year.

During this session of the Conference two brethren were set apart by prayer and the imposition of hands to the office of deacons.

The church at Sandy Hill never stood better than now. Bro. Sibley rather expects to close his labors with that church, as pastor, this spring.

In Hebron the church has been blessed under the labors of Bro. Blanchard, who has preached one half of the time there during the past year, but has closed his labors with them for the present. They think of securing the services of Bro. A. A. Waite of Rutland, Vt. Our churches are learning the importance of having pastors to take the oversight and feed the flock.

The church at Rutland was organized in the winter of 1856 or '57. It happened on this wise: Bro. Thomas A. Cheney secured the services of Eld. Miles Grant, who came there and held revival services, which resulted in the organization of a church numbering twelve or fifteen. It now numbers one hundred and ten.

During the session of Conference there was preaching by Brn. Sibley, Baker, Blanchard, Higley, Waite, and Sister Tower. The preaching was spiritual, and doubtless good was done.

The following resolution was passed:—Resolved, That the churches of this Conference be urged to take up a collection and forward the same to the treasurer of the Conference, John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., three weeks before each session; the same to be used by the Conference at its succeeding session, as may be thought best.

Voted, That the next Quarterly Meeting be held at No. Adams, Mass. Probably the tent belonging to the Conference will be pitched on the occasion.

By vote of Conference the following preamble and resolution were presented for publication:—

"Believing in the great and glorious dispensational truths as held and advocated by the Advent Christian believers for the last forty years, viz., that the end of the present age is an event close at hand, embracing the second personal advent of Christ to raise all the dead, both the righteous and the wicked, to a conscious life again, to gather together all the saints that have ever lived upon the earth, to change them from mortality and corruption to incorruption and immortality, giving them eternal life, at which time the wicked will be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power, to fulfill the promise made to our fathers, the prophets, that the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, will be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, when the curse will be removed, and the earth restored to its primeval beauty and purity by Him who sat upon the throne (Rev. 21: 5), and said, Behold, I make all things new; and

Whereas, There are unmistakable evidences of divisions creeping in among us, caused by the advocacy of anti-scriptural doctrines of irresponsible persons, who are teachers of (1) Trine Baptism as the only mode taught by our Savior; (2) That all who observe the Christian Sabbath as a day of rest and worship, instead of the seventh day or Jewish Sabbath, have received the mark of the beast,—Rev. 13; (3) The pernicious doctrines advocated by Jacob Blain in a work entitled 'Hope for our race'; and

Whereas, The members of the Hoosick Valley Conference, believing said doctrines to be unscriptural in their element, distracting in their nature, and detrimental in their tendencies, by leading the people's minds from the great subject of Christ's speedy coming and kingdom, the nearness of which God has revealed to the waiting church as an incentive, encouraging them to seek a position of purity and christian holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord, that we may be found of him in peace; therefore—

Resolved, That we have no fellowship whatever with the doctrines before named, believing them to be unscriptural and injurious to the peace and sanctity of the church; neither will we give encouragement, aid nor approval to any who are preaching them.

Voted, To return thanks to the church and friends in Rutland for their kindness and hospitality during this session of Conference.

Voted, That the duty of preachers to report personally by letter, at each session of the Conference, be urged upon them.

Voted, That in accordance with suggestions made by the Tent Meeting Com., there be places named for tent meetings during the present season, and that a geographical plan be arranged and placed in the hands of the committee for the purpose of facilitating tent meetings.

Voted, That the minutes of this Conference be sent for publication to the World's Crisis and Advent Christian Times.

Voted, To adjourn sine die.

W. O. HIGLEY, Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. Drew.

Dear Brethren in Christ:—My heart is thrilled with emotions of thanksgiving and adoration to the good Lord, as I think that soon we shall witness the glorious appearing of Jesus, in kingly glory, coming as Lord of lords and King of kings, and saying to all his people—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

How glowing the promise—"I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." Thank God, we shall live with Jesus. He will come with a "shout, with the voice of an archangel and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be forever with the Lord." Blessed truth! Christ will come, the dead be raised, the saints be caught up to meet him in the air, and reign with him forever and ever.

"When he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Our vile bodies will be changed, and made like unto his own glorious body. We shall receive a kingdom, dominion, and glory that shall be ours eternally. We shall put on incorruption and immortality. We shall be clothed, with our house which is from heaven. We shall sit with Christ upon his throne, as he overcame and is set down with his Father upon his throne. "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying: neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

My heart yearns for the fulfillment of these precious promises. I long to see Jesus and dwell in his kingdom. I long to see the time come when Satan, who is dragging the human family into the dark ocean of sin and unbelief, will be blotted out of existence. I long to see this earth robed in its eden glory and given to the saints of the Most High.

The time is not far distant when these things will be fulfilled. The signs Jesus gave us of his coming are in the past. The sun has been darkened; the moon has withdrawn her light; the stars have fallen from heaven, and the next, and only sign that remains to be fulfilled is the sign of the Son of man; and this will soon be seen.

Let us watch. If we "look" for Jesus, he will appear to us the second time without sin unto salvation. May God prepare us to meet our Savior's face in peace. May he guide us safely through this life, and prepare for us a better life in his everlasting kingdom.

Oshawa, C. W. Ont. Co.

From Bro. A. Conklin.

Dear Brethren:—I write to let you know how we are doing in the grasshopper region. We are trying to spread the truth. The harvest is soon to be reaped, and we called to give an account of our stewardship. We do want to be found doing our Master's will.

We have had a hard winter, and it looks dark and gloomy now, but through the mercies of the Lord we have once more arrived at spring. The birds are singing, the grass is shooting forth, and the trees are beginning to bud; by this we know that summer is nigh at hand. But we know not how soon our King will come. The signs proclaim him near. Brethren, let us be ready, and have our work done; and then, when he comes, we can say—"Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him."

I was caused to rejoice when the Crisis came to me, as I love it so well and was so lonely without it, but could not pay for it. I have eight children to maintain, and get but little for my labor, and I am about destitute of food and raiment; but we do trust in Him who is able to help in every time of need. Although we are poor in this world, we are rich in faith, and trying to be heirs of the kingdom. I received $10 from Bro. Adams. That made it easier for me and some of my neighbors; as I gave them some, and I gave Bro. E. Bliss $2.40 to pay freight on clothing that Bro. Adams sent to him. He distributed it among the people, which relieved them some; but though it helped so many, it was not much, compared with the amount needed.

If any one can send clothing, food, seed or money to this place, it would be thankfully received, and it would be lending it to the Lord. There has been clothing and food enough sent in here to have kept all from suffering much, if the people could have got it; but the Aid Committee kept it, and swindled the poor out of it. The time will come when we shall hunger no more, and shall be clothed with immortality, if we seek for it, and continue in the faith.

May the Lord bless us in our labors, and cause us to press forward toward the mark for the prize, and ever be found doing his will and trying to prepare a people to meet him at his appearing and kingdom.

Dear Editors,—I do feel thankful to you and the Lord for your kindness in sending the Crisis to me, and may the Lord bless you and cause you to prosper in this life, and in the world to come give you life eternal, is my prayer for you.

My address is Lincoln Co., Ingalls P. O., Kansas. If any of the brethren send clothing, direct to A. CONKLIN, Russell Station, Russell Co., K. P. R. R., Ingalls P. O., Lincoln Co., Kansas.

From Bro. Wm. Sweet.

Dear Brethren:—While East in January last I wrote a short statement relating to my journey and some of the places where I held meetings. Held a series of meetings in Oshuwa Village, Canada West, with Eld. Patton, the pastor of the Christian church there. We had a good time. God blessed the truth in reviving his saints. We saw a goodly number of backsliders reclaimed, and some poor sinners converted and baptized. I found the pastor a devoted servant of God, and a believer in the near advent of Christ, and all the great truths we advocate connected with his coming. I asked him to send for the Crisis. He did so. There are others of like faith there.

I passed on from there to Vermont; visited relatives, and preached in several towns more or less. Three times at Montgomery. There are some there looking for Jesus soon to come the second time, to gather all into the fold. I held a series of meetings with Eld. Watkins, at Waterville Junction. We had a hard time to get the professors of religion to work in union, so there was not the good done that there might have been had they been united, as Jesus prayed for his flock to be.

Next I went over into Canada East. There I preached in three or four towns. I attended several good meetings with Eld. Paran Marsh and others. There was a good reformation. Several were baptized and went on their way rejoicing in hope of eternal life. It has been a hard winter East to hold meetings,—deep snows and hard winds. My lungs became inflamed, and I had to leave for Minnesota. I am better, thank God. It is also a hard and cold winter here. The spring is late. There are but a few yet who have commenced to seed (April 11th).

There are a few in and about Brown Co., in this State, who are looking for the Lord soon to come. We take the Christian, some the Banner, some the Times, and a number the Crisis; but the times are hard all through the southwest part of Minnesota. We have been more or less injured by the grasshoppers for two years past. I have lost on a small farm $500. We hope to escape this year. Yours in hope of better times in this life, and in the world to come eternal life.

Iberia, Brown Co., Minn.

From J. A. Cleaveland.

Dear Brn.:—It may not be out of order for me to write a line for the Crisis, to let all know that I am still on earth, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. I am preaching the Word as the Lord directs. We mean so to live as to bring no reproach upon the cause of Christ. We still live at Morrisville, where we labor all the time. At present our church is small, but we have a few of the choice ones of earth. They love the truth more than all else.

We have been called to mourn and lay away one of our best sisters and members of the church, in the silent grave. Sr. Bundy is dead. She died at her post. She always filled her place, and now she sleeps in Jesus. Blessed sleep! We hope to meet her on the other shore.

We are glad to see so many things that tell us Jesus is very soon coming, to take his children home. We are sorry to see so little interest manifested in the matter, by those who profess to love Jesus' soon coming; so sparing of their means to support the cause; so anxious to get gain. Some, a long time ago, supposed that gain was godliness, but we learn that godliness with contentment is great gain.

Brethren, let us be careful to keep the armor on; keep it bright; so when the King comes, having his reward with him, he will say "Come, ye blessed." There is great danger of getting sleepy. It is a bilious time. The devil is administering his opiates by the way of the love of the world and otherwise. If there ever was a time I loved the cause of Christ, it is now. I know I love Jesus and his coming. Sickness and death has prevailed among us the last winter and this spring. We have had a great many deaths. Brother John Capron is at the point of death. The loved of earth are falling. We can truly pray, as did John, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Dear brethren, remember us in your prayers. Love to all that love our Lord Jesus Christ."

Morrisville, Vt.

From Sr. P. A. Thompson.

Dear Editors:—This is the first time that I have attempted to write for your valuable paper. How I love to read it! Next to the blessed Bible do I love it. How it cheers my heart to read the letters from brethren and sisters. Although strangers, we are our heavenly Father's children, and shall know each other in the kingdom. Praise the Lord that I ever heard the gospel of the kingdom.

It is three years since I gave my heart to God. I then joined the Baptist church. Soon after I heard Sr. Clark preach; and her preaching was different from what I had heard. I did not think there could be so much difference. We went night after night, and multitudes went to hear this gospel. The kingdom is near. Praise the Lord that Bro. and Sr. Clark were ever sent to give the warning voice to the people of this place!

My husband embraced the truth first, but I could not see it as he did then. I went to God in prayer, that he would show me the true light; and he did; praise his name forever! Now we are a divided house no longer, but are looking for his appearing to take his children home.

How it cheered my heart, when, in your issue of March 24th, I read of Sr. Stoddard's visit to the home of my childhood, in Gerry, Chant Co. How fresh it recalled many scenes of happy bygone days; especially where she spoke of Bro. Wilson. Their home was my home once. Well do I remember old "Father Wilson," the Bibleite. He is gone, but I shall see him in the new earth.

Praise the Lord forever for the glorious truths that are revealed in the Book of books! Let us be faithful unto the end, and when the Bridegroom comes, may our lamps be trimmed and burning.

Peach Creek, Washington Co., Kansas.

From Sr. J. T. Gowen.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—The Crisis is all the meeting we have here, to cheer us on our pilgrimage to the city of God. It is a welcome guest to our humble home, bringing light and truth; and as we read, we thank our God that he puts it into the heart of his children to write and publish these blessed things, concerning the coming kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. Oh how good the "blessed hope" looks to-day, as we near its consummation. It is indeed an anchor, both sure and steadfast. While the world around see no beauty in it—no reason why they should leave the world for this; to us it is chiefest of all, and with our eye fixed upon it, we try to let our light shine that others may see and embrace it, and perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord; without which no man shall see him.

BELGIUM AND HER TROUBLES.

The little kingdom of Belgium, which is now having its difficulty with Bismarck's Germany, is one of those political pins or braces which have been devised for maintaining the balance of power in Europe. It is not like the "sick man," Turkey, for it has abundant vitality for its size; in fact, its great wealth and annual profits, in comparison with its defensive power, require its independence to be guaranteed by the great Powers, in order to save it from confiscation; just as Turkey needs to be upheld in the same way to save it from falling to pieces. Belgium is only 173 miles long and 112 miles wide, these being the greatest dimensions in both directions. The population now must be about five millions, the figures in 1866 being 4,839,094. As the area of the country is only 11,267 square miles, this gives 430 per square mile, showing it to be the densest inhabited country in Europe. It is a perfect hive of industry, all kinds of manufactures being carried on with skill and success. The density of the population and their general wealth have made the State ownership of railroads and telegraphs work so well as to deceive many into advocating the adoption of the plan in countries like this, whose wholly different situation would make the experiment suicidal.

The religious character of Belgium is almost wholly Roman Catholic, the Protestants altogether not amounting to more than 13,000. It may well be supposed, therefore, that the effort of Bismarck to unite the German nations in a strenuous condemnation of the policy of the Pope is not very warmly responded to in Belgium, especially as the note originally conveying his request made propositions, as his English friends conceded, "beyond the bounds of good taste." That note has been succeeded by another, and although the full text is not yet published, it appears that the German Government, while being a little more cautious in its language, is by no means disposed to ralax its pressure. According to a statement made, it will be seen, by Mr. Disraeli, it even appears that so long ago as the beginning of the year 1874, Bismarck sought to secure the co-operation of England in remonstrating with Belgium against harboring Jesuit and Ultramontane conspirators against the peace of Germany. The English Government then discouraged the undertaking as not being consistent with the independent institutions of Belgium.

The German Premier now continues his purpose by calling upon Belgium to follow the example of Prussia by legislating against the exercise of all Papal power which trenches upon the State's sovereignty. It remains to be seen to what extent Bismarck will push his demand, which is now said to be supported both by Austria and Russia. To make any headway, it is plain that he must address himself mainly to the great guaranteeing powers, as Belgium herself is helpless in the matter. It is this European aspect of the question which gives it the importance it is generally felt to have, and which occasions the sensitiveness felt in so many quarters.—Boston Journal,

MY EXPERIENCE.

O. C. GORDON.

I have been thinking for some time that I would like to tell you a little of my experience, hoping it would encourage some who feel weak, and almost give up sometimes, and thinking it no use to try to be christians, the cross seems so hard to bear. The evil one is trying all he can to get you to believe his lies. Do not listen one moment to him. Say—Get thee behind me. Keep your eye on Jesus. Do every duty, and you will soon grow stronger. Your courage will increase, and the cross will grow lighter. Our heavenly Father never requires his children to do anything that they cannot do. As soon as they make up their minds to obey, he lends a helping hand. He is a present help in every time of need.

Six years ago, Bro. Wm. Doughty came to this place, and held meetings in our neighborhood for some weeks. The Lord blest his labors wonderfully. Sinners were converted and backsliders reclamed. I had been a backslider for a number of years, and could not sing the Lord's song. My harp was on the willow. I had got all buried up in the things of this world, had no interest in the meetings, and so I stayed away. I thought Eld. D. was a poor deluded man, and was round deceiving the people. After they had held meetings for some time, our children wanted to go (two small boys), but we thought it best to keep them at home; but they did not feel right; the neighbors children went, and they thought they ought to. So one Sunday my wife and they coaxed me to go. I went determined not to believe any of it, nor hear more than I could help. I tried not to hear, but somehow I could not help hearing every word Bro. D. said. Pretty soon I became interested, and before I was aware of it the Spirit of the Lord got hold of me. I began to tremble. I was afraid that what he said about the Lord's coming was true. I thought, if it is true, what will become of me? The good Lord helped me to see my lost condition. I knew if he did not come soon I must die, and I saw that I was in a very dangerous place. What could I do? there I was, in an Advent meeting, completely broken down.

When I went into the house, I was almost ashamed to be seen in such a company; now I felt that I was the greatest sinner there. What a change was wrought in my feeling! I felt that the Lord wanted I should rise up and confess my heart wanderings. Satan told me I had better keep still; they all knew how I had talked about them, and my folks would all feel badly if I said anything in an Advent meeting, for my parents and brothers (six in number) were very much opposed to that doctrine. I listened to him, Satan, a while, feeling worse and worse. Before meeting closed I made up my mind I would obey God if every friend forsook me. I arose on my feet and asked the prayers of God's children. I had taken up my cross once more, and felt that I was on the Lord's side. I thanked God, and took courage. For about a year I was very weak, could not say but a few words; my prayers were very short, and O, how crossing it was to speak or pray in public.

I devoted all my spare time in studying God's Word, and became convinced that the Adventists had more truth than any other denomination. After I had been struggling hard for about a year, I was in an Advent meeting. The house was mostly filled with unbelievers, who went more for curiosity than anything else. I felt it my duty to confess my belief. I thought I could not. I looked around on the people, and saw old friends that had never heard me speak in public. I said, anything, Lord, but this. I trembled from head to foot. At last I thought I would try to stand up. It seemed almost impossible to start, but as soon as I made an effort, I went up pretty quick. The Spirit seemed to lift me right up. I opened my mouth, and the Lord filled it. The first I knew I was talking at the top of my voice, and laying the case down with my fist on the bench in front of me. If the whole world had been there, I should not have cared then. That was the turning point with me. The Lord gave me victory and salvation, and thanks be to his blessed name, I have been free in the Lord most of the time since. He gives me enough to say now, and my faith takes hold of God and his promises. Ye weak ones, do not give up. Get hold of God and go ahead.

HOW THEY PLEAD.

Voices of tender appeal come to us from suffering humanity everywhere, imploring us to "feel our brother's care," and stretch out a helping hand. There may be no oral address, and yet the circumstances plead eloquently and powerfully.

When Leitch Ritchie was traveling in Ireland, he passed a man who was a painful spectacle of pallor, squalor, and raggedness. His heart smote him, and he turned back.

"If you are in want," said Ritchie, with some degree of peevishness, "why don't you beg?"

"Sure, it's begging I am, yer honor."

"You didn't say a word."

"Ov coorse not, yer honor; but see how the skin is speakin' through the holes of me trousers! and the bones cryin' out through me skin! Look at me sunken cheeks, and the famine that's starin in me eyes! Man alive! isn't it beggin' I am with a hundred tongues?"

The shriveled form, the tattered garments, and the famine-stricken eye, tell the story, and cry more earnestly than words, "Help us—help, brother, help!" Like the blessed Jesus, let us have bowels of compassion, and be ready to extend a helping hand to those in distress. If we say we have faith, let us make proof of it. "Faith without works is dead."—Christian Standard.

HOME AND HEALTH.

AIDS TO VEGETARIANISM.

Under the above heading, the article below appeared a few days since as an editorial in the New York Daily News. Its statements are undoubtedly true, and ought to startle every carnivorous individual in the metropolis. From the tenor of his remarks, we may fairly judge that, like one of old, the author is almost "persuaded," if he has not become an entire convert to vegetarianism. Alarming as are these facts concerning New York, there is every reason to believe that the same state of affairs exists in every large city in the country. When will the people awake to a proper consideration of this subject?

"If there ever was a reason, apart from anatomical and physiological considerations, for the adoption of vegetarianism, it is furnished by the diseased character of the meat which finds its way into our markets, after the long journeys it undergoes from southern pastures to metropolitan slaughter-houses. Jaded and exhausted sheep and cattle, half-fed and scantily watered, and covered with filth, among which they have lain for more than a thousand miles of a fatiguing journey, supply us with nearly all the beef and mutton which furnish a large proportion of our family tables. They certainly furnish the tables of the cheap boarding houses, resorted to by the laboring classes, who, of all others of our large population, require the most wholesome and most digestible, as well as the most nutritious diet. This, we believe, no one presumes to gainsay. It has been proven to be an established fact, over and over again, yet no practical benefit has resulted from its admission, because no one can be impressed with the detrimental character of its effects in the deterioration of the physical power of those who suffer from it, or the injury that it inflicts on human health, and the encouragement it gives to the spread of epidemic and contagious maladies.

Now we have another source of diseased meat which can be seen nearer home. It exists in the cow stables of Brooklyn, where milk cattle are fed on still-slop in dirty stables till their teeth fall out and their tails drop off, and after giving milk from ulcerous udders for the sustenance of thousands of hand-fed babies, and the nourishment of diphtheritic and other patients to whom a diet of pure milk is now considered one of the most important agents in their cure, they are killed for beef when they no longer have strength to furnish milk, and with their impoverished and innutritious, and positively diseased flesh, complete the damage to human health, which their pernicious milk had begun."—Health Reformer.

RULES FOR NERVOUS PEOPLE.

It is said that Americans are especially liable to nervous complaints, though it is an assertion to which we attach little weight. The hygienic rules laid down by Dr. Luther for such complaints, may have a wide interest. They are as follows:

"Avoid work beyond your strength, or responsibilities beyond your capacity; avoid also all avoidable worries, or dismiss them from consideration when fairly attended to; avoid all unwholesome excitement or dissipation; but seek the society of healthy, kindly, sensible people. Let your occupation be healthful, useful, and fairly remunertive in every sense of the word. Eliminate waste by taking occasional Turkish baths. Live as much in the fresh air as you can, without exhausting your strength. The Turkish bath will enable you to be much more in the fresh air than you otherwise could. Wear light clothing, to allow free access of air to the skin. This, too, the bath makes easy. Use a fair share of farinaceous and vegetable food with your diet; but whatever kind your food, eat it surrounded by cheerful influences, as it will agree with you; whereas both the stalled ox and the dinner of herbs will disagree if eaten in the midst of turmoil. Let those who have inherited a tendency to nervous maladies observe these rules, and they will have cause to congratulate themselves. As curative measures they will have more or less success, but are difficult, and can't be used simultaneously."—Herald of Health.

LIFE TOO SHORT, YET WASTED.

Pliny makes a striking computation in regard to the shortness of life. I never recall it without being powerfully impressed by its truth. "Consider," he says, "the time spent in sleep," and you will find that a man actually lives only half his space. The other half passes in a state resembling death. You do not take into account the years of infancy, which are destitute of reason, nor the many diseases and the many cares of old age, those penalties of longevity. The senses grow dull, the limbs are racked, the sight, the hearing, the power of walking, the teeth also, die before us; and yet all this time is reckoned in the period of a life."

But, short as life is at the best, those who complain of its brevity let it slide by them without wishing to seize and make the most of its golden moment. How much time do we waste in indecision, in vain regrets, delusive hopes, and ungrounded fears! What a vast portion of our precious existence is wasted in mere waiting—"waiting for something that seems necessary for our happiness, and the want of which prevents us from enjoying the present hour."—Wayside.

ADVICE TO THE YOUTH.

M. LYONS.

"Boast not thyself of to-morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."—PROV. 27 : 1.

On no morning of the year can you positively say that you will see the evening; on no evening can you be certain of beholding the approaching morning. They who promise fair for most years in this world may be the first to leave it. Consider what others were a few seasons ago, who were as young as you, perhaps as thoughtless and as gay. O think how many in the bloom of life have been cut off. Perhaps before twelve months have rolled around you may be laid to rest; your active limbs may be mouldering in the dust, your eyes closed forever. What, then, will be the pleasures of the world to you? The world seemed as enchanting to others as it can to you; but they have left it. Could some of these Christless ones address you, methinks they would say, Avoid our folly, for sin and the world have ruined us. A little while since the world appeared dressed in as gay colors to us as it does now to you. We trusted to our youth; looked on future years as our own; vanity and pride filled our hearts, and pleasure was our idol; we quenched the warnings of conscience, we scorned the admonitions of pious friends, and shunned them as enemies; we heard the tolling bell, but forgot that it would soon toll for us; we saw the graves opened, unmindful that the land of silence would soon be our home; but woe to us, our day of grace is gone, the blood of Jesus can never cleanse us, nor the compassion of God reach us.

Consider, dear friends, that depravity and corruption have led you in the way of sin, and it is its blindness that keeps you contented there. Consider, before it is too late, and pray God with the Psalmist to so teach you to number your days that you may apply your hearts unto wisdom.

IDLENESS.

Many young people think that an idle life must be a pleasant one, but there are none who enjoy so little, and are such burdens to themselves, as those who have nothing to do. Those who are obliged to work hard all day enjoy their short periods of rest and recreation so much that they are apt to think if their whole lives were spent in rest and recreation it would be the most pleasant of all. But this is a sad mistake, as they would soon find out if they made a trial of the life they think so agreeable. One who is never busy can never enjoy rest; for rest implies a relief from previous labor; and if our whole time were spent in amusing ourselves, we should find it more wearisome than the hardest day's work. Recreation is only valuable as it unbends us; the idle can know nothing of it. Many people leave off business and settle down to a life of enjoyment; but they generally find that they are not nearly so happy as they were before, and they are often glad to return to their old occupations to escape the miseries of indolence.—Wayside.

THE NIGHT COMETH.

Time's sun is fast setting,
Its twilight is nigh,
Its evening is falling
In cloud o'er the sky;
Its shadows are stretching
In ominous gloom;
Its midnight approaches,
The midnight of gloom.
Then haste, sinner, haste! there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee.

The vision is nearing
The Judge and the throne!
The voice of the angel
Proclaims, "It is done."
On the whirl of the tempest
Its Ruler shall come,
And the blaze of his glory
Flash out from its gloom.
Then haste, sinner, haste! there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee.

With clouds He is coming!
His people shall sing;
With gladness they hail him
Redeemer and King.
The iron rod wielding,
The rod of his ire,
He cometh to kindle
Earth's last, fatal fire.
Then haste, sinner, haste! there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee.

THE GREAT GATHERING.

M. R. STEELE.

2 THESS. 2: 1, 2.

Jesus says in Matt. 24: 31, that he will "send his angels to gather together his elect from one end of heaven to the other. Paul says in 2 Thess. 2: 1–3, "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, or by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come an apostacy first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition."

Paul had in his first letter to the christians in Thessalonica, given them so much instruction in regard to the Lord's promised return, that he now found it necessary to check any undue expectation of his immediate coming, which might have resulted from a misconstruction of his first epistle, or from the teaching of deceivers, such as Hymeneus and Philetus (2 Tim. 2: 18), who said that the resurrection was past already, and overthrew the faith of some, as to the resurrection at the return of Christ.

Dr. Scott says that these men "explained the doctrine of the resurrection in a mystical and allegorical manner; as if it only meant the introduction of a new dispensation, or some moral change in men's characters, which were events in themselves, or in respect of christians, already past; and thus they denied the future resurrection of the dead. In this manner they had perverted the faith of some, and seduced several into fatal heresies, who had once made a promising profession of the gospel."

What a warning have we here against turning from the plain meaning of Scripture, to adopt some fanciful, human theory. One would think it to have been impossible, so soon after Christ's ascension, to propagate such an error as this. Christ and his apostles had plainly predicted the resurrection of the just from among the dead, to take place at his second coming; and yet people were deceived, because they had left the word of God, and turned unto fables, even as they have done in our day.

Paul warned the Thessalonian christians that the day of Christ was not immediately imminent. Eighteen centuries have passed, and we have now abundant evidence that it is immediately imminent! Great apostasies, world-wide preaching of the gospel, great signs from heaven, great national commotions, and above all, the voice of God in the advent message of these last days—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh,"—all announce "that the day of Christ is at hand," the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him.

What a gathering that will be! The angels shall gather his chosen from one end of heaven to the other. From Adam and righteous Abel, Enoch, Noah and Abraham, David and the prophets, the martyrs of every age of whom the world was unworthy, apostles, primitive christians, who spread their faith through Europe and Asia, then yielded to the sword of the Mussulman, or the Popist, leaving but a remnant, to be almost forgotten by man, and to re-appear in these last days, like the Waldenses of Italy, the Nestorions of Persia, or "the nameless sect" in China, where also Nestorious preached. From the isles of the sea, the depths of ocean, and the buried cities of earth, old and young, "the fulness of the Gentiles," and the "elect remnant" of believing Jews, who never bowed the knee to Baal—the dead and the living all shall be gathered together to "meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we be ever with the Lord. Wherefore comfort (or exhort) one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 13–18.

Perhaps the peculiar title, "the great gathering," may arrest the eye of some careless sinner, and induce him to read the article. Dear brother or sister, will you not now choose Jesus for your master? Then he will gather you too among his chosen. "Come with us, and we will do thee good."

JESUS, THE RESTORER, AT THE JUBILEE.

J. E. CLARK.

The peculiar arrangements of the Jubilee were important and remarkable. One of the most important features of the Jubilee was that every Jew, who had sold himself, was now set free.

The Jubilee was announced every seventh year by the blowing of the trumpet by the priest, on the evening of the tenth day of the seventh month, which was the great day of atonement. Therefore, every seventh year was a Jubilee year, when the land was to enjoy its Sabbath; that is, it was to lie fallow, not to be in any way cultivated. It was to enjoy seven Sabbaths in the space of forty-nine years, and then came the Sabbath of Sabbaths, or Jubilee.

The term Jubilee signifies a blowing of trumpets—a redeeming—a restitution. At the beginning of each Jubilee year the bondman went free. Those Israelites, who had been forced by poverty or any other circumstance to sell or mortgage the inheritance of their fathers, now received it again. No doubt it often occurred that the seller was too poor to buy back his inheritance; then, when the Jubilee came, it came with the most joyful aspect, as a redeemer—a restorer. It redeemed all that had been sold. The land immediately returned to the original owner, and that without money and without price.

I think I may safely say that we, as a people, all anxiously look for a Jubilee, which shall indeed be the restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets. We expect Jesus, the priest of God, will soon announce the great Jubilee by the blowing of the trump of God. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God."

We may form some idea of the anxiety with which the Israelites of days gone by looked forward to their Jubilee. How great must have been their joy on hearing the sound of the trumpet, as it echoed from city to village, through the length and breadth of the land. May the desire of the Israelites of old be our desire, that when the great Jubilee shall come, and the Great Restorer appear in his glory, we may rejoice with exceeding joy Every body in this world of sin is desiring deliverance, and they think to redeem themselves; but how short is the arm of flesh; how unable to save; how incompetent to restore. There is One that is mighty to save. It is "Jesus, the Son of God." Jesus is the only name given under heaven, among men, whereby we can be saved. He is the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. He is a cleanser from all unrighteousness; our Redeemer—Deliverer, and Restorer. He is the only deliverer of Adam's lost race. God anointed him with the oil of gladness above his fellows. Ps. 45. And when he comes his people are to be made like him—his glorious body—immortal. May we ever look forward with bright hope, expecting the great Jubilee trump to sound, when all God's saints and church shall return home to Mount Zion, the city of God.

"NEARING HOME."

F. P. DINGLEY.

I have just finished reading an article in the Crisis, on the above subject, from the pen of Bro. G. L. Tracy; and while reading it, I felt encouraged to press onward on my pilgrim journey. I thought, how the assurance of Jesus' soon coming to take his ransomed ones home, seems to fill each heart of Father's children with joy. It is a heart-cheering message.

O let that day speedily come, which will bring back from the enemy's land all the sleeping ones, end life's ills, and usher in the new creation. I am tired of staying amid temptations and sorrows, sighing for loved ones who have passed away, and I long for that time when Jesus shall come and establish a better state of things. Like children away from home, if used ever so well, they are homesick; so we grasp at every promise of divine inspiration relative to the Master's coming to take us home.

The world may present some charms to those who are of the world, but not to us; we have our attention called to a brighter world than this—a far better and more enduring substance. We would see Jesus, and have every member of his family together, never to part.

"O what a glorious shout there'll be
When we arrive at home,
Our friends and Jesus we shall see,
And God shall say, 'Well done.'"

Having food and raiment sufficient to satisfy the demands of nature, we will try to content ourselves as well as we can till then; but while Jesus, in whom our hope centres, our captain, our all, is away, our heart beats in that direction; our conversation is there, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Jesus said to his little flock that met to hear his last words of counsel—"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." In his last prayer for them, he says, "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." In the same prayer he prays—"Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me." Just before then, he says, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go . . . I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." O precious promise! He has gone to prepare them a place; he is coming again to receive them to himself, and they will then ever be with the Lord. Messengers from glory testified to his coming again at the ascension: —"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come, in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven.

This doctrine of the personal coming of Jesus is not a new one gotten up by the craft of men: but it has ever been looked upon by the true people of God, as the crowning point in their hope—a bright spot in their future—a day when they should obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing would flee away. We are standing on the same line with all the prophets and apostles, in looking for this glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior. Our prospect of a future life depends altogether upon that appearing. Without it, our life here would be useless; our life beyond a blank. With it, our prospect beyond looks glorious, bright, cheering.

We are desirous of knowing the time when our eyes shall see the King in his beauty; so were the prophets and apostles. Some people try to blame us for it; but the Lord pity such. The disciples asked Jesus, "What shall be the sign of thy coming?" He tells them the signs that should precede his coming, so that they might know when to look for him. These signs have, so far, been fulfilled exactly as predicted, and in their order. The shaking of the powers of the heavens still remains to be accomplished. This may take place at any moment; and then the coming of that Just One, to take to himself his tried ones, comes next in order. The Word says: "The vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Thank the Lord there is a speaking time coming; when the last jot is fulfilled, and the last one heeds the call of mercy, enters the ark of safety, receives the sealing, then the door of mercy will be closed, and Jesus will come forth from the holy place to bless his people.

"The Bridegroom is coming, O, hark, hear the cry,
He's coming in glory—his kingdom is nigh;
Myriads of angels await his command,
To gather the faithful from every land."

But we must be patient. If the time seems to tarry, we may know it is for some wise purpose; it is not because Jesus has forsaken his people that have trusted in him. So we will be of good cheer, and patiently wait till our change comes.

So. Casco, Me.

AN APPEAL TO THE IMPENITENT.

BY REV. S. H. PLATT.

This life is made up of a limited series of opportunities to secure the help of Christ. An opportunity is a necessity for help, and the possibility of at once obtaining it. In our case, as sinners already condemned and exposed to the wrath of God, the necessity for help is constant and imperative—constant, because the sentence is unrevoked; and imperative, because the penalty may be exacted at any moment—and the possibilities for securing help are frequent. Life is crowded with them. They come in troops of spirit-calls, and in crowds of heart-yearnings after something better than the world gives. But they are sadly, fearfully interrupted! Sleep throws its pall of insensibility over one third of our lives, and shuts God, and Christ, and salvation out of nearly eight hours of twenty-four of our trial time, on which destiny hangs! Mental occupation, so complete and exclusive as to close the mind against eternal things, is one of our most common experiences, and with multitudes it amounts to a practical prepossession, that effectually bars God out of the heart during business hours, another third of time's hours childless of opportunities to seek after God.

Now add the freqnent occasions when the will is unable to act for eternity, because of its surrender to passions and impulses, which become transiently resistless tides, sweeping the being on their drift, and how fearfully narrowed are the possibilities of finding Christ.

O, you that have been reckoning upon all of life as pregnant with possibilities of seeking mercy, learn to-day that nearly seven-tenths of your life-time is absolutely useless for the purpose of obtaining salvation.

One fell swoop, and sleep hews off a third; another, and mental pre-occupation blocks off well nigh another third; another, and inability of will narrows down the remainder, until a hand's-breadth covers all the series of opportunities to secure the help of Christ. But you say, "When death looks me in the eye I shall find no motive to procrastinate; I shall then surely begin in good earnest."

Is this your hope? Look at these thieves upon the cross in their dying hour. Not even the glimmer of a hope for them, such as our dying entertain, that possibly they may live, for others as low as they have lived. Yet, in the face of this absolute certainty of death, but one of them believed! It seem as if God then lifted upon the cross for those dying men a warning for such as you! And is it true? Do but half the dying even try to believe? Alas, the experience of humanity bears out the record; and of the half who try, how few can run successfully the terrible gauntlets of the four alternatives of the dying hour! Depend upon it, your last sickness will be likely to be marked by pain, that will not let you think; delirium, that will run wild with fruitless thinking; insensibility, that digs the grave of thought; or drug-stupefaction, that robes thought in the cerements of the tomb! Is it any wonder, then, that the last chance is fleeting, and its issue doubtful? Hence the importance of improving the one at hand, because it may be the last! The linkings of the present with the past, we know; with the future, none can know!

The last chance! the last chance! the last chance! Every soul soul has had it! Every living soul must have it! You cannot afford to lose this, lest it prove the last for you! Worldly man, you cannot afford to toss pennies over hell for the last chance of pleasure before giving your heart to God! You are crowding the risk too near the verge! Remember that there is a last chance, more momentous than that of pleasure—the last chance of penitence! the last chance for prayer! the last chance for faith! the last chance for salvation! the last chance as if to leap from hell to heaven! How thought reels, purposes stagger, and desire burns, as this last chance rushes by! Seize it, man! clutch it, mortal! Grip it as with a death-grasp, O blood-bought mortal, and heaven help you to make the most of it. Amen.—From The Last Chance.

RETRIBUTION.

J. C. SMITH.

"Who will render to every man according to his deeds." Rom. 2: 6. "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel." ver. 16.

It seems to me that these words of Paul ought not to be misunderstood, when they are made so plain by him; yet there are many who wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction. Yea, very many are not willing to abide by the positive word of Jehovah, and the scores of passages of Scripture given by Jesus, the prophets, and the apostles, in regard to the incorrigibly wicked. God's Word has been "settled in heaven," and we cannot unsettle it, if we attempt it. Woe to him that striveth against his Maker. The Lord shall have them in derision, when his wrath is kindled but a little.

Let us carefully examine the Word of God and see what is to be done with all the wicked. Let us lay aside man-made notions, and come to the pure testimony, and let that settle the point. The judgment day has been appointed from the beginning. Then with all candor I would ask the wicked, as Paul asks them, Shalt thou escape the judgment of God? Rom. 2: 3. They that commit such things as Paul speaks of in the preceding chapter, will they escape the judgment of God? Does the judgment take place when a wicked man dies? if so, does not reward come to him at death? and if it does for the wicked, why not have the righteous rewarded at the same time, and so believe that both are rewarded at death? Should we not then do away with the words of Christ—"Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be"? If Christ comes at man's death, he surely comes many more times than the Bible speaks of his coming; which would impeach his Word. Again the Word says—"Who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death." Things committed are presented in Rom. 1: 28–31. The time of execution, as declared by Paul, is to be "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel" (Rom. 2: 16); not only upon those that are alive when Jesus comes, but "upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile." "For there is no respect of persons with God." We also find the same class, after their "hardness and impenitent heart, treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God."

"Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." Rom. 12: 19. We are told that "we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Rom. 14: 10, 11. Not that every tongue has confessed, or does confess at death; but that they shall confess at the judgment. "But now God commandeth all men, everywhere, to repent. Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance (or offered faith—mar.) unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

"As he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled." Why tremble, Felix, if to-morrow or sometime future you die, and that is the "jugement to come" for you? If there be no resurrection, why not "eat and drink, for to-morrow we die," after which there can be no judgment? Paul says—"Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." And Jesus tells us when the reaping time is. "'Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather the wheat into my barn. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be IN the end of this world." Then the wages that they have earned in sowing will be reaped in corruption or death. The wicked are reserved to the day of destruction. "They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Not that they have already been brought forth, or already been destroyed; but that they shall be when the Lord cometh to "judge the world in righteousness." "But the transgressors shall be destroyed together" (not one at a time at death). "The end of the wicked shall be cut off."

Jesus speaks of the broad road that leadeth to destruction," and of the "narrow way that leadeth unto life." He also makes it plain when the wicked are to be destroyed, and when the righteous receive eternal life. Not at the time of their death, which was entailed on them on account of Adam's disobedience; for all fall under that, the righteous as well as the wicked. None are exempt. "In Adam all die." "Death passed upon all"; and all are to be raised in their own order; some to everlasting life, and some to everlasting shame and contempt. Each one in the judgment stands or falls for himself. "The hour is coming, in the which ALL that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

Paul allowed this very fact, "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to those that believe; but to those who do not believe it is a savor of death unto death. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death."

Here we find what the end shall be of those that obey not the gospel. They reap the reward of their doings, which is "the second death," and not the death brought on them by Adam's sin. They must rise in judgment and meet what they have earned; i. e., wages for their own sins—"second death." Enoch prophesied of the Lord's coming to execute judgment upon all. When the seventh trump sounds, the dead shall be judged, and God will destroy those that have destroyed the earth. "That which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned." Are the wicked burned at the first death? "Fear him who will destroy both soul and body in hell" (gehenna fire). "All the wicked will God destroy." "All the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. . . They shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts." "The queen of the south shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it." The high priest that said Christ spoke blasphemy, "hereafter shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Did he see him coming at death? O that all would be consistent, and let the Bible harmonize.

"He that hath the Son, hath life [eternal life], and he that hath not the Son hath not life [eternal life], but the wrath of God abideth on him." This life eternal commences at the resurrection of the just, and this "wrath" will abide on the sinner, at the resurrection and condemnation of the unjust. "When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them [first death]; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die" (second death). Ezek. 18: 26.

May the gracious Father of light help all, is my earnest prayer, that our work may be done and well done in that day when Jesus shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Let us each remember that "every work will be brought into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

THE SCARLET.

"The spectacle of an ecclesiastical flamingo in the streets of New York, ruddy from the scarlet crown-button of his red cap to the pink of his holy slippers, and the vermillion of his buggy-wheels, will be a display to excite the wonder of the gamins, and afford ammunition for the light artillery of the wits. We shall doubtless, think of the "scarlet woman" of the Apocalypse. But if any one imagines that this is a silly show, after the manner of John Robinson or P. T. Barnum, he will signally fail of appreciation of Roman Catholic policy and shrewdness. The red millinery will as surely set High-Church ambition in a fever as that gilt confectionery will dazzle the eyes of a child.

What is a Cardinal? Nothing less than a Prince of Rome, standing next to a potentate who claims universal empire, both civil and ecclesiastical. It will speedily appear that the dazzling apparition is well adapted to make weak heads dizzy. America has never before had a cardinal. England has had none from the reign of Elizabeth to the year 1850. But just at that time the Tractarian controversy was bearing its sad fruit. Newman had entered the Roman communion, and started the Congregation of the Oratory. The moment was auspicious for Rome, and it was wisely used. Dr. Wiseman, Vicar Apostolic, went across the channel, and came back Archbishop of Westminster and Prince Cardinal of the Holy Roman Empire.

The fruit of that appointment may be seen in the England of to-day—seen in the advance which Romanism has made among the nobility, and which will be seen in like manner among those weak-headed Americans, whose highest ambition is to be considered representatives of blue blood on this side of the water. And here is a nucleus, a central orb for the American court —a prince who dates back his royal flowers to a period more remote than the most ancient reigning family.

When the kingly hand of Pius sows the divine seed in heretical soil, he does it with a purpose, and with the belief that the soil is fit to receive it. He knows well the weakness of our aristocratic circles in society. He plants one scarlet flower and expects to reap many golden ones, in which expectation if he is disappointed, he will be no more so than we.—The Interior.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

F. A. ROUNDS.

This all important subject ought to receive the greatest attention from every believer in Christ. People talk about this subject, and especially nominal professors, as though it was some new thing gotten up by a class of people, called Adventists. This blessed doctrine is as old as the promise made in the garden of Eden, Gen. 3: 15, viz., that the seed of the woman (Christ) shall bruise thy (Satan's) head. It was to be in consequence of Christ's sufferings and death upon the cross, and the power with which he was to be invested, as Messiah and Mediator, that the power of Satan was to be broken, and a final and complete victory obtained over him. This was in fact the first gospel promise; and though Adam and Eve did not then probably understand its full import, yet it must have been a matter of great consolation to them, to be assured that the present advantage then gained over them by Satan was not to be a permanent one. That their posterity, though they might, in consequence of disobeying God, have to share in and suffer in the struggle, they should prevail and crush his evil empire in the world.

Has this been done? We answer, No. Then there is certainly something yet to be done. When is this to be done? We answer again, At the second coming of Christ. So then, the first coming of Christ involves a second coming; and hence, if one thing involves another, it so contains it that the two must go together by an indissoluble connection.

For nearly six thousand years the work of devastation and destruction, ruin and overthrow, has been going on, and the children of God have been suffering on account of its terrible work. Our own experience, and things that are transpiring before our eyes every day, tell us that the great enemy of all good has not been destroyed yet. But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory. Satan is doing his last work; and his promise yet stands good; just as good as when first made by Jehovah. To the true child of God, who is looking and watching the signs of the times, it is truly blessed. We may take encouragement from the Word of the blessed Lord, when he said, "When ye see these things come to pass, then lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Weep not, sorrowing mothers, for your children will soon come again from the land of the enemy. How blessed it will be in the new earth, when it is clad in its edenic beauty. The stamp of immortality upon it, and upon everything connected with it. Perfection in its highest type will exist everywhere. What a glorious thought! What a thrill of joy it sends to the hearts of God's waiting children! This is all to be realized and enjoyed at the second coming of Christ.

It seems so strange that people, who desire peace, purity, and beauty, and everything that is good and lasting, should have a desire to put off the coming of the blessed Lord, thousands of years, or have no faith in it at all. Without the second coming of the Lord, the whole plan of salvation will be an entire failure. It is evident that they cannot claim Jesus to be the best friend they ever had, one who has done more for them than anybody else could possibly do, and not want to see such a friend. These things are inconsistent.

False theologies has much to do with these inconsistencies. People have been taught that Jesus has gone away to prepare a place for them, and that the real man at death goes to that place. All good and true theology will bear testing by the Word of God. Let us see therefore if this will bear to be tested. If he went away to prepare a place for his disciples, and the Scriptures plainly declare that he did—it is plain that there was no place prepared previous to that time. That being true, please tell us what became of all the christians that died up to the time that Christ went away?

True Bible theology teaches us that they who die, go down into their graves, and there remain unconscious, in the sleep of death, until Jesus comes back again, to raise them from their slumbers. True theology teaches us to look for the coming of Jesus again, for the very reason that unless Jesus comes to raise them from death, they must forever remain in it. Said he, "I am the resurrection and the life; whosoever believeth in me, though he be dead, yet shall he live." We have an abundance of Scripture to prove that a future life in the kingdom of God, all depends upon the second coming of Christ. Hear the great apostle Paul, in 1 Cor. 15: 32, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantage is it to me, if the dead rise not?" Now what is the idea contained in this Scripture? Just this: If there is no resurrection of the dead, there is no future life. What is the resurrection of the dead dependent upon? The second coming of Christ; and also the changing of the living, from mortal to immortality, is dependent upon the second coming of Christ.

Oh, how blessed these truths are! Changed to die no more! Glory to God! The time is close at hand. The depression of business, and the increasing rapidity with which the churches are sliding into the world and worldly things, plainly tell us that Jesus is soon coming. Lift up your heads and rejoice.

Portland, Maine.

KEEPING THEM.

To justify the open and brazen wickedness that is being practiced by the carnal and fashionable churches of the land, in the holding (for the glory of God!) of public and popular entertainments—social, convivial, dramatical, orthographical, etc.—it is pleaded that "we have a great many young people in the church, and they will have amusements, and if we do not provide amusement in the church, they will go somewhere else—we must please the young people, or we cannot keep them."

And so, "to keep" the young people, the so-called church must cater to their worldly and wicked spirit, and appoint occasions for the frequent indulgence of their love of fun, and not only encourage but seek to sanctify under the name of religion, churchly customs that are as notoriously wicked and as indefensibly unpious as are any of the current and damning sins of our fashionable society. To "keep the young people," the church must turn caterer for a growing-up generation of sport-seekers, and the good genius of our holy and self-denying religion must be invoked through the prayers of God's professed ministers and people, to render innocent and paying, the popular and mirthful entertainments which the church appoints and applauds! To "keep" the young people, bowling alleys and billiards must be taken under christian (?) auspices, and as a part of the modern church edifice, ostensibly reared for the holy worship of a holy God, there must be the cuisine, in the form of a church kitchen, for the furnishing to "our young people" of oyster stews, and for the delectation of these same "young people's" stomachs and palates in the providing of mush suppers!

But who are these same "young people" who seem essential to the church's well-being, and whom it seems so vital for the church to "keep!" Are they pious? Then let them show their piety by their self-denial. Are they saved? Then let them show this by giving up all sin. Are they converted? Then let them not follow the ways of those who are in a state of open and wicked unconversion. Are they Christ's followers? Then let them bear his cross, and show his self-denying and mortified spirit. If these "young people" are pious and are saved, and are converted, and are the followers of Christ, they will avoid what is unpious, and will be separate from sin, and will not go into frolic and mirth like the unconverted, and will exhibit a manner of life conformed in some visible sense to the sin-reproving life of our Lord Jesus Christ. If pious, they will regard religion before revelry. If saved, they will love prayer more than play. If converted, they will esteem grace above gayety. If Christ's followers, they will seek mercy and the the means of grace sooner than merriment and mammon.

But if these "young people" are not saved, and if they show no more signs of wanting to be saved than is seen in their persistent and sinful patronizing of these current and fashionable church sins, then why does the church want to "keep them?" What good will they ever do the church? And what good will the church ever do them? Will they, even if the church can succeed in "keeping" them, add an iota to the church's spiritual weal or power? No; but just the contrary. They will, in so far as their influence can go, help on in the church's backsliding and demoralization. And can the church ever save them, while they continue thus intent on the world, and are refusing the most elementary duties of Christ's religion—self-denial, and the forsaking of sin? No. So far from this, the church is confirming them in the love of the world, love of carnal pleasure, and love of sin. Better—a thousand times better—both for these volatile and sin-loving "young people" and for the church, that they part company. Let the church, if the young people must and will have their fill of carnal and sinful pleasure, and if they have no more spiritual thoughts and tastes than their worldly and wicked passion for fun seems to imply, send them back to the world where they belong, and charge them to stay there until they obtain some rational and scriptural idea of the self-denying and sin-forsaking conditions of Christ's religion!

The church should have done with this nonsense and wickedness of pleading license for sin, to "keep the young people." It is a species of jesuitical special pleading—"the end justifies the means"—that is not only detestable in character, but damning in its effects. Let the church, the Protestant church, leave all such jesuitry and double-dealing to Rome. The church that is truly christian cannot afford to practice such condescensions and compromises.—Banner of Holiness.

EVERY duty, however small it may appear to us, if faithfully performed, without any hope of reward, will bring happiness to ourselves, and will win the smile and approval of Him who beholdeth all our acts, great and small. O let us be faithful, earnest and true while here upon this earth. Our life will have been the means of bringing happiness to many a poor unhappy soul. And what a joyful sound in our ears will be the Master's plaudit at the last great day, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

IF you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God, the Judge of all.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

Some writers have expressed the idea that Russia aud Italy would form an alliance with France in opposing Bismarck's German policy, and thus crush the opposition to the Pope, and give France an opportunity to be avenged on Germany. But we think the prophecies, and every movement of these powers indicate that Russia and Austria will unite to sustain Bismarck, and check the Pope's usurpation of political power.

The Russian government has not only forbidden the observance of the papal jubilee, but it is using its influence to induce its subjects to abjure the Catholic faith, and unite with the Greek church. More than fifty thousand, in Poland, have left the Catholic, and united with the Greek church, within the last few months. We think the Russian government the most unlikely of any one in Europe to quietly submit to the Pope's proposed universal dictation in secular matters.

It is well known that the king of Italy is politically the Pope's most hated enemy, and that the Italian government is in deadly opposition to every principle and movement of the Jesuitical party. So we cannot see how there is any probability that Victor Emmanuel will form an alliance with any government or party to put down Germany, the strong arm, raised against his sworn enemies.

The crowned lords of these great governments have shown a good understanding and affilliation with each other, while the war question and preparations for war have been progressing, by often meeting in secret council, where it is understood that they have made arrangements to harmonize their powers, when the time for the decisive action shall come. The emperors of Russia, Germany, Austria, and the king of Italy have had frequent royal meetings within the past three years, at their different capitals, where they have had private consultations; and it has been generally understood that these meetings have been councils of war, where the heads of these governments have attempted to make a programme for the coming struggle, in which they could all agree, so as to make victory for them quite secure. Everything they have said, and every step they have taken, officially, has confirmed this supposition.

When the emperor of Austria and the heir of the English throne were visiting the emperor of Russia, at St. Petersburg, in the winter of '74, and holding a royal banquet, Alexander, in giving expression to the arrangement they had made, uttered the fact that Russia, Austria, Germany and England had united to keep the peace of Europe. It was perfectly evident that Alexander meant to say that those governments had agreed to use their power jointly, in suppressing all parties which were arising and threatening the stability and perpetuity of their thrones. It was also well understood that prominent among the threatening parties were the Jesuits and Communists. These have each separately declared and manifested a set purpose to overthrow the sovereignty and political independence of all these governments.

As long as these parties and governments maintain their positions, and these questions remain the leading war questions, we do not see how it is probable that Russia and Austria would form an alliance with any power against Germany, while she is fighting to put down the Jesuits and Communists.

To confirm these views, just now, while all Europe is ablaze with the war excitement, the emperor of Austria has visited the king of Italy, and they manifested the most perfect personal sympathy and national unity, by embracing and kissing each other, and also by long continued, national salutes. Francis Joseph did not go to Italy to salute the Pope and concoct plans with his arrival priests to overthrow the sovereignty of civil governments; but he went to greet the man whom, the Pope says, made him a prisoner—Victor Emmanuel.

Just at this time, before the roar of Italian welcome dies on the ear, the vibrations of imperial salutes roll back from Berlin, announcing the arrival of the emperor of Russia. Here, William and Alexander, the great representatives of royalty, meet with enthusiastic demonstrations of personal and national friendship. Here also, meet the two imperial premiers—Prince Gortschakoff and Prince Bismarck. The two strongest governments on the earth are now closeted in secret council. What meaneth it.

The London Telegraph, editorially, says of it:—"It is impossible to conceal the truth. The Continental situation means this morning the very greatest aspect. If we were to say that the question of the future repose of Europe may be practically solved before forty-eight hours have passed, we would scarcely go beyond the facts."

It is well understood that both governments are at present much disturbed with the two questions and parties named, and that they are determined to bring the vexed questions to a final issue immediately. Can they do it by peace? We think that no person of sound judgment would argue that for a moment. These two threatening parties have, by peace, increased their power very much for the last ten years. War under the present circumstances would evidently change their status immediately. The hope of those great governments in sustaining themselves must rest upon an immediate, united, desperate effort to crush, at one stroke, all these factious elements. These great statesmen, now in council, have clearly manifested their understanding of this subject, as we have expressed it, by making unparalleled preparations, within the last two years, to strike this terrible blow.

Some writers suggest the idea that they have met to arrange for a disarmament of the European nations. This is a strange idea; for how can they safely disarm as long as their enemies are pursuing an aggressive warfare, arming and strengthening themselves every day? If Germany should disarm, it would simply be submitting to vassalage under the Pope, and restoring to France her gold and lost provinces. They have raised these mighty armies for specific purposes, and we think there will be manifested no children's play in the matter; but that they will use them, and either accomplish those objects, or sink in an inglorious defeat.

There may still be a prolonging of peace, and manifestations of better times, but we believe God's Word teaches that these very nations and parties must be plunged into a terribly destructive war, and some of God's watchmen will be warning the world of its approach when it comes.

If the vail, which hides from human sight the importance of present events, and the magnitude of those just rolling up into view, was rent, and all could appear as it is and will be, we believe the present hour would be looked upon as the one into which are crowded the most awful, grand, and vitally important events, rushing with greater velocity, casting a darker gloom, and reflecting a brighter light, than were ever written upon the page of human history.

The earth-groan is more death-like, its thunders are louder, its earthquakes more threatening, its tempests more destructive, the heavens show greater signs, the earth responds with distress of nations, heartless, faithless worship, blasphemous scoffing, and a plaintive cry from the sacred bride-chamber—Come speedily, earth's great Restorer, and redeem a ruined world.

We feel assured that our eternal destiny turns upon the position we occupy for the present brief period. The mystery of the gospel is finished here. The last unfolding truths are now to be accepted and proclaimed. The last brand is to be plucked from the consuming pile. Friends are just passing from our reach, sweeping down over the falls.

O that we could see and realize our position as it is; then should we cease striving about vain, worldly things, and discussing abstract senseless questions, or desiring high seats or honorable positions. We should make an earnest, untiring effort to improve every moment to do the greatest possible good in the cause of Christ. J. C.

ADDRESS TO CARDINAL MANNING.

An address and testimonial were presented by the Duke of Norfolk, on the part of the Catholics of England and Scotland, to Cardinal Manning, at Westminster, on Wednesday. . . . . The Cardinal also expressed his sorrow at the state of Europe, where seven or eight millions of armed men were ready to fly at each others' throats, adding a wish that we should return from modern to Christian civilization. Many of the leading Catholics of England were present at the presentation.—London Times.

The Cardinal's desire is (and he truly represents the Papacy), that Christendom may return from that civilization inaugurated by Luther's movement, which introduced faith for penance, liberty for priestly tyranny, education for religious superstition and ignorance, and the Word of God for the contradictory decrees of a blasphemous church.

We do hope that the people who are enjoying the liberty and sacred blessings secured and handed down to us by the sacrifices of treasure, fame, and the life of our fathers, who toiled long in tears and blood to give to us the great advantages of "modern civilization," will understand that this Catholic priesthood, well represented by Cardinal Manning, have hated from the beginning and are now determined to take from us all the independence of political governments, the right to read the Scriptures, education, freedom of conscience, and all that human progress has added to the enjoyments of life for three hundred years. They are determined to exterminate from the earth every thing civil and religious, which will not consent to be controlled by the decrees of the Pope. They design nothing less, and they are determined to fight for that. May God, in infinite mercy, speedily give the rulership of earth into the hands of its divinely appointed Ruler. J. C.

WAR PROSPECTS.

There is increasing evidence in favor of an approaching war in Europe of alarming proportions. An able writer says: "War is in the atmosphere." The public mind is said to be "remarkably sensitive on that subject." Fearfulness has taken hold of the people, and their hearts tremble at the signs of the times. The six leading powers of Europe now have some ten millions of men ready for fighting. No one can give any special reason for this mighty preparation for war, or point to the place where it may begin. The nations seem to be moved by some invisible power, that is urging them forward to get every man ready as soon as possible for the days of "blood and iron."

The Scriptures inform us that in the last days, just before the coming of Christ, "the spirits of devils" will not only be "working miracles," to deceive the people; but they will "go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." In connection with this state of things, Jesus says, "Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth." Rev. 16: 14, 15. We must be very near the awful moment when these things will take place in all their terrible grandeur.

The present state of preparation cannot continue long, without ruining the nations, even if there is no fighting. The expense is enormous. Says a leading New York Daily, "All the world is held in pause and anxiety because of this condition of affairs." A few weeks since, the London Times stated that Europe was "a camp." It is said the time has come to "wake the slumberers," and "acquaint them with the realities of the situation." Though dethroned, the Pope is said to be "the most powerful prince in Europe—more powerful, perhaps, than any ruler in the world." No doubt, his two hundred millions of supporters will act a very prominent part in the coming conflict. Says a [far]-sighted political writer—"All the signs are ominous." M. G.

A WISE SAYING.

We clip the following sensible statement from the San Francisco Evangelist:—

"Christian unity can result from nothing short of the destruction of creeds and confessions of faith; inasmuch as human creeds and confessions of faith have destroyed christian unity."

There is no room for doubt that creed-making has been a great injury to the cause of Christ, in producing and perpetuating divisions among the professed disciples of Jesus. Years ago we came to the firm decision that we would subscribe to no creed that every christian could not sign; for when we do, we shut out one whom the Savior has received. We stand ready to work with every one who truly loves the Lord, giving him the same rights we desire to enjoy.

Devoted men and women in all denominations are feeling more and more the importance of christian union meetings; and wherever they are held the blessing of the Lord rests upon them in a remarkable manner. When one gets rid of his cold sectarianism, he feels like one let out of prison. He is changed from the chills of winter to the warmth of the lovely spring-time. His light is taken from under the bushel, that it may shine upon those around, and assist them in walking with Christ, even though they may not look through his theological glasses.

Those who are looking for the speedy coming of Christ should be the most free from sectarianism, in order that they may go everywhere, entreating the people to get ready for the great event. He who has a sectarian spirit is a poor representative of Christ and his pure religion, and drives people away more than he leads them to the Savior. Satan has gained many victories by means of a sectarian spirit infused into the minds of professed christians. In these last days good people are getting their eyes open to this cunning device of the enemy, and learning the better way of uniting with all true christians against the common foe. It is not to be supposed that all will see alike on doctrinal points; but all are agreed that we must believe in Christ as the one to pardon sins, and that without pardon there can be no salvation. All can unite to save the perishing from destruction.

The Holy Spirit is now leading all true disciples of Jesus to come together in a loving union, preparatory for the advent of the Lord of lords. The present hour is one of great moment to the church of Christ. The time for her final preparation seems to be at hand. It is a great privilege to live so near the time when this mortal shall put on immortality, and death be swallowed up in victory. What a change! What rapture must fill the heart of the one who feels conscious that he has commenced eternal life, and is forever to enjoy the society of all the good people who have ever lived. Let us all praise the Lord for the wonderful plan of salvation, and omit nothing necessary to secure a home with the redeemed. We may expect the question will soon be settled, whether we shall live eternally, or die the second death. M. G.

WAR PREPARATIONS.—It is stated that the French government has ordered the purchase of ten thousand horses, and has contracted for the manufacture of a million stand of arms at Styria, in Austria. Germany has also made a large number of improved arms, the delivery of which has already commenced. The future aspect is a bloody one. M. G.

"TOO DIGNIFIED."

In a leading New York daily we find some editorial thoughts that are worthy of consideration. They relate to the present state of religion in the churches, and the general interest in christianity among worldly people. Although Bro. Varley has had in New York immense audiences at Mr. Barnum's Hippodrome, to hear him speak of Jesus and his coming, yet the editor sees reason to say:

"The millennium has not yet swept New York with its skirts, and though we listen ever so carefully, we cannot hear the rustle of her garments; and without doubt the opportunity to rouse the masses of the country to unusual thoughtfulness is as good now as it ever was. We are treading on the ragged edge of a panic, when men are thrown out of employment, when capitalists find it hard to keep what they have, and when fortunes and reputations are changing hands every day. The trouble lies in a lack of unity in the Protestant body. Diversity of thought has produced diversity of method, and unless a revival comes like a consuming fire and burns down all the fences, each denomination sits still within its own borders, a little bit unwilling to help any man on the road to heaven, unless he goes through their toll gate. The Evangelical Alliance gave us a vast deal of information about arms, and legs, and hands, and about there being one body to which these all belonged, but, so far as the Protestantism of the day is concerned, the Evangelical Alliance was a prophecy, but not a present reality. The multifarious sects are like the little and big stones in a wall; they help to support each other, but they are not cemented, and when trouble comes they fall apart. The Protestant Church has yet to learn the one only secret of power—a living unity. Catholicism, in its history, affords proof positive of what can be done when real unity exists, while Protestantism shows plainly enough that diversity of purpose and weakness are interchangeable terms."

It is to be much feared that many, who are truly converted, will be led astray by worldly professors in popular churches, and soon be on the backsliders' list. They forget that without holiness, "no man shall see the Lord." It is quite evident the standard of religion in many churches is below justification point; that is, it is so low, that one cannot be pardoned and remain on a level with such church members.

It is a sad state of things, when it becomes dangerous for young converts to join a popular church; but such seems to be the case at the present time. The pic-nics, fairs, festivals, excursions, etc., that follow the winter revivals, completely neutralize and paralyze the winter's labors, and after that it is more difficult to reach them and persuade them to be true christians. Conversions are superficial, because a superficial gospel is preached, instead of the deep-toned, heart-searching practical sermons, that were heard in earlier days. Much of the religion of the day is but sentimentalism, originating only in humanity. It has no divine unction, hence it is powerless. It does not produce a "new man," but merely patches up the old one. M. G.

COMING OF CHRIST.

It is a matter of interest that the most noted revivalists in the world are telling the people that Christ is coming soon. This is the case with Brn. Moody, Hammond and Varley. Let us thank the Lord. The evidence that Jesus is coming soon continues to grow brighter and brighter. Let every christian help in spreading the good news, and urge all to be ready for the glorious event. How necessary it is for the dear Lord to return to this rebellious planet, and set up his kingdom, and put an end to the works of Satan.

Governments and societies are rotten with corruption, and are continually sinking deeper in the mire of sin. There is no ground to hope for any better times till Jesus comes to put an end to the powers of darkness. His loving bride has waited long for his return to celebrate "the marriage of the Lamb"; but now she is putting on her bridal robes, and preparing to meet her heavenly Bridegroom. Her days of mourning are about to close in eternal joy; her persecution to be changed for everlasting honor; her mortality for immortality. O what a blessed hope is ours! Let us all praise Jesus, and do all in our power to persuade others to be ready to meet him gladly at his coming. M. G.

VALLEJO.

By urgent request we returned from Petaluma to Vallejo, Monday, April 26th, and assisted again in the union meetings, at Farragut Hall, to their close, Wednesday evening, April 27th. The last meeting was one of special interest. Bro. Trefren preached an excellent sermon, contrasting the times in Noah's days with those at the time of the end. A deep solemnity was manifested by the audience, and the revival interest was still very encouraging. Several were under conviction, seeking the Lord. Young converts testified of the joys they had found in Jesus. One finely educated man, who had fallen through strong drink, once a classmate of Dr. Tyng of New York, gave his heart to the Savior. The day before he consented to be a christian, he said he took forty-seven drinks from the intoxicating cup, but the next day none. It was a happy change. Others of the like habits became christians.

The religious interest in Vallejo, at the present time is said to be the best ever witnessed in the city. Sectarianism was at a low ebb, and there was a happy blending of hearts in the Spirit of Christ. No careful observer could doubt but that the Lord was pleased to see all his children united in their efforts to save sinners. It is a sad sight to see good men pulling in opposite directions, thus giving Satan the advantage. His great aim is to divide the christian workers, and thus cripple their influence for good. In this way, the Deceiver has turned many from the narrow path, or prevented them from ever entering therein. We rejoice to find good people awaking to the importance of this subject. We expect to see the union spirit spread rapidly among those who truly love Jesus, that they may be prepared for his coming. He who has broken his sectarian shackles has great reason for hearty thanksgiving.

Thursday evening, April 29th, we had a farewell meeting at the Christian Chapel, closing with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It was a precious season. A large audience was present, including quite a number who requested prayers that they might be christians. They were conversed with at the close of the meeting, and pointed to the Savior, who was then ready to pardon and accept them.

The church in Vallejo, looking for the coming of Christ, is in a healthy condition, happily united in the service of their divine Master. They now expect Bro. H. F. Carpenter to be with them the latter part of May, as their pastor. Bro. C. will find some true souls to greet him, and look after his welfare. This church worked nobly in the union meetings, manifesting a genuine christian spirit. M. G.

BRO. BOUTELL.

Bro. Boutell is improving. The Lord has evidently heard prayer, which has been offered by many faithful friends of Jesus for his recovery. Let all continue to pray for him. J. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

We closed our meetings in San Francisco, and on the Pacific coast, Sabbath, May 2nd. It was a good day in the Lord. On account of the long series of union revival meetings in the city, we did not have an opportunity to spend as much time with the church looking and waiting for the coming of Jesus, as we desired; but perhaps more good has been accomplished by working in the great union meetings, than could have been accomplished by separate meetings. This was the judgment of our Brn. and Srs. who took a part in the union effort. They were satisfied they were acting in harmony with the wishes of the Lord, and were richly blest. In this way, they were instrumental in leading many to Christ. Among these were members of their own familes. This church stands firmly in the Lord, anxiously waiting for the coming of the Son of man in glory. During the past two years, Satan has made very earnest efforts to destroy it, but he has been thus far signally defeated. When one means failed, he has tried another, but in each attack, he has found some noble, brave christian men and women, who have ever been ready to stand up in defense of the right, at all hazards, and were never more determined than now, to continue thus to the end of the christian warfare.

Their neat chapel is pleasantly and centrally located. It is now expected that Bro. D. Mathewson, of Buchanan, Mich., will become the pastor of the San Francisco church next autumn. He is a true man, and zealous in the promotion of the cause of Christ. His labors have been blest by the Lord in Buchanan, and that church is anxious to have him remain their pastor.

Our farewell meeting, Sabbath evening, was a season of special interest. Members of other chhrches were present to express their sympathy, and unite with us in the worship of the God of our fathers. Two more were baptized, making sixteen in all. Seven united with the church. We closed with the Lord's Supper, when some seventy-five partook of the emblems. It was a heavenly season, and will be remembered with much pleasure. Farewell greetings were given with tearful eyes, and hearty pledges, by the grace of the Lord, to meet again in the land of glory. M. G.

SLAUGHTER OF CHRISTIANS.—A telegram from Constantinople, dated April 14th, says:

"A terrible slaughter of Christians has just been reported from Roumelia. The Turks in large numbers made an attack upon the portion of the town occupied by the Christians, and a desperate encounter resulted. Two hundred and seventy Christians, many of them women and children, were massacred. There is great excitement among the Europeans over the outrage."

This sad event may start the war train of of Europe, and be the pretext for arousing all the mighty men to meet in the grand conflict of the nations. Russia evidently desires some excuse that will allow her to blot out the Turkish empire from the map of the world. We shall watch the results of this massacre with interest. M. G.

A GREAT BRIDGE BURNED.

The Portage Bridge on the Erie Railway, the largest wooden bridge in the world, was burned last week. It was supposed to be the work of incendiaries. The timber used in its construction was 1,800,000 feet.

Incendiary fires are becoming more frequent and alarming, because they are more and more the result of revenge. We anticipate, from our understanding of the Scriptures, that this class of fires will increase and become more threatening as we approach the end. We watch its progress, therefore, as a sign of the times. J. C.

CHURCH UNION.—While Satan is arousing all his forces, and uniting them against Christ and christianity, christian men begin to feel the need of union on their part, that they may be able to stand against the common foe. To this end, a plan is proposed for a general union of all christian churches, as indicated by the following statement:

"A general meeting of the churches was held in the Presbyterian church in New York last week, to discuss the nature of the constitution to be submitted to a joint meeting of European and American churches, to be held in London on the 21st of July. The object is the formation of a confederation founded on a regular constitution, so framed as to meet the concurrence and approval of the European and American churches." M. G.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

STRAIT JACKETS.

H. MUNGER.

Since the Annual Conference, at Chelsea, Mass., I have heard a great cry about strait jackets, by a particular class of preachers. On inquiring the cause of complaint, I was informed that it was in consequence of the by-laws passed at that Conference by which to regulate ourselves. I should have voted for them if I had been present; for we have needed such rules for some time. I learn that those who complain of the strait jacket are those who will not join the Conference, but want all the privileges which it designs to protect, without being bound by any body, or subject to gospel discipline.

All nations have rules, by which they are governed; and such as do not wish to submit to those rules, cannot reasonably ask for the advantages and protection of such a government. So with religious bodies. There must be rules and regulations, or all is confusion. Where there is a combination of effort to accomplish any enterprise, good or bad, there must be a concert of action to insure success. There must be leaders.

This principle is seen in all the living creatures God has made. Wild geese have their leaders before they start on their journey; and all kinds of beasts, wild or tamed, have their leaders. Schools of fish, families of ants, and swarms of bees, have their by-laws or rules to govern their actions. Even the drone bees must obey while in the hive, or be turned out by the working bees. This is a law of all combinations, evidently emanating from God.

I suppose the Conference only desired their by-laws for such as cannot be trusted to roam where they please, only to divide and confuse the churches; and not for good men, whether members of the Conference or not. If all were good we should not need them. There is a class that fear and hate what they call a strait jacket. I know of some who have said they did not get the strait jacket upon them by joining the Conference; but they were looking after a place to settle and become pastors of Second Advent churches. I have seen these things for twenty-five years; and I am glad the Conference has got its eyes open at last. If the Lord comes within one year, let us be in order and at work. I am with you, brethren, in these things. Bless God for order.

Correspondence.

From Bro. G. M. Dewey.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—The barrel of goods from Rochester came safely to hand, and are now being distributed by me to those who are the most needy. I cannot find language to express the gratitude of the recipients. Christ says—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." All the children of God will be rewarded for their good deeds; not even the gift of a cup of cold water will go unrecompensed. May our Father bless you daily with the comfort of his Holy Spirit.

Perhaps you would like to hear how the truth prospers in our neighborhood. Our beloved Bro. and Sr. J. C. and S. E. Smith were here last February, and stayed about two weeks preaching the Word and trying to prepare a people to meet their soon coming King. Bro. S. accomplished a good work here, in drawing a line between truth and error, and throwing the light of Scripture on the dark traditions of men. He showed that eternal life is not in our nature, but a gift of God, through Christ our Lord.

Man, in the pride of his heart, may think and say he is immortal, that he will never die; but God thunders forth—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "Every soul that will not hear that Prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

It was the first time such a doctrine had been proclaimed in our county, and there was a great deal of prejudice and contempt manifested at first among the people; but before Bro. S. left it began to die out, and they began to search the Scriptures, to see if these things were so. It is a general remark that there has been more Bible reading among the people, than ever before. The blessed truth is spreading. Thank God for sending Bro. Smith here. The ministers here are very bitter, and are trying to do all they can to oppose the truth, but "truth crushed to earth will rise again," as long as people read their Bibles. Bro. S. organized a class of those of like precious faith here, and we hope he will be able to come to us again. We hope a goodly number more will be gathered into the ark. We see by the Crisis that our dear Bro. Boutell is sick, and wishes the prayers of God's children. The cry of our hearts has been going up to our heavenly Father in his behalf, that he may be restored to health, and labor until Jesus comes; for the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few in this great field.

Brn. and Srs., if you have got any books or tracts, doing nothing, send them to me. I will put them to work for our blessed Jesus. Time is short. The day is far spent. Let us be up and doing with all our might, trying to save souls. Church of God, awake!
Ward P. O., Wilson Co., Kan.

From Sr. M. A. Hughes.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I wish to write a few lines to the dear friends, as the Spirit shall direct me. I love the Lord Jesus Christ with all my soul, mind and strength. I am daily striving to know how I may best please him. I desire to be an overcomer, to crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts, and do good as I have opportunity. I have given all for Jesus. He is my all. He has been the God of the widow to me, and by his help I will trust him while I live. I look to him, day by day, for all I have, both temporal and spiritual. He supplies every need.

I feel, dear friends, that we are nearing the judgment. Soon we shall see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. O let us be ready, so that when he shall appear we may receive him with joy and not with grief. Let us have on the wedding garment, and have oil in our vessels, with our lamps. I have troubles and trials, and I expect to have them; for in the world we shall have tribulation, but in Jesus we shall have peace. Let us be every-day christians; loving one another with pure hearts fervently, and walking in the footsteps of our blessed Master, that we may receive a crown which is laid up for all those who love his appearing.

"That awful day will surely come;
The appointed hour makes haste,
When I must stand before my God,
And pass the solemn test."

Yes, poor sinner, we have got to stand before our God, and give an account of the deeds done in the body. That will be a solemn day. Let me invite you to flee from the wrath to come. Choose ye, this day, whom ye will serve; to-morrow it may be too late. Accept Christ now, believe, and you shall be saved.

From Bro. D. Killam.

Editors of the World's Crisis:—Dear brethren, in that glorious Bible hope, that there will be a future and better life, through Christ, by a raising of the dead,—I am old, and must shortly put off this my tabernacle, if the Desire of all nations does not soon appear to make all things new, and clothe me with immortality, before the king of terrors makes me his captive. I can say, like Paul, I scarcely know which to choose, life or death; while I feel the smarting pangs of a deranged and groaning creation. But the thing that I would choose is, to see Christ appear, and myself worthy to be clothed with immortality, and be with him in the paradise of God, without passing through the enemy's land.

The Crisis has strengthened me, comforted and confirmed me, and removed all doubts in regard to the Bible teaching about the future state of man. And outside of the Bible there is no knowledge on that subject, only that we see that man returns to his original elements. I have long argued against the doctrine that men are alive when dead, or that they get their reward at death. That the unfortunate man, who is not in Christ, is to have eternal life in torture, or that the soul that sins will never die, is not a Bible doctrine.

I feel happy that I have lived to see the mighty changes that are going on over so large a part of the world.

There are a few tracts I would pay for if I could get them. Henry Constable's pamphlet on the "Nature and Duration of Future Punishment," Sheldon's "Hereafter of all men," four tracts in one; "The Doctrine of Immortality," by J. H. Whitmore; the "Materiality of Man," by S. Guthrie, and T. M. Preble's pamphlet, "Let us make man."
Brooklin, Hants Co., Nova Scotia.

From Bro. M. A. Potter.

Dear Editors:—Thinking it would be a pleasure for some of the dear pilgrims to hear from one of their fellow laborers, I will write a few lines.

God is still blessing his people in this place. Last Lord's day I buried fourteen happy souls in baptism. Among the number was our eldest daughter. At eight o'clock in the evening we gathered around the bed-side of our second daughter, and saw her close her eyes in death. What a sad sight! Thank God, these sad scenes will soon be over. Jesus is soon coming, and then the loved ones will come again from the land of the enemy. I could but think of the words of Martha to Jesus—Lord, if thou hadst been here, our loved one had not died. We were surrounded with kind friends in Jesus, who shared with us our sorrows. May God bless and reward them, is my prayer.

I am about to close my labors with this dear people, and return to Keene; and after the first of June shall be able to supply the churches in my old field of labor. Dear Brn. and Srs., remember us at the throne of grace.
St. Johnsbury, Vt.

IN the last Crisis an article was published under the caption of "Concessions of an Apostle of the New Faith." I stated in connection with it that I translated it from Deutscher Volksfreund, a German weekly. This fact being omitted in the publication of the article, made it appear as though I was the author of the same. I desire to give credit to the original, and not take what is not due me. T. L. WAUGH.

PUNCTUALITY.—General Washington was a pattern of punctuality. When he engaged to meet congress at noon, he never failed to be at the door of the hall just as the clock was striking twelve. He always dined at four o'clock; and if the guests whom he had invited were not present, the dinner went on precisely at the appointed hour, without waiting for them. Washington would make no apology, but simply remark, "Gentlemen, we are punctual here." When those people got another invitation to dine with the President, they would be sure to be in time.

Obituaries.

KENYON. In Woodstock Valley, Ct., April 6th, of pneumonia, Bro. Eli Kenyon, aged 59 years.

Once more death has visited this christian family, and has borne a dear husband and father down to the grave. Bro. K. experienced religion about seven years ago. His attention was aroused to consider the subject of personal salvation while listening to the proclamation of Bible truth relative to the nature of man, state of the dead, and the second personal coming of Christ to raise the dead, judge the world, and establish his kingdom on the earth; all of which he heartily endorsed and firmly believed unto the end. He was a worthy member of the Advent church, and the first of its members to fall in death. We, as a church, feel our loss, and deeply sympathize with the family in their affliction. May they each find supporting grace in Christ, and much consolation in the blessed hope of soon meeting the dear ones in the kingdom of God, where suffering and separation will never come. His funeral was attended by the writer, assisted by Eld. H. Davis. Text Ps. 23: 4. P. S. BUTLER.

MORSE. In Union, Ct., April 26th, 1875, Sr. Percy Morse, aged 91 years.

Another aged pilgrim and mother in Israel has fallen in death. Sr. M. retained her physical and mental powers until her death, which was, apparently, without a moment's warning. She has suffered but very little from disease, and often expressed a desire to die without sickness; and it seems that, in this case, the desire of the righteous was granted. She has lived a devoted christian, but she now sleeps in Jesus, with a blessed hope of a part in the first resurrection. She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn, among whom are our dear Brn. Elders Amasa and C F. Morse. May the Lord sanctify this affliction to their individual good. Funeral services by the writer, from Job 17: 25–27.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."
P. S. BUTLER.

PIERCE. In New London, Ct., April 7th, Mary A., wife of Jonathan Pierce, aged 71 years.

Sister Pierce gave her heart to the Lord in the morning of life, and at its meridian heard the sweet message, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." She embraced this cheering truth, and since '43 has not only loved Christ as her Redeemer, but waited for him as her coming King. Her spirit was that of the Master, and her life one of devotion to his cause; the influence of which, like the fragrance of the crushed flower, will linger long in its sweetness. Her aged companion and children bow heavily beneath the stroke, but they "arise up and call her blessed." Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. John Gray, Pastor of M. E. Church. MRS. A. E. BENNETT.

BROWN. In Providence, R. I., March 29th, 1875, Leaner R. Brown, daughter of James and Susan J. Brown, aged five years.

Dear little Leaner is gone. The laughing eyes are closed, and the dimpled hands are folded for the dreamless sleep. The night is dark, but there is a flush of morn upon the mountains, and a gleam of sunlight glows along the distant hills. He who holds the keys of hell and death will come back to open the graves, and call the sleepers forth. Then he will say, as he said so long ago, —"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Funeral services by the writer. JOSEPH MIETT.

POTTER. At St. Johnsbury, Vt., May 2d, 1875, Lilean, daughter of M. A. and C. Potter, aged 13 years, 4 months.

Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. J. Smith, from 1 Thess. 4: 18. M. A. POTTER.

THOMPSON. In Wakefield, Mass., May 3d, 1875, Charles A., infant son of Charles and Georgianna Thompson. Words of comfort by B. FINNEY.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, May 7. Six thousand German families are preparing to emigrate from Russia on account of oppressive conscription.

The proceedings against the Prince, Bishop of Breslau, for the violation of the ecclesiastical laws, have resulted in his removal. He has been conducted to the Bohemian frontier.

May 9. In the Lower House of the Prussian Diet the bill for the suppression of religious orders was read a second time, without amendment, and the bill giving the Old Catholics a share of the Roman Catholic church property passed the third reading—202 to 75.

Instructions have been sent to the provincial authorities of Prussia to treat the collection of money for priests who have been subjected to legal penalties as a punishable offence.

May 10. The Czar arrived here to-day. He was received, on alighting at the railway station, by the Emperor William and all the Princes of the Emperor's family. Gens. Von Moltke and Manteuffel and other distinguished personages were present. The Emperor's greeting was exceedingly cordial. An immense crowd was gathered around the station and cheered most enthusiastically. The city is decorated with flags. The Czar, accompanied by Prince Gortschakoff, has visited Prince Bismarck.

London, May 5. The Standard severely criticises the letter from Mr. Gladstone read at the centennial celebration of the battle of Lexington. It remarks that the habit of toadying to Americans is discreditable in English public men and journalists. The results of the republican experiment in the United States are corruption of public life, extinction of public spirit, oppressiou of the minority, disgust of the honorable men with politics, and the transfer of the government into the hands of corrupt, unscrupulous and ignorant men.

May 11. Later advices swell the number of lives lost on the steamer Cadiz to sixty-two. The Cadiz was out of her course in consequence of a misreckoning of her captain. She struck a rock and sunk almost immediately.

FRANCE.

The Government has wisely resolved to keep aloof from the Ultramontanes. Instructions have just been sent to the Prefects of the Eastern Departments to use all legal means to prevent the religious orders expelled from Germany from settling there, and to sternly discountenance all attempts to foment clerical agitation against Prussia. It is probable that the projected grand Ultramontanist manifestation on the 27th of June at Montmartre will not take place—London Times.

AUSTRIA.

A gun factory in Upper Austria is said to be making 250,000 rifles for Germany. It has delivered 180,000 and has received a further order for 75,000. A Vienna firm is reported to be executing a German order for 30,000,000 of cartridges for delivery in June.—London Times.

ITALY.

Fifty representatives of the Italian Bar and Legislature have just given a banquet to Dr. Holtzendorf, the defender of Count Arnim. Signor Sella made the speech of the evening. The company joined enthusiastically in the toast to the closer union of Italy and Germany.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Pottsville, Penn., May 10. The situation in the Schuylkill coal region is daily growing more critical, and there are acts of violence committed in broad daylight, so bold have the miners become of late. To-day a demonstration was made by three hundred men from Locust Gap and vicinity, who crossed over the mountain and went to the Hickory Ridge Colliery, which had started to work this morning, and created great excitement among the miners by shooting off their fire-arms in the air, then advancing on them and preventing them from working. The inside boss attempted to interfere, and demanded of them to let his men work, when one of the mob struck him with a club. After the mob had accomplished their object by compelling all the men to quit work, they left for the Lancaster Colliery and stopped the miners there, and gave them to understand that this was only a warning, and that if they caught them at work again, they would come down with reinforcements and kill the whole party at work, and burn the breaker to the ground. This is the first open threat we have heard made to take life and burn coal property since the strike commenced.

Toledo, Ohio, May 10. A tornado passed over the village of Green Springs, Ohio, yesterday afternoon, blowing down three houses, by which three children were killed, and demolishing every chimney in the place. Passing northward, several houses and barns, between Green Springs and Clyde were blown down, and trees and fences destroyed. At Clyde, the Nichols house was partially unroofed, and considerable damage done to stores and residences between Clyde and Bellevue. Along the line of the Lake Shore railroad scarcely a building escaped uninjured. The course of the storm was from south to north, and its track about two miles wide.

Augusta, Ga., May 4. The details of Saturday's storm show it to have been destructive to life and property, but it is not to be compared to the cyclone which swept the State in the latter part of March. A few lives have been lost and many persons wounded. The path of the storm through the State was from west to east, following nearly in the direction of the March cyclone.

New Orleans, La., May 10. An attempt was made Sunday night to burn the town of Summit, Miss. Buckets of coal oil were placed on tops of houses. Two brothers, named Moses, have been arrested on suspicion.

By the wreck of the steamship Schiller, it is supposed that over two hundred lives were lost, including two Boston ladies. Of the 254 passengers, only forty-three are known to have been saved.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

The Committee will meet at Cooley's Hotel, Springfield, Tuesday, June 1st, at 12 M.
GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

Tent and Basket Meeting.

The new Union Tent will be pitched at Belgrade Mills, Me., Wednesday, June 2d, and hold meetings over Sunday, and longer if thought best. Those who can, may bring food and clothing, so as to lodge in the tent if necessary. Brn. will do all they can for this meeting. A general invitation is given, and homes can be found for all within a few miles. Those who have written me to go with tents this season, will do well to come to this meeting, as Brn. Low and Blaisdell are expected to be there, and arrangements will be made at that time for each tent's company. Those who cannot come, will please write me, that we may know what to depend upon.

Those coming from the West, can take the steamer, "Star of the East," in Boston, for Augusta, Tuesday or Friday, six o'clock p. m. There take stage to Belgrade Mills. Those coming by R. R. Road will stop at Belgrade Depot. Stage fare reduced to the Mills. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus. Call on Charles Austin, Charles H. Kelley, and Wm. Hersom, for homes.
For the brethren, H. B. SEVEY.

New York A. C. Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the New York A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Martville, commencing Thursday evening, June 17th, and hold over Sunday. We hope to see every church in this Conference represented by delegates. Let each church take a collection for the Conference. We expect the ministers and delegates to be present Thursday evening.

Will the churches, where our ministers labor, see that their fare is paid to and from the Conference. We expect the chapel at Martville will be dedicated during the meeting. Homes will be provided for all that come. Brn. and Srs., come praying that God's blessing may rest on the meeting.

Directions. Those coming on the New York Central, from the East or West, will change cars at Weadsport for Martville. Those coming on the Lake Shore and Watertown Road, will change at Sterling Junction for Martville. The church is but a few rods from the depot.
M. R. MILES, President.

Seaside Campmeeting.

The undersigned having been appointed a committee to arrange for a General Campmeeting of Second Adventists at Seabrook, N. H., have accepted the position; and in compliance with urgent requests and our own convictions of duty, have leased "Beckman's Grove"; and if the Lord will, the meeting will commence August 14th, and continue over two Sabbaths.

The grove is pleasantly located within sixty rods of the depot, and about the same distance from salt water landing. There are excellent facilities for sailing and fishing. A large and commodious bath house will be erected, and the committee will spare no pains to procure accommodations for all who desire to build houses, or pitch tents on the ground, or to lease rooms in the neighborhood. The boarding house will be in charge of the committee. Fares will be reduced on the Eastern and other railroads. Particulars hereafter.

Committee of Arrangements: N. H. Robie, A. N. Dow, N. L. Robie, David Beckman, Robert Dow, Wm. Beckman, Charles C. Dow, John B. Adams, Charles A. Barton.

Meeting at Sugar Hill.

There will be a meeting at Sugar Hill, N. H. (D. V.) commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday, the 6th. Bro. E. A. Stockman will be present to preach the Word. It is hoped that Bro. Daniel Churchill will be able to attend also.

The object of this meeting is to glorify God, to cheer and strengthen his dear scattered saints, to awaken backsliders, and convert sinners to an experimental knowledge of the truth. For this let all the dear saints pray. N. WHEELER.

N. B. As Sugar Hill is seven miles from Lisbon Depot, and no regular line of daily conveyance, it will be necessary for those who come over the R. R. to inform me when they will arrive at Lisbon, and conveyance will be provided at reasonable rates. Trains going North, arrive at Lisbon at 11 o'clock A. M. and half past 4 P. M.; going South, at half past 9 A. M. and 3 P. M. Come to the feast. N. W.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will hold its next session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, on the old camp-ground, commencing June 10th. There will be a boarding house and grocery store, so that all who wish to board or buy can be accommodated. There will be plenty of straw free to all. Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates, also wood.

Come one, come all. Come feeling an interest to save and be saved. This may be our last meeting before Jesus comes. We expect help from abroad. Eld. A. N. Seymour and others will be at the meeting. Our lease of the grounds run out this year. Let all interested be present to devise means and make arrangements for the future.
ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

EDINBORO, PA.—Our next Church Conference is appointed for May 29th and 30th. Services on Saturday, at 2 and 7.30 P. M. On Sunday, at 9.30 and 10.30 A. M., and 7.30 P. M. Administration of ordinances follow morning service. Brn., do you want preaching here and in adjacent places this year? If so, govern yourselves accordingly. Come up to this Conference and make arrangements therefor. G. W. STETSON.

TENT MEETINGS.—The Iowa Advent Christian Mission Tent will be pitched (the Lord willing) in Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Thursday, May 27th, to continue over Sunday, June 6th, and longer if duty demands. Let there be a general rally by the brethren and sisters from the surrounding country to this meeting. Let us come to labor and pray for the promulgation of the truth and the salvation of sinners. As this will be the first tent meeting of the season, let us endeavor to strike the right key-note, J. RIDLEY. P. W. HOUGH.

NOTICE.—The Lord willing, the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Kansas will hold its annual session at Ottumwa, Coffey Co., Kansas, May 21st, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue as long as the interest demands.

Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 8th of April (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary. Let there be a large attendance, as there is business of unusual importance to come before the Conference.

Brethren and sisters, make arrangements to do up your spring work in good earnest, and attend this meeting. Soon Christ will come in person to claim his own. In behalf of the Conference.

Board of Directors: A. S. Corey, Warden Dunbar, Eld. J. S. Thorp, Eld. Daniel Webster, Chester Crowell. J. C. SMITH, Chairman. R. F. CLARK, Secretary.

NOTICE.—If any brethren or friends know of any place where a tent meeting will be productive of good, be the means of getting the truth before the people, and saving sinners, write to my address—South Killingly, Conn. Do not let any lack of means on your part hinder you from sending in your request. The Lord will provide in his time and in his own way. E. BELLOWS.

Tent Meeting.

The Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched the first time this season in South Chelmsford, on Friday, June 4th. The meeting will continue over two Sabbaths, and perhaps longer, if there should be the interest it is hoped there will be.

South Chelmsford is four miles from the city of Lowell, on the Lowell and Framingham R. R. This is a new field, there never having been an Adventist meeting held in the town. There is but one believer in the place, our aged Bro. Spaulding, who is very anxious that an effort be made here for the salvation of the people.

It is earnestly requested by the Tent Committee that our brethren and sisters who can attend this meeting do so, especially those living in adjacent towns. The church in Lowell is most earnestly requested to give its time and voice in this meeting. Come all who can to work for the Lord. Bring with you food, blankets, comfortables, sheets, and all that you think will be needed for lodging in the Tent. A stove will be set for cooking whatever may be necessary. Come with the Spirit of God in your hearts, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of sinners. The time is short. For the Committee, I. I. LESLIE.

Tent Meetings.

At the last Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley Conference, it was voted that Tent Meetings be held during the coming season in all places where there was a prospect of good being done, and sufficient encouragement given by the resident people. The Tent is engaged for a Campmeeting at Fullerville, West Hawley, Mass., soon after the Springfield Campmeeting. It was voted to hold the July Quarterly Meeting in the Tent, at North Adams, Mass. For the rest of the season the Tent is not yet engaged.

The following places were proposed as favorable places for Tent Meetings, if desired: North Clarendon and Addison, Vt.; Greenwich, Lansingburg and Cambridge, N. Y. The committee are determined to do all in their power to press the matter of Tent Meetings the coming season, believing that great good will result therefrom. The services of a good and competent preacher have been secured, who also is an experienced hand with a Tent. Between the committee, Tent Master, and other preachers adjacent to the meetings held, ministerial labor cannot be wanting, if all be done by God's grace, with an eye single to his glory.

Let all who are interested in these meetings, correspond immediately—now, at once, with the committee.
H. K. FLAGG, A. W. SIBLEY, } Tent Committee.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—In behalf of the poor in Kansas I acknowledge the receipt of the following, by the hand of Bro. Geo. T. Aadams: May 5th, two barrels of clothing. Previously from the same, $10.00 in money. May the Lord bless those who have so kindly remembered the suffering poor. J. S. THORPE.

Vermont Conference.

The next session will be held with the church at Hinesburgh, Vt., according to vote of last Conference, and will commence Wednesday evening, June 9th. Meetings will be held over the Lord's day, although the Conference will close Friday night.

Those coming on the Central Vermont R. R. (Eastern division) will stop at Richmond. Those coming on the Rutland and Burlington division will stop at Charlotte. Teams will meet passengers at those stations on Wednesday. Those wishing to be met at the depot on Wednesday, or on any other day, should write to Bro. A. H. Post, Hinesburgh, some days beforehand, that they may know how extensive team arrangement to make. A stage leaves Burlington daily for Hinesburgh, at about two o'clock P M. We hope that there will be a general gathering at this meeting, for the furtherance of the gospel. Help in preaching the Word has been engaged from abroad.
H. F. CARPENTER, for Com.

NOTICE.—I will meet those who have written to me concerning ground to build wooden tents upon, on the camp-ground at Springfield, May 21st, from 9 A. M. till 3 P. M. Hope all will be there. You can get lumber, and all other building material and help, near by. If there are any who selected a lot last year, and are not sure of building this year, please notify me soon. You should not hold a lot from others who want to build.
H. MUNGER.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

The Advent Christian State Campmeeting for Minnesota, is to be held at the Utica camp-ground, known as the Chatham Grove, two miles south of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, twenty-three miles west of the city of Winona, commencing Saturday, June 12th, at 2.30 P. M., and hold over two Sundays.

We shall provide a boarding tent and board for such as may want it, just as cheap as possible, and those that wish to board themselves can have the use of the tent stove to cook on. A pasture lot will be furnished near the camp-ground, also stabling for horses; as many as can will please bring grain to feed.

We hope that the churches and the scattered ones as many as can will come with their tents, bedding, etc., as may be necessary for a week or ten days tenting on the camp-ground. One and all think of all the things necessary for your own comfort while at the meeting, and bring them with you, and we will try to make you all comfortable. We wish all to come full of the life, power, and spirit of the Master, that God's people may be comforted, and strengthened in the faith, backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted to God, and many souls made happy in the Lord.

Preaching Brethren and Sisters expected:—Brn. C. C. Ramsay and Wm. Chapman from Iowa, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Sr. Ruth M. Rowell, and Bro. J. W. Bursell; and we extend a cordial invitation to preaching brethren and sisters in general. We hope also that Bro. M. Grant (the Lord willing) may be with us to preach the Word. Those coming by the R. R. down the river will change cars at Minnesota City, and those coming by the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. will change cars at Owatonna for Utica.

The State Advent Christian Conference was adjourned to meet in connection with this Campmeeting. The State tent will be pitched on the camp-ground.

GEO. HERRING, D. CHEATHAM, O. RICHARDSON, PETER MITSON, PHILIP RAMER, } Committee.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference of Advent Christians of the State of Minnesota will convene at Utica, on the old camp-ground in Chatham's Grove, on Tuesday, June 15th, at 10.30 A. M. This Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting. We expect the following preachers:—Bro. and Sr. Barnes, Sister Rowell, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Brn. Bursell, Mitson, Brown, Ramer, Chapman, Lombard, Cole, Wellcome (of Garden City), Wood, Smith, and Dewing. Let there be a general rally of our Minnesota preachers. Come to work for God and the salvation of sinners. Those who cannot come, write a report of your labors and send it in season. We want a general rally. Let every church in the Conference report either by delegate or by letter.

Come, brethren, with your tents. Lay by your work for a few days and come to this feast of tabernacles. Remember those little mission boxes. Send every dime you can for the trust fund from them. Come in the spirit of your Master—not to hear big preaching, but to work for the upbuilding of the cause. Jesus is soon coming, and we want to be ready to meet him, having our work done and well done. All reports sent after June 1st, should be directed to me at Utica, Winona Co., Minn., care of J. Cheatham. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

WISCONSIN CAMPMEETING—This meeting will be held at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., beginning on Saturday, June 5th, and hold over two Sundays. Bro. Grant intends to be with us. There are daily stages running to Prairie du Sac from Lodi and Barahoo, on the Northwestern R. R., and a steamer from Merrimack; also a stage from Mazomanie, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R.—ten miles. Let us put up the most of our tents at the beginning of the meeting. Other particulars in time. O. THOMAS, WM. SHELDON, H. M. JONES, } Committee.

WISCONSIN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—This Conference will convene in connection with the State Campmeeting at Prairie du Sac, and hold its first session on the morning of the 10th of June. Let the churches be represented by delegates or letters, and let every minister either be present in person, or report by letter.
WM. SHELDON, Sec.

TO THE ADV. CHRIS. CONF. OF NORTHERN PA. AND SOUTHERN N. Y.—This is to notify all who may be interested in this Conference that an effort will be made, at our next annual session, to be held next September, to make some changes in our Conference Constitution. Let there be a full Conference. Done by order of vote of Conference. A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Seabrook, N. H., at the lowest market price, which will not exceed $15 per M. Address CHARLES C. DOW, Kensington, N. H.
N. H. ROBIE, for Com.

AN APPEAL.

The season has now arrived when the special work of holding Tent Meetings should be begun. The Mass. Conference has a good Tent ready again for service in the harvest field of the Lord; and the question is: Shall it be sent forth once more with good and faithful laborers to gather in sheaves for Christ, and give the warning of the coming day of God? In order that this may be done, there must be a sacrifice made by the friends of Jesus, and means given to sustain in this way his precious cause.

It is proposed that the Tent this year be taken into new fields, and where our precious faith has not as yet been heard. If this is done, there will be a special necessity for contributions on the part of our churches and people in general, to defray the expenses of these meetings in these new places.

As the Committee, chosen at the late Conference to have the charge of the Tent and make arrangements for the work in connection with it, we invite all who have the means and the heart to give in sustaining this mode of reaching the people, to do so as soon as they can, that we may know how far to go in promising the Tent where it is already requested.

Contributions and pledges can be sent to the Treasurer, ELD. C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

B. YOUNG, L. BOUTELL, C. E. BARNES, I. I. LESLIE, } Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee.

☞ Notice.

The members of the Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference are requested to send to the Secretary their names and address, that each may receive a certificate of membership, according to a vote of the Conference.
I. I. LESLIE, Sec., Box 5140 Boston, Mass.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 19th, and continue to the 28th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board and lodging. All who can are requested to bring Tents.

Brethren in the Lord, do make arrangements to attend this meeting, especially all who reside in the southerly part of this State. Come at the commencement, if possible. We intend to secure good profitable laborers, those who are prepared to bring out an exposition of those prophecies especially applicable to these times, and now in process of fulfillment, when the church will be delivered. This may be the last annual gathering we shall be permitted to enjoy before the Lord will gather his own to himself. Let us do what we can to save the perishing before it is too late. Bro. Munger will have charge of the meeting.
HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Monday, August 30th, and hold over Sept. 5th. WM. H. MITCHELL, for the Com.

CAMPMEETING.—The Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Sunday, Sept. 5th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 12th.
JER. CARR, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the following prices: Hemlock, $15.00 per M.; Pine, planed and matched, $25,00 per M. All who want lumber for frames must write immediately to J. H. Downing, Alton Bay, N. H. Mr. Downing will furnish nails, windows, doors, butts, screws, etc., at Boston prices. H. K. CHOATE, BENJ. YOUNG, } For Committee.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—A four days meeting will be held at East Bethel, Vt., commencing June 2nd, and continuing over the Sabbath, June 6th. Bro. H. H. Tucker, of Palmer, Mass., and others who can, will assist Bro. Hoyt at this meeting. Come, all ye valiant soldiers, lift up the ensign for the people. H. F. C., for Com.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a Grove Meeting on the farm of Eld. Brian, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing at 10½ o'clock A. M., Sunday, June 20th, and continuing all day. Different preaching brethren will be present. All are invited to come, and bring their dinner, and stay all day. A good pasture furnished near the grove, free. Good running water in the grove. Come one and all. N. BRIAN. V. F. HUNT.

NOTICE.—Hitherto my work has been such that it has kept me at home most of the time. But now I am at liberty to go where the Lord may direct, and where an open door can be found. If any desire my labors among them, they can address me at Biddeford, Me., Box 1642.
G. F. HAINES.

NOTICE.—As the Mass. Tent Committee are about to start the Tent, they will need some money. Will those brethren and sisters who have subscribed for this purpose, send to the Treasurer, C. GOODRICH, Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., as soon as convenient?

NOTICE.—The Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual session at Bear River, N. S., commencing Thursday, June 17th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All lovers of Jesus are invited to attend. Come to work for the Lord. J. J. WOODWORTH.

TENT MEETING.—There will be a Tent Meeting at Belgrade Mills, Me., the first of June. Particulars hereafter. H. B. SEVEY.

NOTICE.—The York Co. A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session in the chapel at West Parsonsfield, Me., commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 2 P. M. We desire to see a large attendance. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Third Quarterly Meeting of the New Hampshire Conference will hold its session with the church in Whitefield, commencing Thursday, June 10th, and continue over the Sabbath. A general invitation is given. LEVI ALLEN.

☞ Eld. M. R. Phetteplace has been engaged to supply the desk at the Advent church in Lowell for the present.

Those wishing to preach in Kennebunkport, Me., will please correspond with either of the following committee: Jonas Merrill, Chas. B. Clough, or Hugh Parsons.

The Maine Mission Tent.

It is now time that those interested should begin to arrange for the summer campaign with the tent. Two good gospel preachers, who can, with the Lord's help, entertain any congregation, go anywhere, manage any crowd, and endure any hardships, are needed, with others occasionally to assist, with good singers and exhorters; also one good man for tent master. Who will volunteer to go into this work? Let them write to me at once. Will each of the committee write to me at once, and say what they have to say,—what they think or wish? Will all who wish meetings with the tent, or who wish the tent to go into any new fields, write to me their thoughts about it? The tent ought to be in the field all through the warm season. Let us try to do all we can for the spread of truth and the salvation of souls.
I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

A NEW BOOK.
THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. AGT.

A HUNDRED YEARS.

E. W. LANE.

A hundred years ago, and what
Of all that is to day;
The fish, the bird, the beast, the man,
Oh, tell me what were they?
And where are those who flourished then?
Oh, lives there one to know
The very places which they filled
A hundred years ago?

A hundred years to come, and where
Will all these millions be,
Who fill, to-day, the earth and sky,
And live within the sea;
The living tide, the life, the all,
That make the present hum,
Oh, who will be, and what will be
A hundred years to come?

Ah well! a hundred years agone,
A hundred years to come,
But tell that quick to mortal man
The sands of life are run;
In one great play we act a part
'Mid scenes of hopes and fears,—
Scenes, actors change, and we're forgot,
Oft, in a hundred years.

Be this a maxim—yours and mine—
In life make most of present time.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. MUNGER.

As our message is a flying one, it is interesting to know what is going on; and if no one wrote, nothing would be known. Those that have settled over one church know but little outside of that church; and so few have settled, compared to our number, the general information needed for the main body must come from the missionaries who go from place to place, scattering seed, distributing tracts, mending up breaches, comforting the weak and isolated ones, and acting as agents to introduce our good paper.

This is the way the first Advent message was spread through the then known world. The second Advent message was started in the same way.

But few men have variety enough to keep up an interest more than one or two years, if the church is a living one. New ground bears the best generally, but there is hard work in breaking it up. This accounts for constantly cultivating old, worn-out fields. The plough-cutter, that has broken so many roots, may get dull, or worn out, and must be used on different land, or be sharpened, or laid up to give place for a new one that can do the work. We cannot last only about so long, and then must give way for new gifts. It is God's way to use each generation for their time and work. As we believe our work was assigned for the last generation, we should not stop it, nor compromise this truth. I suppose the apostles might have united with the old Jewish church, if they would have softened down on the doctrine of the resurrection. So might Luther with the old Catholic Church; and Wesley with the Church of England. But they were men for their time and those truths, and would not compromise it for the sake of union.

What is our position, as a people? is a great question at this time. God's prophetic truth has stirred the theological waters, or people of the world, and I think the danger is in our being induced to take down our colors to half mast, for the sake of union. Never, since I heard Bro. Miller preach at Three Rivers, have I doubted the message being of God. Although this truth, like all others, has suffered from its pretended friends, yet it has a power in it, when properly presented; and many are giving attention to it now, among all denominations. They feel, and some acknowledge, the truth and are calling for light; and it is the very time the devil wants us to cut down the truth and preach what others preach.

Many christians in other churches, who have been kept in the dark till their eyesight is dim, are now crying for light.

Said a preacher a short time ago, "Our whole denomination is tinctured with your Advent doctrines, and now is your time to press them; for you have five cousins to one brother in the world; and there must soon be a giving way and coming over to you." Another said: "Your little humble Advent Chapel is preaching to us about our pride. We are in debt twenty-five thousand dollars for our church, and less union and religion than you have, and less truth." Another said—"I have got tired of our church debt, which gives rise to such foolish practices in the church to raise money; and a number of us think of joining your people."

Many others, within two years, have said, "We went to your Advent meeting to hear your doctrine preached, and did not hear a word different from what we have at home. Now this is the state of feeling at this time; and those who know it should report it for the encouragement of others.

I have been out most of the time since last fall, and it has been the coldest winter I ever experienced. Eight weeks the weather was 10 degrees below zero, on an average, and some of the time 20 to 30. One cold day I rode three miles and preached three times; but took cold, and just escaped congestion of the lungs. Preaching every evening caused a loss of fifteen pounds of flesh, yet I kept at work every day but three in the home mission field, going only two hundred miles from home. This is something for an old man of 69 years in the hard winter of 1875. The best encouragement was larger congregations and better attention than for ten years on the same ground; which showed an interest to hear the truth. It is not expected, by men of understanding in this matter, that since so many have got into the valley of decision, against this truth, and in favor of the popular, formal religion of the day, we can move the masses as formerly. Events are preaching now, and we, as a people, are watching them as Christ told us to do. The late union revivals have very little reformation in them.

Well, brethren, I am yet with you in our prophetic position, and will do what I can to keep the colors at mast head, till we get the victory. With all the truth we must have a union with Christ, in spirit, to be saved. I don't have much sympathy with doctrine alone, without a Christ in it; nor a professed holiness without a love to see the Author of holiness. I think many are deceived on this great subject. I hope all our coming campmeetings will be Second Advent meetings. We ought to scatter a large lot of tracts at these meetings; for people will read them. Let us all work, and work in harmony.

So closely does self-love cling to us, that when, through God's mercy, the inward eye is opened to discern the ugliness within, we are still continually tempted to look through a false medium and see ourselves with the partial eyes of others.

THE TRUTH WORKS ITS WAY ON.

I. C. WELLCOME.

We are glad to see that the "History of the Message" makes good impressions. Our neighbors seem more friendly. Brethren who stood in strong opposition reverse their arms. They who have doubted the propriety of giving us fellowship seem brotherly. Mr. Ackinson's views of us go at a large discount, even at home. We here give several Reviews of the "History of the Second Advent Message," which are particularly interesting, as they show how our neighbors think of us, and how they differ one from another in their thoughts.

FROM "ZION'S HERALD."

"From being a simple cry in the wilderness, 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord,' 'Second Adventism' has become a denomination, with its regular organization and established creed and ordinances. We were not prepared, however, to find its history requiring so large a volume as the fine octavo sent us by its author, Rev. I. C. Wellcome. It bears the title of 'History of the Second Advent Message, and Mission, Doctrine, and People.' It makes a royal octavo volume of over seven hundred pages. Its mechanical execution is complimentary to the publisher, and the volume is one of general as well as of denominational value. It will be an important contribution in gathering up the ecclesiastical history of the last quarter of a century in this country.

The volume gives a very full history of the Advent movement, from the time of Wm. Miller down to the present hour. One of its most interesting and valuable features is its full sketches of all the chief Second Advent preachers, and of the different periods fixed upon for the Savior's appearing, the Scriptural arithmetic upon which they were founded, and the modification of views occurring from time to time.

We cannot review the volume in such a notice as this. It will excite attention, and be of permanent interest for reference."

The "WATCHMAN AND REFLECTOR" says: "Isaac C. Wellcome has prepared a 'History of the Second Advent Message and Mission.' There are many christians who may hold totally different views from the author in respect to scenes connected with the second advent of Christ; and yet, to them this history of a great religious movement, which at various times has agitated so deeply the public mind in America, will prove exceedingly interesting. The author confines himself to an account of events and leading characters since 1820. The volume is largely biographical. These personal sketches are, in many instances, preceded by likenesses of the more distinguished advocates of the Millennial theory. There is a very striking picture of Dr. John Cumming, the great London preacher. The reader of these pages will be pleased with the clear statement which the author gives to his views, and the very candid spirit which he manifests in admitting the errors and follies which fanatical men have been guilty of under the influence of this doctrine of Christ's immediate coming. The book without question is the best expression of the faith of the Second Adventists, and the fullest and most accurate history of their great leaders, and their great religious movements. The book is published by the author, at Yarmouth, Me., and at Boston (160 Hanover St.) by the Advent Christian Publication Society."

We extract from comments from the Congregationalist:—"Our own religious beliefs and sympathies have never carried us in the direction of Millerism, or Millenarianism, or any such literal and measured interpretations of Scripture; but we will not withhold from those brethren from whom we are obliged to differ on these points that tribute of our respect and esteem which so many of them deserve. The faith of the Adventists we regard as largely evangelical; we are sure that the spirit of a true and devoted piety resides in them to a very great degree; the exaggerated forms in which they hold some truths are an inseparable outgrowth of their mental structure; and in the doing of any good thing they may have the power to confer upon this sin-stricken world we wish them a hearty God-speed."

JOY AND GLADNESS.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Sounds of sorrow, voices of weeping and wailing, have been heard on this earth for many generations. And truly there has been sufficient cause for this. But a change is coming. Weeping will not continue forever. "Joy cometh in the morning." Every vestige of sorrow, all clouds and darkness will depart, and their shadows will be seen no more. For "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35: 10.

Mortal ear hath never heard sounds so sweet, symphony and harmony so perfect, such continued strains of rapture, showing forth the joy, the ecstasy of bliss, of those who dwell in the city of our God. The eye of man hath not seen anything to be compared with the beauty and the glory of that heavenly country and that eternal city.

At the coronation of King Solomon there was such a noise of rejoicing that the earth rang again. But when He who is "greater than Solomon" is crowned, the thrills of joy will extend to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills, and the echo of that shout will reach the ears of all living.

REPORT.

The Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference met with the church at the Lancaster school-house, according to appointment, Thursday evening, and had a prayer-meeting. The blessing of God was with us.

Friday morning we had another prayer-meeting, and in the afternoon a discourse by Eld. I. C. Wellcome. It was a practical and impressive sermon. In the evening another social meeting. Saturday morning the brethren and sisters came to the house with smiling faces and a sweet spirit; and the result was we had a good meeting. In the afternoon we had a sermon by I. C. Wellcome, from 2 Pet. 1: 12. In the evening another prayer and conference meeting. One started for the first time to be a christian, and a backslider confessed her heart wanderings. It was good to be there.

Sunday morning our love-feast continued till noon. In the afternoon we had preaching by Bro. H. D. Reed, on the resurrection, and in the evening a good powerful prayer-meeting. This closed one of the best quarterly meetings we have had for some time.

I do wish the brethren and sisters had more interest in such meetings, for, as a whole, they are the best meetings we can have to get up a reformation. And may the good Lord awaken us to the great work of saving souls. Preachers: I. C. Wellcome, H. B. Jaques, H. D. Reed, and H. S. Mitchell. HIRAM S. MITCHELL, Sec.

DIVINE FAITHFULNESS.

The God I trust,
Is true and just;
His mercy hath no end;
Himself hath said
My ransom's paid,
And I on him depend.

Then why so sad,
My soul—though bad,
Thou hast a friend that's good;
He bought thee dear,
Abandon fear;
He bought thee with his blood.

So rich a cost
Can ne'er be lost,
Though faith be tried by fire;
Keep Christ in view,
Let God be true,
And every man a liar.

Correspondence.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—God bless you all. Again I write of the goodness of God. He is the chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely. O how many times have I expressed these same words, and I can say it from the depths of my heart. He is a precious Savior. How often I cry unto him. I can find relief in no other way. He is my life, and he knows just what I am—a poor helpless sinner, saved by grace. We have the promise that grace shall be given us through all the journey of this mortal life, and bring us safely home at last.

How blessed it is to trust in a loving Savior, and feel that we can go to him in hours of deepest distress, make all our wants and wishes known, and know that he is never tired of listening to our cries. He has promised to give us the bread of life. "He that cometh to me," says Christ, "shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." It is our fault if we go hungry, while our Father spreads the table. Let us eat and be satisfied. Thank God, there is enough for each, enough for all, and enough forevermore.

I often look back on my past life and see how little I knew of the goodness of God or the plan of salvation. But while passing through the furnace of affliction God has taught me. These hours have been the happiest of my life. Not because I wish to suffer; I shrink from it; but I will be submissive, and feel that my heavenly Father will do just right, and bring me, at last, where no sickness can reach us. Jesus, our great High Priest, has gone to prepare a place for all his waiting ones. I have great reason to rejoice in God my Savior, being so good to me. He has stood by me all these years, and led me in a way which I knew not. His watchful eye is over all his suffering ones, and the best of all is, we are never left to ourselves. Jesus has promised to be with us, and we need fear no evil. Though an host encamp against me, my heart shall not fear. We read in Ps. 125: 2—"As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people, from henceforth, even forever." Blessed thought!

While thinking of the Lord this morning, these words came to me—"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." It is a blessed promise. I followed all through the chapter, it seemed so good; every verse is so rich and full of meaning. O how often I thank my heavenly Father for the blessed Bible. How much we find in it to cheer and comfort us. It is a precious book to me, and each day I live I prize it more and more.

Cheer up, dear suffering ones; be of good cheer, and with renewed strength we will press onward until Jesus comes and we hear the invitation—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

From Sr. S. Shriner.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Although I have been a reader of the Crisis but a short time, and am a stranger to most of its contributors, yet I am not a stranger to the doctrines which it advocates, nor to the blessed hope set before us in the gospel; and I feel as though it would be a privilege to express through its columns my gratitude to the Giver of all good for the mercy and grace which he has been pleased to bestow upon this neighborhood.

A few months ago there was no religious life or activity around us, only a very few who professed to be christians; and to those few it might have been said, as it was to the church in Sardis, "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." But thanks be to our heavenly Father, that he put it into the hearts of Bro. and Sr. Clark to come to this place to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Faithfully and earnestly have they labored with this people, and the truth spoken has been like seed sown in good ground, and is bearing fruit, which we trust will redound to the glory of God.

Professed followers of Christ have been roused to new zeal and energy in his service; backsliders who had long been walking in the broad road to destruction, have been brought back to the straight and narrow way, and now feel that the yoke is easy and the burden is light; and many who never before entered the service of the Master, are now rejoicing in his love, and feel that it is blessed to walk in all his commandments and ordinances. A goodly number, all around us, have embraced the truth concerning the near coming of our Lord, of immortality alone through Christ, and other kindred doctrines. I have seen Bro. Clark lead over thirty willing souls into the water, to be buried with Christ by baptism into his death, and still there are others standing ready; some expecting to follow the Savior in this blessed ordinance to-morrow. Last Sunday there were five.

The change wrought throughout this part of the country is deep and wonderful. "It is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes." It is true the enemy has risen in opposition to the work, crying out that "These that have turned the world upside down, are come hither also." And many false and evil reports have been circulated, to injure those who have so faithfully presented the truth to the people; but we feel like saying, "The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted him, they will also persecute us;" and with unfaltering steps let us press forward in this labor of love, and try to bring people to a knowledge of the truth. "As thy day is so shall thy strength be," and the promises of God are yea and amen. May he ever be our portion, our strength, our rock, and our fortress.

For myself I can say, this has been the most blessed winter of my life, because I have enjoyed so much of the presence of the Lord. He has seemed so near to me, I could take right hold of him by faith, and feel that he was standing by me to uphold me. Never before could I realize the meaning of the words of John, "Perfect love casteth out fear;" for though I have been a professed follower of Christ from my childhood, yet much of my life has been spent in darkness and doubt, and I often felt as though I was serving God through fear of the eternal torment which I believed was in reserve for the ungodly, more than from love. But praise be to his name, I can say now I know that I love him, and I thank him daily for the light which has been thrown upon the sacred Word; and that now I can see him as a God of love and faithfulness, full of compassion and tender mercy.

I was led to believe in most of the doctrines taught by Adventists, nearly four years ago, by reading some of their publications. But although my mind assented to their views, yet I never saw half the beauty and harmony which is to be found in them, nor did I realize the importance of spreading the light, and leading others to a knowledge of those blessed truths as found in the Word of God, until I heard the preaching of Sr. Clark.

Brethren and sisters, pray for the little band of disciples, which have been gathered in this section of the land, looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Pray that all may be faithful unto the end, and be gathered with all the redeemed, in the kingdom which is to be established at the coming of the Master.

Washington Co., Kansas.

From Bro. A. H. Smith.

Dear Brn.:—While reading the report of the Chelsea Conference, I felt to thank God that there was one place, at least, where the speedy coming of Christ was made a prominent theme in the preaching. This is as it should be. It is "meat in due season."

If the Advent message is of any importance, it is of very great importance; and for one, I do not feel willing to compromise this great, sanctifying truth, nor stir it in with last day fables till it loses its identity and becomes powerless for good. I know there is a great deal being said just now about union, and that the different sects are being thoroughly stirred together, and that all sectarian walls are falling; but I am thinking that if any of the sheep or lambs should begin to jump out and stray away to other folds, and get a taste of better pastures, the walls would go up as high and as strong as ever.

It is saith "union is strength." Yes, if united on the truth; otherwise it is weakness itself. I like to see people come out and unite on present truth, and help roll the car of salvation ahead; but I cannot go back to Egypt and unite with those that are groping their way in darkness. The christian course is onward; and when the pillar and the cloud rises and moves forward, we have got to move with it, or be left in the darkness behind.

Perhaps I shall be called a radical, or sectarian, but I cannot help it. I must confess that I have yet to learn how two can walk together, any length of time, except they be agreed.

Wolcott, Ct., May 4th, 1875.

From Sr. J. G. Goutermout.

Dear Editors:—By your permission I would like to say a few words through your valuable paper. I have just finished reading the Crisis of April 21st. I love to read the testimonies of others, and will, by the grace of God, add mine to the list.

It is now over two years since I gave my heart to God, and he spoke peace to my soul. My desire is to serve him faithfully, he has done so much for me. He has taken my feet from the mire and clay, and placed them on a safe foundation. He has put a new song into my mouth, even the song of praise. I regret to say that I have not always lived as near to God as I should. The enemy at times has had me in his power; but I have never desired to go back into the world again. I pray that the good seed sown in my heart may take deep root, and hope that its fruit will be unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.

We have a few in this place who are looking for the coming of the chief Shepherd, to reward the righteous and punish the wicked with everlasting destruction. We are scoffed at by some, but, thanks be to God, we read in his Word that there will be scoffers in the last days.

O that God may help them to see their folly, that they may turn before Christ comes to judge the world.

We have Advent preaching by Eld. C. H. Williams. May God abundantly bless him, both spiritually and temporally. God grant that he may be the means of leading many sinners to Christ. I often think how blessed it will be when we get into the kingdom. We shall behold our Master face to face, and be like unto him. We shall live forever.

God grant that we may be faithful, that we may have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

Harrisbrugh, Lewis Co., N. Y.

From Sr. S. Ingham.

Dear Brn.:—I feel it duty to drop you a line of thanks for the continuance of the Crisis. It has been a welcome visitor in our family ever since its birth, and I would sadly miss its cheering presence. I am about discouraged in living at this rate; no meetings, lectures, or music, no oasis, or gleam of sunshine along my shadowed life path, to cheer the weary heart while toiling in this haven of unrest.

Rest! how strange the name! Is it all a dream, or did I once know the meaning that sacred word implies, of which I have but faint scintillations? Good bye, thou almost forgotten, peaceful rest; no more to be mine to know in this life. I am only waiting till the shadows shall be lifted "out beyond." It is not all of life to live, or all of death to die. The only satisfaction I have had of late, is to know that the time is near at hand when I shall have rest eternal.

AN APPEAL.

TO THE CHURCHES!—ADVENTISTS!—STEWARDS OF THE LORD.

Brn. and Srs. of New Hampshire:—Have we done all we can, or that God requires us to do, in giving to the people of this State the last judgment warning—the gospel of the kingdom? Who can say that we have if a little more time is given us to labor? Again, how can our labors and the means God has entrusted us with as stewards, and will hold us responsible for, be best expended? We think that the success that has crowned judicious labors under Mission Tents, in this and other States, in a measure answers these questions. The command is "Go," and in thus going we carry our meeting-house with us. We think it a conceded point that many who would not under other circumstances attend our meetings, are induced to come to tent meetings.

And now, dear brethren, as the N. H. Advent Christian Conference has chosen us to hold protracted meetings, and have entrusted us with the N. H. Mission Tent, will you help us by prayers and means to save some through this instrumentality? We feel a great responsibility in this matter; will you share it with us, and then in the great harvest reap the blessing? We want to see how much can be raised and pledged, between this and the time to hold tent meetings, to carry the tent into new places. A strict account of all receipts, and how paid out, will be kept. Now, will you make one effort, and sacrifice of this world's goods, for this great and noble cause before the fires of the last day shall consume them? Let God direct. Send in your monies and pledges to the Treasurer, J. G. Smith, Farmington, N. H. Also, brethren, we want you to interest yourselves, in finding places where tent-meetings are needed, and see if land to set it upon and lumber to seat it with can be obtained, and let us know as soon as you can, so that we can make our arrangements to the best advantage, and not travel over the ground more than is necessary. We intend to secure as good help as we can to go with the tent. Remember, "God loveth a cheerful giver." And as this is to give the gospel to the poor, you can thus claim the promise in Prov. 19: 17.

A SONG OF SOLACE.

Thou sweet hand of God,
That so woundest my heart,
Thou makest me smile
While thou makest me smart.
It seems as if God
Were at ball play, and I,
The harder he strikes
The higher I fly.

I own it—He bruises,
He pierces me sore,
But the hammer and chisel
Afflict me no more.
Shall I tell you the reason?
It is that I see
The Sculptor will carve
New beauties for me.

I shrink from no suffering,
How painful soe'er,
When once I can feel
That my God is so near.
For soft on the anvil
The iron shall glow,
When the Smith with his hammer
Deals blow upon blow.

Afflictions press me hard,
But he gives patience too,
And I say to myself,
"'Tis no more than my due."
And no tone from the organ
Can swell on the breeze,
Till the organist's fingers
Press down on the keys.

So come, then, and welcome
The blow and the pain;
Without them no mortal
To heaven can attain.
For what can the sheaves
On the barn floor avail,
Till the thresher shall beat out
The chaff with his flail?

'Tis only a moment
God chastens with pain,
Joy follows on sorrow
Like sunshine on rain.
Then bear thou what God
On thy spirit shall lay;
Be dumb—but when tempted
To murmur, then pray.

LOOKING UNTO GOD.

D. K. HARGRAVES.

We are living in a time when it requires an entire subjection to God on the part of the believer, to enable him to withstand the temptations of the devil. The world is full of evil influences, iniquity abounds on every hand, Satan is working mightily to draw the saints away from the truth, knowing that his time is short. Many of his devices have an appearance of truth, and it requires a constant looking unto God, by prayer, to enable us to discern his works from those of God.

We are surrounded by those having a form of godliness, and it requires the spirit of God in the heart, to determine whether the power is there also. If we are wholly consecrated to God, having the Spirit in our hearts, being willing to be led by it, we shall not err concerning these things, for it will lead us into all truth. By it we shall be enabled to discern between light and darkness, between the workings of Satan and God.

Children of the faith, we have but a little time longer to fight Satan and his satelites; soon the warfare will be over. Let us put on the whole armor of God, looking unto him for strength to fight the battle manfully, and he will bring us off conquerors, and give us an entrance into his everlasting kingdom.

May the Lord help us to look unto him constantly, that we may receive strength at his hand.

THE SIZE OF THE ARK.

Infidels have objected to the size of the ark; have asserted that it is absurd to suppose that there could be a vessel constructed large enough to hold all the creatures that must have been placed in it, with sufficient food, it may be, for six or twelve months—water for fish, corn for four-footed animals, seed for birds, and so on. Now we will take the dimensions of the ark from the records of Moses, and calculate them on the lowest possible scale. There are two definitions given to a cubit, one that it is eighteen inches, or a foot and a half, and the other that it is twenty inches; we will take it only at the lowest. Moses states that the ark was 300 cubits long. This would make it 450 feet long, of about the length of St. Paul's cathedral, London. The breadth he states to be fifty cubits; we have it seventy five feet in breadth. He states it to be thirteen cubits high. In other words, it was as long as St. Paul's cathedral, nearly as broad and half as high.

The tonnage of the ark, according to the computation of modern carpenters, must have been 32,000 tons. The largest sized English ship (of a size altogether unimaginable to those who have never seen it) is 3,500 tons burden; so that the ark must have been equal to twenty-six first-rate ships of war, and if armed as such ships are, it would have contained beyond 18,000 men, and provisions for them for eighteen months. Buffon has asserted that all four-footed animals may be reduced to 250 pairs, and the birds to a still smaller number. On calculating, therefore, we shall find that the ark would have held more than five times the quantity of food to maintain them twelve months.—Christian Advocate.

HAS "ZION'S HERALD" GONE OVER TO ROMANISM?

The agents of anti-Christ have held high carnival in the Athens of America.

Boston has bowed down and worshiped "the beast and false prophet." A real live Cardinal has drawn the Governor, the Mayor, and any number of the mighty men of earth after him.

The hub of the universe has been "raised," and the faithful have now, after the splendid pomp and ceremony, an Archbishop to further the interests of poor trembling Pius the IXth.

A recent number of "Zion's Herald"—Methodist newspaper and advertising medium—closes an article on the ceremonies, with the following item:—

"Archbishop Williams has now an excellent reputation in our city. We congratulate him upon his new honors, and wish him a long and very useful discharge of its important duties."

I confess to a feeling of disgust at this spirit of toadyism as manifested in the apparent desire to keep the good will of the "Roman dunghill," as Martin Luther was not ashamed to call the abominations of the papacy.

Let us see how it looks. Zion's Herald, speaking for the host of followers of John Wesley, congratulates a representative of the power of the Wicked One, of whom John in Rev. 17th chapter wrote these hard but true words: "And upon her forehead was written Mystery, Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus."

"A long and very useful discharge of its exalted duties,"—not a bit of it!! Rather let us labor and pray that priestcraft in every form may come to a speedy end. Let us cry out with the fervent "Amen; come, Lord Jesus, come quickly," and sweep Pope, Cardinals, Archbishops, and all the belongings of Romish iniquity, from the face of the earth, that the meek may receive and enjoy the promised inheritance forever.

SALVATION FREE.

G. E. MERRILL.

Yes, salvation is free—free to all. If it were not, some would be unable to obtain it. But it is offered to every one without money and without price. O! so free. The invitation is, "Come." "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. . . . And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." What a privilege! The rich, the poor, the bond, the free,—all may drink. We may not only drink from the healing flood, but, like the Syrian leper, we may "wash and be clean."

Kind reader, let me exhort you to seek this free salvation.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SUNLIGHT AND HEALTH.

Many of our people seem to have the idea that sunlight is their greatest enemy. They carefully exclude its beams from their rooms, close the blinds and curtain the windows. It fades the carpets and stuffed furniture, and is a general destroyer of delicate and fashionable things. Then, too, sunlight tans the face and hands, and it is a great misfortune to suffer that, for it is fashionable to be pale and and delicate. The young damsels of the household must preserve delicacy and whiteness of their complexions, let it cost what it will, for they are in the market to secure a future husband, and it would be a pity to spoil their chances of getting a foppish, senseless and worthless vagabond; which, by the way, are rather good matches—that is, in regard to the real worth of the parties, generally one is about as worthless as the other. Sensible young men, however, are getting their eyes open, and are seeing that those pale, delicate girls, who are so plenteous in the market, make capital invalids for life, but very poor helpmates. They are perceiving that the brown-cheeked, healthy girls are really the true metal after all; and these are reared in the sunlight, and work for a living.

But weak-minded mothers will go on for some time yet excluding the sunshine from their homes, and rearing pale and sickly children. This exclusion of light is also a protection against the flies, and this is much esteemed. To be sure flies will not live in a darkened room, and they seize the first opportunity to escape; thus showing the superiority of their instinct over the deluded reason of human beings.

There are, however, very good reasons why the sunlight should be freely admitted to our houses at all times of the day. The light of the sun is very essential to the growth of vegetation. . . . A familiar example of this kind of growth is the potato sprouts found in dark cellars after warm weather comes on. These sprouts taken into the sunlight wither and die. If chemically examined they are found to contain a deadly poison, solanine. . . .

Much of the nutrition of the human body takes place through the medium of chemical changes under the direction of the vital force, and sunlight is a great promoter of these changes. It increases the vital power of the system, and promotes all healthy processes. During the darkness of the night the vital force is depressed more or less for the want of this vivifying power of the sun, and it is during the night that disease, more frequently than at other times, attacks the system. It is peculiarly the time for exacerbation of neuralgias, of the delirium of fevers, and aggravations of the cough of consumptives; all showing a lowering of the vital force dependent upon the absence of sunlight.

The consideration of the importance of sunlight to the growth of the vegetable kingdom, and its powerful influence also in the animal kingdom, will enable us better to appreciate the injuriousness of its exclusion from our homes. It also affords an explanation of why children, and young girls who are excluded from the sunlight in order to preserve their complexion of a delicate whiteness, are so feeble in health and unable to cope with the diseases and hardships of life. Persons thus excluded from the light suffer a marked lowering of their vital forces, and the proper and healthy nutrition of their bodies is interfered with.

Sir James Wylie, while physician to the Emperor of Russia, attentively studied the curative effects of light in the hospitals of St. Petersburg. He found that the number of patients who were cured in the rooms which were properly lighted was four times greater than that of those who were confined in dark rooms.

In all cities visited by the cholera, it was found that the greatest number of deaths took place in narrow streets, and in those houses having a northern exposure, where the direct rays of the sun were excluded. Persons who dwell in houses much shaded by trees, are much more subject to asthma, dropsy, scrofulous diseases, and other affections, than those whose dwellings are fully exposed to the sun. A New York merchant noticed that for years every book-keeper that came to him got sick, however healthy he appeared when he came. It occurred to him that the cause might be in the room, which was on the first floor, and from which the sun was excluded. He changed the room to the story above, where the sun freely shone in, and had no further trouble about his book-keepers getting sick.—Herald of Health.

SHALL WOMEN STAND OR SIT?

The practice of compelling girls and women to stand all day, as clerks and teachers, without the privilege of sitting, under the penalty of at least a reprimand, is being discussed by the Women's Physiological Society, of Brooklyn, and also by a large number of noble women of New York.

It is very fatiguing to men and boys. There are physiological reasons why women should not do it. Added to this is their unnatural way of supporting their clothes, fastening them about the waist, instead of making the shoulders carry their weight. The whole muscular structure is dragged down in this way. After a time the muscles lose their power to contract, and all the organs drop a little out of place, and the lower organs are crowded as far down as the bones of the pelvis will permit. It is this that gives women that tired, dragged, all-gone sensation they are all trying to remedy. Under such circumstances standing all day is an inhuman practice.

Why could not each clerk have a seat made to turn under the counter, so they could sit when they are idle? Their employers would lose nothing, and the girls and coming generations would be great gainers.

Let the humane people help agitate this subject, until the employers are wakened up to the inhumanity of the practice.—Herald of Health.

THE DATE.

The following article from St. Nicholas will doubtless be of interest to many of our readers who have long since learned the value of the saccharine subject of it as a substitute for bogus syrups and adulterated sugars:

"Dates, to us merely an occasional luxury, are to the Arab the very 'staff of life,' just as the camel is his 'ship of the desert.' The date tree, one of the large family of palms, is a native of both Asia and Africa, and will grow readily in any sandy soil where the the climate is not too cold.

"The Bedouins, or wild Arabs of the desert, who consider it beneath their dignity to sow or plant or cultivate the soil in any way, depend upon gathering the date where they can find it growing wild, but the Arabs of the plains cultivate it with great care and skill, thus improving the size and flavor of the fruit, and largely increasing the yield. In some varieties they have succeeded in doing away with the hard seed, and the so-called seedless dates, being very large and fine, are highly prized.

When ripe, the date is of a bright golden color, fragrant and luscious, and in the dry, hot countries where palms grow, no better food for morning, noon or night can be found, while one never wearies of the sweet, pulpy fruit gathered fresh from the tree. But the trees do not bear all the year round, of course, and so the Arabs make what they call date honey, using for this the juice of the ripe fruit, and those who can afford it, preserve dates fresh through the year by keeping them in close vessels covered over with this honey."—Health Reformer.

FISH BONES.

It is well known that there is much pain and danger resulting from the lodging of small fish bones in the throat. But perhaps it is not generally known that the white of an egg poured down the throat at such times gives immediate relief. The reason is obvious. Small bones, like pins and needles, often lie across the passage into the stomach, slightly adhering by the points, the egg clings to them and carries them down. If this knowledge should ever come as acceptable to any one as it did to him who asks you to publish this, when during an hour of intense anxiety of mind he saw his beloved child relieved from suffering, and prospect of a horrid death, then would the contributor and publisher be repaid a thousand fold.—Selected by C. The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

HEIR OF THE KINGDOM.

Heir of the kingdom, O why art thou sleeping?
Why dost thou slumber so near thy blest home?
Awake thee, arouse thee, and gird on thine armor;
Speed, speed, for the moments are hurrying on.

Heir of the kingdom, say, why dost thou linger?
And why weary grown when in sight of the prize?
Up and adorn thee, the Bridegroom makes ready,
O, haste to receive him, descending the skies.

Earth's mighty nations, in strife and commotion,
Are trembling with terror, and filled with dismay;
List to the sound of his chariot's loud rumbling;
Heir of the kingdom, no longer delay.

Stay not, O stay not for earth's vain allurements—
Wealth, honors, friendships are passing away;
Break the strong fetters the foe hath bound o'er thee,
Heir of the kingdom, away, O away.

Keep the eye single, the head upward lifted—
Watch for the glory of earth's coming King;
Soon o'er the mountain top morn will be breaking:
Heir of the kingdom, rejoice ye and sing!

WHAT FIRE IS IT THAT PRESERVES ITS VICTIM?

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

A fire that preserves, one would suppose would be of service to mankind, especially if its qualities could be discovered so as to be applied at a time like the present, when such disastrous conflagrations are so frequent; but as we have no knowledge of this kind of fire, nor have seen or heard of any illustration of its working from any legitimate source, we have serious doubts of its existence.

Mankind naturally fears fire of the opposite character, when not confined within due limits; for all the exhibitions witnessed (except by divine interposition), from the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah to the present time, has impressed all with the fact that the element of fire consumes—destroys—renders unserviceable—whatever is capable of being injured by it. We do not question the power of God to preserve men in the midst of fire, or any material substance, for we have examples of this in the case of the three Hebrews in Babylon, and the burning bush in the days of Moses. In the former case God rendered the element of fire inoperative upon the bodies of those three worthies, and also miraculously preserved the bush from being consumed; but the fire that went out from the Lord devoured Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, for the offence of offering strange fire unto him. So every visitation from God to wicked men by fire, has destroyed their lives, but in no instance has it preserved them.

In the great number of instances upon record of God's judgment upon men by fire, all have been executed literally. This principle holds good in the diversifications of judgments already experienced by the human family. The flood was literal; the plagues on Egypt were also literal; earthquakes, tornadoes, famines, pestilences,—every scourge or judgment of God visited upon the earth has been of this character. All has resulted in destroying life. We think it safe to follow this principle in interpreting the divine Word to the future judgment of God upon the wicked. The declarations in God's Word are profuse that set forth the nature of the punishment of the wicked at the second coming of Christ, also after the second resurrection, in which the wicked dead will come forth to be cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. As certain as the earth was once overflowed with water, and all save Noah and his family perished in the deluge; so in the fire to which the heavens and earth are now reserved will the ungodly meet their doom. The righteous are to "be recompensed in the earth," it is declared; "much more the wicked and the sinner."

As neither of these last statements have as yet been fulfilled, they must be in the future; and as it is incompatible with the clear statements of Scripture that the righteous will enjoy the dominion under the whole heaven, while at the same time the wicked will be suffering eternal torment on the earth, filled with the glory of God,—in the holy mountain where there shall be nothing to hurt nor destroy; it follows that any theory that is involved in such an absurdity must be false. The idea that the wicked are to be preserved in fire in the glorified earth to come, is a most preposterous and unscriptural supposition. The Holy Spirit, by the mouth of David, teaches us who are preserved by the Lord. Hear him: "The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy." Again: "The Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved forever; but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off."

Here the Holy Spirit sets forth the righteous as the class that are preserved, when the wicked are "cut off" and "destroyed." Throughout the 37th Psalm, and an abundance of corroborative texts in various parts of Scripture, the same great truth is most distinctly set forth. While it is true that the wicked will wail and gnash their teeth in the "furnace of fire," suffering excruciating agony, we are yet to learn that that fire will preserve them.

A recent writer, treating on Mark 9: 49—"For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt"—says: "Fire is the symbol of God's judgment—of his wrath. The 'unquenchable fire' of the previous verses is the asbestos fire. Asbestos is a mineral which fire will not consume. It is here asserted by our loving Savior that the fire will preserve its victim. Consequently it is not common fire. Every unrepentant, wicked man is destined to feel this. The fire will preserve, not save them. Every 'sacrifice' to God shall be salted with salt; i. e., shall be preserved and saved forever (verse 49); therefore teaches both a terrible and glorious truth."

We fail to discover that our Savior makes such an assertion; viz., "that the fire will preserve its victim." He says—"Every one shall be salted with fire." Murdock's translation reads—"For every thing will be salted with fire." If this latter rendering is valid, then every thing will be preserved, according to the view of this writer; but if it should be rendered "every one," and if this refers to the wicked exclusively, we think it conveys very emphatically the idea of the utter destruction of the wicked. But the baptism of fire mentioned by John the Baptist, in Matt. 3: 11 and Luke 3: 16, may be what our Lord refers to in Mark 9: 49. If so, then, according to our version, the American Bible Union trans., and Murdock's trans., that baptism of fire is to be on those that are baptized with the Holy Spirit; and thus may refer to that period when the heavens shall be on fire, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat."

While this fire is declared to result in the "perdition of ungodly men," the saints of God will survive it, being made immortal previously. And as Isaiah saith to the church—"When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." Isa. 45: 2. But the opposite to this is to be the effect upon the wicked, as we read in Ps. 97: 3—"A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about." Paul says—"Our God is a consuming fire"; and he will "consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains."

We find from these scriptures that the class that are to be preserved amid the awful scenes of the judgment are the righteous; while the wicked are to be consumed—burnt up "root and branch," and "be as though they had not been." Our Savior saith—"Every sacrifice shall be salted with salt." This evidently refers to the requirement under the law—"And every oblation of thy meat offering shalt thou season with salt; neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat offering; with all thy offerings thou shalt offer salt." Lev. 2: 13. Also, see Ezek. 43: 24. The antitypical meaning of this requirement evidently shadows forth the uncorrupt and perfect character of Christ, our great sacrifice; and also shadows forth the duty of the church of Christ to be possessed of like character, while they "present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is their reasonable service."

We will close this article in the words of Dean Goode, copied from Messiah's Herald: "Keep close to God's own Word. Let no man, call himself what he will, move you from the foundation. And amidst all the varied interpretations of that Word, keep to that which a prayerful, earnest and diligent perusal of it carries home to your conscience. When you stand before the bar of God hereafter, no dependence upon human teaching will be your vindication for not having acted upon God's Word as he gave it to you. He who allows any man to come between him and God's message to him must take the consequences of preferring man's word to God's." To this we say, Amen. We have adhered to this principle for the last thirty years, and shall endeavor to till the Lord comes from heaven to summon us to our account. And may both writer and reader be found ready for the blessed life and immortality. Amen.

SONG OF THE REDEEMED.

J. R. SMITH.

In Scripture we find many sweet songs, which were sung on very important occasions. After the miraculous deliverance of the children of Israel, and their passage through the Red Sea, we hear Miriam, the prophetess, and all the women, with timbrels and music, singing unto the Lord triumphant songs of deliverance. It was with hearts overflowing with thanksgiving to God that they exultingly sang—"O who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the mighty ones? who is like unto thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders? Sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea." This was indeed a grand and glorious triumph.

But more grand, and infinitely more glorious, will be that Apocalyptic song of deliverance which will be sung at the grand coronation day, on the morning of the resurrection, by the redeemed of God. God's sleeping saints shall then awake and sing. They are held captive now; they are under the dark dominion of death, and therefore they cannot praise the Lord; but, glory to God, the day is not far distant when the sleeping captives shall be delivered from the tyrant's power, and shall come singing unto Zion. They shall come "with songs, and with everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall forever flee away." "Their sun shall no more go down; neither shall the moon withdraw herself; for the Lord shall be their everlasting light, and the days of their mourning shall be ended." Every thing that hath breath shall then praise the Lord. "The heavens will rejoice, and the earth will be glad; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before them into singing; and all the trees of the fields shall clap their hands." Even "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose; it shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing."

O, how our hearts will bound with joy when we stand upon Mount Zion's lofty heights, among the redeemed of God, and our eyes behold the King in his beauty. Then we shall feel the everlasting arms, and be cheered by his gentle voice, and led by his own loving hand. God's dear saints, who have been hunted like beasts of prey, who have wandered in deserts and mountains and caves of the earth, fleeing from their pursuers, suffering from hunger, their tongues parched with thirst, shall hunger no more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters." God's own soft hand shall wipe away tears from off all faces. Through the dashing spray we can almost discern the beacon light that blazes on the ramparts of the eternal City, and above the roaring of the storm listen to the voice of harpers as they chant the song of Moses and the Lamb. Jesus will stand upon Mount Zion, and "we shall see him as he is," and be permitted to join in "the new song." Sweet song! song of the blessed! song of the glorified! It is a song which the angels cannot sing; none but the redeemed of God can sing that grand Apocalyptic song.

The whole family of God will be gathered; not one will be forgotten, or left behind. Redemption's song will then be sung by heaven's white-robed throng. That universal anthem of glory shall roll outward and inward, and upward and downward, until every creature which is in heaven, and all that are on the earth, and all that are under the earth, and all that are in the sea, shall be heard singing, "Blessing, and honor, and glory and power, be unto Him that sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." For thou, dear Savior, wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us kings and priests unto God; and we shall reign on the earth. Hallelujah to Jesus! Let the inhabitants of the Rock sing! Let them shout from the top of the mountains! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

HOUSE AND TABERNACLE.

C. PIKE.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—2 COR. 5: 1.

There is no passage of Scripture which has been thrown further into the fog by commentators, and by many professed ministers of the gospel, than the one cited above. It has been used by those who advocate the doctrine of the soul's immortality, as one of their strongest proof texts, to show that at the dissolution of the man the soul leaves the body and goes through the air with great velocity, and in a short time is in the presence of Jesus Christ, who is now at the right hand of the Father. It is quite common to hear them take the word tabernacle to illustrate the old body, and the word we to illustrate the soul; thus making it appear as though the body was a house, and the soul was the man dwelling inside of the same.

We listened to a contrariety sermon, not long since, founded upon the above text. The preacher in the first place asserted that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul had been believed from the earliest antiquity; and for proof he said that the Grecians had founded many of their fables upon it, and that the Indian believed it, "for he would often bury his blanket, tomahawk, and his faithful dog, thinking that possibly the soul of his departed friend would want them in the other world." We thought, were we identified with a religious sect, who could find no better proof of their position being a correct one than can be derived from Grecian fables, or from the wild and fanciful idea entertained by the savage, or from the writings of some ancient heathen philosopher, who gathered his ideas from things outside the Bible, we would at once choose (if it were to be found) a place among a people who had at least one positive "thus saith the Lord" for every fraction of their faith.

When the speaker, to whom we have alluded, made the assertion that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul had been believed from the earliest antiquity, we felt very sure that he was speaking at random, or talking upon a subject he did not fully understand. We would like very much to have him tell us where, in the five books of Moses, he finds one positive text to prove the immortality of the soul. This certainly is the oldest history extant. It is well for those who believe in the immortality of the soul that there were transmigrationists, Grecian fables, and the wild Indian; for without these they would be left without any proof of man's natural immortality. Certainly it is not to be found in the inspired Word of God.

The above evidences are not reliable. We prefer the writers of the Old and New Testaments upon which to base our hope of a future life.

We are told by good and reliable authors that "the first time the phrase 'immortal soul' occurs in a Christian work is in the Epistle to Diognetus, written about A. D. 135."—Whitmore on Immortality, p. 139. The passage in which it occurs is as follows: "The immortal soul dwelleth in a mortal tabernacle; and so do Christians dwell by the side of that which is perishable, while they wait for immortality from heaven."—Ep. to Diognetus, c. 6. It is very strange that christians have believed in the immortality of the soul from the earliest ages, while the phrase "immortal soul" does not occur in all the word of God, nor in any christian work earlier than A. D. 135. This Bro. took the position referred to above; that the tabernacle was the natural body, and at death the earthly house (this body), like the heathen's mud house, would decompose; but the soul had a house eternal in the heavens. His remarks for a while conveyed the idea of the soul leaving the old tabernacle (body) and moving into another house up in heaven. But this idea of the subject would destroy the importance of the resurrection of the old body. For, should the soul return and enter the old body at the resurrection, it would leave a body in heaven without a soul; which would cause death in heaven. Such a thing can never be.

Whether the preacher saw the absurdities surrounding his ideas we are not prepared to say; but one thing is sure: if his idea of the soul going from one body into another had been carried out, it would have been nothing more than was taught by the originator of the doctrine of the transmigration of souls—Pythagoras—who believed that they went from one body to another, and finally returned to their original state.

Without giving us any knowledge of what the heavenly house was, which was to become the home of the soul between death and the resurrection of the old body; and after relating instances foreign to his subject, he went on proving the resurrection of the old body, and said it would be the identical body which the soul would dwell in eternally. Thus the soul did not get its house at death, but at the resurrection. So, if the earthly house of the soul is our physical body, the heavenly or eternal house of the soul must be our physical body, in its resurrected, immortal state. Hence the doctrine of no real home for the soul (except the grave) between death and the resurrection remains true.

When it can be shown that the soul has a body in heaven, which will take the place of the old one at death, in which the soul is to remain through eternity, it will be time then to assert that the earthly house in 2 Cor. 5: 1 is the old physical body. Where is the theologian who dare take such a position? Should he, the doctrine of the resurrection would be virtually discarded.

We think the rendering of this text by James Macknight, D. D., together with his comment, is to the point:—"For we know that when our earthly house, which is a tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, an house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens." He says, when commenting upon this:—"Our translators have rendered this passage in the following manner: 'For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved; by this tabernacle meaning our body. But the impropriety of that interpretation will appear from the following considerations: (1) 'Our earthly house of this tabernacle' being opposed to 'the building from God,' which, according to the common translation, we are to receive when our earthly house is destroyed, if 'our earthly house' be our present mortal body, 'the building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens,' spoken of ver. 1, must by necessary consequence be our resurrection body, and we must receive it when our mortal body is dissolved; which is not true. Neither is that true which is affirmed in this verse, that our resurrection body is in heaven.

(2). If 'the building of God,' which we are to receive when the earthly house of this tabernacle is dissolved be our resurrection body, what is said, ver. 2, is not true; viz., that it is 'a house from heaven.' For the glorified body of the righteous who are dead is not to come from heaven, but from the grave. So we are told in 1 Cor. 15: 52, 53. . . . 'By interpreting this passage of the earthly and heavenly body of the saints, such a jarring of metaphors is introduced in vers. 2 and 3 as is perfectly absurd. For what idea can any one form of a tabernacle which is clothed upon with a house, and which, if it is not so clothed, the person who inhabits it will be found naked? For these reasons, I think the passage should be translated in apposition as above, and that its meaning is this: We know that when our earthly house, our house on earth, which, however magnificent and beautiful, is but a tent, compared with the building which the saints are to have from God; when this house is destroyed, together with the earth on which it is built, we have a building from God, etc. . . . This building is the city which Abraham and his sons, who were heirs with him of the promised country, looked for while they lived in tents; and of which city the builder and maker is God. Heb. 11: 10. To this city St. Paul and the other inspired writers have given the name of Jerusalem—New Jerusalem—the city of the living God."—Macknight on the Epistles.

The above is very plain, and by putting the two nouns, earth and tabernacle (or tent), in the same case (which would read house, which is a tent, just as verse 5, "who hath given us the earnest of the Spirit," means "given us the earnest which is the Spirit"), it makes all plain with Christ's promise made to his disciples, as recorded in John 14: 2, 3, which reads as follows: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

The reader cannot fail to see the harmony between Christ and Paul. The latter in the text refers to the time when the saint bids farewell to his earthly tent (or house), and the earth in its present state; while the former brings to view, as an encouragement to all saints, the fact that when he "BRINGS his REWARD WITH HIM" at his second appearing, each saint shall have a mansion (or house) which shall last eternally. This house will be from heaven; and hence it is called a "building from God; a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens. This house is in heaven now; but as we consult John the Revelator, we hear him exclaiming—"I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven. . . . And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men; and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." "But yet, in this tent [earthly, temporary house] we groan, earnestly desiring to go permanently into our habitation which is heavenly."—Macknight. When our houses can protect us no longer from the sweeping tornadoes, and when the earth is about to be waapped in its fiery winding sheet, then shall we with gladness enter our eternal house, and mortality will be swallowed up of life.

UNBELIEF OF PRETENDED SCIENCE IN REFERENCE TO THE LORD'S SECOND COMING.

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." 2 PETER 3: 3, 4.

In modern times there has arisen a school of thought which turns the reasoning of the scoffer into an axiom of pretended science, and makes the constancy of the laws of nature its plea for setting aside the great hope of the christian church, and denying the solemn certainties of the second coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment.

The creed of the scoffer implies that the laws of nature exist of themselves, without the fact of a supreme Lawgiver, and that all things continue and must continue as they have been from the creation, because there is no power capable of suspending or reversing the firm and settled course of things. Ungodly science will clothe its icy creed with the flowers of fancy and speak elegantly of a power which

"Warms in the sun; refreshes in the breeze;
Glows in the stars, and blossoms in the trees;
Lives through all life; extends through all extent;
Spreads undivided; operates unspent."

But belief in a living God is rejected. Now, it is plain that the scientific theory, that the course of nature admits of no disturbance, is fatal to the reception of those great doctrines which Scripture prophecy proclaims. . . . The maxims of pretended science, and the lively hope of the Lord's coming, cannot dwell together in the same heart.

But since perverted science will dare to set itself up against the revealed warnings of Jehovah, the apostle ventures boldly into her domain, wrests her own weapons from her puny grasp, and turns them into arrows to pierce the conscience, and alarm the stout-hearted sinner into repentance and godly fear. The heavens and the earth which now are, are "stored with fire," he tells us, "against a day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." The agencies do not require to be created, which the Almighty will employ, to clear the earth from the dominion of evil, and introduce the promised kingdom of righteousness and peace. From Adam to Noah the waters were already in existence, by which the flood was brought on the world of the ungodly, and when once the signal was given, and the windows of heaven were opened, and the fountains of the great deep broken up, they came forth spontaneously to do the bidding of Him who had treasured them against the time of judgment.

And so also, from Noah until now, the heavens and the earth are already stored with treasures of fire, which are ready to execute the threatenings, and to fulfil the counsel of the Almighty.

"What is creation else
But a capacious reservoir of means,
Wrought by His will, and ready for his use?"

What is the secret of the two main discoveries which have stamped their character on the present age of advanced science and eager enterprise?

LATENT HEAT AND LATENT ELECTRICITY.

But these watchwords of science, the talisman of her power, by which she has wrought wonders, suggest a deeper meaning to thoughtful ears. All creation, yes, every drop of water, as science in her triumphs is compelled to bear witness, is stored with treasures of secret fire, and one of her latest conclusions, after full research, is that the hidden electricity of each single drop of rain is equal to the production of a violent thunder-storm.

All creation, then, down to each dew-drop and blade of grass, is stored with the hidden fire of electricity; and it needs but one touch from the finger of the Almighty, one secret, imperceptible change of its laws, or even perhaps, without a change of law, some foreseen and foreappointed accumulation of its hidden powers, to produce a tempest of fire that would consume the whole human race, and completely change all the physical features of the planet on which we live. It is a childish science which treats such a catastrophe as impossible and incredible. It is a proud and stout-hearted folly, which having merely wetted its feet in the spray of the great ocean of natural laws, pretends to have sounded their unfathomable depths, and dares, in the confidence of its own foresight, to reject the solemn warnings of a judgment to come.

But perhaps some may urge that the long period which has elapsed since these warnings were given, and given as of an event near at hand, may well abate our confidence in their truth, and justify the doubting inquiry—"Where is the promise of his coming?" Have not sixty generations passed away with no trace of Messiah's return, though the first generation of believers were taught to expect it in their own lifetime. Here, too, the apostle supplies us with an answer. The length of the delay confirms, instead of weakening, the certainty of the judgment.

This is the time of God's long-suffering. And just as, in the history of Joseph, seven years of plenty were purposely given, because the famine that would follow would be intense and severe, so also it is part of the wisdom of God, that a judgment, solemn beyond all example, should be introduced by the richest, fullest, and most enduring display of grace and forbearance towards sinners. This is the true secret of the calm constancy of the laws of nature, and the silent course of sixty generations of mankind, since the Son of God returned to the bosom of the Father from which he came.

This long-suffering of God is our salvation. It is by this long delay that his elect are gathered in, and the message of his gospel is sent to the utmost bounds of the human family. But the time will come when the voice will go forth from the throne in heaven, saying, "It is done," and the mysterious delays of grace be followed by the hour of open judgment. (Revelation 16).

We have many signs around us which may well lead us to the conclusion that this judgment, so long delayed, is near at hand. The gospel is once more being preached in all the world, for a witness to all nations. The fig-tree begins to blossom, in the new awakening among the Jewish people, and the numerous converts who have been gathered from among them into the fold of Christ. Matt. 24: 14, 32, 33.

The moral conflict which has been carried on for ages, first between Christianity and heathen idolatry, Popery and Mohammedanism—enemies without, and secret corruption within—is passing over into the East again. And if the evil passions of mankind come to be once more unchained after a long peace, by the sounds of war, who can tell what bitter fruits of a rejected gospel may reveal themselves in these last days of Gentile dominion? In our own favored nation we hear almost daily the sorrowful report of hateful crimes, that should make us blush with shame, and tremble with fear, lest Sodom itself should rise against us in judgment, to condemn our more aggravated abuse of mercy.

And if once the hateful infection of infidelity should spread more widely through all christian lands, so that the gospel be rejected with scorn by sensual profligates and covetous oppressors, or philosophical unbelievers, and Christianity itself be regarded as a worn-out and worthless thing, a secret voice will then be addressed by the God of holiness to his waiting people, "Come, my people, enter into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the world for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Isaiah 26: 20, 21.

How solemn is this certainty of a judgment to come, when once we realize the true force of the divine warning! The laws of nature, though sure and constant, are not so sure and unchangeable as that perfection of the Almighty Lord of providence which involves the moral necessity of a coming day of retribution. The stars in their silent course are measuring out, one by one, the appointed hours of merciful delay. The heavens and earth, which are now, are stored with treasures of fire, against the season when the Lord shall come out of his secret hiding place, and call to the heavens and to the earth, that he may judge his people.

Beyond it there is a vista of eternal bliss and glory to all the children of God, and ages of recovered beauty and holiness to our fallen world. But before that glory can dawn, there is a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, and strange and fearful judgment to the workers of iniquity. O how needful to be sheltered in that hour, and to have the blood of the true Passover sprinkled upon the lintels of our hearts, that the destroying angel may pass by. Prophets, long ago, have trembled in themselves, that they might rest in the day of trouble.

But an ark of mercy is now open before us. In Christ there is safety and full deliverance. Whosoever believeth in him shall not be confounded. Whoever builds on this foundation is securely sheltered, and safe for eternity. The rain may descend, the winds may blow, the floods may rise and beat on that house, but it cannot fall, for it is founded on the rock. May we build on this Rock of ages, instead of relying on the vain, delusive promises of science, falsely so called, the presumptuous ignorance of the scorner, which sets itself in array against the truth of God, and tells us that all things must continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. May we listen for the approach of the true King and Judge, and catch the distant sound of his returning chariot wheels.

Amidst wars and rumors of wars, and the fermenting changes of a sinful world that is never at rest, but wearies itself for very vanity, may we catch the dawning beams of the day-spring that will soon visit the earth once more, and when these things begin to come to pass, "look up and lift up our heads, because our redemption is drawing nigh."—Prof. Birks, of Trinity College, Cambridge, Eng.—Messiah's Herald.

ON THE GOVERNMENT OF OUR THOUGHTS.

SELECTED BY T. FOOTE.

A multitude of cases occur, in which we are no less accountable for what we think, than for what we do. As, first, when the introduction of any train of thought depends upon ourselves, and is our volnntary act, by turning our attention toward such objects, awakening such passions, or engaging in such employments, as we know must give a peculiar determination to our thoughts.

Next when thoughts, by whatever accident they may have been originally suggested, are indulged with deliberation and complacency. Though the mind has been passive in their reception, and therefore free from blame, yet, if it be active in their continuance, the guilt becomes its own. They may have intruded at first, like unbidden guests; but if, when entered, they are made welcome, and kindly entertained, the case is the same as if they had been invited from the beginning.

If we are accountable to God for thoughts either voluntarily introduced, or deliberately indulged, we are no less so in the last place, for those which find admittance into our hearts from supine negligence, from total relaxation of attention, from allowing our imagination to rove with entire license, "like the eyes of the fool, toward the end of the earth." Our minds are in this case, thrown open to folly and vanity. They are prostituted to every evil thing which pleases to take possession. The consequences must all be charged to our account; and in vain we plead excuse from human infirmity. Hence it appears that the great object at which we are to aim in governing our thoughts, is, to take the most effectual measures for preventing the introduction of such as are sinful; and for hastening their expulsion, if they shall have introduced themselves without consent of the will.

But when we descend into our breasts, and examine how far we have studied to keep this object in view, who can tell "how oft he hath offended?" In no article of religion or morals are men more culpably remiss, than in the unrestrained indulgence they give to fancy; and that too, for the most part, without remorse. Since the time that reason began to assert her powers, thought, during our waking hours, has been active in every breast, without a moment's suspension or pause.

The current of ideas has been always flowing. The wheels of the spiritual engine have circulated with perpetual motion. Let me ask, what has been the fruit of this incessant activity, with the greater part of mankind? Of the innumerable hours that have been employed in thought, how few are marked with any permament or useful effect? How many have passed away in idle dreams, or have been abandoned to anxious, discontented musings, to unsocial and malignant passions, or to irregular and criminal desires?

Had I power to lay open that storehouse of iniquity which the hearts of too many conceal; could I draw out and read to them a list of all the imaginations they have desired, and all the passions they have indulged in secret, what a picture of men should I present to themselves! What crimes would they appear to have perpetrated in secresy, which to their most intimate companions they durst not reveal. Even when men imagine their thoughts to be innocently employed, they too commonly suffer them to run out into extravagant imaginations, and chimerical plans of what they would wish to attain, or choose to be, if they could frame the course of things according to their desire.

Though such employments of fancy come not under the same description with those which are criminal, yet wholly unblamable they seldom are.

Besides the waste of time which they occasion, and the misapplication which they indicate of those intellectual powers which were given us for much nobler purposes, such romantic speculations lead us always into the neighborhood of forbidden regions. They place us on dangerous ground. They are for the most part, connected with some one bad passion; and they always nourish a giddy and frivolous turn of thought. They unfit the mind for applying with vigor to rational pursuits, or for acquiescing in sober plans of conduct. From that ideal world in which it allows itself to dwell, it returns to the commerce of men unbent and relaxed, sickly and tainted, averse to discharging the duties, and sometimes disqualified even for relishing the pleasures of ordinary life.

LOVE.—"Get the heart, and you have got the man." Love "makes drudgery divine." Love cannot help itself; it outruns and leaves law far behind. The question is not, What must I do? but, What may I do? In grieving its object love grieves itself. This is the secret spring of the believer's actions, which makes him often pass in the world as an enthusiast. Love will stop at nothing; it takes up its cross and travels after its object over every mountain and hill of difficulty. It was this that strengthened Mary when the soldier quaked with fear. It was this that kept her hovering round the sepulchre when all the disciples went to their own homes. Love desires all to be partakers of its own bliss; it overleaps human opinion; it runs on with an unceasing cry, "What shall I render for such benefits?" "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

AS ONE candle cannot light another unless itself be lighted, no more can a minister inflame others with the love of God if he be void of it.

THE KINGS SHALL REFUSE TO DRINK.

"And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Ye shall certainly drink."—JER. 25:28.

An ancient mode of executing capital punishment upon criminals was to cause them to drink a cup of poison, thus producing death. God in several passages has represented the overthrow and destruction of the wicked with his judgments by the figure of this execution. Jeremiah, in his 25th chapter, presents the last terrible battle, in which all the kingdoms on the face of the earth shall be destroyed. He represents their destruction, typically, by the overthrow of Babylon and Jerusalem.

Babylon was overthrown according to the forewarnings God had given, and this resulted in the deliverance of his people. So it was in the destruction of Jerusalem. It occurred as God had said, and his people were saved by taking heed to his fore warnings.

In those cases the governments labored to delay or prevent the threatened calamities; but at the time appointed were compelled to drink the cup of national death. So it will be with all the nations upon the earth when the Apocalyptic Babylon shall come to the appointed time for the antitypical judgments to be mingled, when she must drink, and all the nations, the poison of eternal death.

God did not bring his appointed judgments upon those nations and cities without first witnessing or publishing to them his purposes to overwhelm them with ruin for their persistent rebellion against him. So it must be at the end of Roman rule. The gospel of the kingdom must be published to all nations, "as a witness" that their period of judgment has come, and then the "end" of the gospel age, "shall come."

The striking figure of the cup of death in the text is evidently parallel with or borrowed from the seventy-fifth Psalm. The Psalmist first expresses "thanks" "that thy name is near;" that is, God is "near" as the Judge and Ruler of the world, and gives us evidence that he is near. "Thy wondrous works declare;" that is, what he is doing in the world are signs that he is near, as Judge; for he says,—"When I shall receive the congregation (of all nations. Matt. 25:32) I will judge uprightly."

He then expresses what shall take place in connection with his judging the people. The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved; that is, the same fire which dissolves the earth will dissolve or burn up the wicked. See 2 Pet. 3:7, 10. He then adds—"I bare up the pillars,"—maintain the foundation of it, so as to perpetuate it; but in a renewed—in a more glorified state.

He continues the prophetic strain: "I said unto the fools, deal not foolishly; and to the wicked, Lift not up the horn." Horn signifies regal, kingly power; and the passage shows that when the Judge is "near," there will be a foolish strife between certain claimants, who shall set the "horn on high," or exercise supreme, civil power on the earth. But God rebukes each party for their unyielding claims to this power, and says—"Speak not with a stiff neck." Do not contend as if you had a divine, immutable right to it; "for promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south; but God is Judge; he putteth down one, and setteth up another."

The Judge, when he comes, will put down all the factious Romans, striving for the supreme rulership of the world, and will exalt the heavenly Heir—David's Son—as earth's eternal Ruler.

He then expresses the manner of putting down these foolish claimants to earthly power, by using the figure of the cup, as in the text, and says: "For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture; and he poureth out of the same; but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them."

This passage cannot apply to God's judgments, that only come on a city or nation, but only to that one when "all the wicked of the earth" are punished; consequently can apply to none but the last judgment. To show that this is the emphatic point, he repeats it, and says—"All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted."

All the contending parties, arming and preparing to exalt themselves, or to maintain themselves in their exaltation of supreme civil power, will be put down; not by human agencies used by human skill, but by drinking God's cup of death in his last judgment. Jeremiah evidently applies the symbol to the same scenes, for he gives it the same universal application. He says—"And all the kings of the north, far and near, one with another, and all the kingdoms of the world, which are upon the face of the earth: and the king of Sheshach shall drink after them." Again he says—"For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city, which is called by my name, and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished; for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the Lord of hosts." Vs. 29.

Here Jerusalem and the Jewish nation is presented, because it was a typical city and nation; and this typical, exterminating judgment "begins" there, because the type must precede the antitype. The Gentile nations have gloried in the fact, as the prophets intimate, that they were "utterly unpunished" by the sword which God called to punish Jerusalem for rejecting Christ at his first advent; but God shows that they will not escape unpunished, for they will all be as guilty of rejecting Christ in his second advent as were the Jews in his first advent; and, therefore, shall all the wicked inhabitants of the earth drink, and wring out the dregs—receive the full contents—of this fatal cup.

He then, lest there might be some misunderstanding of the terrible scenes, gives a brief detailed account of the effect of the cup upon the nations, and says:—

"A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth: for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations; he will plead with all flesh: he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground. Howl, ye shepherds, and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye principal of the flock; for the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel. And the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape. A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard: for the Lord hath spoiled their pasture. And the peaceable habitations are cut down, because of the fierce anger of the Lord." Vs. 31–37.

In this startling description of the scenes resulting from drinking this judgment cup, the nations are not only involved in the terrific scene, but the church is there also; for the shepherds—priests—are made to howl, and wallow themselves "in the ashes," because the "Lord had spoiled their pasture."

It is a remarkable fact that, in harmony with all these predictions, there is a fierce controversy now going on between the nations, civil governments, and the church, on the question of who shall be exalted to supreme power to govern the world as did Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Alexander and Cæsar.

The Revelator, we think, presents the same idea, that the struggle, introductory to the last battle, will be a fierce contention between the kings and church, when he says—"And the ten horns (kingdoms) which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore (church), and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire. . . . And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

This passage presents the same terrible conflict in which the nations and church are also engaged, contending for civil power. The church is represented as formerly reigning over the kings of the earth; but in this last struggle they are shown to be robbing the church of supremacy and glory, and in the final issue will "burn"—utterly destroy her. Reader, do you fail to see that the two classes have passed through, and are in exactly these conditions to-day? Did not the Roman church reign over the kings for ages? and are not the kings triumphing over her now in a fearful conflict upon the question of who shall reign as supreme arbiter of the political world—the Pope or the kings? Is not this the great question of the age, and threatening a general war? All must answer it is so. Then the Word of God is true in its predictions, and these events, of world-wide interest, clearly indicate where we are in the march of human progress.

Another clearly defined feature of this subject is, the kings will see the coming death struggle, and fear it, so that they will make great efforts to repel the cup, and thus prolong the time of delay before drinking. These will be their very last national efforts before the great bloody scene will commence.

The kings are now making just such an effort, which certainly seems to meet the demand of the prophecy. A few statements of facts from well informed authors will give the present position of the great powers. An editor of the Paris Moniture, May 17th, in an editorial referring to the course taken by the British Government during the recent war alarm, says: "England, by raising her voice in favor of peace, has naturally recovered her just authority and influence in Continental affairs, and the present ministry has acquired a degree of strength and power which will procure for it the grateful respect of Europe."

The London Times, May 18th, says: "A special dispatch from Berlin says while critical events were apprehended, Russia, Austria, England and Italy offered to mediate between Germany and France. It is supposed that the Russian propositions to Germany were accompanied by offers of eventual support."

The New York Times, in an editorial upon the same subject, says—"There can be very little doubt that Europe has once more been upon the brink of war—a war which would inevitably have dragged within its vortex nearly every one of the great powers. Russia and England together have temporarily managed to preserve the peace, but that the train was already laid by Bismarck, and the match about to be applied, there is no room for question. . . . It has been thought that Russia wants India, but if she does, the chances are ten to one that she will never get it. But, at any rate, she certainly is not going to try just at present. And therefore she can with perfect consistency act with England in maintaining the peace of Europe. It is probable that the effort will be successful for a time, but the great struggle is only deferred. France will constantly be growing more and more prepared for it; and Germany less and less so. Such are plainly the facts, and it will answer no good purpose to deny or conceal them. If Bismarck is foiled for the moment, we may rest assured that it is only for the moment, and that the new 'irrepressible conflict' will sooner or later break out again."

When these kings, according to the Word of God, "refuse to drink," and thus delay the irrepressible conflict," the world breathes freer; but it is only a brief delay before the awful end of human governments will come. May God save us from drinking the contents of this deadly cup. J. C.

THE LABOR WAR.

The following editorial from the N. Y. Times truly expresses the smothered war spirit which is now breaking forth between laborers and capitalists all over the world; and unless immediately suppressed must culminate in a terrible scene of blood and destruction. J. C.

"The intimidation and violence which have marked the conduct of the miners' strike in Pennsylvania should be sternly repressed, if the whole military force of the State is needed for the task. The right of a working man to sell his labor on his own terms should be as inalienable as his right to dispose of anything which he has legally earned. It vitally concerns the future of this country as a whole, and of its mining and manufacturing districts in particular, that it should cease to be possible to establish any such system of terrorism over labor as now prevails in a portion of the anthracite coal region. On the other hand, the gross outrages against law and order perpetrated by the miners need not shut our eyes to the very ungracious and uncompromising spirit exhibited by the operators. There is neither sense nor justice in refusing to accede to the request of the men for proof that the state of the market will not permit the operators to grant the increase asked for. This method of approaching the question is the very basis of the principle of arbitration, and unless so obvious a line of argument can be adopted on both sides, there can be no possible escape from the brute force of the settlement by strikes. The English coal-owners, who are not remarkable for considerate treatment of their men, have never refused to allow an inspection of their books for the purpose of demonstrating that they could not afford an increase, or that they were right in seeking to enforce a reduction of wages."

HOMEWARD BOUND.

Once more we are able to say, "homeward bound" from the Pacific coast. We arrived in San Francisco Saturday evening, Nov. 2d, 1874, and left Monday morning, May 3d, 1875. The weather seemed as warm when we departed as in July in New England. The extensive wheat farms looked promising, and a large portion of the wheat is headed, and past the point of failure. The flower-painted fields are as beautiful as ever, presenting a charming view to the traveler. In some places the wheat crop will be a failure for want of sufficient rain.

A heavy tide of emigrants is settling in upon California. During the past year, between thirty and forty thousand have arrived, and it is thought a hundred thousand will come in the next twelve months. No doubt many of them will have hard times at first, but those who can obtain land for farming purposes, and are industrious, will soon secure a comfortable living. Most of those who go into mining districts may expect to continue poor, as the mines are now owned and run by rich companies, so that the poor man can only get day wages. We learn that the mines are already overstocked with workmen; hence the emigrants who go there to get employment are sadly disappointed. The Californians have formed associations to assist the emigrants on their arrival, in finding suitable homes. This is a step in the right direction.

When we arrived on our homeward trip at Sacramento, we were glad to meet at the depot Bro. G. W. Ficks, and Damon Nichols, who are preaching in that city and elsewhere the gospel of the kingdom. They are promising young men, who love Jesus and his Word. Bro. Nichols has a brother in Sacramento, who is also preaching the same good news. Thus the truth is being spread, and many are rejoicing in the results. There are a number in that city who love the coming of Jesus,—and are not ashamed of their hope.

Leaving Sacramento, we again began to climb the Sierra Nevada mountains, justly noted for their wild, romantic, and grand scenery. Mountains on mountains are piled till their tops rise among the summer snows, while canons, or ravines, sink to alarming depths below, where the rivers of snow waters flow in their serpentine way to supply the miner, as he washes the golden earth for hidden treasures. It is truly marvelous to see what an amount of dirt has been removed by the miners in their search for gold. Should they seek as diligently for the heavenly treasures to be found in Christ, their salvation would be secured, but instead of this, they strive for the temporal, and neglect the eternal.

After passing the mountains, we come to the plains between the Humboldt mountains, watered by the Humboldt river. We were much annoyed by dust between Humboldt and battle mountain. The latter place has been the stronghold of gamblers and pickpockets; but an effective law has been recently passed in the Nevada Legislature against gambling, which has put a stop to it at Battle mountains, and other places in the State, to the joy of all good people, and comfort of travelers.

In this section may be found the Shoshone Indians, who gather about the depots on the arrival of the trains, to receive gifts of food from the passengers. This tribe now numbers about three thousand persons. They are scattered over the eastern part of Nevada. They wander about, without homes, or head quarters. They formerly lived by plunder, robbery and murder, but since the opening of the railroad, they have not dared to continue such work. The Shoshones are brave in a fight, but very treacherous. They now live by hunting and fishing. They are polygamists, and punish with death their unfaithful wives. They are tall, tawny, straight, muscular, having an eagle eye, and a beaked nose. Their hair is long, black and glossy, often decked with brilliant feathers. Their leaders wear silver ornaments in their nose and ears, and silver bands and bracelets on their arms, wrists and ankles. Their buckskin hunting suits are gaily trimmed; their belt and moccasins are abundantly flowered with colored beads, and when the chief's face is covered with war paint, his crimson blanket wrapped about his manly figure, and with quiver, bow and tomahawk, he presents a commanding appearance, that would challenge the respect of "pale faces."

The Indian language is highly figurative. When referring to the moon, he calls it "the eye of the night;" the wind he calls "the whisper of the Great Spirit," and so on. Their words are few, and thoughts remarkably condensed. They never forget an act of kindness, and can also remember an injury. The common Indian is quite different, and is far from being at all inviting in his appearance and manners. He is indeed an object of pity, if not of contempt.

When we arrived at Ogden, we fell in company with an intelligent Mormon, from Salt Lake City. He formerly belonged to the Church of England. After he became a Mormon, he labored among the Waldenses in Italy, and in other parts of Europe, trying to persuade the people to embrace the Mormon faith. He considers the Book of Mormon as truly inspired as the Bible, and accepts it as of the same authority; so do the Mormons generally. They believe there are three classes, or degrees, of saved ones, and a few who will be utterly destroyed, and cease to exist as conscious beings. They believe in a "spirit world," where some are fitted up after death; that man has an immortal soul, the size of his body, which leaves him at death, to live in "the spirit land." This is the same as held by the Spiritualists. Several of the Mormons have become open and avowed Spiritualists at Salt Lake. Should the Mormons give up their belief in the immortality of the soul, their system would fall to the ground, as would every false system of religion, when stripped of this false dogma, which originated with Satan, and has been his pet hobby since he announced it to Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden, when he contradicted the Lord, and said man should "not" die. Gen. 3:4.

We have great reason to thank the Lord that this noted lie of Satan has finally been fully exposed, and is now being rejected by thousands of holy men and women, on both continents. We think any one who will carefully examine the Bible on this subject, will be satisfied that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is not taught in the sacred Scriptures, therefore, it is not a Bible doctrine.

We had a very pleasant interview on the cars with Bro. Hunter Corbett, from Chefoo, China. He is a Chinese missionary, who has spent many years in China, and is familiar with the Chinese language. We found him a true christian of rich experience. After a visit to his friends in the States, he intends to return and spend the rest of his days in leading the Chinese people to Christ. He gave us interesting facts in relation to the Chinese, which we have not time or space to mention. He said that in one province of some twenty-nine million of people, nearly all had heard about Jesus as a Savior, but it is difficult to persuade them to give up their religion. Those who do so are often bitterly persecuted; but the persecution is generally borne with a true christian spirit, thus showing they are thoroughly converted. The missionaries are now protected by the government, so that they can work to better advantage than in former years. Still they are in danger from mobs. Bro. Corbett has been frequently abused. It is usually brought about by false stories concerning the missionaries, which if true would make them to be very wicked men, and they persecute them on the ground that the stories are true. Such has ever been Satan's mode of attack upon the true disciples of Christ, in all countries, even to this day.

While passing through the rich farming districts in Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, one will be surprised to see the great correspondence between the western States and California. There is this difference in California, they do the same work in November, December, and January, that is done in the western States in May; that is, they plough their land, and sow their wheat. In the West the present season is late. They are now (May 8th) just well begun at their ploughing. The soil in California, Nebraska, Iowa, and Illinois, is very similar.

Here we close. We are now nearing Chicago, having had a pleasant trip, thus far, across the continent. The weather has been warm all the way. We have needed no fire, and most of the way it has been pleasant to have the windows open. Those traveling between Chicago and Omaha will be specially pleased with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy route. The speed is rapid, the cars excellent, the road bed smooth, and the conductors gentlemanly.

We arrived in Chicago Saturday P. M., May 8th, feeling fresh, and ready for work. We found Bro. F. Burr, editor of the Advent Christian Times, in good health, and resting sweetly in Jesus. He is a true man, and worthy of the confidence of all christain people. The Times is an excellent paper, and deserves the hearty support of those who wish a good religious paper. On Lord's Day, May 9th, we had excellent meetings in the Green Street Tabernable. M. G.

THE CAUSE IN CALIFORNIA.

We have now spent the last five winters in California, holding meetings in San Francisco, Sacramento, San Jose, Santa Clara, Vallejo, Stockton, Healdsburg, Nevada, Napa, and Petaluma. During the present visit, we have labored in twenty different churches, and become acquainted with some thirty of the principal ministers on the coast, from whose minds a large amount of prejudice has been removed. They have finally become satisfied that one may believe in the speedy coming of Christ, which some of them believe, the sleep of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked, and at the same time love the Lord with all the heart. We found they had some very wild notions concerning our views of the Scriptures, both in relation to doctrine and practice.

Never before has there been so wide a door open for us in California, as at the present time. We think more has been accomplished the past season, than during any other visit, excepting the first. Before we got through with our meetings the first winter, the ministers began to build up walls to keep their members away, and succeeded largely in accomplishing their object. Now their confidence has been gained, and there are many in the different churches, who believe the glorious truths for which we had been despised, and shut out of their places of worship. A happy change has taken place, and we expect many more will embrace the blessed hope. Honest hearts are inquiring for light on these special subjects. There are strong men in the churches who believe as we do on the nature and destiny of man, who do not hesitate to express their views, on proper occasions.

During the present visit, a large number have been added to our list of christian friends, whom we expect to meet when the saints are gathered home. Our union is in Christ, rather than creeds. We have not compromised a particle of truth for the sake of a union, but have borne with each other in kindness, hoping, ere long, to "see eye to eye." We have found a stronger cord of union than a theological basis, which is the love of God shed abroad in the heart. This bond is ever abiding and growing stronger. It is peculiar to the family of Christ. It tolerates honest differences of opinion, when Jesus is the centre of affection.

When we review the scenes of the past few months, they afford pleasing emotions. There have been some buffetings of Satan, but the sweet peace of God has been perpetual, without a moment's interruption. It has been greater sometimes than others, but has been constantly flowing. Praise the Lord for "perfect peace." We can truly say, "Jesus is all in all." He is indeed a precious friend.

We never felt better satisfied that his glorious coming is near at hand, than at the present time. The signs keep on increasing in favor of the nearness of this great event. We long for the opening of the glad day, when we can behold the King in his beauty.

"Come and reign, come and reign,
Jesus, on thy throne."

A DEFINITION OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL.—In a volume of gospel sermons, so called, published in New York, without the owner's name, is one sermon on the value of the soul. In defining the soul the writer says: "The soul, what is it? It is a simple substance, without form or parts. It has no outside, no inside, no length, no breadth; the body may be blown into a thousand parts, and the soul remain unhurt." Let him who can, give a better definition of nothing. J. S. WHITE.

INCREASE OF CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES.—The Christian Union says:—

"The Pope has appointed seven new bishops for his church in this country, and has raised the dioceses of Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, and Santa Fe to the grade of archdioceses. The Boston diocese will probably include the New England States, where Catholicism has grown quite rapidly within forty or fifty years. In 1825 there was one priest in Massachusetts, one in Maine, and one in New Hampshire. In 1835 there were in New England twenty-seven priests and twenty-two Catholic churches. In 1844 the number of Catholics in New England was about sixty thousand, and there were thirty priests and thirty-seven churches. In 1875 there are about one million of catholics, with one archbishop, five bishops, four hundred and forty-one priests, and four hundred and thirty-two churches."—Advent Review.

BISHOP HAVEN estimates the wealth of the Methodist Episcopal denomination as at least one thousand millions of dollars.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. Vos.

Dear Brn. in Christ:—I will employ the few leisure moments I have this morning in writing you a few lines, which I hope will meet you enjoying the Lord's best blessings.

I am still by the grace of God in the work of the blessed Master. I have been laboring most part of the time this winter in Muskegon county, at White River township and vicinity, among the German brethren; and the good Lord has blessed my labors. Yes, praise be to his holy name, my feeble efforts have not been in vain.

Those Germans were first, for the greatest part, members of the German Baptist Church, but have come over to the whole truth, as it is revealed in God's never erring Word. They have cast the fables of man overboard, including their immortal soulism, and are now looking for that blessed hope, and glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. A great work has been done among them. Many others, who were yet in the broad way to death, have realized their lost condition, cried for mercy and obtained it; have put on Christ by baptism, and are now abstaining from the works of darkness, and walking in newness of life. They are a poor people in the goods of this world, but rich in faith, standing out boldly for God and the truth.

I had the strongest opposition there I ever had; was called a preacher of the doctrine of devils, and a man who came to deceive the people. I have gladly borne it all, praying for my enemies, while their ministers prayed to the Lord to protect their flock, for the devil had come among them. I suppose I was that very devil. I was present and heard it, and prayed in silence, Father, forgive them, they know not what they do. I know that if I would reign with Christ, I must also suffer with him. If they called the master of the house Beelzebub, will they not much more those of his household?

The Baptist minister, instead of coming to hear, was standing far off, firing his darts at me, sending warnings around to the people not to go near our meetings, as we were worse than infidels. At first the people were afraid; but after some had been there once, they began to say, There is truth in what that man says. He has the Bible, and it does not seem to be so dangerous after all to go and hear him. When the Baptist minister found that he could not stop the people from coming, he sent round to his brother preachers to come and help him. He said the church was in danger of apostatizing, and they should come and help him prove the falsity of the Advent doctrine. Only one came; and when they had their meeting I went to hear what they had to say. But, to my surprise, the Advent doctrine was never touched; for reasons I suppose best known to themselves.

In Sheridan Co., doors have been opened for me, and by the blessing of the Lord some of them have given up their hope of reward at death, and expect it when Jesus shall come again the second time, without sin, unto salvation; and are now looking for the speedy fulfillment of that blessed hope.

I do not write this with the desire to show what great work I have done. I do not believe in sounding my own trumpet. The glory belongs to my heavenly Father, and to him be all the praise given. Truly it is good to work for Jesus. I hope to do it faithfully, the Lord helping me, until my change comes, which I hope will be very soon. But while it is called to-day, I must work, for the night cometh when no man can work. The end is at hand. May our work be done.

Dear Brn., I wish to go on in the great work of the blessed Master. I have lately heard of an opening in Minnesota, where there is a new settlement of Germans. They have no preaching of any kind. I would like to go to them, the Lord willing, and sound the warning cry, that they may prepare to meet their God, while the Judge stands before the door. Time is short, and what is done must be done quickly. Redemption's day draws nigh. The child of God will soon receive his reward; but what of those who are yet without hope? If the way should be opened for me, and the Lord willing, I would request the Mission Society to give me a helping hand, as they have done in the past, so that I may be enabled to go on.

White River Tp., Muskegon Co., Mich.

From Bro. G. A. Streeter.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—As I took up the Crisis I saw that Bro. Boutell was very sick, and his work most done. My heart was made sad to think that the old soldiers were falling; for there never was a time when the church needed strength and help, by advice and encouragement, as now. Those who have had experience in the war, who have seen the way the enemy makes his attacks, have met him on the field, have conquered, and know all about him;—these old veterans cannot well be spared. The church needs pillars that are sound and strong, in order to stand the storm and trials of these last perilous days. My prayer is that God would spare them, if only to sit in the door and give the signals. "Young men for war, but old men for counsel." Young men are apt to think that they can get along alone; but experience proves their error. Young preachers, let us heed the old soldiers, who are true; those who have come up covered with scars, and whom Jesus has defended. Do not despise the old pilgrims. Do not think you know it all. Much can be learned by counsel. You may think me out of place in this, but my observation and experience have taught me.

Church of the living God, pray for your preachers, young and old; give them a place in your sympathies and churches. Encourage their poor, lone, tired hearts. God bless all, is my prayer. We are nearing home. We are entering the port. The way is dangerous. Many hidden rocks lie in the way. None but a skillful pilot can steer the old ship through. Christ is the captain, and his ministers are acting as pilots. So we must heed the voice of the Captain. O how careful ought we to be to mind the chart; to "keep an eye out for breakers."

I believe with all my heart we shall see the land soon. And my daily prayer is, Lord, keep me; help me to be all that I ought to be—a child ready for the coming of Jesus. I often think I am not doing as much as I would like to; but I am willing to go anywhere the Master may say, or do anything that can benefit the church. With severe trials and manifold temptations I am struggling on in the good way, and mean to share with the dear ones in the kingdom of God. Pray for us.

N. B.—I forgot to say that I held one meeting Friday evening, May 7th, at the Town Hall in Greenwich. Had a good season. The people turned out well, and reports say they were interested. They are looking eagerly forward to the campmeeting. We shall have a larger one than last year, I think. I shall throw in the leaven now and then, as the Lord will. Pray for Greenwich.

No. Dana, April 10th, 1875.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

My dearly beloved Brethren:—I wish to say to the glory of God, whom I serve, that the prayer of faith has prevailed, and the Lord has raised me up and strengthened me so that I look forward with joyful anticipations. It is the Lord's doing, wonderful, and marvelous in our eyes. O may our faith be increased in the promises of the Bible. Praise ye the Lord. Amen. I will praise him. Thine in the love of Jesus.

Chelsea, Mass., May 24th, 1875.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have suffered a great deal lately, but the Lord has been good to me, and he will not fail to reward you for your kindness to me. I acknowledge with many thanks the following since my last: Bro. Henry Pollard, $3.50. Mrs. C. D. Lyman, $2. Bro. Willard Grinnell, $2. Bro. S. E. Jones, by the hand of Bro. Frank Burr, $10. P. S. Butler, $5. Julius Parr, 50 cents. Eld. W. A. Newcomb, by the hand of Frank Burr, $1.

Obituaries.

SUTLIFF. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Southington, Conn., April 22d, 1875, my dear grandmother, Mrs. Chloe H. Sutliff, aged 90 years.

People at this advanced age in life are often considered a burden, but not so with grandma; we all felt she was a comfort. Her cheerful countenance and amiable disposition endeared her to us all; and what made her more precious was the strong faith and confidence she had in God. She never talked of doubts and fears, but always of submission to the will of God, and a hope in Christ that would carry her through to the end of life. Two days before her death, while one of the family was engaged in prayer at her bedside, she became very happy and praised the Lord aloud, and also repeated the text she had chosen years ago for her funeral occasion, found in Ps. 27:1.

Many of our preaching brethren well remember precious seasons enjoyed uniting with her in conversation and prayer. She enjoyed the blessed hope of seeing Jesus and being made like him; and may we, by taking heed to her counsel and following her example as she followed Christ be prepared to live with dear grandma in the paradise of God, where scenes of parting will forever be unknown. SCOTT. In Vernon, Vt., May 4th, 1875, Bro. O. A Scott, aged 63 years.

Bro. Scott has been a great sufferer for years from asthma. About four months ago he was taken with a swelling in the side which proved to be tumor of the liver. This terminated his days; but his sun has gone down in peace. He was among the first to welcome the glad tidings of the coming kingdom, and has done much to give stability to the Advent cause in his own native town. May his death be sanctified to the good of his deeply afflicted wife, and brothers and sisters, who mourn, but not as others who have no hope. The funeral was attended by the writer, and words of comfort spoken to a large company of people from Rev. 14:13.

But yesterday, 'mid tokens of the summer near,
The swelling buds of trees,
And starting grass bedewed with tears,
We laid the good man down
To sleep that pulseless sleep.
Safe from the tongue of strife,
And every pang that springs from mortal cares,
We laid him down, to rest in hope
Till the bright morn of resurrection life shall break.
True, in the prison cell
And icy grasp of man's last foe;
But in the bed of promise so divine,
So sure ("Thy dead shall live again")
Made by the elder Brother.

A. ROSS.

RILEY. At Newport Centre, N. H., April 28th, 1875, of consumption, Lurella, wife of F. P. Riley, aged 30 years.

She knew Christ as her friend and Savior, and through years of failing health leaned trustingly against his blessed heart. Such we know death cannot find unprepared. The husband is left in loneliness, but may submission to Jesus bring him to a reunion beyond the shadows of the tomb.

The toilsome march is ended;
The tired feet now rest;
The weary hands are folded
Upon the tranquil breast;
The sun, so long o'erclouded,
Sank brightly in the west.

For her is no more terror,
For her is no more pain;
No weary, hopeless waiting,
No watching, all in vain;
But heaven's eternal glory,
The saints' immortal gain.

R. C. P.

GREENLEAF. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Holderness, April 12th, 1875, of quick consumption, Ann C., wife of Hiram Greenleaf, aged 65 years.

A husband and six children are left to mourn the loss of a wife and mother, who endeared herself by thoughtfulness, refinement and affection, to her happy home. As a christian her life shone brighter in deeds than in words. During her last illness her faith in God grew deeper, and she rested all with implicit confidence in the Redeemer. Not one who stood beside her and felt the gentle touch of her emaciated hand, or saw the calm, sweet smile that played over her features, but felt themselves irresistibly drawn towards something pure and holy. She knows not the wild anguish of our hearts to-day, yet her image will never be forgotten, her voice will never die. There is only a vacant place on the earth—another name added to the long list of silent sleepers—another spirit awaiting the resurrection of the saints. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. D. Batchelder, from James 6: 13. L.

THAYER. In Rutland, Vt., April 13th, 1875, Alvah Thayer, aged 64 years.

Very many of our ministering brethren will remember Bro. Thayer as one of the first converts to the Second Advent faith, under the preaching of Bro. Wm. Miller, in this vicinity, forty-two years ago. Bro. Thayer was one of the few living witnesses who could talk from personal knowledge of the rise, progress and history of these last and glorious dispensational truths. He sleeps in death, yet he died at his post, in the triumph of faith. He leaves a companion and five children, who deeply feel his loss, as do also the church of which he was a devoted member, having proved his love to God and his truth by deeds of personal sacrifice through some of his darkest trials. A large number of sympathizing friends of Rutland and vicinity were present at the funeral. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, assisted by A. W. Sibley and A. A. Waite. H. K. F.

LEONARD. In Saratoga, Cal., April 17th, 1875, Sr. E. M. Leonard, wife of Volney Leonard, in the 40th year of her age.

For many years she has been a firm believer in the Advent truths, bringing them with her from the East. When in Oregon, two years ago, we spent some weeks at her house, and found her zealous in advocating the truth. She died in full hope of a glorious resurrection soon to eternal life. Her husband has watched over and cared for her with a tenderness and patience unexampled. Two years ago he was a skeptic; but through the wonderful dealings of the Lord with with them, in her sickness, he has been brought to believe in a Savior, and experience his pardoning love. He is left lonely and sad, with two little girls, but sorrows not as those without hope. Funeral services by Eld. D, D. Reed, assisted by Eld. Haley. M. S. REED.

NASH. In Great Falls, N. H., April 22nd, 1875, Bro. Joseph K. Nash, aged 74 years.

After an illness of months, the enemy has conquered, and we have laid him away to rest until Jesus comes, when he expected to see ere he fell asleep. When about twenty-three, he married in Elliot, Me., where he spent his early married life. After twelve years death took his companion, leaving him with three small children. Thirty-seven years ago he married again, and soon after gave his heart to God. He embraced the coming of the Lord while hearing Bro. Miller, and has kept the faith to the last. He lived his religion, and all are ready to say—A christian has fallen. He was ever ready with open hand, purse, and house, to feed and clothe the servants of God and the poor. God bless his memory, and sanctify his death to the good of his bereft companion and family, who deeply feel his loss. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. D. Churchill. C. S. SHATTUCK.

PENDERGAST. In Barnstead, N. H, March 14th, 1875, my dear mother, Mrs. Ann M. Pendergast, aged 67 years.

She experienced religion in early life, and has ever been true to her Savior. Her sickness was long and painful, but she bore it all without a murmur, and left behind the blessed assurance that ere long she will live in a land where pain and weeping will never come. She leaves one son and five daughters to mourn her loss. May we all meet her in the paradise of God, where cruel death can never come. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. W. Rogers, from a text chosen by herself. 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

"Sleep, dearest mother, sleep;
Death cannot hold thee long;
For in the morning thou shalt wake
And join the blood-washed throng.

E. J. MARDEN.

JONES. In South Barnstead, N. H., March 15th, 1875, of cancer, Sister Harriet Jones, wife of Stephen S. Jones, aged 52 years.

Her sufferings were great, but she bore them with christian fortitude, and a perfect resignation to the will of God. She sought and found the Savior about thirty years ago, and for the last fifteen years has been a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ, to give to his dear people a home where death and the tomb can divide no more. May the Lord sanctify this event to the good of the relatives and friends.

R. W. CASWELL.

FIELD. In Shipton, P. Q., April 12th, 1875, Bro. Francis D. Fields, aged 75 years.

Bro. Fields was born in Danville, Vt., but has lived in Danville, Canada, and vicinity, fifty-three years. He has for many years been a believer in the glorious doctrines of the Advent, and has lived an exemplary, quiet, christian life, respected by the community where he resided. His acquaintances say—"He was a good man." He bore his sickness with christian patience and resignation, and yielded to his enemy, death, quietly and peacefully, and we bore him away to the tomb to rest till Jesus comes. Funeral sermon by the writer, from 2 Tim. 4: 6. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

TABOR. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Rochester, Mass., April 7th, 1875, Sr. Desire P. Tabor, aged 40 years, leaving a husband and three little daughters to mourn their great loss.

She was a devoted christian, and a shining light. As the sun, when sinking from sight, often gathers a bright halo of glory, so our sister calmly and serenely, when conversing of her approaching end, fell sweetly asleep to awake when our Lord shall appear in his glory. Dear readers, prepare to meet her when the pure in heart shall see God.

S. S. BREWER.

THORNTON. In Springfield, Me., Dec. 17th, 1874, Pernelia Thornton, wife of Samuel Thornton, aged 54 years.

Our dear mother has fallen asleep, after years of suffering, patiently endured. She will sleep in Jesus till the glorious resurrection morning; then she will awake to immortal life. She loved the Bible. It was her constant study. Often would she say—"This precious book." We expect soon to join her in that land where we shall experience no separation. L. A. H.

SMITH. Fell asleep in Jesus in West Stafford, Conn., April 16th, 1875, Sr. Lulie J., wife of Bro. Selden H. Smith, aged 27 years.

Sister Smith embraced the Savior when quite young, and lived a humble, devoted life to the time of her death. She was a firm believer in the soon coming of the Lord Jesus. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. She leaves a husband and child and other friends to mourn her loss. May God sustain the afflicted ones. Funeral services by the writer. I. B. POTTER.

HOWARD. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Springfield, Mo., April 7th, 1875, Melissa J. Howard, widow of the late Martin L. Howard, in the 25th year of her age.

One dear little son, four years old, is left an orphan. I am glad that One that is mighty has promised to be a Father to the fatherless.

MRS. M. F. HOWARD.

SWEET. At Port Perry, Prov. Ont., May 9th, 1875, Lula Gertrude, second daughter of B. F. and Maggie Sweet, aged one year, seven months and seven days.

We rejoice in the blessed assurance that our little flower will bloom again when the earth is restored to its Eden beauty. B. L. SWEET.

DANEY. In Frankfort, Me., May 7th, 1875, Mrs. Annie A. Daney, aged 38 years.

A beloved wife and affectionate mother has been taken away very suddenly. She was dear to all who knew her. Her death is a dreadful blow to all the relatives, and a deep loss and grief to the community. May God sustain the dear mourners. Sermon by the writer, from Ps. 119: 67.

FOREIGN NEWS.

GERMANY.

A Berlin correspondent telegraphs:—"Serious disturbances have occurred at Plusnitz, in the province of Western Prussia, on the occasion of the installation of a Roman Catholic priest who has subscribed to the new ecclesiastical laws, the Rev. Herr Golebiewski. A crowd of Ultramontanes belonging to the parish besieged and eventually demolished the vicarage, carrying off the newly-installed vicar by force beyond the parish boundary. The mob also seized the keys of the Church. Military assistance had to be summoned to quell the riot. Further disturbances are apprehended."—London Times.

TURKEY.

The dismissal of Hussein Arni Pasha as Grand Vizer has made a favorable impression at Vienna. His successor, Essad Pacha is considered well disposed towards Austria. It is therefore concluded that the Sultan has recognized the necessity of better relations with Austria as well as the material advantages likely to accrue to the Turkish Empire from the junction of the railways. Austria has been supported in her views by Germany directly and by Russia indirectly; thus the alliance of the three Northern Powers has again proved beneficial.

Berlin, May 18. The Roman Catholic Bishops of Germany who addressed a petition to the Emperor and received a reply last month from the Minister of State, have made a rejoinder that to reject the decision of the Vatican Council would be equivalent to an abandonment of Catholicism, and that they are convinced the Holy See would never be unwilling to act in conformity with all proper decisions of the State government.

London, May 15. A dispatch from Peshuawur, British India, reports that that place has been visited by a very destructive conflagration. Half of the city was laid waste. At one time the powder magazine was in peril, but the fire was happily stopped before reaching it. The conflagration leaves 15,000 people homeless.

Paris, May 17. It is announced that a manifesto from Prince Napoleon in favor of the Republic and in opposition to the restoration of the Empire will soon be published.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 11. A special dispatch to the Commercial says: Three ladies, daughters of Peter Harnum, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, were drowned in the Sandusky river, near that place, yesterday, while attempting to cross the stream in a wagon.

Zanesville, O., May 17. Last night Alonzo Jackson and Albert Smith, with both of their wives and two children each, went over the falls in a skiff, drowning both women and one child of the Jackson's and one of the Smith's. It is said the men were drunk.

In Brief.

— France will probably arm and equip as soldiers all her able-bodied male citizens, with a view to the coming war of vengeance.

— Secessions from the Catholic to the Orthodox Greek church continue on a large scale in Russian Poland.

— The troubles in the Pennsylvania mining regions continue, with manifestations of lawlessness.

— A terrific gale, with disasters to shipping, is reported from Leamington, Ontario.

— A Belgian doctor reports a cure of apoplexy, with paralysis of the right side, by causing the patient to inhale pure oxygen.

— The grasshoppers in Nebraska are devastating the land and blockading the railway trains.

— Eleven members of the British Parliament, elected a year ago, have lost their seats by having bribery proven against them.

— The official confirmation of the fact that Prince Bismarck asked the Pope for his mediation with Gambetta for the conclusion of peace in the war of 1870 causes great sensation.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

The Committee will meet at Cooley's Hotel, Springfield, Tuesday, June 1st, at 12 M.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

Tent and Basket Meeting.

The new Union Tent will be pitched at Belgrade Mills, Me., Wednesday, June 2d, and hold meetings over Sunday, and longer if thought best. Those who can, may bring food and clothing, so as to lodge in the tent if necessary. Brn. will do all they can for this meeting. A general invitation is given, and homes can be found for all within a few miles. Those who have written me to go with tents this season, will do well to come to this meeting, as Brn. Low and Blaisdell are expected to be there, and arrangements will be made at that time for each tent's company. Those who cannot come, will please write me, that we may know what to depend upon.

Those coming from the West, can take the steamer, "Star of the East," in Boston, for Augusta, Tuesday or Friday, six o'clock p. m. There take stage to Belgrade Mills. Those coming by R. R. Road will stop at Belgrade Depot. Stage fare reduced to the Mills. Come filled with the Spirit of Jesus. Call on Charles Austin, Charles H. Kelley, and Wm. Hersom, for homes.

For the brethren, H. B. SEVEY.

New York A. C. Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the New York A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Martville, commencing Thursday evening, June 17th, and hold over Sunday. We hope to see every church in this Conference represented by delegates. Let each church take a collection for the Conference. We expect the ministers and delegates to be present Thursday evening.

Will the churches, where our ministers labor, see that their fare is paid to and from the Conference. We expect the chapel at Martville will be dedicated during the meeting. Homes will be provided for all that come. Brn. and Srs., come praying that God's blessing may rest on the meeting.

Directions. Those coming on the New York Central, from the East or West, will change cars at Weadsport for Martville. Those coming on the Lake Shore and Watertown Road, will change at Sterling Junction for Martville. The church is but a few rods from the depot.

M. R. MILES, President.

Seaside Campmeeting.

The undersigned having been appointed a committee to arrange for a General Campmeeting of Second Adventists at Seabrook, N. H., have accepted the position; and in compliance with urgent requests and our own convictions of duty, have leased "Beckman's Grove"; and if the Lord will, the meeting will commence August 14th, and continue over two Sabbaths.

The grove is pleasantly located within sixty rods of the depot, and about the same distance from salt water landing. There are excellent facilities for sailing and fishing. A large and commodious bath house will be erected, and the committee will spare no pains to procure accommodations for all who desire to build houses, or pitch tents on the ground, or to lease rooms in the neighborhood. The boarding house will be in charge of the committee. Fares will be reduced on the Eastern and other railroads. Particulars hereafter.

Committee of Arrangements: N. H. Robie, A. N. Dow, N. L. Robie, David Beckman, Robert Dow, Wm. Beckman, Charles C. Dow, John B. Adams, Charles A. Barton.

NOTICE.—If any of the churches in Conn., or brethren in the highways and hedges, isolated from churches, chapels, or religious meetings of any kind, would like to have the "Conn. Mission Tent" pitched in their vicinity this summer, please correspond with O. D. Woodruff, Southington, Ct.

CONFERENCE.—A Conference will commence at Indian River, Addison, Me., June 17th, and hold over the Sabbath. An invitation is extended to all. Come praying that God may bless this meeting to the salvation of many in this vicinity.

M. W. CORLISS.

Tent Meeting.

The Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched the first time this season in South Chelmsford, on Friday, June 4th. The meeting will continue over two Sabbaths, and perhaps longer, if there should be the interest it is hoped there will be.

South Chelmsford is four miles from the city of Lowell, on the Lowell and Framingham R. R. This is a new field, there never having been an Adventist meeting held in the town. There is but one believer in the place, our aged Bro. Spaulding, who is very anxious that an effort be made here for the salvation of the people.

It is earnestly requested by the Tent Committee that our brethren and sisters who can attend this meeting do so, especially those living in adjacent towns. The church in Lowell is most earnestly requested to give its time and voice in this meeting. Come all who can to work for the Lord. Bring with you food, blankets, comfortables, sheets, and all that you think will be needed for lodging in the Tent. A stove will be set for cooking whatever may be necessary. Come with the Spirit of God in your hearts, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of sinners. The time is short. For the Committee, I. I. LESLIE.

Tent Meetings.

At the last Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley Conference, it was voted that Tent Meetings be held during the coming season in all places where there was a prospect of good being done, and sufficient encouragement given by the resident people. The Tent is engaged for a Campmeeting at Fullerville, West Hawley, Mass., soon after the Springfield Campmeeting. It was voted to hold the July Quarterly Meeting in the Tent, at North Adams, Mass. For the rest of the season the Tent is not yet engaged.

The following places were proposed as favorable places for Tent Meetings, if desired: North Clarendon and Addison, Vt.; Greenwich, Lansingburg and Cambridge, N. Y. The committee are determined to do all in their power to press the matter of Tent Meetings the coming season, believing that great good will result therefrom. The services of a good and competent preacher have been secured, who also is an experienced hand with a Tent. Between the committee, Tent Master, and other preachers adjacent to the meetings held, ministerial labor cannot be wanting, if all be done by God's grace, with an eye single to his glory.

Let all who are interested in these meetings, correspond immediately—now, at once, with the committee.

A. W. SIBLEY, } Committee.

Vermont Conference.

The next session will be held with the church at Hinesburgh, Vt., according to vote of last Conference, and will commence Wednesday evening, June 9th. Meetings will be held over the Lord's day, although the Conference will close Friday night.

Those coming on the Central Vermont R. R. (Eastern division) will stop at Richmond. Those coming on the Rutland and Burlington division will stop at Charlotte. Teams will meet passengers at those stations on Wednesday. Those wishing to be met at the depot on Wednesday, or on any other day, should write to Bro. A. H. Post, Hinesburgh, some days beforehand, that they may know how extensive team arrangement to make. A stage leaves Burlington daily for Hinesburgh, at about two o'clock P. M. We hope that there will be a general gathering at this meeting, for the furtherance of the gospel. Help in preaching the Word has been engaged from abroad.

H. F. CARPENTER, for Com.

Meeting at Sugar Hill.

There will be a meeting at Sugar Hill, N. H. (D.V.) commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday, the 6th. Bro. E. A. Stockman will be present to preach the Word. It is hoped that Bro. Daniel Churchill will be able to attend also.

The object of this meeting is to glorify God, to cheer and strengthen his dear scattered saints, to awaken backsliders, and convert sinners to an experimental knowledge of the truth. For this let all the dear saints pray. N. WHEELER.

N. B. As Sugar Hill is seven miles from Lisbon Depot, and no regular line of daily conveyance, it will be necessary for those who come over the R. R. to inform me when they will arrive at Lisbon, and conveyance will be provided at reasonable rates. Trains going North, arrive at Lisbon at 11 o'clock A. M. and half past 4 P. M.; going South, at half past 9 A. M. and 3 P. M. Come to the feast. N. W.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

The Advent Christian State Campmeeting for Minnesota, is to be held at the Utica camp-ground, known as the Chatham Grove, two miles south of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, twenty-three miles west of the city of Winona, commencing Saturday, June 12th, at 2.30 P. M., and hold over two Sundays.

We shall provide a boarding tent and board for such as may want it, just as cheap as possible, and those that wish to board themselves can have the use of the tent stove to cook on. A pasture lot will be furnished near the camp-ground, also stabling for horses; as many as can will please bring grain to feed.

We hope that the churches and the scattered ones as many as can will come with their tents, bedding, etc., as may be necessary for a week or ten days tenting on the camp-ground. One and all think of all the things necessary for your own comfort while at the meeting, and bring them with you, and we will try to make you all comfortable. We wish all to come full of the life, power, and spirit of the Master, that God's people may be comforted, and strengthened in the faith, backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted to God, and many souls made happy in the Lord.

Preaching Brethren and Sisters expected:—Brn. C. C. Ramsay and Wm. Chapman from Iowa, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Sr. Ruth M. Rowell, and Bro. J. W. Bursell; and we extend a cordial invitation to preaching brethren and sisters in general. Those coming by R. R. down the river will change cars at Minnesota City, and those coming by the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. will change cars at Owatonna for Utica.

The State Advent Christian Conference was adjourned to meet in connection with this Campmeeting. The State tent will be pitched on the camp-ground.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference of Advent Christians of the State of Minnesota will convene at Utica, on the old camp-ground in Chatham's Grove, on Tuesday, June 15th, at 10.30 A. M. This Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting. We expect the following preachers:—Bro. and Sr. Barnes, Sister Rowell, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Brn. Bursell, Mitson, Brown, Ramer, Chapman, Lombard, Cole, Welloome (of Garden City), Wood, Smith, and Dewing. Let there be a general rally of our Minnesota preachers. Come to work for God and the salvation of sinners. Those who cannot come, write a report of your labors and send it in season. We want a general rally. Let every church in the Conference report either by delegate or by letter.

Come, brethren, with your tents. Lay by your work for a few days and come to this feast of tabernacles. Remember those little mission boxes. Send every dime you can for the trust fund from them. Come in the spirit of your Master—not to hear big preaching, but to work for the upbuilding of the cause. Jesus is soon coming, and we want to be ready to meet him, having our work done and well done. All reports sent after June 1st, should be directed to me at Utica, Winona Co., Minn., care of J. Cheatham. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

WISCONSIN CAMPMEETING.—This meeting will be held at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., beginning on Saturday, June 5th, and hold over two Sundays. Stages run daily to Prairie du Sac from Lodi and Baraboo, on the Northwestern R. R., and a steamer from Merrimack; also a stage from Mazomanie, on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R.—ten miles. Let us put up the most of our tents at the beginning of the meeting. Other particulars in time.

O. THOMAS,
WM. SHELDON, } Committee.
H. M. JONES,

WISCONSIN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—This Conference will convene in connection with the State Campmeeting at Prairie du Sac, and hold its first session on the morning of the 10th of June. Let the churches be represented by delegates or letters, and let every minister either be present in person, or report by letter.

WM. SHELDON, Sec.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made to furnish lumber for building purposes on the campground at Seabrook, N. H., at the lowest market price, which will not exceed $15 per M. Address CHARLES C. DOW, Kensington, N. H.

N. H. ROBIE, for Com.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The next Quarterly Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York will be held at South Creek, Bradford Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 18th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of truth. Ticket by Railway from Corning to Gillet Station. E. C. COWLES, Pres.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec.

AN APPEAL.

The season has now arrived when the special work of holding Tent Meetings should be begun. The Mass. Conference has a good Tent ready again for service in the harvest field of the Lord; and the question is: Shall it be sent forth once more with good and faithful laborers to gather in sheaves for Christ, and give the warning of the coming day of God? In order that this may be done, there must be a sacrifice made by the friends of Jesus, and means given to sustain in this way his precious cause.

It is proposed that the Tent this year be taken into new fields, and where our precious faith has not as yet been heard. If this is done, there will be a special necessity for contributions on the part of our churches and people in general, to defray the expenses of these meetings in these new places.

As the Committee, chosen at the late Conference to have the charge of the Tent and make arrangements for the work in connection with it, we invite all who have the means and the heart to give in sustaining this mode of reaching the people, to do so as soon as they can, that we may know how far to go in promising the Tent where it is already requested.

Contributions and pledges can be sent to the Treasurer, ELD. C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

B. YOUNG, } Protracted Meeting
L. BOUTELL,
C. E. BARNES, } and
I. I. LESLIE, } Tent Committee.

Notice.

The members of the Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference are requested to send to the Secretary their names and address, that each may receive a certificate of membership, according to a vote of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Sec., Box 5140 Boston, Mass.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 19th, and continue to the 28th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board and lodging. All who can are requested to bring Tents.

Brethren in the Lord, do make arrangements to attend this meeting, especially all who reside in the southerly part of this State. Come at the commencement, if possible. We intend to secure good profitable laborers, those who are prepared to bring out an exposition of those prophecies especially applicable to these times, and now in process of fulfillment, when the church will be delivered. This may be the last annual gathering we shall be permitted to enjoy before the Lord will gather his own to himself. Let us do what we can to save the perishing before it is too late. Bro. Munger will have charge of the meeting.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. COUCH.

NOTICE.—The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting will commence Monday, August 30th, and hold over Sept. 5th. WM. H. MITCHELL, for the Com.

CAMPMEETING.—The Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Sunday, Sept. 5th, and hold over Sunday, Sept. 12th.

JER. CARR, for the Committee.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made with J. H. Downing, to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, at the following prices: Hemlock, $15 00 per M.; Pine, planed and matched, $25,00 per M. All who want lumber for frames must write immediately to J. H. Downing, Alton Bay, N. H. Mr. Downing will furnish nails, windows, doors, butts, screws, etc., at Boston prices. H. K. CHOATE, } For BENJ. YOUNG, } Committee.

NOTICE.—As the Mass. Tent Committee are about to start the Tent, they will need some money. Will those brethren and sisters who have subscribed for this purpose, send to the Treasurer, C. GOODRICH, Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., as soon as convenient?

PROTRACTED MEETING.—A four days meeting will be held at East Bethel, Vt., commencing June 2nd, and continuing over the Sabbath, June 6th. Bro. H. H. Tucker, of Palmer, Mass., and others who can, will assist Bro. Hoyt at this meeting. Come, all ye valiant soldiers, lift up the ensign for the people. H. F. C, for Com.

NOTICE.—I have on hand a large lot of cast loose Joint Butts—4×4, 5×5, and 6×6. I will ship to any address all that can be used for a church or benevolent institution, free of charge except freight and cartage. Some evidence will be needed to know that the parties ordering are the committee of such church or benevolent enterprise.

T. S. SCOVILLE, Elmira, N. Y.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a Grove Meeting on the farm of Eld. Brian, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing at 10½ o'clock A. M., Sunday, June 20th, and continuing all day. Different preaching brethren will be present. All are invited to come, and bring their dinner, and stay all day. A good pasture furnished near the grove, free. Good running water in the grove. Come one and all. N. BRIAN.
V. F. HUNT.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will hold its next session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, on the old camp-ground, commencing June 10th. There will be a boarding house and grocery store, so that all who wish to board or buy can be accommodated. There will be plenty of straw free to all. Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates, also wood.

Come one, come all. Come feeling an interest to save and be saved. This may be our last meeting before Jesus comes. We expect help from abroad. Eld. A. N. Seymour and others will be at the meeting. Our lease of the grounds run out this year. Let all interested be present to devise means and make arrangements for the future.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

EDINBORO, PA.—Our next Church Conference is appointed for May 29th and 30th. Services on Saturday, at 2 and 7.30 P. M. On Sunday, at 9.30 and 10.30 A. M., and 7.30 P. M. Administration of ordinances follow morning service. Brn., do you want preaching here and in adjacent places this year? If so, govern yourselves accordingly. Come up to this Conference and make arrangements therefor. G. W. STETSON.

TENT MEETINGS.—The Iowa Advent Christian Mission Tent will be pitched (the Lord willing) in Jefferson, Green Co., Iowa, Thursday, May 27th, to continue over Sunday, June 6th, and longer if duty demands. Let there be a general rally by the brethren and sisters from the surrounding country to this meeting. Let us come to labor and pray for the promulgation of the truth and the salvation of sinners. As this will be the first tent meeting of the season, let us endeavor to strike the right key-note. J. RIDLEY.

P. W. HOUGH.

NOTICE.—The Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual session at Bear River, N. S., commencing Thursday, June 17th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All lovers of Jesus are invited to attend. Come to work for the Lord. J. J. WOODWORTH.

NOTICE.—The York Co. A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session in the chapel at West Parsonsfield, Me., commencing Thursday, June 3d, at 2 P. M. We desire to see a large attendance. C. H. SWEET, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Third Quarterly Meeting of the New Hampshire Conference will hold its session with the church in Whitefield, commencing Thursday, June 10th, and continue over the Sabbath. A general invitation is given. LEVI ALLEN.

TENT MEETING.—There will be a Tent Meeting at Belgrade Mills, Me., the first of June. Particulars hereafter. H. B. SEVEY.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The Second Quarterly Meeting of the Washington Co., Kan., Adv. Chris. Conference will be held with the church at Sherman Centre, commencing Saturday, June 26th, and hold over Sunday. There will be preaching on Saturday, at eleven o'clock a. m., and a business meeting at two p. m. It is requested that each church in the conference be fully represented, and that all be there on Saturday, as it is desired to finish all business on that day.

JOHN BATTERTON, Sec.

CONFERENCE.—A Conference will commence at Milltown, Me., July 1st, and continue over the Lord's day. It is requested that our ministering brethren come to aid in the interests of this meeting. Come all that can, and let us labor to accomplish the greatest amount of good for the cause of Christ and the salvation of men.

M. W. CORLISS.

NOTICE.—The next meeting of the First Christian Church of Wayland and Loon Lake, called the Church of God, will be held at Wallace, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Saturday, June 12th, at 1.30 P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended to all.

For the church, E. C. COWLES, Pastor.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

A NEW BOOK.
THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. AGT.

EVER BRIGHT SHORE.

GEO. THOMSON.

Let the storms of life beat around us;
Bye and bye they will come nevermore;
With Christ for our captain and pilot,
We will land on the ever bright shore.
Cho.—Happy, happy, happy evermore,
Happy forever on the ever bright shore.

We will fear not the howling tempest,
Neither quake when the wild winds roar;
We know He will bring us through safely,
And we'll land on the ever bright shore.
Cho.—Happy, etc.

With helm hard apoit and Zionward,
With our compass and chart all secure,
We'll escape the rocks, shoals and breakers,
And anchor on the ever bright shore.
Cho.—Happy, etc.

Homeward bound! how swiftly we're gliding;
In a little the storm will be o'er;
We'll enter the bright port of glory,
To go out nevermore, nevermore.
Cho.—Happy, etc.

A sound from the outlook is ringing;
See a light shining bright more and more;
And sweetly the angels are singing
Hosannas on the ever bright shore.
Cho.—Happy, etc.

With shouting we'll enter the harbor,
Where sorrow and sickness come no more;
Immortal like Jesus, and with him
We shall reign on the ever bright shore.
Cho.—Happy, etc.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brn.:—I feel grateful this morning that it is well with me, even here, away from home and among strangers. I want to tell the dear ones scattered abroad, how the Lord has led me during the last ten days.

On Saturday, a week ago, I visited Oak Grove church, four miles from Stevenson. Found the dear brethren and sisters struggling to hold up the true light for the people. Spoke at eleven o'clock, A. M., and at five P. M. baptized a brother in the name of Jesus. At nine o'clock, P. M. went, with lamps and torches, back to the stream, and buried a sister in the likeness of Christ's death. Started at eleven that night, and walked into Stevenson. Got on the train at two, and Sunday morning, six o'clock, found us in Ooltewah, East Tenn. Met Bethel church in communion, and Bro. G. W. Crawford preached at Oak Grove.

At Bethel we had a pleasant meeting, and found Uncle Silas Smith still living, who has been expected to die at any time for the last twelve weeks. He is still in the crucible, and rejoicing in the hope of eternal life.

Reached home last Thursday, at eight o'clock, A. M., and at ten bade adieu to loved ones, and started on horseback, with Bro. J. S. Bankson, M. D., of Stevenson. Came to Tenn. river, and found it very rough on account of a high wind. We waited two hours and then started on. The ferryman informed us that he would not be responsible for our lives or horses on the rough waves, and in an old rickety boat. But we started, trusting God to see us over. Water came over the gunnel occasionally, and it was with much difficulty our horses stood up in the rocking boat. I have never seen the ocean, but the surging waves made me think of stories I have read of sea life. By the help of God we landed, and started at two o'clock, P. M. from the river, and rode across Sand Mountain, which is about eighteen or twenty miles wide, and reached the edge of Will's Valley just at dark. Stopped with a Baptist man, Bro. Crow, who treated us kindly, and charged us nothing.

Friday morning started early across the valley, and ascended Lookout Mountain about ten o'clock, and rode across it some nine or ten miles. On this mountain I found a large stream, some thirty yards wide. It seemed strange to see a river rolling along on top of a high mountain. At three P. M. we arrived at Spring Creek, where there is so much confusion on account of some brethren having read Bro. Sheldon's "Life beyond death."

The Baptist church here has divided, and about twenty out of thirty-one or two members, have taken a firm stand for truth. A Baptist preacher, Henry Blalock, has made several sweeping efforts to upset the truth by stirring up the minds of the people and filling their hearts with prejudice; and finally challenged Bro. Frank R. Blankson, a minister who loves the truth, to discuss the immortality question. Bro. B. accepted, and I learn from outsiders here that he ably defended his position. Bro. Blalock said he would debate with any Adventist. Bro. Bankson wrote for me. I came to meet him in the name of Jesus, and found on my arrival that about six or seven hours before, the champion, having heard I was coming with God's Word, hurriedly packed his valuables, bade adieu to all his friends, and started, saying that he was bound for Illinois.

I am sorry to find in this community, so much confusion on account of the truth being preached by Brn. Bankson and Livingston. Bro. Livingston is a fearless, humble, bold defender of truth, who has been excluded from his church for heresy.

We began meetings Friday night, in a private house. On Saturday visited the church where the trouble started. Heard the following resolution adopted in Conference: "We will not let certain parties, who teach materialism and annihilation, have the use of our house." Saturday night we had a good audience, and announced that we would speak on Sunday, at three P. M., at a place prepared by the brethren.

On Sunday, A. M., we visited the church in order to show brotherly love, and, if possible, throw cold water on the devils's fire, which is eating up the Christianity of this neighborhood. At the close of Bro. Moon's discourse, a kind-hearted sinner arose and asked the church to let Mr. Cargile have the use of their house in the evening, saying that it was the request of outsiders entirely. Said he—"Come, now, show a christian spirit." But hearing what I did the day before, I told them that I was not aware that they were going to make that request, and said that I felt grateful for their respect, but had been excluded by them, and did not wish the house.

In the afternoon we met a large congregation on the spot prepared for God's worship; and we had a good time, and saw the spirit of love beaming in several faces. Sunday night tried to preach again. Bro. Livingston invited us to go ten miles, to Cedar Spring, and preach again last night. We went, and found a good number, who gave the best attention, and some of them showed their appreciation of truth by contributing to aid me on my journey.

This morning, May 4th, we came back with Brn. Bankson and Livingston, and will hold meetings here till Wednesday, and then start for Dade Co., Ga. I received a subscriber for our beloved Crisis, at Cedar Springs, in Cherokee Co., Bro. L. B. Miller, who really loves truth, and is not afraid to investigate. I have the promise of more before I leave. The truth here has spread like wildfire, just from that one copy of "Life Beyond Death." There are five ministers already breasting the storm, and they will not flinch for love or money. One impediment is a lack of the spirit of Jesus. There is too much stubbornnesss manifested by both parties.

O, how sad I feel to see those claiming to love Jesus refuse to speak to each other! I pray that all parties may submit to Christ, get up to his cross, and let go their old and long-cherished churchanity, and lay hold of a pure and soul-cheering Christianity. If we do not possess a forgiving spirit, how can we expect to be forgiven? It is vain for us to pray with our hearts filled with hatred, malice, or prejudice.

Dear brethren and sisters, here are several good people on both sides of the question, who honestly think they are doing God's service by contention. The two parties are in law about the possession of the church house, and I do feel so sad over it. O that mine eyes were a fountain of tears, that I might relieve my burdened soul of its troubles, by bitter weeping and prayer!

Let us pray that this may soon pass away, and love and Jesus prevail.

Pray for me and mine. I am now in the field, and expect to die there, unless the Master comes soon. Pray that I may be strengthened. Yours in Jesus.

J. A. Cargile.

ARMAGEDDON AT HAND.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "A careful survey of the existing European situation seems almost sufficient to justify a belief in the prediction of the enthusiasts who declare that the true interpretation of John's Apocalyptic vision shows that 'the battle of the great day of God Almighty at Armageddon,' is actually at hand. All Europe is at present like one vast camp. The nations are arming from the British Channel to the Ural Mountains; from the Mediterranean to the Baltic, as if with a prophetic understanding that a terrible and portentous crisis is at hand. According to the Paris Republique Francaise, a German 'camp of manœuvres for one hundred and fifty thousand men is about to be formed near Treves, under the immediate command of the Emperor.' According to the Kolnische Zeitung, (Cologne Journal) the French are about establishing a similar great camp for drill and military manœuvers near the German frontiers. The nations are becoming armies; the general masses of the people are being turned into soldiers. Russia has a greedy eye on India and the Sick Man. Austria has long coveted a portion of the territory of Turkey. France is said to be still cherishing feelings of bitterness, and revolving schemes of revenge.

"There are also those who predict a great Ultramontane combination for the restoration of Rome and the temporal power of the Supreme Pontiff. Rumors of schemes of conquest, of plots, conspiracies, and new alliances fill the circumambient air, as motes people a sunbeam. The arsenals are busy shaping more deadly implements of destruction than were ever before known. The founderies are casting colossal cannon, compared with which those heretofore used in warfare are but children's toys. The powder with which these mighty engines were to be charged was not thought to have sufficient power, and the world is now given to understand by the Baltic Gazette that the German government has discovered or secured the secret of a new 'prismatic powder' for its heavy guns, which is immensely superior to any used or known elsewhere in Europe.

"When we contemplate the present attitude of the Continental Powers; when we estimate the vast numbers of their standing armies; when we consider the amount of interruption to the arts of peace, and the crushing burdens upon the people, which they entail; when we see Germany and France arming to the teeth, and by their vast preparations compelling their neighbors to strain every nerve and tax every resource for the same purpose, in order to be ready for the fearful crisis which all seem to anticipate—when we see these things we may well feel thankful that our happy position on the American continent, with no powerful nations upon our border, exempts us from such necessities; that with a feeble navy, and a standing army inferior to that of any fourth-rate power of the whole world, we still draw peaceful breath, and sleep untroubled by dreams of danger from any external foe."

The ex-Premier, Mr. Gladstone, says: "There is a fixed purpose among the secret inspirers of Roman policy to pursue, by the road of force, upon the arrival of any favorable opportunity, the favorite project of re-erecting the terrestrial throne of the Popedom, even if it can only be re-erected on the ashes of the city (Rome), and amidst the whitening bones of the people."

The Illustrated London News, referring to the recent war rumors, says: "Within the last few days a slight political earthquake has been felt on the Continent, which, although of brief duration, attested the existence, and, to a certain extent, the activity of pent-up volcanic agencies, that, at no very distant period, may possibly exert a destructive power.

"Just now Prince Bismarck has enough on his hands. The conflict which he is waging against the Papacy is one which, whatsoever may be the issue, sufficiently taxes his energies. The influence of the Church of Rome over the Latin races is not to be despised, and it is highly probable that, under any circumstances, Germany will have to bear the brunt of the struggle alone. She cannot afford to provoke other opponents. She might possibly bring into the field against her not merely France, but France more or less intimately allied with Austria, Italy, and Spain."

A writer in the Baptist, of April 23, says: "To me two things are beyond all question, that a terrible European war is looming in the distance, and secondly, that the present race of foreign diplomatists (including those of Great Britain) are not by any means equal to its prevention.

"The elements of strife and violence are rapidly increasing between France and Germany, and in a scarcely inferior degree, between Prussia and the Vatican; or, to state the matter more distinctly, between the friend and foe to the temporal power of the Pope. The orthodox Catholic with true Jesuitical cunning and strategy, has sullenly submitted to an inevitable and unavoidable necessity, but it is well known that he has secretly been sharpening his weapons against the day of purposed revenge. That day is nearer than English Protestants imagine, and it is of growing importance to inquire how shall Protestant England keep herself free from that deluge of human blood?

"Honestly, I see no recourse but in earnest, wrestling prayer. What if churches and the minisry appointed set seasons for united prayer, for this special purpose? Is it not promised to us that the nations 'shall learn war no more?' Then why not exercise mighty prayer for the fulfilment of this promise?"

We may remark on the above excerpt from the Baptist, that no amount of prayer can avert the predicted war of Armageddon, when God shall bring it as a final judgment upon the nations; but we can pray for its speedy accomplishment, and the consequent introduction of the millennial reign of the Prince of Peace, when swords shall be beaten into ploughshares, and they shall learn war no more.—Signs of Our Times.

FORGIVENESS.

J. B. CLARK.

The duty of the forgiveness of injuries is a prominent item in the christian religion. The Lord said—"If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." The Savior's answer to Peter's inquiry—"How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?"—shows that pardon should be unlimited as far as the number of offences is concerned. "I say not unto thee until seven times, but until seventy times seven" (490 times). Christ manifested this spirit of forgiveness not only through his whole life, but upon the cross, when dying, he cried—"Father, forgive them."

Again, we see this manifested in the commission to his apostles. Having told them to go into all the world and preach the gospel, he added, "beginning at Jerusalem;" which was the same as saying, let my murderers have the first offer of merey. Peter on the day of pentacost, charged their guilt home upon them, for he said—"Him (Christ) ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." Yet for this most dreadful crime, the same apostle had been commissioned by his Master to offer them a free and full pardon, through Christ.

Sometimes one brother will trespass against another; and it will be readily admitted that injuries are more keenly felt, and more difficult to bear, if inflicted by a brother, than if they proceeded from an alien. This is illustrated by those words found in the 55th Psalm, which had their fulfillment in the experience of Christ, when sold by Judas for thirty pieces of silver. "For it was not an enemy that reproached me, then I could have borne it. . . . But it was thou, a man, mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company."

We are not to foster any ill-will against those who have misjudged us. As God has forgiven us, so we are to forgive one another. If thy brother who has trespassed against thee, turns, and says—"I repent," you are to forgive him; even though this turning, saying, "I repent," occurs hundreds of times, yet you are to forgive him every time. Again, if thy brother trespass against thee, may be he will not come to thee, saying, "I repent." Then what? You are to go to him, and tell him his fault between him and thee alone (Matt. 18). It may have been only a misunderstanding; and it may turn out, after all, to be only imaginary; or, if real, perhaps not intentional. How wise the counsel, to go, and ascertain.

What a vast amount of trouble might often be spared, by attention to this precept. The spirit of forgiveness is essential to the very existence of the christian character. The gentle, forbearing, forgiving spirit will yield, if necessary, more than half way, and if all would comply with the teachings of the Savior, reconciliation might speedily be effected. The parable of the prodigal son, and the story of Joseph in Egypt, are beautiful illustrations of the true spirit of forgiveness.

BISMARCK AND BELGIUM.

Bismarck and the Germans often meet with scant justice in English society. We scan their faults too harshly, and forget the difficulties of the battle they are fighting, and the gain to humanity and civilization that must ensue from their success. It is not fair for us, after enjoying an unbounded liberty for many years, to talk as if such a state could be summarily imitated by nations in quite a different position. True liberty is the child of peace, and while any war shadows cast their gloom over a community, its first thoughts are not liberty, but safety. The amount of despotism now existing in Germany is nothing like so great as that which raged in these islands during the reigns of the first three Georges and the Regency of George IV., and yet, perhaps, at no portion of those dismal periods was England in a position that needed more vigilance and care than the newly united Germany does at this time.

Prince Bismarck's war with the Papacy—a war to which his determination to preserve German Unity has necessarily led him—is the most important movement Europe has seen since the days of Luther; and if he wins the battle, he will be the hero of a new reformation even greater than the old. This is lost sight of in most of the common criticisms passed upon his proceedings. His own position was defined by himself the other day in the Prussian Diet. He is not, he said, the enemy of the Roman Catholic religion, but of the Papacy, as a policy placed in deadly hostility with civil governments by the pretensions which Pio Nono has revived and exaggerated. No principle is more thoroughly identified with liberty and progress than that which affirms the supremacy of the civil government over any ecclesiastical power. It is for this essential principle that Bismarck contends, and it is one of the widest and deepest application. One church after another, in various countries, has tried to obtain supremacy; and whenever the ecclesiastical authorities have succeeded in subjecting the civil powers to their despotism, the worst results have ensued. The doctrine of liberty is, that individual conscience should be free, but that no combination of priests or theologians should either rival or control the civil power.

In this country the feeling is steadily tending towards the complete independence of the churches, on the condition of their respecting the independence and the supreme authority of the State. We have to a great extent, realized this, and are progressing towards its more complete fulfillment, as the children of men who had to fight the battles of their day somewhat in the Bismarck fashion. We can be more tolerant than he finds it advisable, because of victories our forefathers won long ago; and if his plans succeed, and the attempt of the Romish church, through he Pope, to sweep away millions of Germans from their true allegiance is defeated, the next generation will witness a large development of civil freedom, unless it is hindered by fresh wars.

The disposition to make a bugbear of Prince Bismarck is, of course, fostered in every country by the Ultramontanes; but if he is entitled to a just consideration anywhere, it is surely in this land, where the Protestant feeling is so strong. A hearty sympathy with the Germans in their warfare with the Pope is by no means inconsistent with a very friendly feeling towards France. On the contrary, the French Liberals—the only party who can save the country—will be strengthened if Bismarck triumphs in this particular quarrel. It is one of those cases in which a great race fights for humanity as well as for itself; and the heartiness with which German opinion rallies to the great statesman is one of the most hopeful signs of our curious and often perplexing times.—London Times.

AID ME.

I. AHLBORN.

Aid me, oh! thou great Jehovah,
Stretch thou out thy arm of might;
For I sink in sin's deep valley,
For I grope in sin's dark night.

Aid me, oh! thou mighty Helper,
Thou who weakness canst not know;
Send to me as to Elisha,
Angel hosts to meet the foe.

Aid me, thou whose love, compassion,
Never, never know an end;
Hope into my heart will enter,
When I feel thou art my friend.

But through thee I think to conquer;
Lord, without thee I must die;
Oh! thou wilt not to the fainting
Thy support and love deny.

Aid me, oh! thou great Jehovah!
In all strife I look to thee;
From the foes that plan my ruin,
Thou alone canst succor me.

BISMARCK AND THE POPE.

The starting point of the interminable dispute between Germany and the Vatican is to be found in the new attitude under which the Vatican decrees present the Pope to European statesmen. Prince Bismarck assumes, with some show of justice, that since the late council, "the Roman Catholic church is the Pope, and if you want to speak of the rights of the Roman Catholic church, you cannot explain them better than by saying the rights of the Pope. . . . At the present time the Bishops are mere Prefects of the Pope; he may put himself in their places, he can displace every one of them." According to the German way of looking at the matter, the Pope must be dealt with, not as the head of a voluntary association of Christians, but as the absolute dictator of "the most powerful political corporation in the world." The Bishops of the Roman Church, according to the same view, are not mere private persons, devoted to the teaching of a form of religious faith, but high officials of this same corporation. Their pastorals must be dealt with as the manifestoes of a sovereign power of vast influence and still vaster pretensions, and unless the States in which these Bishops "live and officiate as publicly recognized dignitaries" are prepared to bear the responsibility for their utterances, it will come to be essential to the peace of Europe to establish "some international authority before which the Roman Catholic Church may be held responsible."

Whatever party may quarrel with these assumptions, it certainly ought not to be the Ultramontanes in the Church of Rome. In dealing with the Church as a State within the State, Prince Bismarck has merely taken the leaders of Roman Catholic policy at their word. If the Roman Pontiff not only is, but always has been, incapable of error when speaking from the Chair, then, to mention only one case, Boniface VIII. must have spoken a truth binding for all time on the Church, when he affirmed that "God had set him over Kings and kingdoms," and that the Holy See was equally empowered to release subjects from their allegiance, and to declare a throne vacant of whose occupant it did not approve. The Vatican decrees revive and confirm the most arrogant pretensions which have ever been formally and publicly made by Roman Pontiffs, and the party which inspired these decrees, ought to be the last to complain of the very literal interpretation which German statesmen persist in putting on them.

But, then, the question arises, is it either wise or politic on the part of any State to accept the valuation which the Roman church puts upon itself? In the eye of the law, international or otherwise, that Church can only be regarded as a religious corporation, composed of those who voluntarily adhere to it, and subject to such general restrictions upon the sphere of its action as are imposed upon all similar associations. Should the State deem the purposes of this corporation so admirable as to contribute public money to its maintenance, such grants may be accompanied by any conditions which both parties to the bargain may accept. If the State finds that these conditions have been violated, or that the purposes for which its money is being spent are not the purposes for which it was granted, then let it withdraw such support. If the State is to go further than this, it must be prepared to show that the existence of the religious corporation in question is incompatible with its own safety, or necessarily involves a breach of its own laws. On this latter ground, the United States might, logically enough, proceed to suppress the Church of the Latter-day Saints as at present constituted. Whether so sharp a remedy would be a sound measure of policy is quite a different question.

The whole apology for the recent ecclesiastical legislation of Prussia is to be found in the assumed necessity of transferring to the King a portion of the allegiance which is claimed from Prussian Catholics by the Pope. Prince Bismarck says that the centralization of the Roman Church is a standing menace to the unity of the Empire, and that so far as Prussia is concerned, she cannot afford to have the order of an Italian priest held of more account within her borders than her own laws. The weakness of all this legislation is that it is directed not against overt acts, but against speculative opinions which are assumed to be certain to result in acts detrimental to the State. Prussian priests and Bishops must, according to Prince Bismarck, be subjects of Prussia first and delegates of the Pope afterward, and by way of putting their allegiance to a practical test, laws have been enacted which they cannot possibly obey and continue to be officers of the Roman Catholic Church. Hence, new penal statutes, fines, imprisonments, and a general line of policy which can only end in proscribing the profession of the Romish creed throughout the land.

So far, the anti-Papal struggle in Prussia is merely a renewal of the contest which was waged and settled in England some three hundred years ago. But it assumes an entirely new relation to the politics of Europe, when Prussia not only insists on dealing with the Pope as a hostile sovereign, having subjects and supporters within her own borders, but insists that every country in Europe should adopt the same theory.—New York Times.

STUMBLING BLOCKS.

While reading an article in the "Christian Woman," upon "Stumbling Blocks," how plainly was a part of my own life brought to mind. When I was first converted, I was very anxious to be a true Bible christian. I felt the necessity of coming out from the world, and "abstaining from every appearance of evil." The subject of dress was particularly impressed on my mind. I thought it could not be right to dress as I did when I was living for the world. I did not dare to wear gold, which I thought was plainly forbidden in the Word of God.

But after I had been in the church some time, I began to look at other professors, especially those in whom I had great confidence, who were considered leaders in the church. Finding that they had no such feelings in regard to dress, but could wear jewelry, flowers, or any other useless ornaments, I thought, "Surely I must be mistaken; these good people must understand the Bible better than I do; it surely does not mean what it says when it speaks so plainly concerning 'outward adornments.'" I finally concluded that if others could dress just as the world did, and still be christians, I could do the same. That was my first step back into the world.

But some christians say, "They do not think it is wrong to wear gold, because they do not feel that it is so." I would ask, how far is safe to trust our feelings? Just so far, I would answer, as our feelings accord with the plain written word of God. When his Word plainly prohibits the "putting on of gold and costly apparel," shall we wait until we feel that it is wrong before we lay them aside? Again, when we are told to come out from among, them, and be separate," and to "keep onrselves unspotted from the world," how long shall we wait to consult our feelings, before we break loose from the follies and vanities of the world?

If christian women were willing to adorn themselves "as becometh women professing godliness," laying aside all useless ornaments, would it so often be thought necessary to resort to "suppers" and "festivals" to keep up church expenses? How many young christians have been led astray by such entertainments? There can be no doubt in their minds about the propriety of attending such places, as they are gotten up and patronized by leading members of the church. But as the doors are open for all who have money, they find many there who are not fit companions for young christians. It may be that in such places they will meet their worldly associates, whom they have been trying to shun. They meet together for the evening; the old desire for their company is renewed, and how many young christians might date their first step back into the world from such places of merriment? Can we wonder that so many young converts are lost to the church, when the church itself places so many "stumbling blocks" in their way?

Oh, when will the church arise and put on her "beautiful garments," without "spot or wrinkle, or any such thing," that it may be "holy and without blemish?"—Banner of Holiness.

THE CHURCH SURRENDERING.

T. De Witt Talmage, speaking of the present position of the churches, says:—"I simply state a fact when I say that in many places the church is surrendering and the world is conquering. When there is one man brought into the kingdom of God through christian instrumentality, there are ten men dragged down by dissipations. Fifty grog shops are built to one church established. Literary journals in different parts of the country are filled with scum, dandruff, and slag, controlled by the very scullions of society, depraving everything they put their hands on. Three hundred and ten newspapers, and journals, and magazines in New York, and more than two hundred of them depraving to the public taste, if not positively inimical to our holy Christianity.

Look abroad and see the surrender, even on the part of what pretend to be christian churches, to Spiritualism and Humanitarianism and all the forms of devilism. If a man stand in his pulpit and say that unless you be born again you will be lost, do not the tight kid gloves of the christian, diamonds bursting through, go up to their foreheads in humiliation?"

The true christian, who knows by experience what it is to deal with his own heart, finds it infinitely more difficult to beat down one sinful thought from rising up in him, than to keep down a thousand sinful thoughts from breaking out into open action. Here lies the chief labor—to fight a phantasm, or airy apparition, such as thoughts are. He sets himself chiefly against these heart sins, because he knows that these are sins that are most of all contrary to grace, and do most of all weaken and waste grace. Outward sins are like the many caterpillars, that devour the verdure and flourishing of grace; but heart sins are like so many worms, that gnaw the very roots of grace.—Hopkins.

AN APPEAL.

To the Churches!—Adventists!—Stewards of the Lord.

Brn. and Srs. of New Hampshire:—Have we done all we can, or that God requires us to do, in giving to the people of this State the last judgment warning—the gospel of the kingdom? Who can say that we have if a little more time is given us to labor? Again, how can our labors and the means God has entrusted us with as stewards, and will hold us responsible for, be best expended? We think that the success that has crowned judicious labors under Mission Tents, in this and other States, in a measure answers these questions. The command is "Go," and in thus going we carry our meeting-house with us. We think it a conceded point that many who would not under other circumstances attend our meetings, are induced to come to tent meetings.

And now, dear brethren, as the N. H. Advent Christian Conference has chosen us to hold protracted meetings, and have entrusted us with the N. H. Mission Tent, will you help us by prayers and means to save some through this instrumentality? We feel a great responsibility in this matter; will you share it with us, and then in the great harvest reap the blessing? We want to see how much can be raised and pledged, between this and the time to hold tent meetings, to carry the tent into new places. A strict account of all receipts, and how paid out, will be kept. Now, will you make one effort, and sacrifice of this world's goods, for this great and noble cause before the fires of the last day shall consume them? Let God direct. Send in your monies and pledges to the Treasurer, J. G. Smith, Farmington, N. H. Also, brethren, we want you to interest yourselves in finding places where tent-meetings are needed, and see if land to set it upon and lumber to seat it with can be obtained, and let us know as soon as you can, so that we can make our arrangements to the best advantage, and not travel over the ground more than is necessary. We intend to secure as good help as we can to go with the tent. Remember, "God loveth a cheerful giver." And as this is to give the gospel to the poor, you can thus claim the promise in Prov. 19: 17.

IS ANYTHING TOO HARD FOR THE LORD?—Gen. 18: 14.

J. P. MARQUAND.

A similar passage of Scripture is found in Jer. 32: 17, and also another in Matt. 19: 26. We understand by this question that God can do all things that are consistent with his character for veracity and wisdom, in consonance with his established laws of the universe. God cannot, from the rectitude of his nature, do anything wrong or harmful. His attributes shine out in all his works and ways, and reflect his benignance, honor, virtue, truth, wisdom, love and power.

Many persons limit God as to his ability to perform his word and carry out his plans and purposes; but He who made the worlds and keeps them in beautiful order and symmetry, knows how to control, govern and direct all things for his own glory and the best good of his intelligent creatures. The more we study into the works of nature, and behold its wonders, and see its harmonious operations, the more we can admire and love that omnipotent being who is the Architect and God over all, blessed forevermore.

As we are informed that man was made in the image of God, we get some faint idea from this that God possesses mechanism, skill, adaptation, symmetry, art, fitness, combination; and that all sciences come from him. "In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." "He doeth his will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth."

The power and wisdom of the Lord is distinctly seen in the works of creation, but particularly so in the work of man's redemption. For four thousand years no man or woman had lived without sin, until there came a child on the plains of Bethlehem. His name was called Jesus; that is, a "Savior from sin." He suffered, bled and died. Then he was raised from the dead by the Father, who made him both "Lord and Christ." He endured temptation, resisted all sin, lived a life of holiness and purity, and became the first fruits of the resurrection. Here was a model man, who was lifted up that all might be drawn unto him. This was the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head—the devil.

It was necessary to make the leader or captain of our salvation perfect through sufferings, in order that he might bring many sons unto glory. This man "offered himself to God, without spot, through the eternal Spirit," and was accepted. He was a pure, sinless being, and consequently the penalty of the law, which was death, had no claim on him. The third day he rose again, and became a mediator between God and man.

In all this is exhibited the love and tenderness of the Father, and it leads us to say—"Is anything too hard for the Lord?"

This work of grace, which was done for his Son, he can do for us, if we will only come like little children and ask, in faith, believing. Nothing is too hard for God. He can wash away our sins, and make us white as snow. He can cleanse away all our crimson stains.

Oh, let us believe and trust him, and remember that "without faith it is impossible to please him." Unbelief is the worst of all sins, and is that which so easily besets us.

Who doubts that the apostles were converted, sanctified and saved? Yet these men were taken from a low, sinful state; men that were carnal, earthly, sensual, full of evil; but divine grace wrought on their hearts. They were changed and purified, until John could say, "He that is born of God doth not commit sin."

A Prophecy.—The following was prophesied in 1848, by Father Morrow, a monastery in St. Croix:

"In the last part of the nineteenth century there will be a republic in Switzerland, France and Italy, and signs in the whole world; pestilence, famine, and war; and great cities will be destroyed, and kings and religion be destroyed; and they will seemingly get the victory, but will afterwards be defeated. The Catholic church will be stripped of everything, and the Pope will be kept in captivity by his enemies, and the Pope's chair will be vacant; but there will be no more Popes, for the Son of God will come, and bring peace with him."—Selected.

Once when I was going to give our minister a pretty long list of the sins of one of our people that he was asking after, I began with, "He's dreadful lazy." "That is enough," said he, "all sorts of sins are in that one; that is the sign by which to know a full-fledged sinner."

HOME AND HEALTH.

HINTS ABOUT THE PREVENTION OF SCARLET FEVER.

Scarlet fever is a very infectious and very dangerous disease. A mild case is as infectious as a severe one; and scarlet fever is never so mild that it may not in the long run prove dangerous to life, or even fatal.

One case of scarlet fever is always derived from some other. It is, therefore, the duty of every parent, or person who has charge of a case, to remember that they are responsible for a disease that tends to spread, and to adopt such precautions as will prevent it from doing so. These are all embraced in the words isolation and disinfection.

ISOLATION.

Isolation means the separation of the sick from the neighborhood of every person not necessary for proper nursing and treatment. This may be done in two ways. First, by sending the patient to a hospital, which, as a rule, is the only perfect way. Second, by keeping the patient at home, and cutting off all communication with the healthy. This is more difficult, and in the case of the majority of families impossible to do. It involves, if done perfectly, a great many points, the chief of which are:

1. Send the children who are well out of the house. At least, keep them out of the sick-room.

2. When a choice is possible the room selected should be large, well ventilated, and have a fire burning.

3. Remove carpets, curtains, hair-cloth chairs or sofas, and every unnecessary piece of furniture. Iron bedsteads, hair, or still better, straw mattresses, and kitchen chairs, in short, all articles which will not take in infection, and which can easily be disinfected, are to be preferred. . .

4. The room must be occupied only by the patient and the person nursing, and never entered by any one unnecessarily. No child belonging to the family should go to school. No person nursing a child in scarlet fever should go shopping or visiting. The gown or outer garment should be a washing print, and winceys or other stuff dresses should not be worn. Women, especially, should avoid neighbors' houses where scarlet fever is, particularly during canvalescence. Much mischief is done by parents gossiping in each others' houses, or even making sympathetic visits, in such circumstances.

5. No teacher of a school should receive a pupil who is known to have had scarlet fever recently, or to belong to a family any member of which has scarlet fever, until a certificate of freedom from infection has been presented, signed by a qualified medical practitioner, or by the medical officer of health.

DISINFECTION.

The body, and everything about and discharged from the body of a person infected with scarlet fever, is infected, and therefore capable of imparting the disease to other persons. Disinfection includes all methods by which the infected matter or material can be deprived of infecting power.

Cleanliness, not of a surface sort, but thorough, in all the holes and corners of the house—below the furniture as well as in the middle of the floor, in all the folds of the bedding, as well as in the coverlet—is the first and essential step toward disinfection. All the dust swept up or rubbed down should be placed in the heart of the fire and so burned, not thrown among the ashes and sent to the ash-pit.

Ventilation is a part of cleanliness, and is best maintained by leaving a chink of the window open at the top, and keeping a nice bright fire burning. There is no danger of cold draughts if this is done constantly; but there is danger, if now and then, or only when the doctor or inspector calls, the window is drawn down, and a rush of cold air admitted to the over-heated room.

DISINFECTION DURING SICKNESS.

Scarlet fever patients always cast their skin, and so long as a particle of old skin is visible the patient is infectious.

The dead skin comes off partly in flakes, but partly also as dust, which flies everywhere and clings to everything. To prevent this, so soon as the redness begins to disappear, rub the whole surface of the body over with camphorated oil, mutton fat, or any other agreeable and convenient oil or fat. Do so every night, and whenever the patient is able to stand it, give a warm bath, washing the whole body with carbolic acid soap. A succession of such baths, followed by oiling until the whole skin is removed, will prevent the infectious dust from flying about, and in the end will disinfect the patient's body.

This oiling and bathing is the most important disinfecting process which can be adopted in scarlet fever, but a few more directions are these:

Use separate bits of rag for wiping the poisonons discharge from the mouth and nose, aud burn each bit as it is used.

Put chloride of lime into the vessels used for the discharges, remembering that the spit or discharge from the throat is particularly poisonous.

Prepare a steep in a tub containing a wine-glassful of clear carbolic acid, or a wine-glassful and a half of Burnett's Fluid to each gallon of water, and put all bed and body clothes removed from the patient therein until washed. They should afterward be well boiled.

DISINFECTION AFTER RECOVERY OR DEATH.

After the last bath, when every particle of old skin is away and recovery perfect, a fresh suit of clothes from the skin out should be put on by the patient, and also by the nurse; and disinfection of the apartment, bedding and other infected articles, should forthwith be carried out. It is impossible to give instructions which unskilled persons can follow, as to fumigating rooms, etc.

In case of death the body should be interred with the least possible delay, and in houses where the living must remain in the same apartment, the body ought to be interred immediately.—Herald of Health.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

AFTERWARD.

Now, the sowing and the weeping,
Working hard and waiting long;
Afterward, the golden reaping,
Harvest home and grateful song.

Now, the pruning, sharp, unsparing,
Scattered blossom, bleeding shoot;
Afterward, the plenteous bearing
Of the Master's pleasant fruit.

Now, the long and toilsome duty,
Stone by stone to carve and bring;
Afterward the perfect beauty
Of the palace of the King.

Now, the tuning and the tension,
Wailing minors, discord strong;
Afterward, the grand ascension
Of the hallelujah song.

Now, the spirit conflict-riven,
Wounded heart, unequal strife;
Afterward, the triumph given,
And the victor's crown oi life.

Now, the training strange and lowly,
Unexplained and tedious now;
Afterward, the service holy,
And the Master's "Enter thou!"

THE WATCH TOWER.

"In such an hour as ye think not."

A short time ago, in a conversation, the question was asked, why is it that there is such confusion, and opposition and deflection so frequent among professing christians?

The writer replied, that while things were not as should be expected among them, still it ought not occasion any surprise, for those differences and dissensions and deflections were only forebodings, along with a host of other signs in the civil and material worlds, of the disruption and passing away of the present dispensation.

The remarks were not so cordially received, and the questioner soon disclosed the fact that he was among the numerous class whose expectations for the ultimate success of Christianity before Christ's coming were exceedingly strong and hopeful. "O!" said he, with evident satisfaction, "that is an old story of Christ's coming soon. Three hundred years ago, in Luther's time, and many times since, dates have been fixed for the second advent, but all have failed in being correct. There is far too much of this studying prophecy, and fixing of times and dates for the destruction of the world. The prophecies are too deep for men and better be let alone."

Without saying a word in reference to the indifferent and the ignorant, such is the way many intelligent and good workers for the cause of religion allow themselves to be misled in regard to the most striking truths. They can discern very well the face of the sky in the gross deflections of christians, and in the decay and change of things politic, but cannot read the signs of the times, as too often, with reproach they are ready to say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

It is too often taken as an argument against the possible advent of our blessed Lord, that expectations in the past have not been realized, and that the setting of times and dates and seasons by the over-zealous students of prophecy has done little short of bringing the whole subject into contempt. But it is not saying too much to declare that the grand subject of our Lord's second advent claims to-day as much thought and attention, if not more, than it ever did.

To come to the conclusion that the Lord Jesus will fail of his promise to come to this earth of ours in power and great glory at his appointed time, because weak fallible man has erred and miscalculated, is worse than folly. To reject such a glorious promise on such a weak and trifling plea, is certainly to reject the testimony of prophets and apostles; nay more, to reject the words of our Lord himself, who said in one of the most solemn hours of his earthly ministry,—"Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." And again in another place, where he depicts the suddenness of the event,—"Watch ye therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

These passages are not intended to make prophets of men, but to warn them that there is a day of assize when judgment shall be meted out, and to keep them in readiness, whether living or dying, to meet the Son of God.

The constant habit of setting aside from the thoughts such passages as these, is only intensifying the means for the fulfillment of the Savior's prophecy. Surely if people allow themselves to grow more and more careless and disbelieving in regard to the second advent, is it not what may be expected, as the more careless they grow the nearer are they brought to that time of which Christ said, "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?"

The last days of the Christian dispensation will be its worst days, and the deflections of christians and others will be the more and more intensified the nearer its disruption. If some were found in Luther's day to look for the near advent of the Lord, and if many since his day have eagerly looked for his appearing, far less will be found, if any indeed, to expect him on the eve of the judgment. Yes many, even then, who long watched and waited will be slumbering and sleeping when the cry is made, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

Some, as I before hinted, are kept from giving much thought on the second advent from the great results that they yet expect from the spreading of Christianity. But the Christianity of the present is too faulty to accomplish the results they so confidently anticipate. Certainly not all that is counted such, is by any means capable of treasuring divine truth in the world around us.

The Christianity of to-day and the Christianity of the past can scarcely be called identical. The Christianity of the past mainly consisted in preaching the cross, living for Christ, and a strong upholding the faith once delivered to the saints, but that of the present, for the most part, is far from doing this.

In the present day Christianity is greatly corrupted by worldliness; so much so, that it is difficult to distinguish sometimes between those who are connected with the church and those who are not. The line of separation is not clearly marked, and hence we too often see among professing christians the same love of pleasures, and wealth, and dress, that we know to be common among the followers of the world.

The Christianity of the present suffers from the inroads of science. Already, with too much success, has human progress been made a part of it, and by some it is accepted only in so far as they can reconcile it with scientific or natural law.

Again the Christianity of the present is corrupted by false doctrine. Christians at one time, notwithstanding how they differed with respect to their way of worship, were at least jealous for the great doctrines of the Bible. But now there is such freedom of thought, such latitude of opinion, among all denominations, that it is a part of heroism to call in question and doubt the true foundations of the faith. Is it a wonder, then, that we see a deep shade thrown over the truth of our Lord's divinity; an evasion of the doctrine of the atonement, and a denial of the resurrection of the body? Is it a wonder, then, that many are carried to and fro by every wind of doctrine, and led to give heed unto seducing spirits and the doctrine of demons? Such a Christianity may please the world, but it will never convert it by bringing Christ into every heart. It may say peace and safety, but never truly fit men for that judgment, "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Surely if such a Christianity as exists now among us were going to bring all men to the cross, Christ never would have said, in referring to the days of Noah and Lot, "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

Without a solitary passage more, this gives us a forcible portraiture of the apostacy of the last days; for the Lord here evidently forewarns us, that it is while people are living in carelessness and false security, and for the most part given up to world worship that "he will come as the thief at night-fall, or in such an hour as we think not."

None believed in Noah's day (but the righteous few) that God was going to send the flood. But it came, and swept them all away except those who were in the ark. The people of Sodom thought perhaps they were secure enough until the fire came from heaven and destroyed them all except Lot, his wife, and his daughters. And our Savior declares that the like things will happen again at his second appearing; for it is "when men shall say peace and safety, that sudden destruction cometh upon them."

Surely if any subject, by reflection and study, can help us to watchfulness and searchings of heart, it is the second personal and sudden appearing of our great God and Savior; for so sure as judgment will be meted out to all those who know not God and obey not the gospel, so sure will everlasting blessedness be the portion of those who are found steadfast in the faith and loving the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and in truth. Blessed is that servant whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching."—Prophetic Times.

HISTORY'S TESTIMONY TO CHRISTIANITY'S TRUTH.

The Divine origin and truth of Christianity is shown and proved in many ways. Its evidences may be termed legion, and all its enemies have never been able to refute them to the satisfaction of truthful, sincere, honest, and scientific minds. It comes before us with a strong prestige of universal opinion in its favor. All that is best and noblest in the world at the present day, all the best and noblest that has been in the world the last eighteen hundred years, is due to belief in this gospel. It comes down to us with the full assent of the greatest intellects of our own country, and of thousands and tens of thousands of intellects of the second order. All the countries of the world where Protestant Christianity is believed have risen to civilization and liberty; where Christianity is not is barbarism, despotism, and slavery.

We find the civilized world full of Christianity, and if we go back as far as we will in the literature and history of eighteen centuries we find historical notices of various kinds, some by heathen writers, some by christian writers, proving the existence of Christianity in the world, and a belief in Jesus Christ as a divine teacher, a worker of miracles, as crucified, as risen from the dead. We have extant the writings of Ignatius, Pliny, Tacitus, Josephus, and all these writers, christian, heathen, Jewish, show us bodies or churches of believers already existing in considerable numbers. No event of ancient history has an equal amount of historical evidence to prove it. The history of the life and death of Jesus Christ is affirmed by more irrefragable testimony than any other event in ancient history. It is interlaced with innumerable threads of profane history; and it is inconceivable that a woof of so much truth should cross a warp of falsehood. But the force of the remark is immensely increased when we recollect that this historical character of Christianity extends to many centuries before the birth of Christ, for the New Testament is based upon, and makes itself responsible for, the Old Testament, and the Old Testament is as inextricably interwoven with the profane history of contemporary nations as the Gospel history is with that of Rome and Judea; so that the history of every nation under the sun contributes something in support of Christianity.

Reader, as Christianity has thus been given by God to the world to be its balm and solace, has it touched and moved you? Have you allowed it to have its legitimate influence over you?—London Times.

THE TEMPLES OF GOD.

J. R. SMITH.

A temple, says Webster, is "any place in which the Divine presence specially resides." The inspired apostle, while addressing the Corinthians, says—"Ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people." Again, to the children of Israel God made a conditional promise,—if they would keep his commandments, he would "walk among them." The definition of the term "among" signifies "conjoined or associated with."

It is written of Noah that "he was a just and perfect man." Enoch also was a perfect man, and "walked with God," and "was translated that he should not see death; for he had the testimony that he pleased God."

To walk with God we must be in perfect harmony with him, and obey his written Word; for "how can two walk together except they be agreed?" Therefore to walk with God is to live in sweet communion with him; having the abiding witness of the Holy Spirit. We must walk in all his ordinances and commandments blameless, and have a conscience void of offence toward God and man. We must bring forth fruits of living faith, and have the Divine assurance that we are approved and accepted of God. We must submit ourselves to be guided and directed by his Holy Spirit It is very important that we walk according to the requirements of the gospel; for God has never promised to dwell with any others save those who obey him. "He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in God, and God in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by his Spirit which he hath given us." Those who dwell in God and in whom God dwells are no longer strangers to each other. They possess the Holy Spirit of promise. They know they have passed from death unto life, and have the blessed assurance that their names are written in the Lamb's book of life.

If we are not very watchful and prayerful, these temples may become defiled; and "if any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." There are many ways whereby the temple of God may become defiled. They very frequently become defiled by the unruliness of the tongue, which fills the world with contention and strife. It is a little member, but James says "it is a fire, a world of iniquity." On account of giving this unruly member too much latitude, professed followers of Christ are barren and unfruitful. They do not dwell in Christ, nor Christ in them. They often complain of the way being rough and thorny, and of the cross being heavy and hard to be borne; but God says—"My ways are ways of pleasantness, and all my paths are peace." On account of giving loose rein to the tongue, many professed followers of Christ have lost the blessedness they once knew. They no longer walk with God; they deny Christ by their daily life and conversation, and are living under condemnation. Occasionally, in a lively prayer meeting, you will hear them confess they are doing things they ought not, and "making crooked paths"; which is all very good, as far as confession is concerned; but leave off doing the things you ought not to do; leave off making crooked paths, and learn to "make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed." Leave off backbiting, cease to do evil, and "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." There is an enemy. Beware of him. Be on your guard, for he has come down with great power, knowing that his time is short. Thank God that his time is short. Sometimes he transforms himself into an angel of light; therefore be very watchful, lest he make error appear to be truth.

Let us live "blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation." Let us be like a city set on a hill, whose light cannot be hid. Then we shall shine forth as the light of the world; holding forth the Word of life," and will rejoice in the day of Christ that we have not run in vain, neither labored in vain." Thank God! he has got a little flock who have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with him in white, for they are worthy." God has got a few down here in this nineteenth century, who have never bowed the knee to Baal, and they are going through by the royal way of the cross. They "have access, by faith, into this grace wherein they stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." They glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto them.

UNEASINESS IN EUROPE.

WM. D. TUCKER.

All over the world at the present time there is "a fearful looking for" of something that is coming upon the earth. This is especially so among the nations of Europe. There seems to be great uneasiness and anxiety in regard to political affairs, and vast preparations in the military line among the respective governments, which looks as if they were fearing some great event, and were preparing to meet it. That event will probably be a continental war.

Jealousy among the European nations is causing them to lay out vast sums of money for arms and ammunition, and thousands upon thousands of soldiers are being gathered together—for what? For "the battle of that great day of God Almighty." This we believe to be true because we have passed the signs which Christ gave us as foretokens of the end, and next in order is "the time of trouble"—the great battle—and then "the sign of the Son of man in heaven."

The following we copy from the New York Weekly Witness of May 15th.

"POLITICAL UNEASINESS IN EUROPE.

During the first week of September there will be in session at the Hague, the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations. It is expected that the meeting will be large and influential; and the topics to be discussed are the methods for reducing the armaments of Europe, the delays which should precede declarations of war between nations, and arbitration as a means to settle international disputes. Whatever will tend to make wars less frequent, and direct the energies of nations into better efforts than entering into trials of strength on the field of battle is deserving of every aid and support from christian nations. The association above mentioned may do a great deal by wise discussions and appropriate resolutions, not only towards preventing war, but diminishing the horrors which invariably attend the hostile encounter of vast bodies of armed men.

"But the signs in the political world are not such as betoken a prolonged period of peace in Europe. France is daily adding to her armaments, and busily drilling her soldiers in anticipation of the time when she can retaliate upon Germany for the humiliation inflicted upon her in and at the close of the late war. Germany views these preparations with alarm, knowing not only the deep-seated resentment of the enemy which she had so recently vanquished, but the possibility that other countries, jealous of the new empire, may join France in a war of revenge. Without attaching too much importance to the dispatch published a few days ago, stating that a war party in Germany was urging a war with France, it cannot be denied that there is a very widely spread uneasiness throughout the continent of Europe.

"On working men and the producing classes generally a war will fall heavily, both in the demands upon them for service in the field and in the payment of taxes. They regard the future with apprehension, and will readily seek an asylum where they will not be subject to exacting and oppressive military laws, and be liable to sustain burdensome taxation."

The next and most important feature among the nations of Europe is the deep and subtle revenge of the Catholic powers because of lost authority and constant humilation from her adversaries, the Protestants of Europe. That the Roman Catholic power will make one last great effort—her death struggle—is evident from what her leading orators say upon this subject, and what indeed many say.

The spirit of Catholicism is that of deep-seated hidden revenge, which will burst forth in demoniacal fury when the desired moment arrives, and her subjects will fight for life and ecclesiastical power to the end, and then will be "the time of trouble," such as has never been; no, nor never shall be.

To escape that terrible "time of trouble," our names must be found written "in the "Lamb's book of life," and remain there "until the indignation is overpast;" and then we shall receive "the crown of life," and live and dwell with Christ in his eternal glorious kingdom.

O friends of Jesus, are we awake to a realizing sense of our position in regard to the eternal welfare of mankind? Are we urging sinners to "flee from the wrath to come?" Let us be up and doing, "for the night cometh when no man can work." Sinner, delay not one moment. To-morrow never comes. Soon it will be forever too late. Flee to the Rock of ages. There is no time to spare. Lord, help us all to be ready when Jesus comes, is my prayer. Amen.

Haydenville, Mass.

SPENDING MONEY.—Money is hard to get and easy to spend. There is peril in it, and there is blessedness in it. To the wise and good it is the best of servants, to the weak and foolish it is the most terrible of tyrants.

"I BESEECH YOU, BRETHREN, SUFFER THE WORD OF EXHORTATION."

S. S. BREWER.

Dearly beloved reader, permit me to invite your attention to the solemn fact that you are now living at a time when what the apostle in his day called "the ages to come" (Eph. 2: 7) is about closing up, and the Arbiter of human destiny is coming to decide once and forever who has accepted "the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."

"The mystery of God" is finishing. It is now the season set forth in the parable, called "the time of harvest." It is the eventful period when it appears to me that mankind are shaping their destiny, and will occupy the prophetic position designated in 1 Cor. 15: 23—"every man in his own order," band, troop, or company. The "three unclean spirits" have now about consummated their prophetic mission, and have their myriads of amphibious croakers brooding in every department of the religious and political world, rendering their respective departments hideous and repulsive with their heterogeneous and bombastic vaporings.

I feel safe in saying that never has Satan assumed so many successful devices to perplex, annoy, and if possible destroy the children of God, and invalidate his sacred Word, as at this very moment. Perils seem mysteriously to concentre. "And no marvel: for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works." 2 Cor. 11: 14, 15.

This present dispensation will terminate precisely as God hath declared by his Son and the holy apostles; and under precisely such a condition of the church, world, and nature, as we see at this very time. The present condition of the world is clearly indicated in the holy Scriptures, and to be taken by faith through the light of Christ's testimony as the certain, unerring precursor of the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

We have watched the signs of the times in the light of God's Word for many years. Scenes of surpassing magnitude have frequently passed before our observation, of many of which we have spoken. They are too multifarious to attempt to enter into any detail. Permit me, however, to refer to one in particnlar, as that is the last one enunciated by the Son of God that precedes "the shaking of the powers of the heavens," when the "sign of the Son of man" is to be seen in heaven, and all the tribes of the earth shall mourn.

That sign was the falling stars, Nov. 13th, 1833. O how grand, yet inspiring, was the event! To me it was rendered more solemn on account of persons gathering under my chamber windows, and calling me to arise, exclaiming in a doleful manner—"The day of judgment has come." O solemn, sad, and to me awful thought! Millions that might now prepare to meet their soon coming Judge in peace, and hail him with rapturous delight, will permit these evidences all to pass unheeded, with all the gracious invitations of the gospel, and call in vain for mercy amid the ravings of despair.

Let me exhort all to make their calling and election sure. A point of time, a moment's space, only remains. The ages that in the apostles' day were to come, are now ending. Please keep ever in mind the fact that the very next event which the Son of God declared should succeed the falling of the stars is the shaking of the powers of the heavens; then, the sign of the Son of man in heaven. Mark well what he declares will be the result: "And then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." O how precious, blessed, consoling, these words that follow, to every true lover of the coming One. Read them, dear, tried, tempted ones. Weary and tempest-tossed brother and sister, be faithful; watch, pray, and patiently wait.

O this blessed promise—"And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Then will cease the night of weeping, and these poor tottering bodies, that groan and travail in pain, will, in an instant, in the twinkling of an eye, "bear the image of the heavenly."

It is written concerning those of Thessalonica, in the apostles' day, that they "turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." The church has waited through a long dark night of tribulation and mourning. The bride of Christ now occupies an entirely different position. It is now an expectant position,—a looking for the Lord from heaven; not a revelation of "that man of sin," but the Lord from heaven, "who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Dearly beloved, let us labor to enter into rest. Ever keep in mind the fact that we are engaged in an uncompromising warfare against sin in every shape. Ours is an irrepressible conflict. Ancient Roman liberty was declared to be maintained at the expense of "eternal vigilance"; and so is the liberty of the gospel. O maintain it like God's valiant ones.

In conclusion, let me exhort all to be sober, for the end of all things is certainly at hand. "And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." "Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Amen. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

CONSCIENCE is man's most faithful friend.

MORE WAR RUMORS.

The alarm created by the recent minatory note of Germany to Belgium has scarcely been allayed for more than a week, before new warlike rumors find expression in a letter published in the Times last Thursday, upon which the Standard comments as follows:—"A very significant letter, from which we give an extract in another column, is published by the Times of to-day. It is written apparently by a Frenchmen whose knowledge of English is almost perfect, and relates to the grave apprehensions as to the immediate future now felt among the people best informed in France. Germany is said to be longing for the peace and security which are endangered by the rapid recovery of France. Alone she can easily manage France. She has ascertained that England will not move unless Belgium is touched. Italy will be quiet, and so will Austria. It only remains to ascertain the temper of Russia.

"This will be done at the forth coming interview between the Emperors of Russia and Germany. Then, if Russia allows, an army is to be marched to Paris to extort a treaty limiting the French army, and imposing an indemnity of rather more than £20,000,000 a year for twenty years. The argument supporting it has much consistency. The Times, in a leading article, throws ridicule upon it, but leaves absolutely untouched the chief reasons for suspecting that there may be some truth in it, preferring to rely on the idea that Prince Bismarck's scruples would prevent him from committing such a crime, and that whatever he might wish his master would not be found pliable. But the present apprehension of war finds its chief support in facts which the Times utterly ignores, but to which we have before called attention. The military power and the prosperity of France are increasing side by side; but Germany is being ruined by her armaments. She dares not disarm, she cannot afford to go on as now. What then? Is there any other choice but to crush the only enemy she fears, and rest in peace?"

Another London paper remarks upon this: "Next Monday, May 10th, the Emperor of Russia will visit his 'friend and brother' Emperor who reigns over united Germany. He will remain at Berlin several days, and while, so far as the external world is concerned, the time will pass in reviews and festivals, we shall certainly not be far wrong if we assume that a stratum of sober business will underlie the glittering surface. A feeling has gone abroad, partly caused by recent utterances in Berlin itself, and partly the fruit of effervescent French alarms, that there is some imminent danger of an European war, or at least a renewal of the secular strife between the Teutons and the Gauls. Since an uneasy feeling has found expression, it will certainly be the subject of commentaries more or less to the point. The constant flitting to and fro of warlike rumors necessarily creates astir in the public mind.

"While certain German newspapers, moved by the reorganization of the French army, indulge in somewhat provocative criticisms, a genuine or affected fear seems to have taken possession of some among the French people. The wildest stories are circulated. Prince Bismarck hopes to gain something from the Czar's sojourn in Berlin. He will, it is said in the Austrian capital, assure the Emperor that, while Germany has only peace in view, French armaments suggest doubts as to the aims of France; and starting from this basis, he will urgently request the Czar to set before the Government of Marshal MacMahon the pacific intentions of the German Court. Russian power has recovered once more a position in Europe, which imparts great importance to the line she may think proper to follow under the somewhat perplexed condition of the Continent."

It is unnecessary to say that Russia will turn the present state of things to the best advantage for the promotion of her ambitious policy in regard to the acquisition of Turkish and Asiatic territory. But whether the next move upon the European chess-board will be an alliance between Russia and Germany, or between Russia and France, it is difficult to hazard an opinion.

This much, however, is quite clear from the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation, according to standard interpretation, that a tremendous and unparalleled war will before long break out in Europe, in which those nations will act the prominent part, and the result will be quite contrary to what most people would at present consider probable. —Signs of Our Times.

BIBLE STUDY.

It is incredible to any one who has not made the experiment, what a proficiency may be made in that knowledge which maketh wise unto salvation, by studying the Scriptures with reference to the parallel passages, without any other commentary or exposition than that which the different parts furnish for each other.

I will not scruple to assert that the most illiterate christian, if he can but read his English Bible, and will take the pains to reed it in this manner, will not only retain all that practical knowledge which is necessary to his salvation, but, by God's blessing, he will become learned in everything relating to his religion, in such a degree that he will not be liable to be misled, either by the refined arguments or by false assertions of those who endeavor to ingraft their own opinions upon the oracles of God. He may be safely ignorant of all philosophy except what is to be learned from the sacred book, which, indeed, contains the highest philosophy adapted to the lowest apprehensions. He may safely remain ignorant of all history except so much of the history of the first ages of the Jewish and of the Christian church, as is to be gathered from the canonical books of the Old and New Testaments.

Let him study these in the manner I recommend, and let him never cease to pray for the illumination of that Spirit by which these books were dictated, and the whole compass of abstruse philosophy and recondite history shall furnish no argument with which the perverse will of man shall be able to shake the learned christian's faith.—Bishop Horsley.

MAN'S POWER AND GOD'S POWER.

Mr. Moody recently said, in London, that "If all the talent and ability which are expended in the crusade against the evil of strong drink were directed to bringing souls to Christ, we would not want any act of parliament to keep men from drunkenness."

So we find the above in a religious exchange, and we do not doubt either the genuineness or the truth of the quotation. The bane of our later religion is its uniform and utter detachment from society as an instrumentality, or rather as the instrumentality divinely ordained for the suppression and cure of the various forms of social sin that afflict and curse our world. The common thought is, that religion, as a business of Sunday, and as an in-door affair, to be confined within church walls is a very commendable and a very genteel thing. And on account of the good credit which public opinion has come to associate with religion, and because of its general recognition now-a-days as a sort of social accomplishment, its profession is assumed for reasons of public respectability and caste. The idea that christianity, the simple gospel, Christ's naked religion, unreinforced by policies that are human, unsupplemented by man-made auxiliaries, is able to cope with and destroy sin in its multiform social aspects, is a modern absurdity! Such an idea was natural enough and necessary, in the earlier centuries, and the simple-minded christians who lived in primitive times, who trusted in Christ's gospel alone for the correction of social wrongs and the uprooting of public sins, are entitled to our forbearing judgment, and are more to be pitied than blamed, because they did not possess the advantages and modernly patented methods of "reform" which characterize our later civilization! "Thank God, that we are not as other men, or even as those poor publican" sinners of the post-apostolic centuries!

We would like to see a generation of (religiously) sensible people, that would just hold out of the way their humanly concocted plans for "reforming" society, (as they call it), and let the pure, simple, naked gospel get at the people! But no. Human conceits are so plausible, human devices so hopeful, human pride so constantly and so eagerly in quest of something wherein to glory—in short, man is so much wiser than God, in the matter of rescuing society from its wrongs and its wickedness, that between the gospel and the lost masses there must be thrust man-made systems and processes for the doing of that which the mere gospel is thought unequal to do! To do the simplest things that need to be done in the way of "reform" (so-called) men must organize a plan. To save men from swearing, an "anti-swearing" society must be organized —to save them from tobacco, an "anti-tobacco" society—to save them from drunkenness, an "anti-drinking" society. Meetings must be called—a "moral reform" constitution adopted—a "moral reform" president (whose vanity is tickled by his or her elevation to office) elected; also a "moral reform" secretary, (who exults in the opportunity the office brings to get his or her name into print); also a "moral reform" treasurer, who not unfrequently awaits the largest influx of funds to perpetrate a "moral reform" (defalcation); and so on. Committees must be appointed to report resolutions that in the disinterested, self-sacrificing, philanthropical, christian understanding of the case which the society of "moral reform" entertains, it is deeply and wickedly wrong to swear, to steal, to use tobacco, to drink alcohol! Of course, the "resolutions" are unanimously adopted, and go into or rather on to the society's platform, which is already mortised, and ready for the "planks." And what of all this? Nothing! Only a little brief, spasmodic protest against sin, and—a little self-glorification! That's all. Swearers still swear; thieves will steal; smokers and snuffers still snuff and smoke; and drinkers still drink!

And where is the gospel, meantime? No where! That is—not the true gospel. Men are not looking to that to reach or to consummate the "reform." It is to the organization" they are looking. It is from the "society" that they expect salvation, not from Christ's gospel. It is man's wisdom, not God's power that is trusted in! We have a very deep conviction that the very best thing for the world that could happen to this modern race of Babel-building "reformers," would be some such divine visitation as might confound and disperse its multitudinous babblers, in some way similar to that in which the Almighty anciently confounded and scattered those impious busybodies on the plains of Shinar. Certain are we that this is so, if such a judgment would bring the world back to its earlier reliance upon the gospel for its social salvation, and to its plain, honest, simple trust in God for the redemption of its lost generations!

Do the people of this age believe that "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation?" Then let them resort to it—and use it—and throw away their thousand-and-one "moral reform" devices, we say. Amen.—Banner of Holiness.

THE WATCHMAN'S PRESENT DUTY.

A watchman's duty is always connected with present anticipated danger, and involves a knowledge of the danger, and a warning to those exposed to it. A watchman is not prepared to attend to his duties until he understands what things are liable to take place to produce such danger, so as to watch for their occurrence. A mistake in that department would be liable to produce a fatal neglect of duty.

If a watchman upon the walls of a city was anticipating no danger from external foes, and only turned his eyes to see the movement of internal enemies, an invading army might fatally invest the place, while the inhabitants were reposing in confidence, that if danger should approach from any quarter, the watchman would give them timely warning. It is therefore pre-eminently important that all watchmen should first gain a knowledge of the persons, elements, and things, their positions, actions, and designs threatening the safety of the lives, happiness, or property of those for whom he acts as an agent of safety.

The second imperative duty of a watchman is to give his special and unremittant attention to looking for those things of which he is notified, as the agencies of harm.

The third duty in proper order is to give timely and intelligent warning to those exposed to approaching danger, when the threatening agencies are seen in the positions indicating trouble. These principles are involved in the duties of all watchmen, whether they are guarding the temporal or eternal interests of men.

All governments, whether human or divine, which are designed to become guardians to the interests of their subjects, employ watchmen, in some capacity, for their safety. All human associations, political, ecclesiastical, financial and social, families, states and empires, are put under such protecting care.

These principles are so self-evident, as to their importance and merciful results, that all men, whether civilized or heathen, adopt them.

God, the great father and friend of all his creatures, has incorporated these beneficent principles into every department of his government. He has infused them into the natures of the lower grades of earthly creatures, so that their instincts produce protective governments, under which some of a class are selected to watch, to protect the safety of others. A robin or raven will sound the note of alarm to summon help, and notify the exposed to escape from the snare when danger is seen. Beasts and fish have sentinels and signals, by which their communities are notified of approaching danger. Even the inanimate elements of the earth and heavens give alarming tokens of coming convulsions. Death usually hoists its signals, and gives its watching victims time to offer a dying prayer and pronounce a parting blessing.

All these things prove that the great Originator of earthly history has mercifully introduced these principles of safety and salvation, through all the departments of his government, where snares and dangers exist. This important truth appears in its most lovely aspect connected with the church of God.

The militant church is represented as being in constant and imminent danger, exposed to a great variety of snares and enemies, which threaten her present and eternal interests. God represents the church as the special object of his care and love; therefore we might expect a corresponding manifestation of his divine watch-care over her.

When we turn to the Holy Scriptures, we find that he has made the most abundant provisions for such watch-care, both as to means and agencies. He represents himself as standing at the head of all watchful beings, earthly and heavenly, who guard with untiring vigilance the Lamb's espoused Bride, while she is exposed to the insults, seductions, and judgments of a corrupted, cursed world. He limits Satan in his purposes to destroy her, and makes the thunder-bolt, earthquake, sea-storm, and consuming fire harmless in her presence. He sends the angels, visible and invisible, to guard her foot-path, so that no beast can destroy her, or the winds and tempests overwhelm her.

When the blood-thirsty nations attempt to annihilate her, the heavenly watchers lead her into the solitary wilderness and protect her there. When the world offers her gold, fame, and worldly pleasures, her heart is filled with a loathing for their ensnaring vanities.

God also employs men as watchers to go about his Zion, to see what foes and perils they can descry within and without the sacred city. God appoints and calls men to this work; for he will entrust the selections for work so responsible and vastly important, to those liable to mistake the requisite preparations and qualifications for such sacred duties. The interests involved in the faithful discharge of these heaven-appointed works are too infinite to allow of worldly policy or human speculation, to vary them as to the work done or the results designed to be accomplished.

God will employ no men in this work, on which eternal life is hinged, whom he cannot control by his Word and Spirit. They must consent to receive their instruction, as to the nature of their work, the means to be employed for its accomplishment, and the specified periods when particular parts of it must be done, from him.

The man who engages to work for a farmer must first consent to do farm work. He must then consent to use the axe, plow, hoe, and scythe. He must consent to do the spring work in the spring, and the fall work in the fall.

Some men would be glad to receive the farmer's money for their labor, but they want to be gentlemen, and work in the counting room. So it is in the christian work. Many desire to receive the reward of the righteous—eternal life—but they are determined to float on the popular wave with gloved hands, and not do the unwelcome work of going without the camp, bearing reproach for Jesus' sake.

God gives his watchmen instruction in his Word, what enemies and dangers his people will be exposed to, the direction from which they will come, and the manner of their attack. Some of these are always present; some depend on special circumstances, and others come at stated periods. The temptations of Satan, charms and influences of the world, and the fleshly lusts, are always threatening, and the faithful servant will always keep them before the church as present dangers.

There are certain wicked habits, customs, and fashions of the people, which vary in different places and times, according to changing circumstances. These should be carefully studied, and their nature and danger, as presented in the Scriptures, shown to the people; then if they are persisted in, the guilt will fall upon them, and the watchman will be blameless.

There are specific events which happen, some at stated periods, and others only once in the history of the world. These are always the most dangerous to the generations exposed to them, because they are not so readily understood, and are of that uature which more fully blinds the people to their real danger; so that a larger share of the generations exposed to them are ensnared than those of any other class.

In countries where destructive earthquakes frequently occur, the people are ready to believe, on slight evidence, that one is approaching; and their frequency causes them to prepare for them in erecting their buildings, and keeping in general readiness. But in this country, where long ages have passed without such an occurrence, it would be very hard to convince the people that such a catastrophe was impending. They are not looking for such an event, and therefore have made no preparation in their buildings, or otherwise to meet it.

It is perfectly vain to talk about people preparing for that which they do not expect. No man can do it in worldly matters, much less in spiritual. The best of christians, when disease brings them down to death's door, find some christian duties to do, which they never could have done before. There are the last exhortations and warnings, the last testimony of christian confidence which can only be given in the trying hour. These were their finishing acts of loyalty to Christ, just as important and necessary as any they had ever performed. So it will be with the church when the last judgment comes. A specific preparation to meet it, like the last acts of a dying christian, must be made.

To meet the emergency, God has given signs, as forewarnings to his church, of the coming judgment, as he has given sickness as a warning of coming death; and they are designed to produce the same result—wean us from the world, and cause us to make all things ready for the great change.

This principle has been manifested in the divine economy in connection with every judgment that God has sent upon men since the fall. Preparations for the events depended upon receiving the evidences God gave of their approach, which proves that he designed those signs to cause those who saw them to prepare for the events they indicated.

These facts show that the watchman's duty is very imperative and responsible, when God's judgments are approaching; for he is required to give to the people the truths God has appropriated, for the purpose of causing them to prepare for the event. It seems to us exceedingly dangerous to teach that any course, outside of this plan of God, will lead to safety, and prepare the people for the last approaching judgment.

God's remedies for human malady are never sweetened to suit the depraved palate; so that his prescriptions can never be relished by the worldly masses; while Satan's are always designed to suit the popular taste, and therefore open a broad way in which the multitudes of a religious world rush gaily and pleasantly down to perdition.

The great temptation to Christ's servants has always been to take away the odium of the cross, by holding back some of the most bitterly hated truths, and half disowning their faithful advocates, and thus open a wide door of supposed usefulness, which is only a wide gate to the broad way.

Ye servants of Christ, beware how you prepare soft pillows for your heads, when eternal life depends upon not going to sleep. Be sure that you understand how to give the trump a certain sound, so that men shall prepare for the battle, and not feel that they are entering upon a glorious truce in this world. J. C.

REST.

While we are under the curse we shall feel the weaknesses and imperfections of our frail bodies, which are subject to weariness and disease under the pressure of mental and manual labor. Our mental labor, for the last seven months, has been very arduous and unremitting, not having one hour, not even during our sickness, of rest from pressing cares and exhausting anxieties, excepting the limited sleep we have enjoyed. We now feel a duty and almost a necessity to obtain a little mental rest, which Providence has seemed to open the way for us to enjoy for a few coming weeks.

Bro. Grant has returned from California, and will take the care and responsibility of the Office work, and give us the opportunity of retiring to N. H., our native State, and the scenes of our earlier experiences. Our private address for June will be Sugar Hill, N. H. J. C.

LOGANSPORT.

We have been spending the last few days in Logansport, Indiana. It is a growing city, containing some fifteen thousand inhabitants. We found some true christian men and women, but the general religious interest is very low. We became somewhat acquainted with six ministers of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Christian, and Methodist denominations, who look upon Logansport as a hard soil to cultivate. There is manifested an unusual state of indifference in religious matters by the people. Business and pleasure receive due attention, while but few appear to be making any preparation for the world to come. Most live as though there was no hereafter, and no judgment to come. It is a sad sight to see men so completely careless about their eternal interest. If it were not thus, the evidence would not be so clear that we are in the last days. We may expect there will be a general lack of interest in sacred things at the time of the end, while the true bride of Christ, composed of all the real christians in the world, will be wholly given up to her divine Lord, anxiously longing and waiting for his coming.

Our meetings were held in the Christian [Campbellite] chapel, and the Methodist Tabernacle. We gave a course of lectures on the prophecies of Daniel and John, illustrated by the great chart. Some expressed a desire to become disciples of Jesus, and others were very much interested in looking at the evidence which shows that the kingdom of God will soon be given to the saints of the Most High. So far as we could learn, these were the first lectures that had been given in this city on the prophecies and signs of the times. The people seemed astonished at the strength of the evidence in favor of the speedy coming of Christ. They had thought that those who have been looking for the second advent of our Savior, based their whole argument on some chronological points and periods which have passed, and hence the whole thing was a failure; but when they saw that the strong evidence of the Lord's soon appearing was not affected in the least because some had set times when they had expected the Savior to appear, then they were glad to hear on the subject. Those times were based on human calculation, so far as their chronology was concerned. But the grand evidence lies in the fulfillment of prophecy in the accomplished history of the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman kingdoms. The prophecy relating to the last one, appears to be about all fulfilled; therefore the kingdom of God cannot be far in the future. We found the interest in these things increased while the meetings continued. They were closed last evening (May 23d). We had a pleasant home with Bro. and Sr. Walker, who love the blessed hope. They formerly lived in Nevada, Ohio. M. G.

THE POPE'S WAIL.

Quite frequently things come to the surface, showing that the Pope and his supporters are much troubled about the situation of affairs in Popedom. His prospect is gloomy, and growing darker continually. It is said that on the 5th of May, the Pope received a thousand French pilgrims. In reply to an address from these pilgrims, in which he was assured that France wished to atone for the past by a greater affection, he said:

"How can I help counting upon France? It has given me a thousand proofs of love. The more we are threatened, the more it is necessary to show that love by all possible means. Pius V. had armies and fleets which fought against the Mohammedans, and he made pilgrimages, and when Colonna said to him, 'Rest and preserve a life which is precious,' Pius refused to rest, and he saw the Turk defeated. We are without armies and fleets. The Governments which reign are deaf to our voice. I myself am a prisoner in this palace, deprived of the consolation of going out to bathe the holy stairs with my tears, but in spirit I am with you. Our arms are prayer and an exemplary life. Let us bow our head; let us adore the Divine decrees; let us implore the Celestial benedictions for a threatened France and world!" M. G.

HOME AGAIN.—We arrived home from California to-day (May 27th), after being absing over seven months, having enjoyed perfect health and "perfect peace" all the time, for which we thank the dear Lord. We found friends all well, excepting Bro. Boutell, who has been very sick, but is slowly improving. Things in the office have gone on nicely during the winter, and the outlook is encouraging for continued prosperity. Praise the Lord. M. G.

WE spent Sabbath, May 30th, with the church at Natick, Mass., and had a blessed refreshing from the Lord. Members of different churches were present, taking an active part in the meetings, and feasting on the word of the Lord. Their eyes are being opened to the signs of the times, and they are preparing to meet the coming King. M. G.

THE FUTURE.

He who will carefully and thoughtfully consider the future, in all its overwhelming interests, must come to the conclusion that the affairs of this life are of but small moment, when compared with what is yet to be revealed. One is temporal, the other eternal.

There are certain great events in the future, that well command the attention of every one upon the earth, when they shall transpire. The kings, mighty men, great men, rich men and poor, old and young, bond and free, Jews and Gentiles, saint and sinner, all classes ages and conditions, will be deeply interested, and turn from all other pursuits to give attention to the opening scenes. This will be the case when the Lord of Lords shall appear "in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Stock in banks, railroads, mines, houses and lands, ships and merchandise, will be of small value then. One would give them all for one smile of approval from the King of kings. Then the richest of the rich would give their last mite to be in the place of some poor saint, now supported by public charity. Then the most honored of the great men of earth would gladly exchange all their glory received of men, for the blessed "hope of glory" in the old colored woman that has worked in the kitchen of their mansions. Then, the clean heart of a town pauper will excel in value all the treasures of the rich. Then sin will be seen in its true light, and holiness will be esteemed above all other possessions. Then, all worldly wealth, glory, honor, show of fashion, and rich ornaments, will seem as they are—a pile of worthless rubbish, when compared with the priceless value of a pure heart.

But a scene of deeper interest must follow, which is the day of judgment. Then things will be real. Each will appear in his true light, to give account for himself. The correct scales will then be applied to each person's character. What the world may have thought of us will be of no value in that hour. No one will then appear with bribes in his hand for the Judge. This once in their life, they will stand before impartial justice, where a correct verdict will be given. Each will see himself as he is. No wonder that there will be weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth, on the part of those who paid no attention to the offer of pardon and salvation, so kindly extended to them during this present life. They might have had eternal life, but they would not accept it through Christ, the Son of the Highest. They have scorned their best friend, their only Savior, and despised the fountain in which they might have been cleansed from their corruption, and made fit to mingle with the pure and holy. But O what agony must fill their hearts when they see and know that eternal destruction must be their doom. What a future awaits them! Oblivion's waves must roll over them for ever and ever. What a solemn hour for the wicked! It must come. The eternal Jehovah has spoken. The day of doom is rapidly approaching, but the enemies of God are as careless now as were the antediluvians the day that Noah entered the ark, or the Sodomites the morning that Lot went out of their city. They laugh at the warning of faithful friends, and scoff at the idea of an impending judgment day. What madness! They have sold eternal life, honor, glory and happiness, for foolish vanities and pleasures, that lasted but an hour, and were far below the joys of the christian, even in his fiercest conflicts with the powers of darkness. It seems hardly credible, that rational beings will act as they do, and live as they are living, with such a terrible future awaiting them as the result.

If we look a little in the distance, we see them shivering with agony before the throne of "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity," as they are about to receive "the wages of sin, which is death." We turn from thinking of their horrid end, and leave them to "utterly perish in their own corruption," to be heard of no more during the eternal ages.

To the humble disciple of Jesus, the day of judgment will be the hour of his everlasting deliverance from everything disagreeable; the time of union with all the good out of every kindred, tribe, tongue and nation, that have ever lived upon this planet; a joint heir with God's only begotten Son, "when this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Then the time will have come for every saint to say farewell for ever to all sickness, pain and sorrow, and to begin the eternal life of glorious happiness, in the kingdom of heaven. When millions of years shall have passed, as many more remain to be enjoyed. When the imagination has reached its utmost bound in an effort to comprehend the duration of the future life of the saints, it is like a man trying to touch the sun with his finger.

O, what a glorious future awaits the friends of Jesus. Let us all be his true disciples. M. G.

WHAT A WASTE!

It is said that in New York city, there are seven thousand and ten licensed saloons, and two thousand that are unlicensed, making over nine thousand in all. The average receipts of each are twenty dollars per day, making the enormous sum of fifty-one million, and one hundred thousand dollars a year. This is for the licensed saloons. Add fourteen million, and six hundred thousand dollars for the unlicensed, and the total is sixty-five million, and seven hundred thousand dollars wasted by the one million of people in New York city for spirituous liquors. This amount of money would furnish about sixty gallons for every man, woman and child in the city.

If one could witness all the poverty, misery, mental and physical suffering, caused by the liquors drank only in New York city, and then add to all this the more terrible fact, declared in the sacred Scriptures, that no drunkard "shall inherit the kingdom of God," and the sum total is truly terrible.

The rum demon is one of Satan's prime ministers in leading men to destruction.

It is too bad to waste such enormous sums of money to produce such shocking results. How low the human race has fallen below the dignity of noble manhood. We may well pray earnestly, Lord, "let thy kingdom come." M. G.

THE POPE'S AGE.—On May 13th, 1875, the Pope was eighty-three years of age. He has been Pope several years longer than any other one of the two hundred and sixty-three who have filled the Pontifical chair. It is said the Catholics have a tradition that the Pope who holds his office over twenty-five years will be the last. The present Pope is the only one who has reigned twenty-five years. He has now been at the head of the church nearly thirty years. His age forbids his remaining much longer. Besides a terrible storm is gathering about his head, which threatens to utterly demolish "the Apostolic Empire," as the Pope's dominion is called "by the chief orator of the Ultramontanes, in the Austrian parliament."

The German government continues to draw the lines tighter upon the Catholic priesthood, and is giving them to understand very plainly that they must submit to the laws of the empire. This they are very unwilling to do, and seem disposed to make a grand resistance before they finally yield.

LONDON, May 11th.—A special dispatch from Berlin to the Pall Mall Gazette says: "The Catholic association has left Mayence for Rome to present the Pope with an address congratulating him upon the anniversary of his eighty-third birthday, which will occur on the 13th inst. The address, which is said to have one million signatures to it, is couched in terms of the deepest devotion and allegiance." M. G.

GREAT FIRE IN SPRINGFIELD.—Sabbath, 2 P. M., a fire broke out in Springfield, Mass., which resulted in the destruction of thirty-five buildings, among which was the Second Advent Bethel Church. The total loss caused by the fire is estimated at two million of dollars. It is truly alarming to see how calamities are multiplying.

In Boston, May 26th, a drug store was accidentally blown up, and twenty wounded, some of whom have died. In Holliston, Mass,, May 27th, three acres of land were burnt over, destroying twenty buildings. In Holyoke, May 27th, a French Catholic Church took fire, resulting in the destruction of eighty lives. What next? M. G.

NEWSPAPER FAILURES.—Last year was a hard season for newspapers. It is said over one thousand newspapers failed last year, in this country; "the loss to publishers, subscribers and advertisers, amounting to over eight million dollars. The Republic of New York, alone, losing half a million." It is not expected that this year will be one of prosperity. M. G.

The Phrenological Journal and Life Illustrated for June comes to us a few days later in the month than is its wont; a delay owing probably to the recent death of its well-known publisher. No material change will be made in the business, except to enlarge and improve its usefulness commensurately with the improved facilities lately secured at the new office, 737 Broadway, New York. Price, by the year, $3. A new volume begins with July. S. R. WELLS & Co., Publishers.

A CARD.

It is known by the readers of the Crisis that a Conference Campmeeting was decided to be held the last of June, somewhere in the Province of Quebec, Canada, and designed to be wisely and permanently located; and by a "Report of Progress," that appeared in the Crisis of Dec. 16th, 1874, Magog was mentioned as the place, and funds asked for from those interested, to prepare the ground. But as no funds have arrived, and for other reasons, nothing has as yet been done by way of preparation; although the grove and ground are still there and waiting for occupancy. Every member of the committee is hereby notified and requested to meet on the ground at Magog, P. Q., Wednesday, June 10th, 1875, to take final action, and, if thought best, make arrangements to have a meeting the first of September next. We hope this will receive due attention, and all will come.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 13th, 1874, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

Dear Editors, and all the loved ones in Jesus, Greeting:—Since our last letter to you, I have been quite sick. Over labor and exposure to all kinds of weather brought me down with lung fever, while on my way to Leavenworth county to fill appointments. The day we left Melvern for Franklin Co. was very cold, wind blowing from the north-east all day, and we had to face it. This was too much for me to bear; and on our arrival at night to Bro. Kawbs', I was completely prostrated, with pains all through my system. By sweats I broke the fever, and with the best of care from my companion, and the prayers of God's children, in a week's time I was able to sit up a little. The brethren and sisters all came to see me with words of cheer. The Lord bless them, and ever keep them in the good old way.

As soon as it was thought prudent, we returned to Arvonia, where we found much work to be done before the Conference met. Since then we have had but a little rest; so that I have not gained as fast as I should have done could I have enjoyed quiet for a season.

The past three weeks we have traveled over three hundred miles by team, to Arvonia Station, Osage City, Key West, Ottumwa, scattering clothing, tracts, papers, etc. The barrel and box, with five dollars from Bro. and Sr. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., came all right; also one large box from the church at Coventry, R. I., with eight dollars to defray expenses. Two barrels were sent us from Bro. and Sr. Wood, of Portsmouth, N. H., with five dollars for shipping. Bro. Tenney and wife, for the church in East Haverhill, Mass., sent one barrel, and four dollars for freight. A Bro. and Sr. Bullard, of Springwater, N. Y., sent five dollars for the Kansas sufferers. Another Bro. from Golden City, Cal. (as I observed by the postal mark), sends five dollars, simply saying, "I send in this five dollars," without giving name or P. O. address. Will the Bro. please write to me.

The clothing sent us from Bro. Adams, and the above named persons and churches, has been given away to the best of our judgment. In distributing them we have received many thanks for those who have been so kind in sending them. We have given where they were actually in need. Have scattered them in five different counties; viz., Leavenworth, Franklin, Osage, Coffey, and Woodson. Besides this, have shipped a barrel to O. D. Benton, Solomon City, Dickenson Co., a portion of which is to go to Bro. Conklin, of Lincoln Co. Over two hundred persons, men, women and children, have received a share of the goods. All have been well pleased for the generous supply, and often tears of gratitude flowed as they were administered.

Last week we rode some forty miles, and visited seven families, donating to them things needful for the body. One of the families, of nine persons, were destitute of almost everything,—no quilts to cover them during the cold winter that is past; hardly enough clothing to cover their nakedness. They had no means to get bread for the little ones. The last penny had been spent a few days before for a little flour. They have had nothing but dry bread to eat all winter. Surely those who have everything that heart could wish, ought to visit them, and have their hearts softened a good deal. This family knew not where the next flour was coming from, after the little was used. But He that feedeth the ravens when they cry, and has ever been the widow's God, will never leave nor forsake those who put their trust in him. So with this family. We endeavored to do what we could for them, in giving them clothing and five dollars to get bread with.

The remainder of the money sent us from Bro. Adams has been distributed as follows: Bro. Bryan, fifteen dollars, to help him in getting a pony to ride over these wide prairies to preach the word of life. Bro. Wilford, of Franklin Co., five dollars. Bro. Rote, preaching Bro., of Eudora, Douglas Co., ten dollars. Poor woman in Woodson Co., fifty cts. Bro. Preston, of Burlington, Coffey Co., ten dollars more. Bro. Ward, of Wilson (Baptist Bro.), and his son-in-law, with large family of nine, who have suffered for food the past winter, ten dollars. The poor man with large family mentioned above, five dollars. Bro. Eubanks, of Ottumwa, Coffey Co., three dollars. Five dollars I sent to Bro. O. D. Benton, of Solomon Rapids, to help defray expenses on a barrel sent him. The five dollars sent us by Bro. and Sr. Bullard we gave to the poor widow that Bro. Hunt mentioned in the Times of May 12th.

Thus, dear brethren and sisters, we have endeavored to use judgment and discretion in giving the generous supply sent to us. Not a dollar has been given but has been gratefully received and was actually needed. We thank the Giver of every good and perfect gift for all his mercies and benefits upon the suffering ones in this State. We also thank you, dear brethren and sisters, for your kind remembrance of us all. The Lord reward you a hundred fold here, and in the world to come life everlasting. Remember the words of the faithful Promiser—"He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that will he repay again"—"good measure, pressed down and running over."

I am glad the time is not far distant when want and poverty will never be known; but when all who have loved and obeyed the Lord will be rich—eternally rich.

"No poverty there—no, the saints are all wealthy;
The heirs of His glory, whose nature is love;
Nor sickness can reach them; that country is healthy;
O say, will you go to the Eden of love?"

The Lord grant us an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom, is our earnest prayer.

Arvonia, Orange Co., Kansas.

TO THOSE INQUIRING, and interested to know, I would say, my health is improving steadily, I think. My left lung became affected a year ago this spring, and has been weak and painful more or less since. One sermon a day is about as much as it is wise for me to perform, and with intervals of days without preaching. Paul said, "Pray for me." I would make the same request, and with all the faithful hope to share the "grace to be brought at the appearing of Christ."

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. A. Wheeler.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—In looking over the last twenty-two years of my life, I was reminded of the children of Israel's journey from Egypt to Canaan. The angel of the Lord went before them in a cloud by day and pillar of fire by night. When that moved onward they journeyed; when that stopped they stayed in their tents; whether it was a day, a month, or a year. And I think we, many of us, know a little how they felt while they were stopping. They had got started for the goodly land, and to stop a year or so, from time to time, would have been discouraging, had they not known that God was surely leading them in the way. A knowledge of this fact alone could give patience in that trying position. No doubt they many times hoped the next time the cloud moved it would bring them into the promised land; but when that stopped, what could they do but wait and trust?

The apostle Paul, in addressing a certain class, says—"Ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Many of us know somewhat the meaning of that word "patience," while the cloud has been stopping. But just as sure as God's ancient people knew that God was leading them, just so sure do we know that it is the word of the Lord that has brought us out here to wait for his Son from heaven.

Right here comes instruction from the apostle Peter, when he says—"the Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, but is long-suffering to us ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." Here is duty plain for us. While the cloud waits, we must be pressing the subject home to our children and neighbors; for his long-suffering will be the salvation of some. We must go out into the highways and hedges, compelling them to come in. Our work must be so done, that when the angels come to gather us, we shall have no unfinished work to look back upon, like Lot's wife when leaving Sodom, and her children perishing in the flames.

May God save us from being so faithless in his word, and so stupid in his service, that we shall neglect to do anything that we can do for the salvation of our fellow creatures.

From Sr. M. D. St. Clair.

Brn. Editors:—Although a stranger to you, I love to read your articles in the World's Crisis. I hail with joy any tidings of the return of our absent King. What a blessed time it will be for the people of God; but oh, when we think of the many that will be caught in the snare, how our hearts ache; but if they will not hear God's message they must suffer the fearful consequence.

I am glad there are some who dare brave the scoffs and frowns of the world, and proclaim the coming of our blessed Lord to a perishing world. Time is swiftly bearing us on. Soon the trump of God will sound, and they that are ready will be admitted to the marriage supper of the Lamb, and the door will be shut. I desire an entrance into that blessed home. The prayer of my heart is, "Nearer my God to thee." I am waiting anxiously for the return of my glorious Redeemer.

Dear brethren, yours is a blessed mission. May the dear Lord Jesus give you many stars in your crown of rejoicing. You have the prayers of many whom you may never see in this world, but you will meet them in God's everlasting kingdom. Will not this earth be beautiful when it is made new again? We shall never hear of any sick ones; no dying, no pain, no tears. O, glory to God. The time passes slowly to the people of God, but the morning will soon dawn. Darkness will flee away. Everything seems to say—It is near, it is near. I love to think it is so. Then we shall see our dear ones again, and never part. O what a prospect! I shall be glad when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. Be faithful a little longer. Let the tidings of your absent but soon coming King ring far and near, for the day of grace will soon be over. May many more be brought to see their dangerous position, and flee from the wrath to come. I hope all who love Jesus may have enduring faith to hold out to the end, for such alone shall be saved.

East Randolph, Vt., May 7th, 1875.

J. W. BURROUGHS writes:—"I have made arrangements to be at the New Hartford, Iowa, Campmeeting, from June 14th to the close. I hope to meet many of the dear children of God there, to praise the King of kings and Lord of lords, whom we expect soon to see coming in the clouds of heaven, to reward every one according to his works. Let us be at work while the time tarries."

Obituaries.

NELSON. Fell asleep in Jesus in Sutton, N. H., Feb. 20th, 1875, Eld. Frank Nelson, aged forty years.

Bro. Nelson was converted and took a decided stand for Christ in 1854. About seven years ago, feeling that woe was his if he preached not the gospel, he was publicly ordained to the work of the ministry. He labored in various places to good acceptance, but in no place was his labor more appreciated or his exhortations better received than in his own town. His upright christian character—possessing as he did in a very high degree all those noble qualifications which go to make a true man and christian—had won for him the esteem and respect of all his fellow citizens and christian associates. He was a worthy member of the Advent Christian Conference of N. H., and a firm believer in the speedy and literal coming of the Lord and resurrection of the dead.

May the Lord sustain our beloved sister, thus bereft of one so dear to her, and the blessed hope cheer her in her loneliness. May the blessing of heaven attend the children in all their walks in life, and the dear family meet again where death can never come. Funeral services by Eld. C. H. Fletcher, of Newport, assisted by J. D. Waldron, Pastor of the F. W. Baptist Church. D. W. D.

ALLEN. In Chicopee Falls, Mass., May 15th, 1875, Maria B., wife of Levi Allen, aged seventy-six years.

The funeral services were held in the Advent Chapel, conducted by our venerable Bro. J. B. Cook, who preached an excellent sermon on the gospel hope, embracing the resurrection of the dead to immortality at the appearing of Christ. Long years ago, the home of father and mother Allen was a place where the Methodist preachers of those days delighted to resort, and perhaps some of them still live to remember their kindness and hospitality. Later, after their reception of the gospel of the kingdom of God at hand, they have ever been the helpers of those laboring to carry the glad tidings of the "regions beyond." For some years she has suffered, but now she sleeps, we trust in Jesus, with four of their daughters, who were laid low by the last enemy before their mother, to awake in the morning of the resurrection to everlasting life. May all the surviving relatives be ready to meet them at that day, to part no more. J. D. MERRIAM.

MANSON. In Portsmouth, N. H., May 12th, 1875, Jennie W., wife of Mr. Frank Manson, aged thirty-eight years.

Her death was the first to occur in a family of twelve children, ten of whom, with the aged father and mother, were present at the funeral. Their grief, as also of the lonely husband, seemed unusually intense. The sleeper had been a sufferer a long time, but in her last illness gave evidence of having found "Him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write." She rests in hope.

"We may sleep, but not forever." E. O.

CARROLL. In Portsmouth, N. H., May 23d, 1875, Olivia M., wife of Bro. Addison Carroll, aged fifty-nine years.

For eight or more months an abdominal tumor had confined her to her bed, and subjected her to intense suffering. A surgical operation was decided upon, and though temporarily successful, resulted as above. She had long loved the blessed hope, though nominally connected with the M. E. church of this place. She rests in hope. A husband and two sons are left to mourn.

"How long shall death the tyrant reign?" E. O.

HOYT. In Portsmouth, N. H., May 10th, 1875, Sr. Almira O., wife of Deacon Samuel W. Hoyt, aged twenty-nine years.

As a wife, a mother, a neighbor, and a member of Christ's church, she unusually illustrated the power of grace, and exemplified the effects of the Spirit's presence with her, by her prayers, exhortations, and her general life. She will be deeply missed by genuine mourners, aside from her stricken husband, father, mother, and three little ones. May a covenant keeping God care for them.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep." E. O.

FLINT. In Sutton, N. H., March 21st, 1875, of consumption, Edmund A. Flint, aged 29 years.

Death has taken from our society a young man of much promise, loved and respected by all who knew him. By this death a union has been dissolved, and a heart made sad and lonely. May the same hope that sustained our brother in his dying hours be her comfort and support in this hour of affliction. May father and brother heed his dying counsel, and be prepared to meet where death will never come. D. W. DAVIS.

MERRILL. In Kennebunk, Me., May 7th, 1875, Caroline Merrill, aged seventy-nine years.

For a number of years our sister has suffered the infirmities consequent on life's decline, but has ever found support in leaning upon an arm that is always strong. She passed suddenly away, and now rests in hope of living in a world where the infirmities of age are never known. The writer, assisted by Bro. Emery, endeavored to comfort the mourning friends who gathered at our chapel, Sunday, May 9th. W. H. MITCHELL.

CHASE. In Portland, Me., May 13th, 1875, Sr. Tamson J. Chase, aged fifty-six years.

Sr. Chase had been a christian for many years, and for a considerable time a firm believer in the personal and speedy coming of Christ. She was a very amiable and much beloved woman, a faithful wife, and a tender and devoted mother. Her loss is deeply felt by all who knew her. She was taken to Topsham for burial, where her silent form will rest till the voice of the descending Lord will quicken his myriad sleepers into fadeless bloom and beauty. S.

PARK. At Searsport, Me., May 13th, 1875, Eddie J. Park, son of James R. and Margaret A. Park, aged seven years.

Eddie was an interesting, affectionate and beautiful boy, and of a religious turn of mind. He prayed with his parents, and on the bed of death comforted them by telling them of Jesus' coming and the resurrection. Funeral services by the writer. F. A. BAKER.

CHAMBERLAIN. In Sutton, Mass., suddenly, May 14th, 1875, Francis H. Chamberlain, aged forty-seven years.

The deceased was a sufferer for many years, from an injury received while on a whaling voyage. Some of his bones were broken by a whale; but his sufferings are ended, and he sleeps in Jesus.

He leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss. S. S. C.

MARTIN. At Warren Summit, N. H., April 27th, 1875, Mr. Steven Martin, aged seventy-three years.

His life was such that they took knowledge of him that he had learned of Jesus. On the above occasions the writer endeavored to comfort the mourning ones with the precious promises of God's holy word. N. WHEELER.

DUSTAN. At Sugar Hill, N. H., April 22d, 1875, Mrs. Lydia Dustan, aged thirty years.

She was baptized by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, at Manchester, some four years since, and has taken part in our meetings since she came to this place. N. W.

COOKSON. At Pierce's Bridge, Bethlehem, N. H., April 27th, 1875, Mr. John Cookson, aged seventy-five years.

He was formerly from Montpelier, Vt. Has lived and died in faith of soon seeing Jesus come the second time. N. W.

STALBIRD. In Whitefield, N. H., March 31st, 1875, Mrs. Benj. Stalbird, aged sixty-eight years.

They mourn the loss of a christian companion and mother. N. W.

ROBINSON. In Canaan, N. H., May 3d. 1875, of chronic diarrhea, Sister Elizabeth Robinson, aged 80 years.

Words of comfort and good hope were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13,—"That ye sorrow not even as others, which have no hope." J. L. KIMBALL.

MASON. In Ayer, Mass., April 8th, 1875, after a long and distressing illness, Bro. Aaron Mason, aged seventy-five years. E. C. M. BOYES.

ALDRICH. In Monson, Mass., April 18th, 1875, John Aldrich, aged eighty-two years, one month, and twenty-eight days.

Words of comfort by the writer. Text, Heb. 10: 23. "He is faithful that promised." H. H. TUCKER.

POWELL. In North Leominster, Mass., Chas. H. H. Powell, son of Herman and Mary Powell, aged four months and twenty-one days.

Their little first born sleeps, but not forever. Sermon by the writer. Text, Ps. 30: 5. H. H. TUCKER.

TUTTLE. In Boston, Mass., May 8th, 1875, Sr. Lucretia E. Tuttle, from Dexter, Me., formerly of Bangor, Me., in the thirty-fourth year of her age.

Funeral at Cambridge, Me., attended by Elder Jonathan Lane. DEXTER SHEPLEY.

Married.

HASKINS—ELDRIDGE. In North Carver, Mass., May 19th, by Elder J. R. Boynton, Mr. STEPHEN D. HASKINS, of Marion, Mass., and Mrs. ELLEN D. ELDRIDGE, of North Carver.

GREGG—HILBORN. In the A. C. Church, Nevada, Ohio, May 13th, by Elder E. M'Culloch, assisted by Rev. A. B. Kirtland, Mr. GEO. W. GREGG and Miss SARAH A. HILBORN, all of Nevada.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, May 22. A dispatch to the Standard from Rome says that the Italian Government has ordered the removal of all Bishops who have not received the royal exequatur indorsing their appointments. The Archbishop of Palermo has already been notified to leave his See.

May 24. A special dispatch to the Times from Vienna says a dreadful accident has occurred on the river Mur, at the town of Judenburg, Province of Tyrol. A ferry-boat having on board a number of Catholic pilgrims to the shrines on the other side of the Mur from Judenburg, sunk in the middle of the stream. Fifty-nine of the pilgrims are known to have been saved, but seventy-six are missing, all of whom are believed to be drowned.

May 28. Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the American revivalists, continue to hold a number of revival meetings daily. There is no diminution in the number of people who gather to hear them. Among their hearers, yesterday, were the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Cairns, the Earl of Cavan, and many clergymen.

May 28. Despatches just received here, this morning, report the occurrence of a most disastrous earthquake in the Province of Broussia in Asia, Over 348 persons were killed and wounded. The destruction of property was terrible.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

ANNIVERSARY week, this year, will long be remembered for the horrors and calamities which have agitated and appalled our citizens. The terrible Warren avenue tragedy and the murderous freak of insanity on Summer street were supplemented by a disaster which finds no parallel in the previous record of Boston's misfortunes. A business building on Washington street, at an hour when the sidewalks were thronged with pedestrians, was blown almost to atoms by some terrific explosive, whose nature as yet is shrouded in mystery. Its results thus far reported are four persons killed, one fatally wounded and fifteen others suffering more or less painful injuries, while the damage to property will probably exceed $100,000, as all the buildings in the immediate vicinity were more or less shattered.—Boston Journal.

Kansas City, May 28. Rain has poured down in torrents almost incessantly the past thirty-six hours. Reports brought in by towns on roads running into the city show the rain to have been general in every direction for upwards of a hundred miles. Considerable damage was done to fences, railroad embankments and some damage to the growing crops, the low lands having been flooded; but the greatest injury has been done to the grasshoppers, untold millions having been destroyed by the flood. They were washed into the gutters and sewers of the city, and the streams in this vicinity are full of them The Missouri river opposite the city has been black with them, and the engineer of the railroad bridge reports there is hardly any estimating of the number that floated past. The levee was visited by hundreds of people to witness the gratifying sight. There is no question but the bulk of the insects in this vicinity have been destroyed by the flood. The ground at this place is thickly covered with dead grasshoppers killed by the beating rain. The feeling of dread is rapidly giving way to one of rejoicing, and Gov. Harden will doubtless be called upon to issue a proclamation of thanksgiving instead of one of fasting and prayer.

St. Louis, Mo., May 27. Governor Hardin has issued an address stating that there is much destitution in various parts of the State from the ravages of grasshoppers, and asking that a contribution be taken in the churches on June 3d, which he has proclaimed a day of fasting and prayer. There is great destruction in the southwesterly section of the State. The most successful means of stopping them is to dig a trench and drive them into it, and then destroy them. In some parts of the State the farmers are cutting down trees to feed their stock on the leaves. They have issued an address calling for aid.

FIRES.—At Pine Meadow, Ct., loss $100,000; Norwalk, Ct., loss $150,000; Lexington, Ky., loss $100,000; New Glasgow, N. S., loss $25,000; Rutland, Vt. (incendiary), loss $100,000; a second incendiary fire at Rutland, loss $5,000; Port Lynden, N. Y., loss $200,000; Minneapolis, Minn. (incendiary), loss $66,000.

Very destructive forest fires have been raging in Penn. and some other parts of the country. The angel of fire has already commenced his terrible work. J. C.

New York A. C. Conference.

The Annual Meeting of the New York A. C. Conference will be held with the church at Martville, commencing Thursday evening, June 17th, and hold over Sunday. We hope to see every church in this Conference represented by delegates. Let each church take a collection for the Conference. We expect the ministers and delegates to be present Thursday evening.

Will the churches, where our ministers labor, see that their fare is paid to and from the Conference. We expect the chapel at Martville will be dedicated during the meeting. Homes will be provided for all that come. Brn. and Srs., come praying that God's blessing may rest on the meeting.

Directions. Those coming on the New York Central, from the East or West, will change cars at Weadsport for Martville. Those coming on the Lake Shore and Watertown Road, will change at Sterling Junction for Martville. The church is but a few rods from the depot.

M. R. MILES, President.

Seaside Campmeeting.

The undersigned having been appointed a committee to arrange for a General Campmeeting of Second Adventists at Seabrook, N. H., have accepted the position; and in compliance with urgent requests and our own convictions of duty, have leased "Beckman's Grove"; and if the Lord will, the meeting will commence August 14th, and continue over two Sabbaths.

The grove is pleasantly located within sixty rods of the depot, and about the same distance from salt water landing. There are excellent facilities for sailing and fishing. A large and commodious bath house will be erected, and the committee will spare no pains to procure accommodations for all who desire to build houses, or pitch tents on the ground, or to lease rooms in the neighborhood. The boarding house will be in charge of the committee. Fares will be reduced on the Eastern and other railroads. Particulars hereafter.

Committee of Arrangements: N. H. Robie, A. N. Dow, N. L. Robie, David Beckman, Robert Dow, Wm. Beckman, Charles C. Dow, John B. Adams, Charles A. Barton.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The next Quarterly Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York will be held at South Creek, Bradford Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 18th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of truth. Ticket by Railway from Corning to Gillet Station.

E. C. COWLES, Pres.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec.

NOTICE.—Arrangements have been made to furnish lumber for building purposes on the camp-ground at Seabrook, N. H., at the lowest market price, which will not exceed $15 per M. Address CHARLES C. DOW, Kensington, N. H.

N. H. ROBIE, for Com.

CONFERENCE.—A Conference will commence at Indian River, Addison, Me., June 17th, and hold over the Sabbath. An invitation is extended to all. Come praying that God may bless this meeting to the salvation of many in this vicinity.

M. W. CORLISS.

WILL Chas. A. Severance please send his address, if he sees this notice, to R. D. G., Box 292, Athol, Mass?

Tent Meeting.

The Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched the first time this season in South Chelmsford, on Friday, June 4th. The meeting will continue over two Sabbaths, and perhaps longer, if there should be the interest it is hoped there will be.

South Chelmsford is four miles from the city of Lowell, on the Lowell and Framingham R. R. This is a new field, there never having been an Adventist meeting held in the town. There is but one believer in the place, our aged Bro. Spaulding, who is very anxious that an effort be made here for the salvation of the people.

It is earnestly requested by the Tent Committee that our brethren and sisters who can attend this meeting do so, especially those living in adjacent towns. The church in Lowell is most earnestly requested to give its time and voice in this meeting. Come all who can to work for the Lord. Bring with you food, blankets, comfortables, sheets, and all that you think will be needed for lodging in the Tent. A stove will be set for cooking whatever may be necessary. Come with the Spirit of God in your hearts, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of sinners. The time is short. For the Committee, I. I. LESLIE.

Tent Meetings.

At the last Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley Conference, it was voted that Tent Meetings be held during the coming season in all places where there was a prospect of good being done, and sufficient encouragement given by the resident people. The Tent is engaged for a Campmeeting at Fullerville, West Hawley, Mass., soon after the Springfield Campmeeting. It was voted to hold the July Quarterly Meeting in the Tent, at North Adams, Mass. For the rest of the season the Tent is not yet engaged.

The following places were proposed as favorable places for Tent Meetings, if desired: North Clarendon and Addison, Vt.; Greenwich, Lansingburg and Cambridge, N. Y. The committee are determined to do all in their power to press the matter of Tent Meetings the coming season, believing that great good will result therefrom. The services of a good and competent preacher have been secured, who also is an experienced hand with a Tent. Between the committee, Tent Master, and other preachers adjacent to the meetings held, ministerial labor cannot be wanting, if all be done by God's grace, with an eye single to his glory.

Let all who are interested in these meetings, correspond immediately—now, at once, with the committee.

H. K. FLAGG, } Tent
A. W. SIBLEY, } Committee.

Vermont Conference.

The next session will be held with the church at Hinesburgh, Vt., according to vote of last Conference, and will commence Wednesday evening, June 9th. Meetings will be held over the Lord's day, although the Conference will close Friday night.

Those coming on the Central Vermont R. R. (Eastern division) will stop at Richmond. Those coming on the Rutland and Burlington division will stop at Charlotte. Teams will meet passengers at those stations on Wednesday. Those wishing to be met at the depot on Wednesday, or on any other day, should write to Bro. A. H. Post, Hinesburgh, some days beforehand, that they may know how extensive team arrangement to make. A stage leaves Burlington daily for Hinesburgh, at about two o'clock P. M. We hope that there will be a general gathering at this meeting, for the furtherance of the gospel. Help in preaching the Word has been engaged from abroad.

H. F. CARPENTER, for Com.

TENT MEETINGS.—The Hoosick Valley tent will be pitched for the first series of tent-meetings, at North Clarendon, Vt., two miles and a half south of Rutland. The meetings will commence Tuesday evening, June 8th, and continue every evening, including two Sabbahts, till Sunday evening, June 20th. Arthur A. Waite will have charge of the tent. Preaching a good share of the time except the Sabbaths. Other good and able preachers are engaged to be present during the meetings, so that ministerial labor cannot be wanting.

H. K. FLAGG, } Tent
A. W. SIBLEY, } Committee.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting held on the farm of Elder Brian, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing the second Sabbath in June, at 10.30 a. m., and continue during the day. A number of preaching brethren are expected. A good pasture near the grove will be furnished free. There is good running water in the grove. All are invited to bring their dinners and stay all day. Come one and all.

ELD. N. BRIAN.
V. F. HUNT.

TENT MEETING.—Providence permitting, there will be a tent-meeting in Montpelier, Vt., commencing June 13th, to continue through the week and over Sunday, June 20th. It is hoped that brethren and sisters living in adjoining towns, who can make it convenient, will attend this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit, and come to work for God. Several brethren are expected to assist in preaching the word.

J. C. WRIGHT.
R. N. STETSON.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The Second Quarterly Meeting of the Washington Co., Kan., Adv. Chris. Conference will be held with the church at Sherman Centre, commencing Saturday, June 26th, and hold over Sunday. There will be preaching on Saturday, at eleven o'clock a. m., and a business meeting at two p. m. It is requested that each church in the conference be fully represented, and that all be there on Saturday, as it is desired to finish all business on that day.

JOHN BATTERTON, Sec.

To the Brn. and Friends of Barkhamstead, Ct., and vicinity:—Whereas some have received information from various sources that there would be no more meetings in Barkhamstead, which has had a tendency to keep many away, I would here say, Come to the meetings. There will be preaching once in two weeks, as there has been in the past, if the Lord will. God's blessing is still upon the meeting. S. WOODRUFF, Pastor of church.

Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference of Advent Christians of the State of Minnesota will convene at Utica, on the old camp-ground in Chatham's Grove, on Tuesday, June 15th, at 10.30 A. M. This Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting. We expect the following preachers:—Bro. and Sr. Barnes, Sister Rowell, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Brn. Bursell, Mitson, Brown, Ramer, Chapman, Lombard, Cole, Wellcome (of Garden City), Wood, Smith, and Dewing. Let there be a general rally of our Minnesota preachers. Come to work for God and the salvation of sinners. Those who cannot come, write a report of your labors and send it in season. We want a general rally. Let every church in the Conference report either by delegate or by letter.

Come, brethren, with your tents. Lay by your work for a few days and come to this feast of tabernacles. Remember those little mission boxes. Send every dime you can for the trust fund from them. Come in the spirit of your Master—not to hear big preaching, but to work for the upbuilding of the cause. Jesus is soon coming, and we want to be ready to meet him, having our work done and well done. All reports sent after June 1st, should be directed to me at Utica, Winona Co., Minn., care of J. Cheatham. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

The Advent Christian State Campmeeting for Minnesota, is to be held at the Utica camp-ground, known as the Chatham Grove, two miles south of the Utica Station, on the Winona and St. Peter Railroad, twenty-three miles west of the city of Winona, commencing Saturday, June 12th, at 2.30 P. M., and hold over two Sundays.

We shall provide a boarding tent and board for such as may want it, just as cheap as possible, and those that wish to board themselves can have the use of the tent stove to cook on. A pasture lot will be furnished near the camp-ground, also stabling for horses; as many as can will please bring grain to feed.

We hope that the churches and the scattered ones as many as can will come with their tents, bedding, etc., as may be necessary for a week or ten days tenting on the camp-ground. One and all think of all the things necessary for your own comfort while at the meeting, and bring them with you, and we will try to make you all comfortable. We wish all to come full of the life, power, and spirit of the Master, that God's people may be comforted, and strengthened in the faith, backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted to God, and many souls made happy in the Lord.

Preaching Brethren and Sisters expected:—Brn. C. C. Ramsay and Wm. Chapman from Iowa, Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Sr. Ruth M. Rowell, and Bro. J. W. Bursell; and we extend a cordial invitation to preaching brethren and sisters in general. Those coming by R. R. down the river will change cars at Minnesota City, and those coming by the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. will change cars at Owatonna for Utica.

The State Advent Christian Conference was adjourned to meet in connection with this Campmeeting. The State tent will be pitched on the camp-ground.

GEO. HERRING, D. CHEATHAM, O. RICHARDSON, PETER MITSON, PHILIP RAMER, } Committee.

AN APPEAL.

The season has now arrived when the special work of holding Tent Meetings should be begun. The Mass. Conference has a good Tent, ready again for service in the harvest field of the Lord; and the question is: Shall it be sent forth once more with good and faithful laborers to gather in sheaves for Christ, and give the warning of the coming day of God? In order that this may be done, there must be a sacrifice made by the friends of Jesus, and means given to sustain in this way his precious cause.

It is proposed that the Tent this year be taken into new fields, and where our precious faith has not as yet been heard. If this is done, there will be a special necessity for contributions on the part of our churches and people in general, to defray the expenses of these meetings in these new places.

As the Committee, chosen at the late Conference to have the charge of the Tent and make arrangements for the work in connection with it, we invite all who have the means and the heart to give in sustaining this mode of reaching the people, to do so as soon as they can, that we may know how far to go in promising the Tent where it is already requested.

Contributions and pledges can be sent to the Treasurer, ELD. C. GOODRICH, Boston, Mass.

B. YOUNG, L. BOUTELL, C. E. BARNES, I. I. LESLIE, } Protracted Meeting and Tent Committee.

Notice.

The members of the Mass. Second Advent Christian Conference are requested to send to the Secretary their names and address, that each may receive a certificate of membership, according to a vote of the Conference.

I. I. LESLIE, Sec., Box 5140 Boston, Mass.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Annual Campmeeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 19th, and continue to the 28th. Arrangements will be made to supply all with board and lodging. All who can are requested to bring Tents.

Brethren in the Lord, do make arrangements to attend this meeting, especially all who reside in the southerly part of this State. Come at the commencement, if possible. We intend to secure good profitable laborers, those who are prepared to bring out an exposition of those prophecies especially applicable to these times, and now in process of fulfillment, when the church will be delivered. This may be the last annual gathering we shall be permitted to enjoy before the Lord will gather his own to himself. Let us do what we can to save the perishing before it is too late. Bro. Munger will have charge of the meeting.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, August 21st, and hold over two Sabbaths. J. COUCH.

Baker or J. Woodman. Per order,

F. A. BAKER.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—A four days meeting will be held at East Bethel, Vt., commencing June 2nd, and continuing over the Sabbath, June 6th. Bro. H. H. Tucker, of Palmer, Mass., and others who can, will assist Bro. Hoyt at this meeting. Come, all ye valiant soldiers, lift up the ensign for the people. H. F. C., for Com.

NOTICE.—I have on hand a large lot of cast loose Joint Butts—4×4, 5×5, and 6×6. I will ship to any address all that can be used for a church or benevolent institution, free of charge except freight and cartage. Some evidence will be needed to know that the parties ordering are the committee of such church or benevolent enterprise.

T. S. SCOVILLE, Elmira, N. Y.

GROVE MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a Grove Meeting on the farm of Eld. Brian, Osage Co., Kansas, commencing at 10½ o'clock A. M., Sunday, June 20th, and continuing all day. Different preaching brethren will be present. All are invited to come, and bring their dinner, and stay all day. A good pasture furnished near the grove, free. Good running water in the grove. Come one and all.

N. BRIAN.
V. F. HUNT.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will hold its next session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, on the old camp-ground, commencing June 10th. There will be a boarding house and grocery store, so that all who wish to board or buy can be accommodated. There will be plenty of straw free to all. Hay will be furnished at reasonable rates, also wood.

Come one, come all. Come feeling an interest to save and be saved. This may be our last meeting before Jesus comes. We expect help from abroad. Eld. A. N. Seymour and others will be at the meeting. Our lease of the grounds run out this year. Let all interested be present to devise means and make arrangements for the future.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.

NOTICE.—The Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual session at Bear River, N. S., commencing Thursday, June 17th, and continue over the following Sabbath. All lovers of Jesus are invited to attend. Come to work for the Lord. J. J. WOODWORTH.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

☞ PRICE REDUCED.

A NEW EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

"THE MYSTERY EXPLAINED:

OR,

AN EXPOSITION OF THE WOMAN AND THE SCARLET-COLORED BEAST

In the 17th Chapter of Revelation.

SHOWING WE ARE NEAR THE END OF THE PRESENT DISPENSATION."

BY MILES GRANT.

This valuable and interesting tract is now ready, and for sale at this Office. Price by mail, single copy, 8 cts; four copies for 25 cts.; per dozen, 75 cts. AG'T.

RE-PRINTED

ELD. S. S. BREWER'S EXPOSITORY WORKS.

Several of Bro. Brewer's works, which have been out of print some time, so that we have not been able to fill orders, are now published, and we can supply as follows:—

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

Three volumes in one. The Signs in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, with other strange phenomena, illustrated with splendid cuts. 216 pp.; 50 cts.

"TREATISE ON REV. XIIITH."

Illustrated with cuts. 25 cts.

"The History of an Immortal Soul."

This is a work of the history of the origin of the dogma, with copious extracts from ancient heathen and Christian writers, to which is added a Scriptural exposition. Price 10 cts.

"THE SEVEN SEALS"

is also regarded as an important work. 15 cts. And the

"Slaying of the Witnesses."

1 cts. AG'T.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

SAD PARTINGS.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Dear ones are bidding us all farewell,
Down in the darkness of death to dwell;
Down into silence to moulder away,—
To mingle with earth, their crumbling clay.

Sad are our partings; our hearts are sad;
Earth affords nothing to make us glad;
Jesus alone can dry our tears;
He only can calm our death-chill fears.

Down in the darkness, among the dead,
He once pillowed his sacred head;
Then, mid that darkness of his cold tomb,
Lighted a lamp to dispel its gloom.

Forth then he came on that first day;
Quickly the shadows melted away;
He arose in triumph to die no more;
Arose, and went up where he was before.

So now, "them that sleep" shall "awake" again,
Free from the tortures of piercing pain;
To "live," like their everlasting Head,
Tenants no more among the dead.

Soon we shall meet them on that fair shore,
Where tearful partings can come no more;
Where "the redeemed of the Lord" shall meet,
"Worshiping at the Savior's feet."

NATIONAL CAMPMEETINGS.

Nothing more strikingly reveals the weakness of human nature than the universal disposition to transfer dependence from the Divine to the human. It is the infirmity first contracted and last cured. It is a stubborn trait, and adheres with strange tenacity to even the servants and children of God. The strength of the propensity was shamefully manifest in the Jews, when after the mighty miracles in the wilderness, they transferred trust from God to a calf. Indeed, so constantly besetting and dominant was this inclination, that the chosen people could only be held back, and saved from rushing headlong into idol worship, by being continually entranced through wondrous interpositions on the part of God. He had to divide seas, rain down manna from heaven, and make dry rocks gush with streams of crystal water, to keep them from going after other gods.

The same frailty characterizes christians. The apostle reprovingly writes to the Galatians, "Are ye so foolish? having begun in the spirit, are ye now made perfect in the flesh?" Gal. 3 : 3. These words are applicable to all churches, and most christians. A spiritual beginning, a fleshly ending. In this respect, the history of revivals repeats itself. Over and over again, most sadly and most disastrously a human dependence has been substituted for the Divine. In a thousand instances, and to as many churches, and more individuals, it may be said with painful appropriateness: "But now after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?" Gal. 4 : 9. This does not describe a case of ordinary backsliding, to which it is generally applied, but a transfer of hope and trust from God, to weak and beggarly supports. It is the substitution of human and material "elements" and agencies, for the Holy Ghost. And this is often unwittingly done by christians, and the best of christians, too; because the act puts on an aspect of religiousness and faith. It is not apostatizingly casting away our confidence, but exercising it strongly, and for purposes of salvation also; though upon improper objects. The sin lies not so much in unbelief, as in the misdirection of faith. It is dishonoring God by withdrawing our trust from him, and placing it in men, and in outward and material instrumentalities. It is the old custom of hewing out cisterns—broken cisterns that will hold no water. It is resting in the seen and the temporal, rather than in the unseen, in the Eternal, and in the Almighty.

What has this homily to do with National Campmeetings? "Much every way." The tendency is, or at least may be, to trust in National Campmeetings, because they are National Campmeetings, forgetting that these visible preparations are no more to the saving grace and power required, and mercifully given through them, than the bark is to the vital juices of a thrifty tree.

Such is the infirmity of human nature, that we are apt to attach some sort of intrinsic virtue to a means or method through which God has condescended to communicate his power and his salvation. It is not so much God as the divinely sanctioned instrumentality that we are prone to depend upon. It is against the indulgence of this tendency that we should caution ourselves. We can not too often, or too emphatically remind ourselves that the excellency of the power is of God. All believe this, and some are offended if their faith is challenged; and yet the perpetual scramble and effort to inflate the church with some kind of gas, or worldly influence, to increase her prosperity, and send her up balloon fashion, is proof that their faith does not steadily locate the power in God alone. We are naturally predisposed to lean upon some factitious aid; as a fine church, a commanding title, a shrewd or unique preacher, an imposing ritual, a large and popular meeting, bearing a high sounding name, or the presence and performances of celebrated men. It is in this way the church forsakes the fountain of living waters, and vainly seeks to support herself by bruised reeds and artificial things. It is a kind of worldly barter, which is sure to bring disappointment, failure, and sin. It was the bewitching dazzle of such figments, and the foolish hankering of the people after them, that destroyed the usefulness of the ordinary campmeeting. The pulpit was virtually converted into a forum for the trial efforts of competing preachers, while the camp was made a fair ground for personal display and comparison. The congregation heard the different ministers, enjoyed the entertainment, and assigned each man his rank, with or without the blue ribbon, as he made a good or poor impression. These discriminations were often made with a free use of slang phrases; as the "big gun," or "small fry," the "metropolitan," or "backwoods" preacher.

One-half the tent owners sat with groups of friends in their airy apartments, and did not come into the audience circle once a day. Many sat in their cottage doors and gazed upon the panoramic scene of gaiety and frolic, and fashion, which was continually moving through the avenues and aisles. The Sabbath was desecrated, and various kinds of ungodly traffic were allowed on or near the grounds. Such practices breathed a mildew upon the services, and brought the very name of campmeetings into disrepute. They were justly characterized as picnics, devoted to pleasure, gossip and fun.

Now the same follies will be re-enacted at the National Campmeetings, unless prevented by deep humiliation, scrutinizing watchfulness, fervent prayer, and a resolute determination to keep at all hazards to the simplicities and spiritual object of their origin. Elements of degeneracy have already begun to insinuate themselves among the hallowing scenes. The success of the National movement revived and popularized campmeetings all over the land. Immediately they were multiplied for purposes of speculation, and the divine glory of the meeting was made to shade off and tone down into an equivalent for a seaside resort, or inland watering place. Men are now invited to these places, not to get sanctified, but to rusticate. Another worldly indication, is the attractive names which are selected, names that invite attendance both on the ground of religion and of recreation.

Now just in proportion as the pleasure element comes in, the sanctifying element goes out. The great obstacle to power and success is self-exaltation, or provision for physical ease and gratification. To-day the church is unwilling to get upon her knees and chasten her soul, or to prostrate herself in the dust before the Lord. God cannot and will not bless her, for he "resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

Dear reader, let us remember what our Lord hath said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." There is a monopoly in poverty of spirit.—Christian Standard.

[We commend the above exhortation as worthy of adoption. Let all read it carefully. J. C.

A LETTER FROM BRO. COLEGROVE.

To the Readers of the Crisis:—A somewhat painful necessity of silence has been imposed on me, in part, on account of the pressure of labors (manual, for the most part), which have rested with oppressive weight on my hands, causing me often to cry out in anguish, "How long, O Lord?" I speak thus because of the preciousness of passing weeks and years, and the infirmities of health not the most suitable for arduous physical toil. But patience! There are many occasions for thankfulness. Often I take such a simple and practical Scripture as this—"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden,"—and so I do come. I do lie at the feet of that majesty; heart-heavy and sick, I lie there, resolved, if need be, to die there, and I can say I find rest there, as the Teacher promised. For example, among other things, perhaps, I have a sick patient, whose situation gives me anxiety, and I say to Jesus, "I am heavy laden—I need rest, I come and take thee at thy word. Heal this sick friend, for that will give me rest."

Through all this freezing and bitter March and April past, I have found rest, by the recovery of the sick, giving glory only to the King. Still there is much more room for rest, much more need for it. I must be free from other and different labors (if God will), that I am not fit or able to perform. I desire to have room and time to preach the gospel, and not hide a gift of God in a napkin. Let us see how very painful and discouraging the situation may be at certain times.

For truth's sake we cannot go over to orthodoxy,—cannot surrender Christ, the resurrection and only hope of all men living or dead, cannot, cannot—though often sorely tempted, and tempted to think thus: "If there is no field of labor among Adventists, why not rather go over to Baptist or Methodist ranks, and, hiding the truth, or suppressing it, do good as we can, preaching many excellent and useful gospel precepts and doctrines, and thus avoiding a sort of appalling compulsion to rust or rot in inaction?" But when the proposition comes up fairly, there is a mountain in the way. Jesus the only hope of life, is inscribed on our banner, and how can it be renounced or concealed?

It is often said—why, it is possible and expedient to be silent on a few specific points. But I will just show how hard it is. For example, at the funeral of my wife's father, the Methodist minister, without intending we will suppose, to cross or hurt any listener's feelings or convictions, prominently advocated inherent immortality. It was painful for me to hear. Having a previous appointment to say a few words in relation to the deceased, I felt mightily impelled to add something by way of respectful but earnest resistance on the true state of man in death, a state of positive unconsciousness from which the only salvation under heaven, is the resurrection at Jesus' advent. Here, then, enforced silence must have been a bitter necessity, if through some contract or compromise, a man were disabled or debarred from uttering a timely and vehement protest in the way of an honest and God-honoring declaration of one's sincere faith.

But what is the difficulty? Seemingly this. Among Adventists are exceedingly few pastorates. There is little of an element of quiet and cemented pastoral union between people and preacher. Many churches are divided and broken. There is much that is unsettled, and is it too much to say—semi-chaotic? The mournful proclivity to attempted time definitions and determinations, is a more or less constant source of division and weakness. So, for want of being wanted, or in such a way that a man through honest remuneration, may or can afford to renounce heart-breaking secular labor that he is not able to perform, he will do this very thing, and do it year after year, that his family may have food and apparel, for a neglecter is worse than an infidel, and only a moderate share of conscientiousness would set him firm as a flint, to toil on, that no sarcasm or reproach might assail him for violating a rule of Scripture, a dictate of reason, and an instinct of affection.

I speak of what I might mention in an unstudied way as the positive attempted horology of Adventism, where failure brings heart-breaking—and speak tenderly too, since experience of error in any direction should give the sufferer charity, and inspire moderation. Yet, the writer, in a recollection of mistake for the time being, would most fervently pray and study to learn from one miss—a permanent lesson of care, and never, if God will, repeat a prophetic misconjecture. The repeated precipitations and disasters of day-defining for our Savior to come in person to earth, seems to be a cause for destructive divisions.

Some preaching brethren, in this way or in some way, look out sadly, feeling that the field of usefulness is straitened, and so go on groaning, and hoping, and waiting, for God in his supreme goodness and almighty power, to prepare a way, and prepare his servant by grace to fit, and fill, and occupy a way or a place made ready to hand.

But I wave the subject, wishing to suggest a thought in another direction. For example, there is the sleep of the dead, which we credit as incontrovertible, from hints and analogies in nature and positive Scripture testimony. Still we ought to beware of allowing any one to suppose that when he dies he will experience even unconsciousness; for as the dead know nothing, it seems upon a prudent and protracted meditation on the subject, that judgment comes immediately after death, in anything which might be dignified or defined with the denomination of experience. "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." Unconsciousness is wholly without any account of time in relation to a state of death. When a man dies, therefore, he does go to the judgment, and that judgment is to him immediate, although as a matter of fact it does not occur until the coming and kingdom of Christ.

It is true, therefore, that while death is not in a strict theological sense, a gate to felicity or perdition, yet there is nothing whatever that comes between death and the solemn sequel of judgment, seeing that unconsciousness, ages even, are of no account to the dead.

We thus therefore of necessity agree with our orthodox friends in the practical and experimental succession of death and judgment, but differ altogether in the manner of its accomplishment, and the order of events as fixed in the unutterable arrangements of the Divine administrator. In other words, there is no disembodied consciousness, no inherent, death-surviving life-force, no immortality of mind, no undying inwardness, or Adamism of any kind to be magnified or made a note of, except the Adamism of Christ at his second advent, coming to raise the dead, as is most fit for a second Adam, at the second advent.

But I must omit many things, though having many things current in my mind, which for lack of time cannot be current in my pen to say.

We need prudence, as a positive and well taught lesson, and finally settled characteristic. We need meekness, and a most God-pleasing union of zeal with moderation. Many have drunk of some cup of bitterness. Furrows chisel their way in cheeks not withered with age. Cares, sorrows, burdens, pains, and even distresses are not unknown. May God arise for us. Let us not despond, or, if we do, may we escape speedily the paralyzing power of discouragement. How much we need, or think we need such a one as Jesus to speak personaly one good word, to bend upon us personallly one reviving look of recognition and approbation.

Some are sorely tempted, tempted even it may be more than some martyrs who have gone to the stake or guillotine. Temptations are hard to bear, and the more especially for those who are of a sanguine or nervous temperament, and who sensitively feel either others neglect, or even yet more keenly by far, their own disappointments or imperfections, or failure in many ways to have rounded out a life that might be luminous or beautiful, as they hoped. Such are not uncommon things in the human experience.

And now in closing these very hurried suggestions, we still survey a world subject to death, disasters, contentions, convulsions and misery. There is trouble and disorder more or less, everywhere. There is no stable or profound peace, no absolute happiness or security. Creation groans. Madness often and often rules the hour. Men act as if they were immortal on the little stage where they flourish in brief and sometimes frenzied activity. All things but such as are perverted or insensible, stretch out their hands toward heaven for its precious treasure. Jesus, to come. Nature lifts herself up imploring. The world is sick of bondage. Bitter winds and bitter winters wear out human kind, that cannot, like rocks of granite or pillars of adamant, bear unmoved the unfriendly forces of nature. Prayer bestirs itself even in the broken and downcast heart. Hope looks up, even out of sorrow, crying, how can pity forbear, or power delay, when a word from heaven can send salvation and joy among millions of the living and dead?

THOUGHTS THAT COMFORT.

MRS. V. D.

Oh, these delightful spring mornings! How they inspire the heart with gratitude to God for the restitution of life and beauty brought forth from the cold ice-bound grave of winter.

"Oh wonder of God! how bounteous and good!
We feel that thy presence is here;
The work of thy hand is abroad in the wood,
And we know that our Father is near."

If these bright spring mornings are so cheering to us in this fallen world, what will be our emotions of joy in the glad morning of the resurrection, when those who sleep in their graves shall awake and leave their gravelly pillows, and all the saints shall put on immortality, and gaze for the first time upon the glories of the new earth,—the long lost paradise restored; and know that is home—sweet home, forever!

Never, until then, will we be able to comprehend how great is the gift of eternal life—a life forever with Jesus and the shining ones. We know that we have the "earnest of an inheritance" here, and by faith we look for the "purchased possessions" in the beautiful beyond. Yet we are mortal, and our sorrows and trials are still remembered. But in that blest morning of our redemption that is drawing nigh, God will wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there will be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither will there be any more pain; for the former things shall have passed away.

Oh child of sorrow, thou tempest-tossed and tried, whose weary feet press the thorns at every step, be patient, be strong to suffer and wait yet a little while, and "he that shall come will come and will not tarry." God will have a tried and faithful people for himself. Then "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." Various are the afflictions and ways that teach the christian faith, and the very things that befall us may be what we most dread, and feel the least able to bear. But faithful is he that has promised strength for our day; and soon the Master will say, It is enough; and we shall pass through the fire for the last time; the dross will disappear, and the fine gold will be fit to adorn the city of our God, where the saints shall gather "who come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." And they shall "serve him day and night in his temple, and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them."

Oh that the spirit of truth would lead many to accept offered mercy now, that they might not be shut out of the beautiful home of the redeemed in the morning of the resurrection. Would that we had reason to hope that all those, in whose society we find pleasure here, would be safely sheltered there. We would not have any left without to perish, but pray, Oh our Father, leave the "gates ajar," that not only our friends, but even our enemies, might enter in and find a safe retreat from the woes and miseries of the lost in the great day of God's wrath.

Let us, "who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us," be watchful and prayerful; let us be patient and kind, submitting to be led through just such paths as our heavenly Father sees best. Let us be willing our bark of life shall glide wherever he will; whether it be over placid waters or upon the rough billows, for we know that Jesus will appear and say "peace be still," and we shall rest in our Eden home.

Ira, N. Y.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY.

In speaking of a person's faults,
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember, those with homes of glass
Should seldom throw a stone;
If we have nothing else to do
But talk of those who sin,
'Tis better to commence at home,
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide;
Some may have faults—and who have not?
The old as well as young;
Perhaps we may, for aught we know,
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you of a better plan,
And one that works full well,
I try my own defects to cure
Before of other's tell;
And though I sometimes hap to be
No worse than some I know,
My own short-comings bid me let
The faults of others go.

Then let us all, when we commence
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word may do
To those we little know;
Remember, curses sometimes, like
Our chickens, "roost at home";
Don't speak of others' faults until
We have none of our own.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lulie J. Adams, wife of Selden H. Smith, died April 16th, 1875, aged 27 years.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Christ.
'The memory of the just is blessed."—Solomon.
"Blessed are the dead which die [sleep] in the Lord."—St. John.
"He [the Lord] will beautify the meek with salvation."—David.

The funeral was attended by Eld. I. B. Potter, at Square Pond, who spoke from 1 Cor. 15 : 52, 53—"For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

It takes a whole christian to say, "Thy will be done," when the untimely Harvester comes and takes a dear wife, mother, daughter and sister and hurries her away from home and loved ones. It was not untimely to sister Lulie, for she was ready to go; but to the mourning friends left behind it was all too soon; and we feel like exclaiming in the bitterness of our grief—O, cruel Death! to her thou art more kind than to the sorrowing ones left behind.

We are lonely and sad. We deeply feel our loss, because we know her worth. Her work is done, and well done, and she is sweetly sleeping in Jesus. She was rich in good works, in faith, in hope, in charity. She loved very dearly her heavenly Father, her Savior, her Bible, and all her friends. The World's Crisis, which has for many years been her welcome weekly visitor, was also very precious to her. Her contributions to its columns were few, but of a high order—spiritual gems, rich in life-thought. There was no waste material about her To her, life was a great and glorious reality. She weighed all her words, for she felt that even a little word may have influence for good or evil. Her friendships were slowly and wisely formed on the basis of honor, charity, and virtue; and were as lasting as life.

As a teacher in the public schools, where she spent several of the best years of her life, she was always successful. It is there that she has done her life work, and eternity only can reveal it in all its grandeur. She always secured the love of her pupils by firmness, justice, kindness, and interesting herself in their behalf.

In the last letter which it was my pleasure to receive from her, after speaking tenderly of our uncle's (Erastus P. Pease) death, she used this significant language—"Life is short. How careful we should be to spend the passing moments as we shall wish we had when we come to stand in the presence of the King of glory. God help us to see to it that we secure the life to come. Everything in this life is transitory and fleeting. Every joy is mingled with sorrow. The notes of sorrow fall on the ear everywhere, and all too soon we may be called to drink the bitter cup that other lips have tasted. There is no safety out of Christ. He is our only hiding-place from the storms of life—our only refuge in time of trouble. He has promised never to leave nor forsake those that love and trust him, and his words cannot fail."

A wife not quite a year, and a mother but a few weeks, her attachment to life never could have been as strong before; yet she felt, and said to those who gathered around her dying couch, "I am ready to die or to live." Again she said, "I am not afraid to die, but I would rather live." Who would not and should not choose life? She wanted to live to love and care for her husband and little one, and make those around her happy.

We have buried our sister, but not our sorrow; our cup of affliction is full to the brim; yet there is some sweet in it. It contains another link of the chain that reaches from our hearts into heaven. To us in our weeping Christ comes, and says—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Here is the consolation—"I [Jesus] am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

It is enough. We will dry our tears, follow in her footsteps, and live with her through a never-ending eternity of perfect peace. She rests from her labors, but her work will follow her as a sweet incense.

"She has lain down to rest till the morning,
Where storm-blasts of time never sweep.
'Mid life's conflicts and toils she grew weary,
So He gave his beloved one sleep.

She has lain down to rest 'mid earth's shadows,
But, oh! when the morning shall break,
And the Life-giver comes for his chosen,
With joy, yea, with singing she'll wake."

A. L. ADAMS.

Newark, Del., May 20th, 1875.

MATT. 21: 25.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"The baptism of John, was it of heaven, or of men?"

The first question to be asked is, What was John's baptism? Let John answer. "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance." He used water in the ordinance, and it was as a preparation for repentance. He does not baptize them after they had repented, but only unto repentance. But he told his followers that there was another baptism (by Jesus Christ) of more grand importance; and this would include repentance and faith, etc.

John's baptism related to the outward or external; but Christ's baptism related to the inward or internal. John's baptism was to decrease, but Christ's to increase. "Except a man be born of water [the Word] and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." It does not make much difference whether a man has the Spirit or the Word first; but he must be born of these two principles in order to qualify him for being a true christian. John's baptism is not to be undervalued or thrown aside. It has its place; but Christ's baptism is essential. We venture to say that no man or woman can ever be saved without the baptism of the Holy Ghost (Christ). We now quote a few scriptures.

"If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "The second Adam [Jesus Christ] was made a quickening Spirit." "He that believeth and is baptized [with the Holy Spirit] shall be saved." "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." "My words they are spirit and they are life." "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit."

We now come back to our text—"The baptism of John, was it of heaven, or of men?" We answer, it partook of both, as John was a prophet at the close of the Mosaic dispensation, and came to herald a new dispensation—the Christian. Jesus said he was the greatest prophet up to that time, but that the least in the new kingdom was greater than he. Christ came to establish a holy, spiritual household; and each one should be born of the Spirit. Our great Exemplar was baptized with water, as a testimony to the law, but he was also baptized with the Spirit of God, as a testimony to the gospel.

It was said of Jesus "he was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." We knew a man who was baptized by two or three denominations with water; first by the Baptists, second by the Adventists, and third by the Mormons; but all this did not change his flinty heart. He needed one more baptism, that of the Holy Spirit, to show him the nature and vileness of sin, and lead him to sincere repentance and faith.

On the day of Pentecost, Peter told the people to repent and be converted, get their sins blotted out, and they should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Now if we should be asked why professors of religion are so obtuse and lifeless, we should say they have not received or been baptized with the Holy Spirit. They have a form of piety, but not the power. They have not been weaned from the world. Self has not been crucified. They are strangers to self-denial, to bearing the cross, and the life of Christ within.

Correspondence.

From J. P. Hodgdon.

Dear brethren and sisters scattered over the land:—Some of you are in sickness and poverty, perplexed and distressed, and nearly discouraged, but do not give up. We are just in sight of the prize. Hold on a little longer. Trust Jesus; he never leaves nor forsakes one that puts their trust in him. If you feel the hand of poverty hard upon you, pressing you down, and you do not know which way to turn, or what course to take, go to him; tell him all about it; he will lead you in the right way, for he has promised to be with his children in six troubles, and in the seventh he will not forsake them.

If you feel forsaken by friends, hold on to the rod, and you can walk the cable Bro. Couch tells us about, with safety, looking unto Jesus. He knows our weakness, and is always ready at any moment to help us out of all trials and difficulties by which we may be surrounded.

We are living amid the perils of the last days, when great wickedness abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold. Let us go to God daily, and get our strength renewed, so we may have grace to overcome all things.

From Sr. E. Marston.

Dear Editors:—It has been some time since I have written anything for the Crisis, but my love for the paper and the cause it advocates has not abated. I do not know what I should do without it. It is nearly all the comfort I have. There are but very few of like precious faith in this place, and we have our trials; but we are told to "count it all joy," and remember that "tribulation worketh patience." We will strive to keep our hearts right before God, knowing that he will judge us at the last great day, when Christ shall come to make up his jewels.

Christ says, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Let us try to live near God, resting in the promise that if we be followers of that which is good, no one shall harm us.

We have but little gospel preaching here, and the little flock is divided and scattered. Every week I look over the list of appointments, hoping that some one among the many may be for this place. Many times I have wished we could be blessed with a tent meeting. There seems to be no means of reaching people's hearts like a good tent meeting. There seems to be quite a large corner of the Lord's vineyard here left uncultivated. We ought to do all we can to spread the truth. Let us try to help one another, that we may hear the "well done," when Jesus comes.

Ashland, Mass.

From Bro. R. H. Gresham.

Dear Brn. and fellow pilgrims:—When I last addressed you through the Crisis, I was sojourning at Ashville, N. C. Now I am fifteen miles west of that place. My address is Turnpike, Buncombe Co., N. C., where I will be glad at all times, during my stay here, to receive letters, papers and pamphlets from any of like precious faith. Should any of the dear brethren and sisters come this way, I trust they may be advised of my whereabouts, and call to see me. I am at the house of Mr. Jasper L. Smothers.

My labor in the cause of truth last year, at Ashville, I am satisfied is working for good for a few persons. Perhaps I should not expect greater results under existing circumstances. In my present position I do not see so many persons as at Ashville; yet I am at work as opportunity offers. This is a good point for a manufacturing village, being situated on the beautiful stream, called Hommony creek; and I would be truly glad to see a dozen or more families here, all of the one faith and one hope, and all striving to serve God with pure hearts, fervently.

On my return to this highland country, after my visit to Indiana, last March, I stopped for near a week with the brethren at and near Stevenson, Alabama, and had a very delightful visit with Brn. J. J. Smith, J. A. Cargile, G. W. Crawford, J. W. Carlton, Sr. Irby, and with their pleasant families and neighbors. I have never in my life had the pleasure of associating with a band of learners, with their opportunities, who seemed to be more intensely hungering and thirsting after knowledge and after holiness than those dear people. Step by step, as they advance, their earnest appeals seem to be—Lord, what wilt thou have us to do? And they are cautious (as well they should be), to avoid taking and adopting the ipse dixit of any fallen man. They are like the noble Bereans. Yours in the one hope.

From Bro. C. Dennen.

Dear Brethren:—I have been called to attend the funeral of my brother Levi, whose home is situated on the ridge of land called Pigeon Hill. He died April 29th, 1875. He has been a great sufferer from spinal disease, having been thrown from a carriage eight years ago. So death robs us of friends.

While there I spent a part of two days on the camp-ground, the place so dear to some of us, and where the Lord has been pleased to lead our minds into his glorious truth by his servants, who have declared his Word so faithfully. Many hearts have rejoiced in the truth, and have felt, like Peter, that it was good to be here.

It is my prayer that the Lord will still be with us on the old camp-ground, and manifest himself unto us as he doth not unto the world. Let us pray earnestly for his Spirit to lead and guide us into the path of duty. We need to gird on the whole armor, and stand up for the truth, that we may stand in the day of his coming.

Bro. George Strout has moved on to the camp-ground, and will care for it. The tents are all in good condition. May the Lord lead us, as he did Israel of old, through the wilderness into the promised land.

North Turner Bridge.

From L. B. Weaver.

Dear ones in Jesus:—My heart sighs for the land that is fairer than day. Lord, hasten the coming kingdom, is my prayer. I am suffering, yet patiently waiting for the coming of Jesus. I want to get home. There are sighs, tears, sorrows and death all over the land. The loved ones are falling, and some of God's dear shepherds of the flock are dropping, one by one. I am glad I have caught a glimpse of a better world, where none of these things come. What is there in this world to make us desire it to continue? When once the Master takes possession of our hearts, we shall not care for the vanities of the world. There will be no desire for joking and jesting, which are not convenient, neither christian like. It will grieve the true child of God to hear it.

O how much lack of earnestness there is in the cause of Jesus at the present day. Almost up to the judgment, and so little engagedness in the things of God; so little laboring for the careless sinners. If our friends were upon the brink of a terrible precipice, almost ready to step off, could we keep still? Should we not lift our voices in tones of love and pity, and tell them there was danger ahead? How much greater the danger of those who are unprepared to meet Christ! Must they rush as it were, blindfolded, to the bar of God, with none to tell them of the awful danger?

O ye who stand upon the walls of Zion, call loudly, cry mightily to the perishing; persuade them to be reconciled to God; to give up all for Jesus, and come to the ark.

DRESS.

C. HELMS.

As christians, we are required to do everything to the glory of God. Our first inquiry, then, in relation to dress should be, How can I glorify God in my apparel? I know of no other way than by making it answer just the end for which it was originally designed. In the third chapter of Genesis, we learn that the object of dress was to provide a decent covering for our bodies; which, I think, may be summed up in the following particulars: (1) A modest covering for our bodies. (2) A defence against the hostile elements. (3) An acknowledgment of our spiritual nakedness and exposure to the wrath of God, and our need to be clothed with the righteousness of Christ. Whenever we pervert it from these ends to the gratification of our pride or vanity, we not only do not glorify God therein, but we commit actual sin.
